One may seek a writ of habeas corpus without running any risk whatever other than having the petition denied or being charged with costs. One may seek a writ of habeas corpus without running any risk whatsoever, other than the risk of having his petition denied and the possibility of being chargeable with the costs of the proceedings. He cannot in such proceedings, whereby he seeks release from illegal restraint, be legally incarcerated on other grounds. Stillely v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Poor person may seek habeas corpus without payment of costs. The legal device existing in the state of Colorado which provides this equal protection in the postconviction civil remedy of habeas corpus is contained in and governed by § 13-16-103, which allows a poor person to proceed without the payment of costs in a civil action on his making a showing of poverty. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

Either while seeking the writ or after its dismissal. The supreme court sees no difference of substance save subtlety between the "invidious discrimination" worked by a fee imposed upon an indigent before he is allowed to petition, which he cannot pay, and a fee saddled upon him after dismissal, which he also cannot pay. Both practices are effective deterrents. To interpose any financial consideration between an indigent prisoner of the state and his exercise of a state right to sue for his liberty is to deny that prisoner the equal protection of the laws. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

Financial hurdles must not be permitted to condition its exercise. There is no higher duty than to maintain the federal writ of habeas corpus unimpaired and unsuspended save only in the cases specified in the federal constitution. When an equivalent right is granted by a state, financial hurdles must not be permitted to condition its exercise. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

The only issue to be resolved at a habeas corpus proceeding is whether the custodian has authority to deprive the petitioner of liberty. Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

The "return" referred to in subsection (2) is the return of the writ, not the return of the petition for the writ. Subsection (1) requires the court to issue the writ unless the petition or supporting documents indicate that no relief is available. Thus, where the court did not issue the writ, the petitioner had no right to a return of the writ. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987); Wiedemer v. People, 784 P.2d 739 (Colo. 1989).

Writ issued did not comply with requirements of this section. Where writ did not refer to the Habeas Corpus Act, did not require cer-tification of the cause of imprisonment, and did not give notice of nature of proceeding, the order based on the writ purporting to release the prisoner was invalid. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Writ served to improper respondent. Superintendent of correctional facility was not proper respondent for purposes of the act where superintendent had no responsibility for supervising petitioner's conduct at another facility, even if superintendent may have been deemed agent of department of corrections for purposes of service of process. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Insufficient notice to state authorities. Notice to district attorney was insufficient notice to all involved in state administrative authority for purposes of determining whether proper notice had been given of petitioner's habeas corpus proceeding. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Service must be made upon person who has custody of a petitioner in habeas corpus action and therefore the director of the department of corrections or the attorney general must be personally served. Zaborski v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 812 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1991).

Crim. P. 35(c) governing postconviction remedies did not provide basis for granting habeas corpus relief where petition was not filed under postconviction rule, even though petition was assigned case number of petitioner's original criminal action. People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Allegation that the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate defendant as an habitual criminal was properly raised in a C.R.C.P. 35(c) motion for postconviction relief rather than a petition for habeas corpus where original information did not charge defendant as an habitual criminal. Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

An improperly filed pro se habeas corpus petition should be treated as a Crim. P. 35(c) motion in order to provide review on the merits of the claims raised by a petitioner. Chatfield v. Colo. Court of Appeals, 775 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1989).

Rather than dismissing an improper habeas corpus petition, the court should convert such petition into a motion under Crim. P. 35(c) where the petitioner is acting pro se, the petitioner raises issues in the habeas corpus petition which should have been raised in a Crim. P. 35(c) motion, and the petitioner's claims are not barred by the statute of limitations. Graham v. Gunter, 855 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1993).

Pro se habeas corpus petition was improperly filed in case where an invalid judgment of conviction and sentence were rendered since relief was available under Crim. P. 35 and Crim. P. 36 and the district court should have treated petition as motion under section (c) (2) of Crim. P.

35. Kailey v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 807 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1991); Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

A petition for habeas corpus relief which fails to establish prima facie that the petitioner is not validly confined and is thus entitled to immediate release or that the petitioner has suffered a serious infringement of a fundamental constitutional right resulting in a significant loss of liberty is insufficient and should be dismissed without a hearing. Jones v. Zavaras, 926 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1996).

Defendant's challenges to procedures by which he was sentenced rather than the legality of his confinement may be raised by means of a Crim. P. 35(c) motion but not by means of a habeas corpus petition. Jones v. Zavaras, 926 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1996).

Remedy of habeas corpus was available to person who was detained in Colorado pursuant to request from Nevada parole authorities and who challenged the validity of proceedings under the Parole Supervision Act. People v. Velarde, 739 P.2d 845 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court's error of failing to convert habeas corpus petition into a motion for post-conviction relief was cured by defendant's filing of postconviction motion in sentencing court. Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

Remand required for hearing on the propriety of defendant's continued confinement as an habitual criminal after second degree assault conviction used to support habitual criminal adjudication was reversed on grounds that the trial court failed to determine defendant's competence to stand trial. Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

The remedy of habeas corpus cannot be pursued to redress an unlawful restraint where the petitioner is not in the custody of the respondent. Van Riper v. Sheriff of Jefferson County, 868 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1994).

The relief requested in a habeas corpus proceeding must have a practical effect on the restraint of the prisoner at the time of the habeas corpus hearing. Habeas corpus cannot be granted based on a complaint of former punitive segregation. Brant v. Fielder, 883 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1994).

Where petitioner was a prisoner of the state of Wisconsin and was imprisoned in the Colorado prison system under the Interstate Corrections Compact, petitioner was being detained for a criminal matter and the district court properly applied the provisions of this section. Brant v. Fielder, 883 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1994).

Habeas corpus not appropriate to contest DOC reclassification due to the existence of a detainer because such reclassification does not rise to the level of a constitutional violation. Reed v. People, 745 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1987); Butler v. Zavaras, 924 P.2d 1060 (Colo. 1996).

B. Civil Proceeding.

Habeas corpus is a civil proceeding. Geer v. Alaniz, 137 Colo. 432, 326 P.2d 71 (1958); Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961); Buhler v. People, 151 Colo. 345, 377 P.2d 748 (1963); Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970); Mote v. Koch, 173 Colo. 82, 476 P.2d 255 (1970).

Habeas corpus is a civil proceeding independent of the criminal charge. Mulkey v. Sullivan, 753 P.2d 1226 (Colo. 1988).

Habeas corpus is independent of the criminal charge. An application for a writ of habeas corpus is a civil action, independent of the criminal charge, and is no part of an inquiry based on an information. Oates v. People, 136 Colo. 208, 315 P.2d 196 (1957); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

Public providing of counsel is not authorized. Proceedings in habeas corpus are civil actions. There is no constitutional or statutory provision which permits the appointment of counsel for plaintiffs in civil actions. Therefore the appointment of counsel and the payment of fees therefor out of public funds is not authorized and is not and cannot be sanctioned. McGrath v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 18, 328 P.2d 579 (1958).

Judgment is reviewable by writ of error. Actions in habeas corpus are civil in nature, and a judgment therein is reviewable by writ of error. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

The rules of civil procedure do not govern the procedure and practice in any special statutory proceeding so far as they are inconsistent or in conflict therewith; this section concerning habeas corpus in criminal matters is such special statutory proceeding and its provisions are controlling. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961).

Because this section is a special statutory proceeding, the rules of civil procedure do not apply insofar as they are inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of this section. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977).

There is no conflict between C.R.C.P. 98 and this section. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977).

Neither do rules governing proceedings on error in criminal cases. Habeas corpus is in the nature of a civil action, hence the rules governing proceedings on error in criminal cases do not apply, and an abstract of the record and assignments of error are not necessary. Barrett v. People, 136 Colo. 144, 315 P.2d 192 (1957), overruled on another point, Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

No class action may be brought. Although habeas corpus is a civil proceeding, the rules of civil procedure, providing for class actions, do not apply. The very nature of habeas corpus proceedings forbids class actions. Riley v. City & County of Denver, 137 Colo. 312, 324 P.2d 790 (1958).

Rules of civil procedure do govern venue. Suits seeking relief by habeas corpus being civil in nature, the question of venue is governed by Colorado rules of civil procedure. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Habeas corpus being civil in nature, C.R.C.P. 98 governs venue. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977).

Jurisdictional requirement. Requirement that petitions for writs of habeas corpus shall be accompanied by a copy of the warrant of commitment is a mandatory requirement and is therefore jurisdictional. Prisoners must comply with the requirement, and the courts may not waive it. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977); Butler v. Zavaras, 924 P.2d 1060 (Colo. 1996).

Rules of civil procedure apply to habeas corpus actions when the rules are not in conflict with habeas corpus statutes. Zaborski v. Dept. of Corr., 812 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1991).

This act contemplates a less structured and more abbreviated hearing procedure than that used in other civil proceedings. Under the act, the court shall act in a summary way. Cardiel v. Brittain, 833 P.2d 748 (Colo. 1992).

Applied in Gomez v. Colo. State Parole Bd., 470 F. Supp. 778 (D. Colo. 1979); Shea v. Heggie, 624 F.2d 175 (10th Cir. 1980); Beals v. Wilson, 631 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1981); Holder v. Ricketts, 650 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1982); Schumm v. Nelson, 659 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1983).

II. GROUNDS FOR ISSUANCE.

A. In General.

In order to invoke the remedy of habeas corpus, adequate grounds must be alleged. McKenna v. Tinsley, 141 Colo. 63, 346 P.2d 584 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 981, 80 S. Ct. 1066, 4 L. Ed.2d 1015 (1960).

Habeas corpus is a limited remedy in Colorado. Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963); Martinez v. Tinsley, 241 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1965).

In a habeas corpus action by a person convicted of a crime, the sole question for consideration is whether the petitioner therein was convicted in a court having jurisdiction of his person and of the charge in the information, and the judgment and sentence were within the statutory limitations. Freeman v. Tinsley, 135 Colo. 62, 308 P.2d 220, cert. denied, 355 U.S. 843, 78 S. Ct. 65, 2 L. Ed.2d 52 (1957); McGrath v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 18, 328 P.2d 579 (1958); Mendez v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 127, 336 P.2d 706 (1959); Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959); McKenna v. Tinsley, 141 Colo. 63, 346 P.2d 584 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 981, 80 S. Ct. 1066, 4 L. Ed.2d 1015 (1960); Medberry v. Patterson, 142 Colo. 180, 350 P.2d 571 (1960); Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L. Ed.2d 507 (1962); Kostal v. Tinsley, 152 Colo. 196, 381 P.2d 43 (1963); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Titmus v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 96, 384 P.2d 728 (1963); Specht v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 235, 385 P.2d 423 (1963); Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963); King v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 99, 405 P.2d 689 (1965); Martinez v. Tinsley, 241 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1965); Shearer v. Patterson, 159 Colo. 319, 411 P.2d 247 (1966).

B. Rights Protected.

Right to speedy trial is protected by habeas corpus. The proceeding by habeas corpus is the proper remedy, under the statute of this state, to protect the right of persons charged with the higher class of crimes to a speedy trial, according to law. In re Garvey, 7 Colo. 502, 4 P. 758 (1884); Cummins v. People, 4 Colo. App. 71, 34 P. 734 (1893); Rader v. People, 138 Colo. 397, 334 P.2d 437 (1959).

Right to speedy trial may now be raised under Crim. P. 35(b). When the issues before a trial court in a habeas corpus proceeding raise substantive constitutional questions concerning the right to a speedy trial, the issues are within the purview of postconviction remedy, and a petition for habeas corpus would be treated as a motion under Crim. P. 35(b). Dodge v. People, 178 Colo. 71, 495 P.2d 213 (1972).

Defendant's writ of habeas corpus was properly denied because speedy trial claims should be pursued through C.A.R. 21 petitions and post-conviction remedies under Crim. P. 35. Vreeland v. Weaver, 193 P.3d 836 (Colo. App. 2008).

Habeas corpus is not the proper remedy to accomplish modification of a sentence. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961).

Or when an arraignment is faulty. Habeas corpus is not available for an alleged denial of due process occasioned by a faulty arraignment or a coerced plea. Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963). See Specht v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 235, 385 P.2d 423 (1963).

Or for involuntary pleas. Habeas corpus is not the proper remedy to secure an accused's release from the penitentiary after the imposition of sentence upon a plea of guilty, on the ground that the plea was involuntarily made. Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959).

Where allegations of a petition for habeas corpus relief go to validity of petitioner's plea of guilty, they are properly brought under Crim.

P. 35(b). Martinez v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 236, 405 P.2d 943 (1965).

Crim. P. 35 also affords a remedy for an improper sentence. Crim. P. 35 in no way seeks to impose any conditions on the issuance of habeas corpus writs — it only affords a remedy for those seeking a proper sentence, a remedy which the prisoner may seek or not seek at his election. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Incarceration in an institution other than that provided by law is void. Habeas corpus does not lie to obtain release from an erroneous sentence, but a sentence beyond the jurisdiction of the sentencing court, or providing for incarceration in an institution other than that provided by law is void. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Trial judge's discretion as to institution not reviewable by habeas corpus. Where the sentence of one convicted of a crime to the state reformatory or to the penitentiary rests in the discretion of the trial court, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus is properly denied where the record discloses that the petitioners, who were 18 years of age, had four previous convictions for various offenses and the probation officer recommended sentences to the penitentiary rather than to the state reformatory, and petitioners were so sentenced. Roy v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 241, 350 P.2d 564 (1960).

An adjudication that an insane person has been restored to reason cannot be had in habeas corpus proceedings. Pigg v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 160, 405 P.2d 687 (1965).

Once adjudged sane, a person's imprisonment may be tested by habeas corpus. The proper method for appellant who was transferred to state penitentiary from state hospital after acquittal on grounds of insanity to test the constitutionality of his imprisonment is by a habeas corpus proceeding either in the state or federal courts. Franklin v. Meredith, 386 F.2d 958 (10th Cir. 1967).

A person on parole can resort to the remedy of habeas corpus where parole officers are not following the statutory mandate with regard to revocation proceedings. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

When parolee is actually, instead of constructively, imprisoned. Parolee's actual imprisonment at a time when he should have been only constructively imprisoned constituted an unlawful restraint of his liberty. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

Prisoner extradited to Colorado cannot contest extradition by this writ. Detention under extradition and detention following conviction of a crime relate to different procedures, and an illegal extradition is impotent to endanger a jurisdictional question arising out of the criminal charge. Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959).

Sheriff's holding of fugitive prior to extradition to another state may. A habeas corpus petitioner charged as an out-of-state fugitive, not the sheriff-respondent, has the burden of going forward with clear and convincing evidence to prove that he was not in the demanding state at the time of the crime or that he is not the individual named in the extradition papers. Ede v. Bray, 178 Colo. 99, 495 P.2d 1139 (1972).

Where the record does not show that the petitioner for writ of habeas corpus is charged with any offense under the laws of the demanding state, a warrant for arrest issued pursuant to a demand for extradition is without authority of law. Buhler v. People, 151 Colo. 345, 377 P.2d 748 (1963).

The issuance of a governor's warrant is prima facie evidence that a habeas corpus petitioner is substantially charged with a crime and is a fugitive from justice. Ede v. Bray, 178 Colo. 99, 495 P.2d 1139 (1972).

Remedy for improper treatment in mental hospital. Writ of habeas corpus is a proper remedy for persons committed to a state hospital after a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity to challenge a lack of treatment and to obtain a remedy addressing appropriate treatment short of immediate release. Marshall v. Kort, 690 P.2d 219 (Colo. 1984).

Denial of free transcript is not grounds for issuance of writ. The denial of a request for a free transcript, even if timely made, affords no basis for the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus. McKenna v. Tinsley, 141 Colo. 63, 346 P.2d 584 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 981, 80 S. Ct. 1066, 4 L. Ed.2d 1015 (1960); Medberry v. Patterson, 142 Colo. 180, 350 P.2d 571 (1960).

Habeas corpus is not the correct vehicle to allege invasion of attorney-client relationship by electronic eavesdropping. It should be brought to the attention of the trial court either by a pre-trial motion to suppress or at the trial when the prosecution offers evidence which the defendant claims is "tainted", because of the manner in which it was obtained by the prosecution. Ferrell v. Vogt, 161 Colo. 549, 423 P.2d 844 (1967).

Writ of habeas corpus is proper remedy for claim that defendant is being unconstitutionally denied the opportunity to be considered for parole as other postconviction relief for such claim is not available. Naranjo v. Johnson, 770 P.2d 784 (Colo. 1984); White v. People, 866 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1994).

Inquiry undertaken in a habeas corpus proceeding is limited to a determination of the validity of the petitioner's confinement at the time of the hearing. White v. People, 866 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1994); Brant v. Fielder, 883 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1994).

Any restriction in excess of legal restraint that substantially infringes on basic rights may be remedied through habeas corpus, even if total discharge does not result. Naranjo v. Johnson, 770 P.2d 784 (Colo. 1989).

Habeas corpus action will not lie with respect to an inmate's department of corrections security level because such classification does not involve a constitutional right. Reed v. People, 745 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1987).

Habeas corpus relief is not available for review of loss of good-time credits resulting from prison disciplinary proceeding because other remedies are available, and the requested relief would have no current effect on petitioner's confinement. Kodama v. Johnson, 786 P.2d 417 (Colo. 1990).

The court is precluded from granting a writ of habeas corpus where another legal remedy exists. Where the prisoner is subject to the jurisdiction of the Wisconsin authorities, but is in Colorado under the provisions of the Interstate Corrections Compact, a legal avenue exists for him to be returned to the sending state. Brant v. Fielder, 883 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1994).

Habeas corpus petition should be dismissed without a hearing unless factual allegations in the petition make a prima facie showing of invalid confinement or demonstrate a serious infringement of a fundamental constitutional right. White v. People, 866 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1994).

Habeas corpus petition is properly dismissed where petitioner fails to allege that he is entitled to discharge or that a fundamental constitutional right was violated. Deason v. Kautzky, 786 P.2d 420 (Colo. 1990).

Habeas corpus petition is properly dismissed where petitioner has not alleged he is entitled to immediate release but instead alleges he has been denied credit for earned good time which would grant him an earlier parole date. Pearson v. Diesslan, 848 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1993); Badger v. Diesslan, 850 P.2d 149 (Colo. 1993); Rather v. Colo. State Bd. of Parole, 856 P.2d 860 (Colo. 1993).

Habeas corpus petition is properly dismissed because allegation that department denied prisoner the use of his color television does not allege violation of a fundamental constitutional right. Brant v. Fielder, 883 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1994).

Habeas corpus petition properly dismissed as premature when inmate could not show he was entitled to release at time petition was filed. Thorson v. Dept. of Corr., 801 P.2d 540 (Colo. 1990).

When the municipal court properly had jurisdiction over both the subject matter and the defendant, the failure of the court to advise the defendant of his right to counsel during a guilty plea hearing was not subject to correction by habeas corpus. Mulkey v. Sullivan, 753 P.2d 1226 (Colo. 1988).

Petition under this section moot where petitioner was provided a parole revocation hearing and was represented by counsel prior to the scheduled hearing on the petition made pursuant to this section. Blea v. Colo. State Bd. of Parole, 779 P.2d 1353 (Colo. 1989).

A prisoner mistakenly released before serving a complete sentence is not entitled to have credited against his sentence the time he subsequently served in another state for convictions unrelated to the original sentence because reincarceration would not be inconsistent with fundamental principles of liberty and justice in that the prisoner's conduct after being mistakenly released was not such as to reestablish himself in the community, but to leave the state at his first opportunity and be arrested and convicted of charges in another jurisdiction. Brown v. Brittain, 773 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1989).

III. DUTIES OF COURT.

A. In General.

A habeas corpus writ is an extraordinary writ which may be procured, not as a matter of right, but in the discretion of the court. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Writ not necessarily issued without probable cause. The writ of habeas corpus is a writ of right, but not necessarily a writ issuable without a showing of probable cause. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

This section, prescribing the duty of the court upon application for a writ of habeas corpus, is mandatory, and to impose other or additional conditions on one seeking the writ is to do that which the constitution and the statute have said shall not be done and amounts pro tanto to a suspension of the writ. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Petitions for habeas corpus must be treated as such and granted or denied. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Prohibition does not lie, in the supreme court or district courts, to prevent courts having jurisdiction of habeas corpus from proceeding to grant or deny the relief requested. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

A court has no power to stay proceedings upon an order directing the unconditional discharge of a prisoner upon a writ of habeas corpus. Geer v. Alaniz, 137 Colo. 432, 326 P.2d 71 (1958).

Petition for a writ of habeas corpus can only be considered after a final judgment. In a criminal prosecution where the defendant stands unarraigned and untried, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed in such action and relating only to preliminary proceedings cannot be considered by the supreme court in the absence of a final judgment. Oates v. People, 136 Colo. 208, 315 P.2d 196 (1957).

Courts will not ordinarily entertain successive applications for writs of habeas corpus based upon the same grounds and the same facts, or on other grounds or facts which existed when the first application was made, whether or not they were presented at that time. Marshall v. Geer, 140 Colo. 305, 344 P.2d 440 (1959).

The judgment of guilt and the sentence imposed on that judgment are presumed to be valid until the contrary is made to appear. Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959); Medberry v. Patterson, 142 Colo. 180, 350 P.2d 571 (1960); Bates v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 390, 353 P.2d 76 (1960).

Regulatory provisions for parole contemplate grant of parole by parole board and thereafter either rescission or suspension is necessary to curtail effectiveness prior to release of prisoner. Although parole agreement is anticipated, it is not a condition to grant of parole but a condition to release on parole. Regulations do not suggest that grant of parole not effective until prisoner actually released from custody. Prisoner granted parole to a county detainer and serving consecutive sentence on another conviction made prima facie case for writ of habeas corpus relief when he alleged that parole had not been suspended or rescinded. Cardiel v. Brittan, 833 P.2d 748 (Colo. 1992); Van Riper v. Sheriff of Jefferson County, 868 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1994).

B. Action on Petition.

Where a petition on its face is insufficient, a court is correct in denying it. McGrath v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 18, 328 P.2d 579 (1958); Valentine v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 19, 351 P.2d 825 (1960); Furlow v. Tinsley, 151 Colo. 280, 377 P.2d 132 (1962); Bitner v. Tinsley, 151 Colo. 367, 378 P.2d 203 (1963); Titmus v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 96, 384 P.2d 728 (1963); Minor v. Tinsley, 154 Colo. 249, 389 P.2d 850 (1964); Bizup v. Tinsley, 155 Colo. 131, 393 P.2d 556 (1964); Coleman v. Tinsley, 155 Colo. 245, 393 P.2d 739 (1964); King v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 99, 405 P.2d 689 (1965).

This is not a denial of due process or equal protection. Denial of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which shows upon its face that petitioner is not entitled to any relief, does not deny him due process or equal protection of the law. Hatch v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 170, 352 P.2d 670 (1960); Bitner v. Tinsley, 151 Colo. 367, 378 P.2d 203 (1963).

Petition for writ must be discharged if it is not accompanied by the warrant of commitment. Failure to follow the provisions of this section, requiring that a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in any supposed criminal matter shall be accompanied by a copy of the warrant of commitment, precludes review of judgment denying petition on writ of error, since the supreme court has nothing but allegations of pleading from which to determine specific convictions upon which commitment was made. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961); Garrett v. Knight, 173 Colo. 419, 480 P.2d 569 (1971).

Denial of petition for writ of habeas corpus held correct. People v. Jackson, 180 Colo. 135, 502 P.2d 1106 (1972); Reece v. Johnson, 793 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 1990).

Facts establishing prima facie case entitle petitioner to hearing. Where a petition for a writ of habeas corpus alleged that the petitioner entered his plea of guilty to an information charging him with obtaining moneys by means and use of the confidence game, under the mistaken belief that the charge in the information was proper and correct, whereas in fact all of the acts, deeds, activities, intentions, and actions of petitioner were sufficient at law only to make him guilty of a misdemeanor and service of sentence was begun but was vacated and petitioner discharged by court order, but petitioner was again imprisoned by the warden against his will, such facts were sufficient to establish a prima facie case entitling petitioner to a hearing. People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 121 Colo. 141, 215 P.2d 327 (1949); Espinoza v. Tinsley, 154 Colo. 347, 390 P.2d 941 (1964); Osborne v. Van Cleave, 166 Colo. 398, 443 P.2d 988 (1968).

District court incorrectly decided that petitioner had not established a prima facie case where the petitioner presented a notice of parole board action granting parole and no evidence was presented that parole had been rescinded or suspended, as required by parole board regulations. The motion to dismiss should have been denied. Cardiel v. Brittan, 833 P.2d 748 (Colo. 1992).

If no prima facie case is established on face of petition, there is no right to a hearing. Reed v. People, 745 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1987).

C. Jurisdiction.

District courts have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings. Ex parte Arakawa, 78 Colo. 193, 240 P. 940 (1925); Petition of Phillips, 93 Colo. 203, 24 P.2d 755 (1933); Rogers v. Best, 115 Colo. 245, 171 P.2d 769 (1946); Hart v. Best, 119 Colo. 569, 205 P.2d 787 (1949); Stilley v. Tinsley, 156 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Jurisdiction conferred by this section and constitution. District courts have jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings under this section as well as under the provisions of § 11 of art. VI, Colo. Const. People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 121 Colo. 141, 215 P.2d 327 (1949).

This section uses the plural "district courts", without any limitation. To say that any district court is without jurisdiction to determine questions properly presented by petitions for habeas corpus runs head-on into and does violence to the above legislative pronouncement. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Applicant may seek the writ in the most convenient forum. This supreme court accepts this section at its face value and so construes it as to make applications for the writ available in the forum most convenient for the applicant, and recognize no restrictions attempted to be imposed upon the right of one to choose any forum provided by statute for asserting his rights and the protection afforded by the constitution and statutes. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Petitions should be addressed to the district court, not an individual judge. Except in vacation, petitions should be addressed to the district court, not to an individual judge, because the power to act is the court's, not the man's. People ex rel. Wyse v. District Court, 180 Colo. 88, 503 P.2d 154 (1972).

Jurisdiction will be presumed to issue the writ. By this section the district courts and the judges thereof are given general jurisdiction to issue the writ of habeas corpus, and the jurisdiction to issue the writ in a particular case will be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary. People v. District Court, 6 Colo. 534 (1883); Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Nicholls, 8 Colo. 188, 6 P. 512 (1885); Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

The supreme court may also assume original jurisdiction in habeas corpus cases, but the writ in such a case may not be used as a writ of error. People ex rel. Burchinell v. District Court, 22 Colo. 422, 45 P. 402 (1896); In re Popejoy, 26 Colo. 32, 55 P. 1083 (1899); Martin v. District Court, 37 Colo. 110, 86 P. 82 (1906); Ex parte Stidger, 37 Colo. 407, 86 P. 219 (1906); Ex parte Arakawa, 78 Colo. 193, 240 P. 940 (1925); Hart v. Best, 119 Colo. 569, 205 P.2d 787 (1949).

The justices of the supreme court acting singly or out of term, are without constitutional jurisdiction and authority to issue the writ of habeas corpus or to hear or determine the matters arising thereon, despite the authority attempted to be given by this section. In re Garvey, 7 Colo. 502, 4 P. 758 (1884).

Writ of habeas corpus may not be prosecuted in a district court to challenge an order of a different district court in another judicial district concerning presentence confinement credit. Pipkin v. Brittain, 713 P.2d 1358 (Colo. App. 1985).

A court may correct an excessive sentence. Where a judgment is merely excessive and the court which pronounces it is one of general jurisdiction, it is not void ab initio because of the excess, but is good so far as the power of the court extends, and is invalid only as to the excess, and therefore a person in custody under such sentence cannot be discharged on habeas corpus until he has suffered or performed so much of it as it is within the power of the court to impose. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

If an illegal sentence has been pronounced, the court has power to substitute a legal sentence, and this power is not impaired by the expiration of the term of court, during which the judgment was pronounced. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

An improper mittimus will be corrected, but prisoner will not be discharged. Where upon petitioner's own showing, the only relief to which he was entitled was a correction of the wording of the mittimus under which he was confined to conform to the judgment, the issuance of a new mittimus and the denial of discharge on a writ of habeas corpus was proper. Sexton v. People, 143 Colo. 35, 351 P.2d 842 (1960); Bernard v. Tinsley, 144 Colo. 244, 355 P.2d 1098 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S. Ct. 718, 5 L. Ed.2d 708 (1961).

Unless the mittimus is void. Where release on habeas corpus is sought on the ground that the sentence imposed on a petitioner is void, and the court determines that mittimus under which the warden of a prison held the petitioner is void, the court's only duty is to order the petitioner released from the custody of the warden. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Or a commutation superceded the mittimus. The alleged commutation, if true, may entitle petitioner to some relief. The commutation superceded the mittimus issued upon the original conviction and reduced the petitioner's minimum sentence. Unless it be shown by some evidence in a hearing that the commutation of the governor was revoked, the petitioner could not be required by the warden or the parole board, or anyone else, to resume serving the five year minimum sentence originally imposed by the court. They are not apparent on the face of the petition. It may be that, had a hearing been held and these records produced, the court would have been justified in discharging the writ. The error committed is the summary refusal by the court to issue the writ or grant a hearing when the allegations on the face of the petition indicated recitals that entitled the petitioner to the writ forthwith. Sharp v. Tinsley, 147 Colo. 84, 362 P.2d 859 (1961).

Petitioner may seek federal habeas corpus when all state remedies are exhausted. Where the Colorado supreme court had reached a conclusion on the substantive issue of the legality of a search and seizure, this portion of the decision was only dictum and therefore not binding upon a trial court where it is stated in such a way that under ordinary circumstances, a trial court would feel bound by the decision, and would therefore deny a motion made pursuant to Crim. P. 35(b) on the grounds that the Colorado supreme court had already decided the question; where habeas corpus was unavailable to the petitioner, for all practical purposes the petitioner has exhausted his state remedies and a petition for federal habeas corpus was properly before the district court. Peters v. Dillon, 227 F. Supp. 487 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd on other grounds, 341 F.2d 337 (10th Cir. 1965).

But, not so long as trial court had jurisdiction over the crime, defendant, and sentence. Habeas corpus will never lie to afford relief from a conviction obtained at a trial at which any of the defendant's federal or state constitutional procedural rights have been violated, so long as the trial court in question had jurisdiction over the crime and over the defendant and imposed a sentence within statutory limits. No matter how unfair the trial, no matter what constitutional rights were violated, habeas corpus cannot be used to remedy the wrong. Peters v. Dillon, 227 F. Supp. 487 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd on other grounds, 341 F.2d 337 (10th Cir. 1965).

Petitions dismissed for failure to exhaust state judicial remedies. Petitions for federal writ of habeas corpus were dismissed on the grounds that the petitioner had failed to exhaust available state judicial remedies which could provide the relief he sought. Peterson v. Ricketts, 495 F. Supp. 312 (D. Colo. 1980).

13-45-102. Petition for relief - civil cases. When any person not being committed or detained for any criminal or supposed criminal matter is confined or restrained of his liberty under any color or pretense whatever, he may proceed by appropriate action as prescribed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure in the nature of habeas corpus which petition shall be in writing, signed by the party or some person on his behalf, setting forth the facts concerning his imprisonment and wherein the illegality of such imprisonment consists, and in whose custody he is detained. The petition shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of the party applying or some other person on his behalf. If the confinement or restraint is by virtue of any judicial process or order, a copy thereof shall be annexed thereto or an affidavit made that the same has been demanded and refused. The same proceedings shall thereupon be had in all respects as are directed in section 13-45-101.

The purpose of habeas corpus proceedings is to determine whether a person is unlawfully restrained of his liberty. Johnson v. Black, 137 Colo. 119, 322 P.2d 99 (1958).

A juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction of adoption matters, but such jurisdiction has nothing to do with habeas corpus proceedings involving unlawful restraint. Johnson v. Black, 137 Colo. 119, 322 P.2d 99 (1958).

Strict technicalities of habeas corpus that are applied in criminal case have no application in custodial questions. Fackerell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 370, 295 P.2d 682 (1956).

Habeas corpus is a proper remedy where a mother is not a party to an adoption. Fackerell v. District Court, 133 Colo. 370, 295 P.2d 682 (1956).

Mother may proceed by habeas corpus to regain custody of children from guardians. Where a full hearing was accorded guardians in a habeas corpus proceeding by a mother to regain custody of her child from guardians, as such, this did not cure the infirmity which resulted from the failure of the juvenile court to give guardians notice of mother's prior petition to dismiss guardianship proceedings. Woodson v. Ingram, 173 Colo. 65, 477 P.2d 455 (1970).

Stranger may not utilize writ to get children from parents. Habeas corpus is an available remedy to adjudicate custody of children under certain circumstances. But, a stranger lacks standing to maintain habeas corpus looking to an award of custody as against the parents of the child who are presumed to be entitled to the custody. Lopez v. Smith, 146 Colo. 180, 360 P.2d 967 (1961).

One who seeks custody through habeas corpus must show a prima facie right to custody. The habeas corpus petition alleges abandonment of the child by the parents. It seeks to establish a right based on past custody in fact although admittedly not in law. In the absence of a right to custody based on an adjudication decreeing adoption on one of the statutory grounds or on a finding of dependency under that statute, a third person may not maintain a habeas corpus action seeking an award of custody of a child as against the child's natural parents upon an allegation of prior abandonment by the parents. Lopez v. Smith, 146 Colo. 180, 360 P.2d 967 (1961).

A district court in habeas corpus proceedings has jurisdiction to determine whether a child is being unlawfully restrained by the grandparents. Such determination cannot in any manner affect the outcome of any adoption proceedings. An adjudication in the habeas corpus proceedings cannot be considered as an adjudication of abandonment as defined in the adoption statute or as used in the dependent and neglected children statute, for two reasons: (1) The question of abandonment is not an issue; (2) the district court has no jurisdiction over abandonment. Johnson v. Black, 137 Colo. 119, 322 P.2d 99 (1958).

Habeas corpus may be utilized to determine custody of child originally domiciled in another state in an emergency. In the ordinary case, absent an emergency situation affecting the immediate needs and welfare of the child, an award of custody of a minor child domiciled in another state, made by a court having jurisdiction to do so, will be recognized under the long established custom of comity among the several states. However, under the doctrine of parens patriae, where an emergency exists concerning the immediate needs and welfare of a child within this state, our courts may, in such circumstances, enter custodial orders for the protection of such child, notwithstanding the child's domicile elsewhere and the existence of otherwise valid orders to the contrary theretofore entered in a sister state having jurisdiction of the parties. Such power may be exercised not only in ordinary custody proceedings, but also in habeas corpus proceedings as were pending in the present controversy. Wilson v. Wilson, 172 Colo. 566, 474 P.2d 789 (1970).

13-45-103. Hearing - pleadings - discharge. (1) Upon the return of the writ of habeas corpus, a day shall be set for the hearing of the cause of imprisonment or detainer not exceeding five days thereafter, unless the prisoner requests a longer time. The prisoner may deny any of the material facts set forth in the return or may allege any fact to show either that the imprisonment or detention is unlawful or that he is then entitled to his discharge, which allegations or denials shall be made on oath. The return may be amended by leave of the court, before or after the same is filed as also may all suggestions made against it, that thereby all material facts may be ascertained. The court shall proceed in a summary way to settle the facts by hearing the testimony and arguments of all parties interested civilly, if there are any, as well as of the prisoner and the person who holds him in custody and shall dispose of the prisoner as the case may require.

(2) If it appears that the prisoner is in custody by virtue of process from any court legally constituted, he can be discharged only for some of the following causes:

(a) Where the court has exceeded the limit of its jurisdiction, either as to the matter, place, sum, or person;

(b) Where, though the original imprisonment was lawful, yet by some act, omission, or event which has subsequently taken place, the party has become entitled to his discharge;

(c) Where the process is defective in some substantial form required by law;

(d) Where the process, though in proper form, has been issued in a case or under circumstances where the law does not allow process or orders for imprisonment or arrest to issue;

(e) Where, although in proper form, the process has been issued or executed by a person either unauthorized to issue or execute the same or where the person having the custody of the prisoner under such process is not the person empowered by law to detain him;

(f) Where the process appears to have been obtained by false pretense or bribery;

(g) Where there is no general law, nor any judgment, order, or decree of a court to authorize the process, if in a civil suit, nor any conviction if in a criminal proceeding.

(3) No court on the return of a habeas corpus shall inquire into the legality or justice of a judgment or decree of a court legally constituted, in any other manner. In all cases where the imprisonment is for a criminal or supposed criminal matter, if it appears to the court that there is sufficient legal cause for the commitment of the prisoner although such commitment may have been informally made, or without due authority, or the process may have been executed by a person not authorized, the court shall make a new commitment, in proper form and directed to the proper officer, or admit the party to bail if the case is bailable.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Post-Convention Remedies in Colorado Criminal Cases", see 31 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 249 (1951). For note, "Habeas Corpus in Colorado for the Convicted Criminal", see 30 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 145 (1958).

To warrant a habeas corpus hearing the court must have jurisdiction of the respondent and the person allegedly suffering restraint. To satisfy this requirement it usually is necessary that the alleged restraint shall be exercised upon such person within the state. Nevertheless, if it appears that respondent is able to produce such person, it is generally considered that the writ may issue, notwithstanding he is not within the state. Ex parte Emerson, 107 Colo. 83, 108 P.2d 866 (1940).

In a habeas corpus proceeding by a person convicted of a crime, the sole question for consideration is whether the petitioner was convicted in a court having jurisdiction over his person of the charge in the information and whether judgment and sentence were within the statutory limitations. In re Garvey, 7 Colo. 384, 3 P. 903 (1884); Petition of Phillips, 93 Colo. 203, 24 P.2d 755 (1933); People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 121 Colo. 141, 215 P.2d 327 (1949); Farrell v. District Court, 135 Colo. 329, 311 P.2d 410 (1957); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Ruark v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 565, 408 P.2d 969, cert. denied, 380 U.S. 946, 85 S. Ct. 1032, 13 L. Ed.2d 965 (1965); Henry v. Tinsley, 344 F.2d 109 (10th Cir. 1965); People ex rel. Patterson v. District Court, 157 Colo. 69, 401 P.2d 88 (1965); Breckenridge v. Patterson, 374 F.2d 857 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 389 U.S. 801, 88 S. Ct. 9, 19 L. Ed.2d 56 (1967); De Baca v. Trujillo, 167 Colo. 311, 447 P.2d 533 (1968).

In habeas corpus proceedings, judicial inquiry generally is limited to an investigation of the validity of the petitioner's confinement at the time of the hearing. Where petitioner alleged only that his place of confinement should be altered, rather than that the particular circumstances of his place of confinement deprived him of constitutionally protected rights, the petitioner's request for habeas corpus relief was properly dismissed. White v. Ricketts, 684 P.2d 239 (Colo. 1984).

A writ of habeas corpus will not issue to enable the supreme court to review a judgment that is merely irregular or erroneous. It is only where there has been no conviction, or, what is the same thing, a conviction that is wholly void, and not where there has been an erroneous conviction before a competent tribunal, that the prisoner may be released on habeas corpus under this section. Ex parte Farnham, 3 Colo. 545 (1877).

There is a distinction between a void and erroneous judgment, and where the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the person, its judgment will not be void; at most, it is erroneous, in which case it can be corrected by the court which pronounced it or by the supreme court. In a collateral habeas corpus proceeding the validity of the judgment cannot be questioned. Hart v. Best, 119 Colo. 569, 205 P.2d 787 (1949).

Hearing is required. Ordinarily, there can be no doubt that under this section where the person allegedly restrained has challenged the truth of the officer's return on its face, the court must settle the facts by hearing the testimony and arguments and then dispose of the prisoner as the case may require. Ex parte Emerson, 107 Colo. 83, 108 P.2d 866 (1940).

Final determination is based on hearing. Final determination of a habeas corpus proceeding is not to be had on the petition. It can only be had upon the answer and return to the writ. Minor v. Tinsley, 154 Colo. 249, 389 P.2d 850 (1964).

Continuance not in interest of petitioner improperly granted. The trial court improperly continued the hearing on the habeas corpus petition beyond the five-day statutory time limit. A child could not be said to have requested the continuance by filing a custody petition through his mother where the legal custodian of the child by habeas corpus seeks expeditious enforcement of the custody order, while the mother by a custody proceeding seeks a determination concerning the child's permanent custody. A continuance in the habeas corpus proceeding entirely defeats the purpose for which the custodian and the child pursued that course of action — immediate restoration of the child to his legal custodian. Nelson v. District Court, 186 Colo. 381, 527 P.2d 811 (1974).

In habeas corpus proceeding, burden rested upon petitioner to allege facts entitling him to relief. Pigg v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 160, 405 P.2d 687 (1965).

Petitioner may have right to habeas corpus due to some happening after commitment. This section provides that a prisoner can be discharged where though the original imprisonment was lawful, yet by some act, omission or event, which has subsequently taken place, the party has become entitled to his discharge. Kostal v. Tinsley, 152 Colo. 196, 381 P.2d 43 (1963).

Such as prison board forfeiting "good time" credit. Subsection (2) is an authorization to test the legality of the prison board proceedings in the state courts whereby good time credits were forfeited by the prison board following the return of the appellant to prison after an escape. Henry v. Patterson, 363 F.2d 443 (10th Cir. 1966).

Formal defects in information will not entitle prisoner to discharge. The omission from a criminal information, otherwise above exception, of the concluding phrase "and against the peace and dignity of the same", goes to matter of form, and in no degree impairs the jurisdiction of the court and one convicted upon such information will not be discharged on habeas corpus. Chemgas v. Tynan, 51 Colo. 35, 116 P. 1045 (1911).

Satisfaction of judgment entitles petitioner to release. A petition to have the trial court determine that he had in fact satisfied a valid judgment of the court and was therefore entitled to release from the penitentiary comes within the provisions of writ of habeas corpus. Saiz v. People, 156 Colo. 43, 396 P.2d 963 (1964).

Writ improperly discharged. Although the district court properly proceeded in a summary way to settle the petitioner's request for release from the custody of the department of corrections on the basis that the petitioner fully served his sentences, the court improperly discharged the writ. The district court incorrectly decided that petitioner had not established a prima facie case where the petitioner presented a notice of parole board action granting parole and no evidence was presented that parole had been rescinded or suspended, as required by parole board regulations. The motion to dismiss should have been denied. Brittian v. Brittian, 833 P.2d 748 (Colo. 1992).

Writ of habeas corpus properly denied as prisoners do not have any constitutional right to a particular classification level within a correctional system, and the department of corrections' classification of petitioner did not impermissibly invade any retained liberty interest. Andretti v. Johnson, 779 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989).

Writ of habeas corpus properly denied as inmate's right to payment of postage fees by the state for mailing costs associated with litigation is not fundamental constitutional right protected by habeas corpus proceeding. Reece v. Johnson, 793 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 1990).

In using the telephone as the transmission mechanism for hearing the parties' legal theories, the court did not abuse its discretion as to the manner of a hearing under this section. Spoto v. Colo. State Dept. of Corr., 883 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in Beverly v. Davis, 648 P.2d 621 (Colo. 1982); Schumm v. Nelson, 659 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1983).

13-45-104. Witnesses - duty of sheriff. When a habeas corpus is issued to bring the body of any prisoner committed as aforesaid, unless the court issuing the same deems it wholly unnecessary and useless, the court shall issue a subpoena to the sheriff of the county where said person is confined, commanding him to summon the witnesses therein named to appear before the court at the time and place where such habeas corpus is returnable. It is the duty of the sheriff to serve such subpoena, if it is possible, in time to enable such witnesses to attend. It is the duty of the witnesses thus served with said subpoena to attend and give evidence before the court issuing the same on pain of being deemed guilty of a contempt of court and proceeded against accordingly by said court.

13-45-105. Court to examine witnesses. On the hearing of any habeas corpus, it is the duty of the court who hears the same to examine the witnesses aforesaid, and such other witnesses as the prisoner may request, touching any offense named in the warrant of commitment whether or not said offense is technically set out in the commitment.

Source: R.S. p. 254, § 244. G.L. § 849. G.S. § 990. R.S. 08: § 2921. C.L. § 6490. CSA: C. 77, § 5. CRS 53: § 65-1-5. C.R.S. 1963: § 65-1-5.

13-45-106. Bail - recognizance - binding witness. (1) When any person is admitted to bail on habeas corpus, he shall enter into recognizance with one or more securities in such sum as the court directs, having regard to the circumstances of the prisoner and the nature of the offense, conditioned upon his appearance at the district court held in and for the county where the offense was committed or where the same is to be tried. Where any court admits to bail or remands any prisoner brought before it on any writ of habeas corpus, it is the duty of the court to bind all such persons who declare anything material to prove the offense with which the prisoner is charged by recognizance to appear at the proper court having cognizance of the offense, upon a date certain, to give evidence touching the offense and not to depart the court without leave.

(2) The recognizance so taken, together with the recognizance entered into by the prisoner when he is admitted to bail, shall be certified and returned to the proper court. If any such witness neglects or refuses to enter into a recognizance when required, it is lawful for the court to commit him to jail until he enters into such recognizance or he is otherwise discharged by due course of law. If any judge neglects or refuses to bind any such witness or prisoner by recognizance when taken as aforesaid, he is guilty of a misdemeanor in office and shall be proceeded against accordingly.

ANNOTATION

Admission to bail pending proceedings for review of an order or judgment in a habeas corpus proceeding is largely statutory. Thus, apart from applicable statute authorizing admission to bail in such a case, where the habeas corpus proceedings were dismissed and the prisoner remanded, the court will not admit to bail pending an appeal and thereby grant indirectly the very relief which was previously denied him. People ex rel. Patterson v. District Court, 157 Colo. 69, 401 P.2d 88 (1965).

Prisoner cannot be freed by bail on appeal from denial of habeas corpus. In a habeas corpus proceeding, where the trial court has heard the case and discharged the writ, that court has no power to release a prisoner on bond who has been legally convicted and sentenced for commission of a crime, pending a review of the judgment dismissing the writ. People ex rel. Patterson v. District Court, 157 Colo. 69, 401 P.2d 88 (1965).

13-45-107. Remand - second writ - offenses not bailable. When any prisoner brought up on a habeas corpus is remanded to prison, it is the duty of the court remanding him to make out and deliver to the sheriff, or other person to whose custody he is remanded, an order in writing stating the cause of remanding him. If such prisoner obtains a second writ of habeas corpus, it is the duty of such sheriff or other person to whom the same is directed to return therewith the order aforesaid. If it appears that the prisoner was remanded for any offense not bailable, it shall be taken and received as conclusive, and the prisoner shall be remanded without further proceedings.

13-45-108. Second writ - bailable offense. It is unlawful for any court, on a second writ of habeas corpus obtained by the prisoner to discharge the prisoner if he is clearly and specifically charged in the warrant of commitment with a criminal offense; but the court on the return of such second writ has power only to admit such prisoner to bail, where the offense is bailable by law, or remand him to prison where the offense is not bailable or where such prisoner fails to give the bail required.

13-45-109. Once discharged - reimprisonment. (1) No person who has been discharged by order of a court on a habeas corpus shall be again imprisoned, restrained, or kept in custody for the same cause, unless he is afterwards indicted for the same offense or unless by the legal order or process of the court wherein he is bound by recognizance to appear.

(2) The following shall not be deemed to be the same cause:

(a) If, after a discharge for a defect of proof or on any material defect in the commitment in a criminal case, the prisoner is again arrested on sufficient proof and committed by legal process for the same offense;

(b) If, in a civil suit, the party has been discharged for any illegality in the judgment or process and is afterwards imprisoned by legal process for the same cause of action;

(c) Generally, when the discharge has been ordered on account of the nonobservance of any of the forms required by law, the party may be a second time imprisoned if the cause is legal and the forms required by law observed.

ANNOTATION

When prisoner is discharged by writ of habeas corpus, no court may stay such discharge. Staying a prisoner's discharge by a subsequent order is tantamount to keeping him in custody for the same cause notwithstanding his discharge by a writ of habeas corpus. Such action by a court is forbidden by the law. For it is provided in part by this section that no person who has been discharged by order of a court of judge on a habeas corpus shall be again imprisoned, restrained, or kept in custody for the same cause, unless he be afterwards indicted for the same offense, nor unless by the legal order or process of the court wherein he is bound by recognizance to appear. Geer v. Alaniz, 137 Colo. 432, 326 P.2d 71 (1958).

The doctrine of res judicata should not be employed to prevent the correction of errors or cure insufficiencies in extradition proceedings. Boyd v. Van Cleave, 180 Colo. 403, 505 P.2d 1305 (1973).

Or when the facts and issues are different. Generally, whether a discharge on habeas corpus of one held for extradition bars a subsequent extradition proceeding depends on whether the court in the second proceeding is required to pass upon the same or different matters from those ruled upon by the court in the first proceeding; if facts and the issues are different from those raised by the first petition, court is not precluded from reaching a different conclusion than it did on the initial petition. Boyd v. Van Cleave, 180 Colo. 403, 505 P.2d 1305 (1973).

13-45-110. Prisoner not to be removed - when. To prevent any person from avoiding or delaying his trial, it is unlawful to remove any prisoner on habeas corpus under this article out of the county in which he is confined within fifteen days next preceding the date certain set for trial except if it is to convey him into the county where the offense with which he stands charged is properly cognizable.

13-45-111. Removal of prisoners - causes. Any person committed to any prison or in the custody of any officer, sheriff, jailer, keeper, or other person, or his underofficer or deputy, for any criminal or supposed criminal matter shall not be removed from the prison or custody into any other prison or custody, unless it is by habeas corpus or some other legal writ; or where the prisoner is delivered to some common jail; or is removed from one place to another within the county, in order to effect his discharge or trial in due course of law; or in case of sudden fire, infection, or other necessity; or where the sheriff commits such prisoner to the jail of an adjoining county for the want of a sufficient jail in his own county, as provided in section 17-26-119, C.R.S.; or where the prisoner, in pursuance of a law of the United States, is claimed or demanded by the executive of the United States or territories. If any person, after such commitment, makes out, signs, or countersigns any warrant for such removal except as before excepted, then he shall forfeit to the prisoner or aggrieved party a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars to be recovered by the prisoner or party aggrieved in the manner provided in section 13-45-117.

ANNOTATION

This section and § 13-45-117 have to do with the improper removal of a prisoner from a county jail and providing for the forfeiture to such an aggrieved party of a sum not to exceed $300. Kostal v. People, 160 Colo. 64, 414 P.2d 123, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 939, 87 S. Ct. 305, 17 L. Ed.2d 218 (1966).

Common jail given its ordinary meaning. Usage of "common jail" was to distinguish the numerous municipal and county jails from state-operated correctional institutions. Kinney v. Young, 689 P.2d 614 (Colo. 1984).

13-45-112. Judge refusing or delaying writ - penalty. Any judge of a court empowered by this article to issue writs of habeas corpus who corruptly refuses to issue such writ when legally applied for in a case where such writ may lawfully issue or who, for the purpose of oppression, unreasonably delays the issuing of such writ shall for every such offense forfeit to the prisoner or party aggrieved a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars.

13-45-113. Failure to obey writ - penalty. If any officer, sheriff, jailer, keeper, or other person to whom any such writ is directed neglects or refuses to make the returns or to bring the body of the prisoner according to the command of said writ within the time required by this article, such officer, sheriff, jailer, keeper, or other person is guilty of contempt of the court which issued said writ; whereupon the court shall issue an attachment against such officer, sheriff, jailer, keeper, or other person and cause him to be committed to the jail of the county, there to remain without bail, until he obeys the writ. Such officer, sheriff, jailer, keeper, or other person shall also forfeit to the prisoner or aggrieved party a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars and shall be incapable of holding or executing his said office.

13-45-114. Avoiding writ - penalty. Anyone having a person in his or her custody or under his or her restraint, power, or control for whose relief a writ of habeas corpus is issued who, with the intent to avoid the effect of such writ, transfers such person to the custody, or places him or her under the control, of another or conceals him or her or changes the place of his or her confinement with intent to avoid the operation of such a writ or with intent to remove him or her out of this state commits a class 6 felony and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S. In any prosecution for the penalty incurred under this section, it shall not be necessary to show that the writ of habeas corpus had issued at the time of the removal, transfer, or concealment therein mentioned if it is proved that the acts therein forbidden were done with the intent to avoid the operation of such writ.

The principal, after being surrendered or his bail discharged, or a person testifying as aforesaid shall be returned by the officer executing such writ by virtue of an order of the court for the purpose aforesaid, an attested copy of which, lodged with the jailer, exonerates such jailer of liability for an escape. Release abrogates section's applicability. This section and §§ 13-50-102 and 13-50-103 did not apply where the defendant guarantors expressly agreed that the release of coguarantors would not affect defendants' liability in any way. United States v. Immordino, 386 F. Supp. 611 (D. Colo. 1974), aff'd, 534 F.2d 1378 (10th Cir. 1976).

Joint agreements are several, and suit may be brought against any of the parties liable or against all of them. Bennett v. Morse, 6 Colo. App. 122, 39 P. 582 (1894).

Under which the liability of the parties is joint and several. Where a contract provided that, in consideration of a certain sum of money having been paid to one of the parties of the first part, the parties of the first part would pay the same to the party of the second part if such sum were not paid by a third party within a specified time, such obligation of the parties of the first part is joint and several within this section. Doyle v. Nesting, 37 Colo. 522, 88 P. 862 (1906).

Under this section "obligation" means a written contract. Whenever the word "obligation" is used in a statute as the name of a contract (as in this section), an agreement in writing is meant; but where it is used with reference to a legal duty or liability, the term includes any indebtedness arising from contract, express or implied, oral or written. Exch. Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884); Sawyer v. Armstrong, 23 Colo. 287, 47 P. 391 (1896).

This section has no application to oral contracts. Townsend v. Heath, 106 Colo. 273, 103 P.2d 691 (1940).

The liability upon a promissory note is clearly rendered several by this section. Exch. Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884); Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891).

For the applicability of this section to negotiable instruments, see Hamill v. Ward, 14 Colo. 277, 23 P. 330 (1890); Tabor v. Miles, 5 Colo. App. 127, 38 P. 64 (1894).

Partnership contracts are excluded from this section. Doubt is cast upon the applicability of this statute to partnership contracts; and whatever may be said of our previous decisions, their effect certainly is to exclude partnership contracts from the provisions of this section. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

Equitable doctrine that partnership debts are joint and several does not obtain in a purely legal action. Exch. Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 P. 449 (1884).

Satisfaction must be pleaded to release joint debtor. Plea that contract is joint and several, and that plaintiff has already recovered judgment but not alleging satisfaction, is insufficient. Fitzgerald v. Burke, 14 Colo. 559, 23 P. 993 (1890).

13-50-102. Joint debtors - release - effect. A creditor of joint debtors may release one or more of such debtors, and such release shall operate as a full discharge of such debtor so released, but such release shall not release or discharge or affect the liability of the remaining debtor. Such release shall be taken and held to be a payment in the indebtedness of the full proportionate share of the debtor so released.

ANNOTATION

Release abrogates section's applicability. This section and §§ 13-50-101 and 13-50-103 did not apply where the defendant guarantors expressly agreed that the release of coguarantors would not affect defendants' liability in any way. United States v. Immordino, 386 F. Supp. 611 (D. Colo. 1974), aff'd, 534 F.2d 1378 (10th Cir. 1976).

A plaintiff can lawfully release any coguarantor from liability without thereby releasing the other guarantors from their obligation to contribute their several proportions. Taylor v. Hake, 92 Colo. 330, 20 P.2d 546 (1933).

For the rule as to release of one joint tortfeasor, see Price v. Baker, 143 Colo. 264, 352 P.2d 90 (1960); Hamm v. Thompson, 143 Colo. 298, 353 P.2d 73 (1960).

A co-judgment debtor may take an assignment of the judgment against his codebtor and enforce it to the extent of the latter's proportionate liability thereon under this and the following section, irrespective of the amount paid for the assignment. Simpson v. Morgan, 124 Colo. 441, 238 P.2d 200 (1951).

Release of some joint debtors extinguishes the obligation of any remaining joint debtors to pay so much of the debt as was deemed paid by the released joint debtors. Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where release of one of the debtors from liability in promissory note included liability for attorney fees, other debtors are each liable for their proportionate share of any liability for fees. A. Tenenbaum & Co., Inc. v. Colantuno, 3 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 708 (Colo. 2001).

A creditor may not collect more than the original debt. For example, a creditor is owed $100 by three joint and several debtors. One debtor pays $25 and obtains a complete release from further liability. The remaining debtors are now severally liable for the balance. The proportionate share of each remaining debtor is $33.33. If, however, the settling debtor pays $60, the proportionate share of each of the remaining debtors is still $33.33. The creditor can collect up to $33.33 from each remaining debtor until the obligation is paid in full. This collection could be $33.33 from one and $7.67 from the other. A. Tenenbaum & Co., Inc. v. Colantuno, 117 P.3d 20 (Colo. App. 2004).

Proportionate shares should be determined by dividing the debt equally, per capita, among promissory note judgment debtors who were jointly liable for attorney fees prior to release of one of the debtors and, if a debtor pays more than his percentage share to satisfy the attorney fee indebtedness, the debtor may file an action for contribution against the other debtors. A. Tenenbaum & Co., Inc. v. Colantuno, 3 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 708 (Colo. 2001).

13-50-103. Liability of remaining debtor. In case one or more joint debtors are released, no one of the remaining debtors shall be liable for more than his proportionate share of the indebtedness, unless he is the principal debtor and the debtor released was his surety, in which case the principal debtor is liable for the whole of the remainder of the indebtedness.

ANNOTATION

Release abrogates section's applicability. This section and §§ 13-50-101 and 13-50-102 did not apply where the defendant guarantors expressly agreed that the release of coguarantors would not affect defendants' liability in any way. United States v. Immordino, 386 F. Supp. 611 (D. Colo. 1974), aff'd, 534 F.2d 1378 (10th Cir. 1976).

Remaining debtors are only liable for their proportionate share. A release of one or more joint debtors is held to be payment on the indebtedness of the full proportionate share of such debtor or debtors and further that none of the remaining debtors shall be liable for more than his proportionate share of indebtedness. Hosler v. Ireland, 219 F. 489 (8th Cir. 1915).

Release executed by plaintiff in favor of co-obligors reduces defendant's liability. Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992).

Release of some joint debtors extinguishes the obligation of any remaining joint debtors to pay so much of the debt as was deemed paid by the released joint debtors. Smith v. Weindrop, 833 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1992).

Tenenbaum & Co., Inc. v. Colantuno*, 3 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 708 (Colo. 2001).

Court erred in reducing doctor's liability to account for fault apportioned to the nurses by the jury. In light of "captain of the ship" doctrine, no evidence exists to qualify doctor and nurses as joint debtors. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

13-50-104. Right of surety. Nothing in sections 13-50-102 to 13-50-104 affects or changes the right of a surety who has paid his proportionate share of an indebtedness of recovering the same from his principal debtor.

13-50-105. Actions by and against partnerships and associations - what property bound by judgment. A partnership or other unincorporated association may sue or be sued in an action in its common name to enforce for or against it a substantive right; except that in such action only the property of the partnership or other unincorporated association, the joint property of the associates, and the separate property of any individual member thereof who is named as a party individually and over whom individually the court has acquired jurisdiction either by entry of appearance or by service of process may be bound by the judgment therein.

This section is permissive and not mandatory. Frazier v. Carlin, 42 Colo. App. 226, 591 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Suit in common name or in names of partners. A partnership or limited partnership may sue or be sued either in its common name or by naming its partners. Frazier v. Carlin, 42 Colo. App. 226, 591 P.2d 1348 (1979); Rush v. Winker, 892 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section provides that an unincorporated association may sue in its common name. This wording is permissive, not mandatory. Morrison-Knudson Co. v. Rocky Mt. Chapter, Nat'l Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 236 F. Supp. 436 (D. Colo. 1964).

This section applies to joint ventures. There appears to be no Colorado case specifically holding that a joint venture comes within this section, but there is no reason why a "joint venture" should not fall within the "unincorporated association" language of this section. Morrison-Knudson Co. v. Rocky Mt. Chapter, Nat'l Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 236 F. Supp. 436 (D. Colo. 1964).

This section does not deem a joint venture a jural entity for all purposes; it would seem to do so only for procedural purposes as venue and service of process. Morrison-Knudson Co. v. Rocky Mt. Chapter, Nat'l Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 236 F. Supp. 436 (D. Colo. 1964).

Notice to general partners sufficient for limited partnership. Because the general partners possess sole management responsibility for a limited partnership, notice to them in their capacities as general partners affords that notice to the limited partnership which is necessary to satisfy the demands of due process. Frazier v. Carlin, 42 Colo. App. 226, 591 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Whether plaintiff qualified as a partnership or as an unincorporated association is applied in Johnson v. Chilcote, 599 F. Supp. 224 (D. Colo. 1984).

For judgment against partnership, see Thomas v. Dunne, 131 Colo. 20, 279 P.2d 427 (1955).

Where the only reference to an entity in a complaint in which a default judgment has been entered is in the context of its status as an alleged partner of a named defendant, the entity was not a party defendant in the case. Rush v. Winker, 892 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1994).

If a church is considered an unincorporated association, it can not be represented in court by its pastor who is not an attorney. People v. LaPorte Church of Christ, 830 P.2d 1150 (Colo. App. 1992).

This section and C.R.C.P. 106 can be construed harmoniously. C.R.C.P. 106 (a)(5) complements § 13-50-105 by providing the procedure for subjecting an unnamed partner to the court's jurisdiction after judgment enters against his partnership. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Teem P'ship, 835 F. Supp. 563 (D. Colo. 1993).

C.R.C.P. 106 (a)(5) does not provide an "alternate, cumulative remedy" to this section that a party may elect in lieu of naming a defendant during the pendency of an action where a corporate respondent was a member of the partnership whose identity was known by plaintiff but not named in the original action based upon a friendship with plaintiff's counsel. Gutrich v. LaPlante, 942 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd sub nom. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

C.R.C.P. 106(a)(5) may provide relief in the context of partnership law when: (1) The plaintiff could not have determined the existence or status of individual partners despite reasonable attempts to ascertain their identities; (2) the plaintiff could not bring about personal jurisdiction in the original action; or (3) some other reason beyond the plaintiff's control prevented the plaintiff from naming and serving the individual partners. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

A judgment against the partnership does not bind the individual partners unless they are individually named and subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court. Where plaintiffs sued the partnership under its common name and failed to sue individual partners, plaintiffs were barred from seeking recovery of the judgment against the partnership from the individual partners. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

This section and C.R.C.P. 54(e) contain clear requirements that an individual partner must be named, personally served, and subjected to the jurisdiction of the court to seek recovery from the individual. Plaintiffs actually knew the identity of some of the individual partners but made a conscious decision not to name and serve them. The plaintiffs' judgment was enforceable only against the assets of the partnership. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

Applied in Collection Agency, Inc. v. Golding, 44 Colo. App. 421, 616 P.2d 988 (1980); Heinold Hog Mkt., Inc. v. McCoy, 700 F.2d 611 (10th Cir. 1983).

Traditional theories of loss allocation in tort altered. The general assembly has altered traditional theories of loss allocation in tort with the passage of this act and with the introduction of a comparative negligence scheme into Colorado law, § 13-21-111, Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

Act remedies harsh common-law rule. This act is designed to remedy a harsh common-law rule. Changing rules of tort liability have expanded the number of parties who can be considered joint tortfeasors, while the rule of joint and several liability left the plaintiff with control over who would ultimately bear the losses. The contribution act remedied this situation by permitting the shifting of losses equitably among those tortfeasors who caused the damages. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

Employer covered under workmen's compensation not liable for contribution. Because the workmen's compensation act immunizes an employer from tort liability to a covered employee, the employer is not "jointly liable in tort" and therefore contribution is barred. Hammond v. Kolberg Mfg. Corp., 542 F. Supp. 662 (D. Colo. 1982).

Emphasis on intent to define scope of general releases effectuates the purpose of this article in that it retains the liability of joint tortfeasors unless the releaser intended to release all claims. Neves v. Potter, 769 P.2d 1047 (Colo. 1989).

13-50.5-102. Right to contribution - contract or agreement provision to indemnify or hold harmless void against public policy. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this article, where two or more persons become jointly or severally liable in tort for the same injury to person or property or for the same wrongful death, there is a right of contribution among them even though judgment has not been recovered against all or any of them.

(2) The right of contribution exists only in favor of a tortfeasor who has paid more than his pro rata share of the common liability, and his total recovery is limited to the amount paid by him in excess of his pro rata share. No tortfeasor is compelled to make contribution beyond his own pro rata share of the entire liability.

(3) There is no right of contribution in favor of any tortfeasor who has intentionally, willfully, or wantonly caused or contributed to the injury or wrongful death.

(4) A tortfeasor who enters into a settlement with a claimant is not entitled to recover contribution from another tortfeasor whose liability for the injury or wrongful death is not extinguished by the settlement nor in respect to any amount paid in a settlement which is in excess of what was reasonable.

(5) A liability insurer, who by payment has discharged in full or in part the liability of a tortfeasor and has thereby discharged in full its obligation as insurer, is subrogated to the tortfeasor's right of contribution to the extent of the amount it has paid in excess of the tortfeasor's pro rata share of the common liability. This provision does not limit or impair any right of subrogation arising from any other relationship.

(6) This article does not impair any right of indemnity under existing law. Where one tortfeasor is entitled to indemnity from another, the right of the indemnity obligee is for indemnity and not contribution, and the indemnity obligor is not entitled to contribution from the obligee for any portion of his indemnity obligation.

(7) This article shall not apply to breaches of trust or of other fiduciary obligation.

(8) In the event that a public contract or agreement for the construction, alteration, repair, or maintenance of any building, structure, highway bridge, viaduct, water, sewer, or gas distribution system, or other works dealing with construction, or any moving, demolition, or excavation connected with such construction, contains any covenant, promise, agreement, or combination thereof to indemnify or hold harmless any public entity from that public entity's own negligence, then such covenant, promise, agreement, or combination thereof is void as against public policy and wholly unenforceable. This subsection (8) shall not apply to construction bonds, contracts of insurance, contract clauses regarding insurance, or contract clauses regarding costs of defense of litigation arising out of the work or to any covenant, promise, agreement, or combination thereof to indemnify or hold harmless a contracting party against claims arising out of the negligent acts of the indemnitor and its subcontractors in the performance of the work under the contract. However, no contracting party shall be required to indemnify or hold harmless from any liability or damages arising from the negligent acts of the indemnified party. This subsection (8) is intended only to affect the contractual relationship between the parties relating to indemnification of public entities for the negligent acts of the public entity, and nothing in this subsection (8) shall affect any other rights or remedies of public entities or contracting parties.

Doctrine of indemnity abolished. The doctrine of indemnity, insofar as it requires one of two joint tortfeasors to reimburse the other for the entire amount paid by the other as damages to a party injured as the result of the negligence of both joint tortfeasors, is no longer viable, and is hereby abolished. Brochner v. W. Ins. Co., 724 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1986).

A tortfeasor no longer may unfairly be forced to pay all or a disproportionate share of damages suffered by an injured party as the result of negligent conduct by two or more joint tortfeasors. Brochner v. W. Ins. Co., 724 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1986).

Joint tortfeasors are now subject to contribution among themselves based upon their relative degrees of fault. That principal is at odds with the essential characteristic of our present rule of indemnity that, without regard to apportionment of fault, a single tortfeasor may ultimately pay the expenses of all injuries sustained by a third party as a result of negligent conduct by two or more tortfeasors. There can be no mistake concerning the intent of the general assembly to establish the policy of responsibility related to proportionate fault in the context of personal injury litigation. Brochner v. W. Ins. Co., 724 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1986).

Right of contribution is statutory. The right of contribution in Colorado is in all respects a creature of statutory origin. Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

Contribution is right of recovery by one joint tortfeasor from a co-tortfeasor and has nothing to do with the rights of the injured party to recover from the tortfeasors. Greenemeier By Redington v. Spencer, 694 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 719 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1986).

Joint or several liability required for contribution. To recover contribution against a person, that person must be found as a party jointly or severally liable with the ones seeking contribution. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 645 P.2d 1321 (Colo. App. 1981); Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 650 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983); Tex-Ark Joist Co. v. Derr & Gruenewald Const., 719 P.2d 384

The right of contribution "vests" only upon the existence of a common liability. Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

The uniform act is clear and unequivocal in its requirement that joint or common liability in tort exist as a precondition to the right of contribution. Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

The term "common liability" must be interpreted in light of the final sentence of subsection (2) that "No tortfeasor is compelled to make contribution beyond his own pro rata share of the entire liability." Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

Common liability exists only when tortfeasors are "jointly or severally liable" in tort for the same injury. Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

Joint and several liability means each tortfeasor may be held liable for the entire damages arising from a single injury. Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

Employee and employer not joint tortfeasors within the meaning of the Uniform Contribution Among Tortfeasors Act where the initial complaint alleged that employee was negligent but that employer was liable based only on a theory of respondeat superior, not negligence. Since employee and employer were not joint tortfeasors with the meaning of the act, the act does not bar employee's indemnity action against employer. Serna v. Kingston Enters., 72 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Individual tortfeasor not entitled to right of contribution. Where judgment is rendered against a tortfeasor for no more than its proportionate share of liability, it is not eligible for deduction of a settling tortfeasor's settlement amount from the judgment. Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

One immune from liability for injury cannot be liable for contribution. An employer who is immune from common-law liability for an injury cannot become "jointly or severally liable in tort" so as to trigger a right of contribution under this section. Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

Contribution provision does not apply where jury finds one of the tortfeasors not negligent. Wesley v. United Servs. Auto Ass'n, 694 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1984).

Contribution from nonparty permitted. An insurer of a tortfeasor found liable in a prior action can recover contribution from a nonparty to that prior action. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop.

& Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

The language "liable in tort" in subsection (1) refers to a person's exposure to a civil action and not to the existence of final judgment in tort. This section only requires that a person become "liable in tort" before the right of contribution arises. The right to collect contribution, of course, depends on a binding and final determination of fault among joint tortfeasors, obtained either in the initial lawsuit by asserting a claim of contribution or in a separate action. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983); Cachne Nat'l Bank v. Hinman, 626 F. Supp. 1341 (D. Colo. 1986); Patten v. Knutzen, 646 F. Supp. 427 (D. Colo. 1986).

Since the Workmen's Compensation Act is intended to be the exclusive forum for determining employer liability for job-related injuries, a third-party claim for contribution under this section is denied. Williams v. White Mountain Const. Co., 749 P.2d 423 (Colo. 1988); Tex-Ark Joist Co. v. Derr and Gruenewald, Const., 749 P.2d 431 (Colo. 1988).

Subsection (2) does not bar recovery by corporation for claims it owes third-parties even though those claims have not yet been, and may never be, paid. In re Stat-Tech Securities Litigation, 905 F. Supp. 1416 (D. Colo. 1995).

Nonparty not bound by determination of relative fault. A nonparty to a suit cannot be conclusively bound by the jury's determination of relative fault in a subsequent declaratory judgment action for contribution. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

An employer who complies with the workmen's compensation act cannot be subject to a third-party action for contribution. Borroel v. Lakeshore, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 354 (D. Colo. 1985).

13-50.5-103. Pro rata shares. The relative degrees of fault of the joint tortfeasors shall be used in determining their pro rata shares.

Section 13-21-111.5 is not exclusive remedy for contribution. Nothing in the language of § 13-21-111.5 indicates it is intended to be the exclusive mechanism for litigating the relative fault of all joint tortfeasors. A claim for contribution may be made under this section when a party has not been formally designated in the action under § 13-21-111.5. Watters v. Pelican Intern., Inc., 706 F. Supp. 1452 (D. Colo. 1989).

The abolition of joint and several liability by § 13-21-111.5 does not extinguish a defendant's right to contribution from joint tortfeasors. The language of subsection (1) does not evince an intention by the general assembly to require a defendant to establish both joint liability and several liability as a prerequisite to the defendant's right of contribution. A defendant is permitted to establish the several liability of one or more parties as a cause of the same injury to the plaintiff. Graber v. Westaway, 809 P.2d 1126 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981); McCall v. Roper, 685 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1984); D.R. Horton, Inc. v. D&S Landscaping, LLC, 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

13-50.5-104. Enforcement. (1) Whether or not judgment has been entered in an action against two or more tortfeasors for the same injury or wrongful death, contribution may be enforced by separate action.

(2) Where a judgment has been entered in an action against two or more tortfeasors for the same injury or wrongful death, contribution may be enforced in that action by judgment in favor of one against other judgment defendants by motion upon notice to all parties to the action.

(3) If there is a judgment for the injury or wrongful death against the tortfeasor seeking contribution, any separate action by him to enforce contribution must be commenced within one year after the judgment has become final by lapse of time for appeal or after appellate review.

(4) If there is no judgment for the injury or wrongful death against the tortfeasor seeking contribution, his right of contribution is barred unless he has either:

(a) Discharged by payment the common liability within the statute of limitations period applicable to claimant's right of action against him and has commenced his action for contribution within one year after payment; or

(b) Agreed while action is pending against him to discharge the common liability and has within one year after the agreement paid the liability and commenced his action for contribution.

(5) The recovery of a judgment for an injury or wrongful death against one tortfeasor does not of itself discharge the other tortfeasors from liability for the injury or wrongful death unless the judgment is satisfied. The satisfaction of the judgment does not impair any right of contribution.

(6) The judgment of the court in determining the liability of the several defendants to the claimant for an injury or wrongful death shall be binding as among such defendants in determining their right to contribution.

Nonparty not bound by determination of relative fault. A nonparty to a suit cannot be

13-50.5-105. Release or covenant not to sue. (1) When a release or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce judgment is given in good faith to one of two or more persons liable in tort for the same injury or the same wrongful death:

(a) It does not discharge any of the other tortfeasors from liability for their several pro rata shares of liability for the injury, death, damage, or loss unless its terms so provide; but it reduces the aggregate claim against the others to the extent of any degree or percentage of fault or negligence attributable by the finder of fact, pursuant to section 13-21-111 (2) or (3) or section 13-21-111.5, to the tortfeasor to whom the release or covenant is given; and

(b) It discharges the tortfeasor to whom it is given from all liability for contribution to any other tortfeasor.

Formerly, release of one constituted release of all. Prior to July 1, 1977, the effective date of this section, absent a manifestation of a contrary intent, a release of one joint tortfeasor released all joint tortfeasors. Mills v. Standard Title Ins. Co., 195 Colo. 281, 577 P.2d 756 (1978).

This section overrules the common-law rule that the release of an original tortfeasor operates to release a subsequent treating physician, absent specific language in the release to the contrary. Summey v. Lacy, 42 Colo. App. 1, 588 P.2d 892 (1978).

This section was currently formulated to encourage settlements and combined with the retention of the joint and several liability rule means that nonsettling tortfeasors may be forced to bear more than the portion of damages attributed to their relative degree of fault. Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

For history of common-law joint tortfeasor release rule in Colorado, see Cingoranelli v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 658 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1983).

Release rule inapplicable to personal injury protection claims. The original rationale for the general joint tortfeasor release rule — that there is only one cause of action — is clearly not applicable to personal injury protection claims under § 10-4-701 et seq., which gives rise to a separate cause of action in contract. Cingoranelli v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 658 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1983).

Within the meaning of this section tortfeasors are "liable in tort for the same injury" only when judgment is rendered against the nonsettling tortfeasor for an amount greater than its proportionate share of damages as measured by its degree of fault. Where tortfeasor is found liable for an amount in excess of its proportionate share of damages, it may deduct the settlement amount paid by another tortfeasor from its liability up to the judgment amount in excess of its proportionate share of damages. Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

Tortfeasors' contribution from joint tortfeasor was not barred where a release was given by the injured parties to all persons liable in tort for the same injury and where the tortfeasors paid the injured parties the full amount of the settlement and then sought contribution from the joint tortfeasors for their pro rata share. Miller v. Jarrell, 684 P.2d 954 (Colo. App. 1984).

Release or covenant not to sue from claimant insulates tortfeasor from contribution to other tortfeasors. W. Ins. Co. v. Brochner, 682 P.2d 1213 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 724 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1986); Kussman v. City and County of Denver, 706 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1985).

Section not applicable where joint tortfeasors were not liable for the "same injury". Panther v. Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., 701 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1985).

Settlement amount deducted from the total judgment rather than from the joint and several portion only, which means that a nonsettling tortfeasor will be liable for any part of the settling tortfeasor's pro rata share of damages that is greater than the amount paid in settlement. Perlmutter v. Blessing, 706 P.2d 777 (Colo. 1985); Greenmeier by Redington v. Spencer, 719 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1986).

Absent special circumstances, jury should be informed of the fact of settlement, but not the amount paid. Greenmeier by Redington v. Spencer, 719 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1986).

Failure to inform jury of settlement not reversible error. When jury was explicitly instructed to award damages which would reasonably compensate plaintiffs for injuries, and to consider any physical pain, mental suffering, or permanent injury or disability plaintiffs have suffered, plaintiffs were not prejudiced by jury's lack of knowledge of prior settlement. Greenmeier by Redington v. Spencer, 719 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1986).

This section and § 13-21-111.6 must be reconciled, if possible, to give effect to both sections. Therefore, this section should apply when a percentage of negligence has been attributed by the fact finder to the non-party while § 13-21-111.6 should control if the fact finder attributes no fault to the non-party. Gutierrez v. Bussey, 837 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1992).

Parole evidence may be used to vary or contradict a general release when the litigation is between a party to the release and a stranger thereto. Neves v. Potter, 769 P.2d 1047 (Colo. 1989).

Money received under loan receipt agreement not a payment entitling co-tortfeasors to a reduction in judgment, because plaintiff's contingent obligation to return money advanced by settling defendants precludes double recovery. Balistreri Greenhouses v. Roper Corp., 767 P.2d 736 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided under former law), cert. dismissed, 773 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1989).

Because under the original statute there typically was no determination made at trial as to whether those who had settled were "liable in tort", the current statute, which created a procedure for the fact finder at trial routinely to determine the liability of a tortfeasor who had settled before the trial, should not be construed to require such a finding before a reduction in the amount of the settlement is permitted. Simon v. Coppola, 876 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1993).

This section applies to those who pay compensation to an injury victim because they are facing exposure to being held "liable in tort" at trial, as distinct from those who provide payments from a collateral source, such as an insurance contract. Simon v. Coppola, 876 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1993).

Right to setoff by joint tortfeasors is limited to the amounts actually collected from settling defendants, rather than the amounts provided for in settlement agreements. Fireboard Corp. v. Fenton, 845 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1993).

Full compensation for plaintiff, as intended by the general assembly, was ensured where the trial court set off the judgment against defendants for any amount collected by plaintiff in settlement of claims against defendants no longer parties and where in the event the settlement from one defendant could not be collected, other defendants remained liable. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

When the jury assigns fault to a settling party as a nonparty pursuant to § 13-21-111.6, the trial verdict shall be reduced by an amount equal to the cumulative percentage of fault attributed to the settling nonparties. The amount to be reduced from the trial verdict shall be calculated by multiplying the total percentage of liability attributed to the settling nonparties by the total trial verdict awarded the plaintiff. Smith v. Zufelt, 880 P.2d 1178 (Colo. 1994).

Settlement of lawsuit brought by one partner "d/b/a" the partnership precluded subsequent claim by other partner and partnership itself under the common law theory of claim preclusion. Cruz v. Benine, 984 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1999).

Release of one partner and limited partnership did not bar claims against remaining partner or employee of limited partnership who were sued as joint tortfeasors. However, recovery in the second action must be reduced by any degree or percentage of fault attributed to the released partner and limited partnership. Cruz v. Benine, 984 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1999).

The duty of good faith extends to non-settling tortfeasors. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

The test for determining if a settlement was made in bad faith is whether the agreement was the product of collusive conduct intended to prejudice the interests of non-settling defendants. Whether a settlement is low compared with plaintiff's estimate of total damage is not sufficient to establish bad faith. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

Proof of collusion requires more than an agreement which results in the termination of a right of contribution. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

The party challenging the good faith of a settlement barring a claim for contribution has the burden of establishing that the settlement was collusive. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

The settlement agreement did not indicate a lack of good faith when it required a party to remain in a case to provide its own expert witnesses to respond to an "empty chair" defense and afforded an injured person prompt payment of funds for her losses. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

Since none of the amount paid by defendant to settle a remaining claim could be attributed to breach of warranty by a co-defendant, the trial court did not err in refusing to allow defendant to proceed with a cross claim against the co-defendant for damages paid based on such a claim. Stubbs v. Copper Mtn., Inc., 862 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Copper Mtn., Inc. v. Poma of Am., Inc., 890 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1995).

This section does not apply to reduce a defendant's liability under § 13-21-111.5 (4) where two or more persons act in concert to commit a tort. The joint liability provision, as the more recently enacted statute, must be deemed controlling to the extent of any inconsistency. Pierce v. Wiglesworth, 903 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1994); Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Plaintiff's fault may not reduce an intentional tortfeasor's liability. Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Proportionate fault is not applicable in a securities law context. Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

ANNOTATION

Declaratory judgment is conclusive as to questions raised by parties and passed upon by court. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Declaratory judgment does not constitute absolute bar to subsequent proceedings where parties are seeking other remedies, even though based upon claims which could have been asserted in original action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973); Near v. Calkins, 946 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1997).

The judgment leaves the parties to pursue the remedies which the law provides, after performing its office of declaring the existence of a certain liability. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Declaratory judgment on contract validity held not res judicata in subsequent action for reformation, rescission, and damages. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Judgment is res judicata as to questions of statutory construction raised between the parties. Preventive relief in some instances is just as properly a matter of judicial function as remedial relief and if given by a declaratory order in the construction of a statute, it is res judicata as to the questions of construction raised between the parties and passed upon. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Subsequent relief may be sought by separate action. Subsequent relief sought by party to prior declaratory judgment action need not be sought by amendment of complaint in original action, but may be sought by separate action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Declaratory judgment should not be accorded to try a controversy piecemeal. In granting the remedy of declaratory judgment, it should not be accorded, however, to try a controversy by piecemeal, or to try particular issues without settling the entire controversy. Lane v. Page, 126 Colo. 560, 251 P.2d 1078 (1952).

Act not intended to be a substitute for proper pleading. The uniform act was never intended to be a substitute for, or a short cut to, proper pleading and specifically provides that all issues of fact shall be tried and determined as in

For the procedure in cases when issues involve equity and actions at law, see Beacon Theatre, Inc. v. Westover, 359 U.S. 500, 79 S. Ct. 948, 3 L. Ed.2d 988 (1959).

Bedford*, 105 Colo. 373, 98 P.2d 1120, aff'd, 310 U.S. 41, 60 S. Ct. 800, 84 L. Ed. 1067 (1940); Gordon v. Wheatridge Water Dist., 107 Colo. 128, 109 P.2d 899 (1941); *McNichols v. 13-51-106. Who may obtain declaration. Any person interested under a deed, will, written contract, or other writings constituting a contract or whose rights, status, or other legal relations are affected by a statute, municipal ordinance, contract, or franchise may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the instrument, statute, ordinance, contract, or franchise and obtain a declaration of rights, status, or other legal relations thereunder.

Law reviews. For article, "Twenty-six Years Under the Colorado Declaratory Judgments Act", see 27 Dicta 177 (1950). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For comment, "Pre-Enforcement Judicial Review: CF&I Steel Corp. v. Colo. Air Pollution Control Commission", see 58 Den. L.J. 693 (1981).

This act was not intended to repeal the statute prohibiting judges from giving legal advice, nor to impose the duties of the profession upon the courts, nor to provide advance judgments as the basis of commercial enterprises, nor to settle mere academical questions. Gabriel v. Bd. of Regents of Univ. of Colo., 83 Colo. 582, 267 P. 407 (1928); City & County of Denver v. Lynch, 92 Colo. 102, 18 P.2d 907 (1932).

Primary purpose of declaratory judgment procedure is to provide a speedy, inexpensive, and readily accessible means of determining actual controversies which depend on the validity or interpretation of some written instrument of law. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

The purpose of this statute is to afford relief from the uncertainty surrounding legal rights and legal relations. It is remedial in nature and should be liberally construed and administered. Cnty. Tele-Communications v. Heather Corp., 677 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1984).

No proceeding lies under our declaratory judgment act to obtain merely an advisory opinion. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971).

A proceeding for declaratory judgment must be based upon an actual controversy. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971); Beacom v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 657 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1983); Cnty. Tele-Communications v. Heather Corp., 677 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1984).

A controversy exists where an insured has submitted a claim and the insurer determined that it did not intend unilaterally to admit liability, even though the insurer had not in fact denied such claim. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 779 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1989).

Plaintiff must demonstrate that there is an existing legal controversy that can be effectively resolved by a declaratory judgment, and not a mere possibility of a future legal dispute. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bowen/Edwards Assoc., 830 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1992).

A justiciable controversy existed, and so the dismissal of a declaratory judgment claim was an abuse of discretion, where a town's ordinance limited a developer's rights under an existing contract with the town, notwithstanding the fact that the developer had not applied for a permit from the town. Lot Thirty-Four Venture, L.L.C. v. Town of Telluride, 976 P.2d 303 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 3 P.3d 30 (Colo. 2000).

Injury in fact and interest legally protected by law give rise to standing. Cable television company was injured in fact by city ordinance granting unlawful permit to competitor without holding franchise election, and cable television company had a legally protected interest in conducting its business in a lawful manner satisfying requirements for standing under this act. Cnty. Tele-Communications v. Heather Corp., 677 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1984).

Judgment creditor of insured has standing to defend against claim for reformation of insurance policy. Cont'l Western v. Jim's Hardwood Fl., 12 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2000).

As does another insurer of judgment debtor. Cont'l Western v. Jim's Hardwood Fl., 12 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2000).

The questions presented must not be uncertain or hypothetical. The questions presented here are not uncertain or hypothetical, and because they are presented in an action seeking a declaratory judgment are no less justiciable than if presented by injunction or otherwise. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Courts need not reply to mere "speculative inquiries". The court cannot decide any other of the various questions raised, however desirable it might be to have them settled, unless it is now willing to answer questions "which have not yet arisen and which may never arise" and reply to mere "speculative inquiries". It cannot thus permit the courts to be converted into legal aid bureaus. Gabriel v. Bd. of Regents of Univ. of Colo., 83 Colo. 582, 267 P. 407 (1928).

A court should not enter into a speculative inquiry for the purpose of upholding or condemning statutory provisions, the effect of which, in concrete situations not yet developed, could not be definitely perceived. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

Or determine validity of a proposed city ordinance. A declaratory judgment may not issue under the provisions of this article on the validity of a city ordinance to create a storm sewer district, where the proposed ordinance is in contemplation only and has not been passed by the city council. City & County of Denver v. Denver Land Co., 85 Colo. 198, 274 P. 743 (1929).

Especially in the absence of the necessary parties. Desirable as it might be to have an announcement of the court upon a question, it would be improper to decide the question in the absence of the necessary parties. City & County of Denver v. Denver Land Co., 85 Colo. 198, 274 P. 743 (1929); Cont'l Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cochrane, 89 Colo. 462, 4 P.2d 308 (1931).

A declaratory judgment can only be taken to be a determination as to the rights of the parties before the court. Farmers Elevator Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Colo. 168, 489 P.2d 318 (1971).

For a declaratory judgment to be binding, the necessary parties must be before the court. Beacom v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 657 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1983).

A judicial tribunal is not required to render a judicial opinion on a matter which has become moot. A judicial opinion would not serve to terminate any controversy or put to an end any uncertainty, which in this complaint and petition evaporated when the election was concluded. Crowe v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 289, 439 P.2d 50 (1968).

Possible financial loss makes one an interested party. Junior college districts, which would suffer loss of funds if an act were declared unconstitutional, have the right to intervene in a declaratory judgment suit. Mesa County Junior Coll. Dist. v. Donner, 150 Colo. 156, 371 P.2d 442 (1962).

This statute neither expands nor contracts the jurisdiction of Colorado's courts. In creating a new remedy the general assembly did not by implication grant political subdivisions of the state the right to sue the state. Romer v. Fountain Sanitation Dist., 898 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995).

An anticipatory declaratory judgment action must be independent of and separable from the underlying action. This determination constitutes the third standard that a trial court must consider in determining whether an anticipatory declaratory judgment action is appropriate. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

An anticipatory declaratory judgment action is more likely to be independent of and separable from the underlying action if no duty to defend in the underlying action has arisen. However, even if the duty has arisen, a party may bring the action if the party can demonstrate that a justiciable controversy exists, the judgment will finally resolve the controversy as to all parties, and independence and separability from the underlying action exists. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

To have standing, a party seeking declaratory relief must demonstrate that the challenged statute or regulation will likely cause tangible detriment to conduct or activities that are presently occurring or are likely to occur in the near future. Mt. Emmons Mining Co. v. Town of Crested Butte, 690 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984); Citizens Progressive Alliance v. S.W. Water Conservation Dist., 97 P.3d 308 (Colo. App. 2004).

Since the southwestern water conservation district's rights were affected by a request made pursuant to the Colorado Open Records Act (CORA), and the district had a legitimate basis for believing that it could not respond to the request within the CORA time limits because of the breadth of and lack of specificity in the request, the district was entitled to have the court determine whether, under CORA, it was required to respond to the request within the statutory time limits. Such a declaration is the type of relief expressly contemplated under the declaratory judgments law. Citizens Progressive Alliance v. S.W. Water Conservation Dist., 97 P.3d 308 (Colo. App. 2004).

To have standing a plaintiff seeking a declaratory judgment on the validity of a regulatory scheme need not violate the regulation and thus become subject to punishment in order to secure the adjudication of uncertain legal rights. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bowen/Edwards Assoc., 830 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1992).

Injury-in-fact element of standing satisfied when allegations of complaint, along with other evidence on issue of standing, establish that regulatory scheme threatens to cause injury to a legally protected interest of the plaintiff. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bowen/Edwards Assoc., 830 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1992).

Plaintiff has no standing to bring a declaratory judgment action against defendant's insurance company before obtaining a judgment against the defendant. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. District Court for the Fourth Judicial Dist., 862 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1993).

An injured party in the underlying action cannot initiate an anticipatory declaratory judgment action against the other party's insurance company because the injured party does not have an enforceable judgment against nor a contractual relationship with either the other party or the other party's insurer. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

Applied in In re Estate of Daigle, 634 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1981); Dolores Huerta Prep. High v. Colo. State Bd. of Educ., 215 P.3d 1229 (Colo. App. 2009).

II. ACTIONS SUBJECT TO DECLARATORY JUDGMENT.

The courts have jurisdiction over certain enumerated actions seeking declaratory judgments. The general assembly is without power to require courts to exercise nonjudicial functions; but it is not without the power to impose upon courts jurisdiction over certain enumerated actions seeking declaratory judgments on matters that lend themselves to and receive judicial determination in otherwise litigated cases, as it at once appears, such would not be nonjudicial in their nature. San Luis Power & Water Co. v. Trujillo, 93 Colo. 385, 26 P.2d 537 (1933).

Section may be employed by an insurance company to determine its liability. An action for declaratory judgment may be properly maintained by an insurance company to determine if it will be liable to its insured for a defense and for payment of a possible judgment arising from a specified occurrence. Beeson v. State Auto. & Cas. Underwriters, 32 Colo. App. 62, 508 P.2d 402 (1973).

An insurer may seek a declaration of its contractual responsibilities of defense and indemnification in connection with a claim filed against a person who arguably qualified as an "insured" under the insurance contract. Hartford Ins. Group v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1013 (Colo. 1981).

The factual nature of the inquiry surrounding an action for declaratory judgment brought by an insurance company to determine its liability under a policy does not bar action. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 779 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1989).

The section is applicable to a dispute over the right to the use of spring waters not tributary to any natural stream. Colo. & Utah Coal Co. v. Walter, 75 Colo. 489, 226 P. 864 (1924); Stratton v. Beaver Farmers' Canal & Ditch Co., 82 Colo. 118, 257 P. 1077 (1927).

Proposed game procedures, rules, and materials that were not the subject of seizure by the department of revenue do not constitute a present controversy. Snizek v. Dept. of Rev., 113 P.3d 1280 (Colo. App. 2005).

Validity of statute may be tested. Where results to occur from the enforcement of a statutory provision can be predicted with certainty or where the basic right of the state to enter legislative fields said to be the domain of the federal government is questioned, a court properly may declare with respect to the validity of a statute. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

One whose rights are affected by a statute may have its construction or validity determined by declaratory judgment. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

Where the taxpayers' liability for income taxes turns on the construction of a statute and the validity, or invalidity, of regulations purporting to interpret that statute, the case is well within the purpose of declaratory judgment. Toncray v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 382, 593 P.2d 956 (1979).

Where all administrative remedies within a labor organization have been exhausted and union officials are charged with fraud, trial court may properly assume jurisdiction of action by railroad company for declaratory judgment to determine rights under proposed contract. Wooldrige v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 118 Colo. 25, 191 P.2d 882 (1948).

Declaratory judgment is not proper procedure by which to make preenforcement challenge to regulation promulgated by a state agency. CF&I Steel Corp. v. Colo. Air Pollution

For declaring a note or chattel mortgage void for usury, see Rice v. Franklin Loan & Fin. Co., 82 Colo. 163, 258 P. 223 (1927).

For applicability to determination of rights under teachers' salary law, see Washington County High Sch. Dist. v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 85 Colo. 72, 273 P. 879 (1928).

For determination of certain levies, see Denver Land Co. v. Moffat Tunnel Imp. Dist., 87 Colo. 1, 284 P. 339 (1930).

A lawsuit seeking a declaratory judgment may not be instituted if it impermissibly seeks to chill or freeze the defendant's protected political speech. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Shroyer, 662 F. Supp. 1542 (D. Colo. 1987).

A cognizable claim is stated under this section and rule 57 of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure where towing carriers claimed that a Colorado state patrol policy invalidly abrogates a claimed legal right of such carriers to impose a lien on personal property obtained through rendition of towing services. Jam Action, Inc. v. Colo. State Patrol, 890 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1994).

Declaratory judgment actions may be filed to determine the existence of, or rights under, an oral contract. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

A trial court may grant declaratory relief in oral contract disputes where relief would terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty. Zab, Inc. v. Berenergy Corp., 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

13-51-107. Contract construed anytime. A contract may be construed either before or after there has been a breach thereof.

ANNOTATION

Validity of contract or question arising under contract must be pleaded. In an action under this article to determine the validity of a contract, the complaint failing to allege that the validity of the contract had been questioned, or that a question had arisen under it, no cause of action was stated. Gabriel v. Bd. of Regents of Univ. of Colo., 83 Colo. 582, 267 P. 407 (1928).

Contracts interpreted only when all necessary facts determinable. Although this section and C.R.C.P. 57 provide that a contract may be interpreted prior to breach, these provisions are inapplicable where the dispute requires an interpretation in light of extrinsic facts which are not yet determinable. McDonald's Corp. v. Rocky Mt. McDonald's, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 143, 590 P.2d 519 (1979).

Insurer may seek declaration of contractual responsibilities of defense against "insured". An insurer may seek a declaration of its contractual responsibilities of defense and indemnification in connection with a claim filed against a person who arguably qualifies as an "insured" under the insurance contract. Hartford Ins. Group v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1013 (Colo. 1981).

13-51-108. Purposes of declaration. (1) Any person interested as or through an executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, or other fiduciary, creditor, devisee, legatee, heir, next of kin, or cestui que trust in the administration of a trust or of the estate of a decedent, an infant, a mental incompetent, or an insolvent may have a declaration of rights or legal relations in respect thereto:

- (a) To ascertain any class of creditors, devisees, legatees, heirs, next of kin, or other; or
- (b) To direct the executors, administrators, or trustees to do or abstain from doing any particular act in their fiduciary capacity; or
- (c) To determine any question arising in the administration of the estate or trust, including questions of construction of wills and other writings.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Express Trusts in Colorado", see 10 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 9 (1937).

This section does not authorize advice on matters not before the court. The court at the request of the parties will determine all questions that have properly arisen, but will decline to determine those which had not arisen and which might never arise during the administration of the trust. Neither under the equity practice nor under this act are the courts required to give general advice and instructions upon matters which have not arisen at the time their jurisdiction is invoked. Mulcahy v. Johnson, 80 Colo. 499, 252 P. 816 (1927).

It confers no new authority concerning wills and trusts. District courts had full and complete jurisdiction before the passage of that act to construe wills and trusts and to control executors and trustees in the administration of estates. Mulcahy v. Johnson, 80 Colo. 499, 252 P. 816 (1927).

Applied in In re Estate of Daigle, 634 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1981).

13-51-109. Not a limitation. The enumeration in sections 13-51-106 to 13-51-108 does not limit or restrict the exercise of the general powers conferred in section 13-51-105, in any proceeding where declaratory relief is sought, in which a judgment or decree will terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty.

Source: L. 23: p. 269, § 5. CSA: C. 93, § 82. CRS 53: § 77-11-5. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-11-5.

ANNOTATION

Although § 13-51-106 and C.R.C.P. 57(b) detail situations in which declaratory judgment actions may be brought, they do not restrict the court's ability to grant declaratory relief in other situations when appropriate. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd on other grounds, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

Declaratory judgment action is an appropriate means of testing the validity of a decree and resolving uncertainty as to the legal rights and status of the parties, even if the controversy has not yet ripened into litigation. In re Lockwood, 857 P.2d 557 (Colo. App. 1993).

A trial court may exercise its discretion to declare the existence of an oral contract and, if one exists, the terms of that contract, where such relief would "terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty." Zab, Inc. v. Berenergy Corp., 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

13-51-110. When court may refuse. The court may refuse to render or enter a declaratory judgment or decree where such judgment or decree, if rendered or entered, would not terminate the uncertainty or controversy giving rise to the proceeding.

13-51-111. Review. All orders, judgments, and decrees under this article may be reviewed as other orders, judgments, and decrees.

13-51-112. Further relief. Further relief based on a declaratory judgment or decree may be granted when necessary or proper. The application therefor shall be by petition to a court having jurisdiction to grant the relief. If the application is deemed sufficient, the court, on reasonable notice, shall require any adverse party whose rights have been adjudicated by the declaratory judgment or decree to show cause why further relief should not be granted forthwith.

Source: L. 23: p. 269, § 8. CSA: C. 93, § 85. CRS 53: § 77-11-8. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-11-8.

ANNOTATION

Relief is not limited by language of statute or rule to prevailing party in declaratory judgment action. Atchison v. City of Englewood, 180 Colo. 407, 506 P.2d 140 (1973).

Reversal of an underlying declaratory judgment is not the "further relief" contemplated by this section and C.R.C.P. 57(h) but is, instead, ordinary postjudgment relief. While "further relief" is not limited to the original prevailing party, nevertheless, such relief must seek remedies different from those granted in the declaratory judgment. Spencer v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 39 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2001).

13-51-113. Issues of fact. When a proceeding under this article involves the determination of an issue of fact, such issue may be tried and determined in the same manner as issues of facts are tried and determined in other civil actions in the court in which the proceeding is pending.

Source: L. 23: p. 270, § 9. CSA: C. 93, § 86. CRS 53: § 77-11-9. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-11-9.

ANNOTATION

Factual determinations may be necessary in order to declare rights, status or legal relations. An action for declaratory judgment may be properly maintained by an insurance company to fix liability vel non, notwithstanding that factual determinations are necessary to make a declaration on the controlling issue. O'Herron v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Colo. 164, 397 P.2d 227 (1964); Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 779 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1989).

Parties are entitled to jury trial if issue would have matured into one at law. If the action in which declaratory relief is sought would have been an action at law had it been permitted to mature without intervention of declaratory procedure, the right to trial by jury of disputed questions of fact is not affected. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

ANNOTATION

County treasurer is entitled to attorney fees in mandamus suit against board of commissioners. Where county treasurer seeks writ of mandamus requiring board of commissioners to approve salaries set by treasurer and requests declaratory judgment construing and interpreting relative rights, powers and duties of treasurer and board under statute, treasurer is entitled to reasonable attorney fees incurred in prosecuting action. Kanaly v. Wadlow, 31 Colo.

App. 193, 502 P.2d 83 (1972), modified, 511 P.2d 484 (1973).

This section does not evince a legislative intent to authorize cost awards against public entities, because this section neither explicitly refers to such entities nor to any action that can be brought only against such entities. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co. v. City of Golden, 113 P.3d 119 (Colo. 2005).

13-51-115. Parties - ordinances - statutes. When declaratory relief is sought, all persons shall be made parties who have or claim any interest which would be affected by the declaration, and no declaration shall prejudice the rights of persons not parties to the proceeding. In any proceeding which involves the validity of a municipal ordinance or franchise, such municipality shall be made a party and is entitled to be heard, and, if the statute, ordinance, or franchise is alleged to be unconstitutional, the attorney general of the state shall also be served with a copy of the proceeding and be entitled to be heard.

Law reviews. For note, “Has the Colorado IRA Met an Advisory Death?”, see 8 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 140 (1936).

All persons who have an interest shall be made parties. This section provides that all persons who claim an interest in the litigation which would be affected by the declaration sought shall be made parties. Mesa County Junior Coll. Dist. v. Donner, 150 Colo. 156, 371 P.2d 442 (1962).

It was appropriate for the insurer to name the injured party in the underlying action as a party defendant in the anticipatory declaratory judgment action to ensure that the declaratory judgment would resolve the controversy at issue with regard to all parties. Once named, it was appropriate for the injured party in the underlying action to defend against the declaratory judgment action brought by the insurer. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

Any person or entity not named as a party to an anticipatory declaratory judgment action is not bound by the court’s ruling in the action. Constitution Assoc. v. N.H. Ins. Co., 930 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1996).

Possible loss of funds is sufficient interest. Under this section all persons claiming an interest in the litigation to be affected by the declaration sought shall be made parties. It is error to deny petitions of intervention of junior colleges whose rights would be directly affected by a declaration of unconstitutionality depriving them of funds. Mesa County Junior Coll. Dist. v. Donner, 150 Colo. 156, 371 P.2d 442 (1962).

Neither this section nor C.R.C.P. 57 (j) applies to regulations promulgated pursuant to legislative grant of authority; therefore, in challenging a regulation, the attorney general need not be joined. Continental Liquor Co. v. Kalbin, 43 Colo. App. 438, 608 P.2d 353 (1977).

Nor do they address situation where constitutional question arises during trial. This section and C.R.C.P. 57 (j), mandating notice to the attorney general when allegations of unconstitutionality are made, do not address the situation where the question of constitutionality arises for the first time during the course of trial. Howell v. Woodlin Sch. Dist. R-104, 198 Colo. 40, 596 P.2d 56 (1979).

13-51.5-101. Scope and purpose of article. This article applies to judicial review of local land use decisions in cases where it is alleged that a governmental body or officer or any lower judicial body exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion and there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy otherwise provided by law. Review shall be limited to a determination of whether the body or officer has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, based on the evidence in the record before the defendant body or officer.

Law reviews. For article, "Trusts and Estates", see 30 Dicta 435 (1953). For article, "Election to Sue on a Mortgage Note in Lieu of Foreclosure", which discusses executions on homestead property, see 13 Colo. Law. 621 (1984).

Debtor should be able to designate property to be taken in place of his residence. In case of the levy of an execution on land on which the debtor resides, without giving him an opportunity, when practicable, to designate other property of his sufficient to satisfy the writ, the levy ought to be set aside, upon a timely application by the debtor, accompanied with a satisfactory showing of other property, subject to levy, sufficient to satisfy the execution. Victor Inv. Co. v. Roerig, 22 Colo. App. 257, 124 P. 349 (1912).

Attorney should give directions to officer making levy. The attorney controlling an execution owes to his client the duty to give the officer to whom the writ is committed proper directions. But even where a levy upon the lands where the execution defendant is residing is contemplated, such attorney is under no duty to the defendant to notify him of the intended levy. Victor Inv. Co. v. Roerig, 22 Colo. App. 257, 124 P. 349 (1912).

Officer need not notify debtor that a levy on his realty is to be made. No decided case has been brought to our notice in which it was held that a failure of the officer to notify the defendant in the execution, before levying upon his real estate, would authorize a court of equity to set aside the sheriff's sale and deed, after the expiration of the statutory period of redemption. Victor Inv. Co. v. Roerig, 22 Colo. App. 257, 124 P. 349 (1912).

13-52-102. Property subject to execution - lien - real estate. (1) All goods and chattels, lands, tenements, and real estate of every person against whom any judgment is obtained in any court of record in this state, either at law or in equity, or against whom any foreign judgment is filed with the clerk of any court of this state in accordance with the provisions of the "Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act" pursuant to article 53 of this title, which judgment, in either case, is for any debt, damages, costs, or other sum of money are liable to be sold on execution to be issued upon such judgment. A transcript of the judgment record of such judgment, certified by the clerk of such court, may be recorded in any county; and from the time of recording such transcript, and not before, the judgment shall become a lien upon all the real estate, not exempt from execution in the county where such transcript of judgment is recorded, owned by such judgment debtor or which such judgment debtor may afterwards acquire in such county, until such lien expires. The lien of such judgment shall expire six years after the entry of judgment unless, prior to the expiration of such six-year period, such judgment is revived as provided by law and a transcript of the judgment record of such revived judgment, certified by the clerk of the court in which such revived judgment was entered, is recorded in the same county in which the transcript of the original judgment was recorded, in which event the lien shall continue for six years from the entry of the revived judgment. A lien may be obtained with respect to a revived judgment in the same manner as an original judgment and the lien of a revived judgment may be continued in the same manner as the lien of an original judgment. The lien of any judgment shall expire if the judgment is satisfied or considered as satisfied as provided in this section. The lien created by recording a notice of lien of a judgment for child support or maintenance or arrears thereof or child support debt pursuant to section 14-10-122, C.R.S., shall be governed by such section. The lien created by recording a transcript of an order for restitution pursuant to section 16-18.5-104 (5) (a), C.R.S., shall be governed by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

(2) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), execution may issue on any judgment described in subsection (1) of this section to enforce the same at any time within twenty years from the entry thereof, but not afterwards, unless revived as provided by law, and, after twenty years from the entry of final judgment in any court of this state, the judgment shall be considered as satisfied in full, unless so revived.

(b) (I) With respect to judgments entered in county courts on or after July 1, 1981, the time limitation within which execution may issue is six years from the entry thereof, but not afterwards, unless revived as provided by law, and, after six years from the entry of final judgment in any county court of this state, the judgment shall be considered as satisfied in full, unless so revived.

(II) The twenty-year limitation contained in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not apply to judgments entered for restitution pursuant to article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S. Execution may issue on judgments for restitution at any time until paid in full.

(c) If, after the date that a transcript of judgment is recorded in a county, some portion or all of such county is merged with, annexed to, or otherwise becomes part of some other county or city and county, whether then existing or newly formed, then:

(I) It shall not be necessary to record the transcript of judgment in such other county or city and county in order to continue the lien of the judgment and the priority thereof as to any real estate that the judgment debtor acquired before or acquires after the date of recording of the transcript of judgment if such real estate was in the county in which the transcript of judgment was recorded on or after the date of recording of the transcript of judgment; and

(II) If such judgment is revived as provided by law, timely recording of a transcript of the revived judgment in such other county or city and county is necessary to continue the lien of the original judgment and the priority thereof with respect to any real estate that was in the county in which the transcript of the original judgment was recorded on or after the date of recording of the transcript of the original judgment but, at the time of recording of the transcript of the revived judgment, is in such other county or city and county.

(3) The term "real estate" as used in this section includes all interests of the defendant or any person to his use held or claimed by virtue of any deed, bond, covenant, or otherwise for a conveyance or as mortgagor of lands in fee, for life, or for years.

(4) (a) Any person, including a title insurance company as defined by article 11 of title 10, C.R.S., who makes representations concerning the existence of any judgment lien on the real property of another shall have the duty to make a bona fide good faith effort, prior to the making of such representations, to determine whether the person against whom the judgment was obtained is the same person as the person who holds an interest in the real property which is the subject of the representation. If a bona fide good faith effort is made and such effort fails to disclose satisfactory information as to whether or not the person against whom the judgment was obtained is the same person as the person who holds an interest in the real property which is the subject of the representation, then, in that event, the person or title insurance company who makes the representation may require the person who holds an interest in the real property which is the subject of the representation to provide satisfactory evidence or information that he is not the same person as the judgment debtor.

(b) Any person, including a title insurance company as defined by article 11 of title 10, C.R.S., who makes representations concerning the existence of any judgment lien on the real property of another without making a bona fide good faith effort, prior to the making of such representations, to determine whether the person against whom the judgment was obtained is the same person as the person who holds an interest in the real property which is the subject of the representation is liable to any person damaged by the failure to make such effort in a sum of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for his actual and exemplary damages. The prevailing party shall recover the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney fees, as determined by the court. No action pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall be brought more than one year after the date of the representation concerning the existence of the judgment lien.

(c) As used in this subsection (4), "bona fide good faith effort" means honesty in fact in the effort to discover and determine the actual and true identity of the judgment debtor against whom the judgment lien attaches. The effort shall include but need not be limited to an examination of the judgment debtor's social security number, his driver's license, his address, his birth record, and the court record in the action which resulted in the judgment lien, if available.

The duly recorded judgment became a lien upon all real property which the judgment debtor then owned or thereafter acquired. Sky Harbor, Inc. v. Jenner, 164 Colo. 470, 435 P.2d 894 (1968).

Under this section, execution may issue at any time within 20 years after the entry of the judgment. Balfe v. Rumsey & Sikemeier Co., 55 Colo. 97, 133 P. 417 (1913).

The running of the six-year statute of limitations established by this section for collection of payment of a debt through execution on a judgment lien does not extinguish the debt. It bars execution of the judgment lien, but payment of the debt may be enforced by other available legal means. Mortgage Invs. Corp. v. Battle Mtn. Corp., 70 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2003).

Section also governs time within which body executions may issue. The sections relating to body executions do not prescribe any different time limit than that mentioned in the instant section for the issuance of such executions. Both body executions and property executions are issued on judgments, "to enforce the same". In our opinion this section prescribes the time within which body executions may issue. Roll v. Davis, 85 Colo. 594, 277 P. 767 (1929).

The general assembly may, while a judgment is in full life, extend the time within which execution may issue. Balfe v. Rumsey & Sikemeier Co., 55 Colo. 97, 133 P. 417 (1913).

Generally, court may not impair creditor's right to enforce collection. As a general rule, a court may not stay execution and thereby impair or destroy the statutory right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of its judgment against nonexempt property of the judgment debtor. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

Right to enforce may be statutorily limited.

The substantive right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of the judgment may be statutorily limited, as by § 7-60-128. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

A judgment directing restitution of money is a judgment for a "sum of money" as that phrase is used in this section. Scott v. Woodhams, 79 Colo. 528, 246 P. 1027 (1926).

Execution may issue on order for permanent and temporary alimony. Under the provisions of this section an execution is authorized not only on an order for permanent alimony, but on temporary alimony also. Daniels v. Daniels, 9 Colo. 133, 10 P. 657 (1886); Paul v. Marty, 72 Colo. 399, 211 P. 667 (1922); Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).

Alimony and support installments are judgments, and are enforceable during the entire period of the statute of limitations. Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).

Creditor may file bill in equity to remove fraudulent obstruction. The right of a judgment creditor to come into a court of equity to remove a fraudulent obstruction to the collection of his judgment, and to enforce a claim against property which ought to be subject thereto, is well established. Barnes v. Beighly, 9 Colo. 475, 12 P. 906 (1887).

Once lien exists. In some way the lien must be acquired and exist at the time a bill is filed in equity to remove fraudulent obstructions. Barnes v. Beighly, 9 Colo. 475, 12 P. 906 (1887).

Levy must become visible and accessible to be valid. The designation is a mental act; but, in order that it may be valid as a levy, it must be embodied in some visible memorial—some record of what was done, accessible to the judgment debtor and to the public. Strictly speaking, the record is not itself a levy, it is merely the evidence that the levy was made, but as the statute does not require that the record shall be made upon the writ, no reason is apparent why it may not be made elsewhere, provided it is equally public and permanent. Herr v. Broadwell, 5 Colo. App. 467, 39 P. 70 (1895); Jones v. Olson, 17 Colo. App. 144, 67 P. 349 (1902).

Judgment itself does not constitute a lien upon realty; the creditor must go a step further and acquire a specific lien. Robison v. Gumaer, 43 Colo. 310, 95 P. 935 (1908).

Mere recording of transcript does not effect execution. The recording of the transcript of judgment does not, in and of itself, effect an execution upon the property of the debtor. Rocky Mt. Ass'n of Credit Mgt. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 344, 565 P.2d 1345 (1977).

Creditor may, prior to sale, bring action to determine nature and extent of debtor's interest in land. While under the statute every interest in land, whether legal or equitable, is subject to levy and sale on execution, and the purchaser of such interest may maintain an action to determine the extent thereof, yet the judgment creditor may resort to an action prior to the sale. for the purpose of having the debtor's interest determined, and the question of title settled in advance of the sale. O'Connell v. Taney, 16 Colo. 353, 27 P. 888 (1891).

Estate, not subjected specifically to a judgment lien before it was homesteaded, is exempt from execution. Weare v. Johnson, 20 Colo. 363, 38 P. 374 (1894).

Proviso as to suspension of statute applies to supersedeas on appeal. The proviso in the statute, suspending the running of the statute when issue of execution is restrained by injunction, applies to a suspension of issue by supersedeas on appeal. Gottlieb v. Thatcher, 151 U.S. 271, 14 S. Ct. 319, 38 L. Ed. 157 (1894).

General appearance and motion to quash by debtor waives defects in service. A general appearance, and motion to quash an execution, upon the sole ground that more than 10 (now 20) years elapsed between the entry of judgment and the issuance of execution, and that the judgment had not been revived, is a waiver of all defects and irregularities in the service or return of the summons. Balfe v. Rumsey & Sikemeier Co., 55 Colo. 97, 133 P. 417 (1913).

Court-ordered foreclosure need not conform to this section. The district court's order foreclosing the chattel mortgages and directing sale of the personalty was not entered by way of execution. The procedures specified in articles 51 to 61 of title 13 for levies on execution were not violated by the district court's order of foreclosure and sale. Terrell v. Walter E. Heller & Co., 165 Colo. 463, 439 P.2d 989 (1968).

Judicial liens in bankruptcy. Judicial liens impair a bankruptcy debtor's equity where they are created subsequent to the establishment of a homestead right and no waiver is obtained from the property owner. Consequently, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522 and §§ 13-54-107, 38-41-201 and 38-41-202, these liens are null and void as judicial liens. Lincoln v. Cherry Creek Homeowners Ass'n, 30 Bankr. 905 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Good faith improver doctrine did not apply to exempt a residence from a judgment lien which had been recorded against judgment debtor before debtor's successor in interest began construction of such residence. Mooring v. Brown, 763 F.2d 386 (10th Cir. 1985).

For execution sale by one creditor not divesting lien of another creditor, see Casserleigh v. Spar Consol. Mining Co., 23 Colo. App. 239, 128 P. 863 (1912).

Personal and real property not owned by judgment debtor is not subject to execution, absent another statute creating liability. Brink v. McNeil, 761 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1988).

Twenty-year period prescribed for execution upon judgments in this section and not the six-year period in § 13-80-103.5 is the applicable statute of limitations for child support arrearages. In re Aragon, 773 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1989).

Seizure of jointly held personal property pursuant to writ of attachment or execution to secure debt of one joint owner does not constitute conversion. Ruscitti v. Sackheim, 817 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1991).

Property subject to homestead exemption is exempt from execution and therefore from judgment lien. City Ctr. Nat'l Bank v. Barone, 807 P.2d 1251 (Colo. App. 1991).

If bank could not assert a lien against property while party retained title, it could not enforce a lien against the party's grantees, provided the transaction was bona fide. City Ctr. Nat'l Bank v. Barone, 807 P.2d 1251 (Colo. App. 1991).

Issuance of a writ of execution and the filing of a certificate of levy does not extend the six-year term of a judgment lien. Regardless of when acquired, writs of execution or certificates of levy merely serve as means to enforce the lien. Great W. Exch., Inc. v. Walters, 819 P.2d 1093 (Colo. App. 1991).

When calculating the six-year time limit on a judgment lien under this section that originated as a foreign judgment lien under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act, the time begins to run when the judgment was entered in the foreign jurisdiction, not when it was filed in Colorado. Baum v. Baum, 820 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1991); Mortgage Inv. Corp. v. Battle Mtn. Corp., 56 P.3d 1104 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 70 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2003).

Judgment lien, based on a domesticated out-of-state judgment, must be revived under Colorado procedural law for the lien to be extended. To extend a judgment lien beyond six years after the date of judgment, Colorado procedural law requires a judgment to be revived pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54(h) and a transcript of the revival to be filed with the clerk and recorder. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Kopfman, 205 P.3d 437 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 226 P.3d 1068 (Colo. 2010).

Personal property not owned by judgment debtor not subject to execution to satisfy judgment. Ruscitti v. Sackheim, 817 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in Baker v. Allen, 34 Colo. App. 363, 528 P.2d 922 (1974); Mohler v. Buena Vista Bank & Trust Co., 42 Colo. App. 4, 588 P.2d 894 (1978); Lucero v. Sec. Indus. Bank, 4 Bankr. 659 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1980); Trimble v. McCoy Bros., 11 Bankr. 512 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981); Lease Fin. Inc. v. Cohen, 705 P.2d 1008 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. INTERESTS SUBJECT TO EXECUTION.

Under this section every interest in land, whether legal or equitable, is subject to levy and sale on execution. McFarran v. Knox, 5 Colo. 217 (1880); Stock-Growers' Bank v. Newton, 13 Colo. 245, 22 P. 444 (1889); O'Connell v. Taney, 16 Colo. 353, 27 P. 888 (1891); Arnett v. Coffey, 1 Colo. App. 34, 27 P. 614 (1891).

It is to be presumed that when the general assembly used the term "real estate" it intended a lien upon whatever real estate on which there might be a levy. McFarran v. Knox, 5 Colo. 217 (1880).

Creditor's interest is superior to third party's equitable interest if he has no notice. A creditor who, acting in good faith and without notice of equitable interests, acquires a lien under the statutes against the apparent interest of his judgment debtor, acquires a valid lien superior to a third party's equitable interests. Sky Harbor, Inc. v. Jenner, 164 Colo. 470, 435 P.2d 894 (1968); Shearton Serv. Corp. v. Johnson, 5 P.3d 395 (Colo. App. 2000).

Filing dissolution action does not give a debtor's spouse any rights that predate attachment of a judgment lien creditor's rights. Thus, if judgment lien creditor perfects a lien on real property before debtor's spouse asserts and perfects a claim to the property in dissolution proceeding, then the rights of debtor's spouse to the property are subordinate to those of the judgment lien creditor. Shearton Serv. Corp. v. Johnson, 5 P.3d 395 (Colo. App. 2000).

A lease of land for a term of years is real estate. Liggett v. Enneking, 101 Colo. 254, 72 P.2d 1118 (1937).

The equity of redemption of a mortgagor in chattels is not subject to an execution at law where the possession of the chattels has been transferred to the mortgagee. Metzler v. James, 12 Colo. 322, 19 P. 885 (1888).

Where one also has right of possession, land is subject to execution. Twogood v. Ocsay, 97 Colo. 300, 49 P.2d 437 (1935).

Where a judgment debtor had neither a legal nor an equitable interest in a property, recording a judgment does not create a lien on the property, because there is no interest on which the lien could attach. Junior creditor who successfully exposes a fraudulent transfer by filing suit takes priority over senior creditors holding judgments recorded prior to the junior creditor uncovering the fraud. Shepler v. Whalen, 119 P.3d 1084 (Colo. 2005).

The interest must be vested and based on legal or equitable title. Under this provision it is clear that if appellant was vested with any interest in the property, either legal or equitable, then such interest was liable to seizure and sale under the execution. It must appear, however, that the interest was a vested interest, which attached to the body of the land itself, and was held by him under a legal or equitable title, within the meaning of the law. Fallon v. Worthington, 13 Colo. 559, 22 P. 960 (1889).

A chose in action is not such an interest. A vendor of real estate who enters into a subsequent contract with his vendee, whereby the trust-deed given to secure instalments of purchase money is released, a lien merely being reserved, has only a chose in action, and no interest in the land which can be subjected to sale on execution. Fallon v. Worthington, 13 Colo. 559, 22 P. 960 (1889).

An inchoate interest is liable to execution. The inchoate interest of a purchaser of lands, under an executory agreement for the future conveyance thereof, is liable to execution. under this section. Salisbury v. La Fitte, 57 Colo. 358, 141 P. 484 (1914).

Interest of joint tenants unsatisfactory to creditor of one joint tenant. The real property interest of two joint tenants cannot be used to satisfy the judgment creditor of one joint tenant. First Nat'l Bank v. Energy Fuels Corp., 200 Colo. 540, 618 P.2d 1115 (1980).

For ineffectiveness of judgment against lessee of debtor whose leasehold interest antedates recordation, see Routt County Mining Co. v. Stutheit, 101 Colo. 254, 72 P.2d 692 (1937).

For C.R.C.P. 69(a) not curtailing rights given by this section, see Jones v. District Court, 135 Colo. 468, 312 P.2d 503 (1957).

III. NATURE AND EXTENT OF LIEN.

Lien attaches immediately upon filing and recording of judgment. A judgment being filed for record and recorded as required by the statutes, a lien attaches at once upon the real estate of the judgment debtor. Gottlieb v. Thatcher, 151 U.S. 271, 14 S. Ct. 319, 38 L. Ed. 157 (1894).

Or upon levy of execution. A judgment creditor has no lien upon real property by virtue of his judgment until he files a transcript of the judgment with the county clerk and recorder or levies execution upon the property. Routt County Min. Co. v. Stutheit, 101 Colo. 254, 72 P.2d 692 (1937).

In each county where the transcript is filed. The filing of a transcript of a judgment in La Plata county fastened a lien securing its payment upon the interest of the coal and coke company in its real estate in that county, under this statute. Schofield v. Ute Coal & Coke Co., 92 F. 269 (8th Cir. 1879).

The recording of the transcript of judgment establishes a lien only against property owned by the debtor within the county where it is recorded. Mtn. States Bank v. Irvin, 809 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1991).

Lien is not lost by failure to return execution within 90 days. The lien on real estate created by the filing of a transcript of judgment in the office of the county recorder is not lost by the failure to return an execution issued on the judgment within 90 days as required by law. Davis Bros. Drug Co. v. Counter, 75 Colo. 239, 225 P. 245 (1924).

It attaches not only to property owned at the time the execution was so received, but to property acquired thereafter while the writ is in force. In this respect, the execution lien in the present case is similar to the lien of a chattel mortgage covering after-acquired property. Indian Creek Coal Mining Co. v. Home Sav. & Merchants' Bank, 80 Colo. 96, 249 P. 499 (1926); Robinson v. Wright, 90 Colo. 417, 9 P.2d 618 (1932).

An attachment lien merges in that of the judgment when a judgment lien is acquired, but the latter relates back to the date of the former. Floyd v. Sellers, 7 Colo. App. 498, 44 P. 373 (1896).

And its priority is preserved. When a transcript of the judgment is filed with the recorder, it becomes a lien upon all the real estate of the judgment defendant situated in the county for six years from the rendition of the judgment. The lien of the attachment becomes merged in that of the judgment, but its priority is preserved, and the lien of the judgment, insofar as the specific real estate attached is concerned, relates back to the lien of the attachment. Floyd v. Sellers, 7 Colo. App. 498, 44 P. 373 (1896).

It continues for six years where the creditor secures no judgment lien by the filing of a transcript of the judgment docket. Emery v. Yount, 7 Colo. 107, 1 P. 686 (1883); Floyd v. Sellers, 7 Colo. App. 498, 44 P. 373 (1896).

Purchaser who fails to record deed is inferior to judgment creditor who thereafter files transcript without knowledge of conveyance. Where a judgment debtor having the record title to real property conveys it to another, he parts with his title and thereafter does not have even a naked legal title; and yet if before the recording of the deed, the judgment creditor, without notice of the conveyance, files a transcript of the judgment, the lien of his judgment is superior to the rights of the grantee in the deed. Wedman v. Carpenter, 65 Colo. 63, 173 P. 57 (1918); Donahue v. Kohler-McLister Paint Co., 81 Colo. 244, 254 P. 989 (1927).

For judgment creditor's priority over resulting trust, see W. Chem. Mfg. Co. v. McCaffrey, 47 Colo. 397, 107 P. 1081 (1910).

A proper lien is necessary before judgment creditor may bring bill for discovery. A bill will not lie by a judgment creditor for discovery, and to have land in another county than that in which the judgment was rendered, alleged to be held in trust for the judgment debtor, who is residing on such land, made subject to the judgment, where the judgment has not been made a lien upon the land claimed to be subjected by filing a transcript of the judgment with the recorder of the county in which the land is situated, as is provided by this section. Barnes v. Beighly, 9 Colo. 475, 12 P. 906 (1887).

A judgment must be a lien on the real estate sought to be subjected to sale on execution through the aid of a creditor's bill, where it has not been made a lien on real estate in another county in the manner herein provided. Barnes v. Beighly, 9 Colo. 475, 12 P. 906 (1887).

No lien created on property where the debt created by a recorded judgment was discharged in bankruptcy prior to the acquisition of the property. In re Yates, 47 Bankr. 460 (D. Colo. 1985).

13-52-103. Change of name of debtor - record. If a transcript of judgment is placed of record against any judgment debtor who, after the rendition of the judgment, changes his name and by such new name acquires real estate, the judgment creditor, or someone in his behalf, shall record in the office of the recorder of the county where such real estate is located notice of such judgment and change of name. Unless such notice and change of name are recorded, such judgment shall not be operative against an innocent purchaser of such property for value without actual or constructive notice of such lien and change of name.

13-52-104. Transcript of federal judgment filed - lien. (1) A transcript of the docket entry of any judgment or decree, either at law or in equity, for any debt, damages, costs, or other sum of money, entered or registered in any district court of the United States within this state, duly certified by the clerk of such district court of the United States, may be recorded in any county in the same manner as the transcript of the judgment record of any similar judgment of the court of general jurisdiction of this state may be recorded.

(2) From the time of the recording of such transcript, and not before, such judgment or decree shall be a lien upon all the real estate, not exempt from execution in the county where such transcript of judgment is recorded, owned by the judgment debtor or which the judgment debtor may afterwards acquire in such county, in the same manner and to the same extent and under the same conditions as if such judgment or decree had been entered by a court of general jurisdiction of this state.

13-52-105. Legal and equitable interests. Every interest in land, legal and equitable, shall be subject to levy and sale under execution, and the claim or possessory right of any defendant in execution in or to any public lands may be levied upon and sold under execution in the same manner as if the same were held by such defendant in fee simple. Nothing contained in articles 51 to 61 of this title and part 2 of article 41 of title 38, C.R.S., shall be so construed as to give any plaintiff in execution the right to levy on any lands filed on by any person in the Colorado state office of the bureau of land management, department of the interior, and occupied as a homestead by the defendant in execution.

ANNOTATION

The proviso in this section has reference solely to lands the title of which still remains in the government. It was inserted as a precautionary measure to prevent any apparent clash between the state statute and the provision of the federal statute making a homestead taken thereunder exempt from liability for any debt contracted prior to the issuance of patent. Weare v. Johnson, 20 Colo. 363, 38 P. 374 (1894).

It refers only to lands filed upon and held merely by possessory title. The language of the statute clearly indicates that the proviso refers to lands filed upon and held merely by possessory title, and not to lands after final proof has been made and to which a receiver's receipt has been issued. Weare v. Johnson, 20 Colo. 363, 38 P. 374 (1894).

Creditor may restrain threatened sale of property in which debtor has equitable interest. A plaintiff is entitled to maintain an action to restrain a threatened sale of property. Under the allegations of the complaint, the judgment creditor was contending that the judgment debtor had an equitable title to the lode claim upon which execution was levied, and neither upon principle nor reason must the plaintiff claiming to be the real owner of all of the property, be compelled to sit back and wait until the claim of the judgment creditor had ripened into a complete and perfect claim. Bell v. Murray, 13 Colo. App. 217, 57 P. 488 (1899).

13-52-106. Certificate holders included. The legal holder by record of any certificate of purchase of lands of the United States shall be deemed to be within the true intent and meaning of articles 51 to 61 of this title and part 2 of article 41 of title 38, C.R.S.

13-52-107. What moneys may be levied on. All paper currency, coins, bank bills, and other evidence of debt used or circulated or intended to be used or circulated as money and issued by any corporation or state, or by the United States, may be levied upon under any execution or writ of attachment as other personal property is levied upon or attached and shall be returned by the officer making such levy as so much money collected without sale.

Money of debtor taken by sheriff when imprisoning him is subject to execution. McMillen v. Yost, 69 Colo. 462, 194 P. 938 (1921).

13-52-108. Concerning garnishment and attachment prior to judgment. (1) No order of attachment prior to judgment on any garnishee shall be made out or issued in any court of record in this state for any sum less than twenty dollars.

(2) Wages, fees, or commissions shall not be subject to a writ of garnishment made out or issued in any court of record in this state until a complaint has been filed. After a defendant in any case has become subject to the jurisdiction of a court of record in this state, no wages, fees, or commissions shall be subject to any writ of garnishment theretofore or thereafter made out or issued in such case except in aid of execution of judgment.

(3) The provisions of this section shall not apply to methods of enforcing collections provided in article 79 of title 8, C.R.S.

(4) The provisions of this section shall be subject to article 5 of the "Uniform Consumer Credit Code".

Law reviews. For note, "Rural Poverty and the Law in Southern Colorado", see 47 Den. L.J. 82 (1970).

13-52-109. Property sold in parcels. When any real or personal property is taken in execution, if such property is susceptible of division, it shall be sold in such quantities as may be necessary to satisfy such execution and costs.

ANNOTATION

Sale en masse is not always void. The action of the sheriff in selling en masse does not render the sale void at the suit of the execution debtor if it should appear that the property was first offered in parcels and no bids were received — or, if he received bids, that the bid he received for all the property was greater than the aggregate of the bids for the parcels. Leppel v. Kus, 38 Colo. 292, 88 P. 448 (1908).

The presumption exists that the sheriff first offered the property in parcels and there were no bidders, or, if bids were received for the parcels, that the bid for the whole of the property was greater than the aggregate bids in parcels. Leppel v. Kus, 38 Colo. 292, 88 P. 448 (1908).

Proof necessary to overcome presumption. Where it is asserted that this section has not been complied with, there should be proof that a part of the property would have sold for a sum sufficient to satisfy the execution. White v. Crow, 110 U.S. 183, 4 S. Ct. 71, 28 L. Ed. 113 (1884); Leppel v. Kus, 38 Colo. 292, 88 P. 448 (1906).

Only parties to the judgment may object. The facts made it unnecessary to inquire whether the objection to a sale en masse could be successfully made after the time for redemption had passed, where both the party making the objection and the party claiming under the sale were strangers to the judgment. White v. Crow, 110 U.S. 183, 4 S. Ct. 71, 28 L. Ed. 113 (1884).

13-52-110. Execution to any county. It is lawful for the party in whose favor any judgment may be obtained to have executions in the usual form directed to any county in this state against the goods, chattels, lands, and tenements of such party defendant, or upon his body, when the same is authorized by law.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Executions and Levies on Tangible Property", see 27 Dicta 143 (1950).

Writs to different counties may issue at the same time. If there is authority for the issuing of a writ to a county other than that in which the judgment was recovered, the remedies to issue the writ to the different counties are concurrent, and hence a writ to each of the counties may properly issue or be in existence at the same time. People ex rel. Kenfield v. Finch, 19 Colo. App. 512, 76 P. 1120 (1904).

This fact constitutes no defense in an action against a sheriff for making a false return. In an action against a sheriff and the sureties on his official bond, for damages sustained by plaintiff, by an alleged false return upon an execution, an answer which alleges as a defense the issuance of two executions on the same day to different counties, states no defense to the action, as, under this section, executions may issue on a judgment to different counties at the same time. People ex rel. Kenfield v. Finch, 19 Colo. App. 512, 76 P. 1120 (1904).

Under this section a body execution may be directed to any county in the state. Roll v. Davis, 85 Colo. 594, 277 P. 767 (1929).

13-52-111. Return - endorsement - entry. All executions shall be made returnable ninety days after date, and no writ of execution shall bind the personal property, goods, or chattels of any person against whom such writ is issued until the writ is delivered to the sheriff or other officer for execution. For a better manifestation of the time, the sheriff or other officer, on receipt of every such writ, shall endorse upon the back thereof the hour, day of the month, and the year when the same was received by him and shall immediately enter the receipt of said writ and the time of receiving it in a book to be kept for that purpose at the office of the sheriff. Said book shall be a public record and open to the inspection of the public. The execution shall be returned within ninety days from date of issue, unless sale is pending under levy made.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Executions and Levies on Tangible Property", see 27 Dicta 143 (1950).

Execution lien attaches upon receipt of execution by sheriff. It has been held repeatedly that under this section an execution lien upon the personal property of the debtor attaches upon receipt of the execution by the sheriff. Williams v. Mellor, 12 Colo. 1, 19 P. 839 (1888); Joslin v. Spangler, 13 Colo. 491, 22 P. 804 (1889); Ankele v. Elder, 19 Colo. App. 330, 75 P. 29 (1904); Lewin v. Telluride Iron Works Co., 272 F. 590 (8th Cir. 1921); First Nat'l Bank v. Monte Vista Hdwe. Co., 75 Colo. 440, 226 P. 154 (1924); First State Bank v. Fox, 10 F.2d 116 (8th Cir. 1925).

Such liens are entitled to priority in accordance with the respective dates of their delivery. Joslin v. Spangler, 13 Colo. 491, 22 P. 804 (1889).

The lien thus created is not a secret lien, for the statute requires the sheriff, upon receipt of the writ, to indorse thereon, and to enter in a book kept for that purpose in his office, the exact time when the writ was received. Robinson v. Wright, 90 Colo. 419, 9 P.2d 618 (1932).

Executions are returnable without reference to any term of court. The practice of returning the execution in term time has been changed by this section. Executions are made returnable within 90 days from date, without reference to any term of court. Brown v. People, 3 Colo. 115 (1876).

Executions may be returned prior to expiration of 90-day period. While it may be true that, in his discretion, the sheriff may take upon himself the responsibility of returning it at an earlier date, the fact that he does so, and that, too, at the request of defendant's counsel, is a circumstance which the court or judge may rightfully consider in determining the question whether all legal means have been exhausted to recover the fine and costs, when an application is made for the prisoner's discharge on the ground of the insufficiency of his estate wherewith to pay them. Tate v. People, 25 Colo. 335, 53 P. 1050 (1898).

When sheriff delays in serving execution by directions of creditor, lien is delayed. If because of any direction by, or of any understanding with, the execution creditor, the sheriff delays making a levy upon the debtor's property, the lien is held to be waived during the period of such delay. Williams v. Mellor, 12 Colo. 1, 19 P. 839 (1888); Lewin v. Telluride Iron Works Co., 272 F. 590 (8th Cir. 1921); Robinson v. Wright, 90 Colo. 417, 9 P.2d 618 (1932).

Unreasonable delay is presumed to be by creditor's direction. Where the sheriff delays an unreasonable time to make a levy, it is presumed, in the absence of an explanation for such delay, that the delay was caused by direction of the execution creditor. Robinson v. Wright, 90 Colo. 417, 9 P.2d 618 (1932).

Where there is no evidence of such instructions, it is error to submit the question to the jury. Where there is no evidence of instructions, or of an understanding on delivery of an execution to the sheriff, that a levy should be delayed, except the omission to make a levy for 20 days, and the testimony of the execution debtor to propositions for further time, which were not accepted, it is error, in replevin by mortgagees for goods levied on under the execution, to submit to the jury the question whether there were such instructions or understanding. Williams v. Mellor, 12 Colo. 1, 19 P. 839 (1888).

For when circumstances reasonably explain the delay in making the levy, see Robinson v. Wright, 90 Colo. 417, 9 P.2d 618 (1932).

Action for false return on execution. In an action against a sheriff and the sureties on his official bond for damages sustained by plaintiff by reason of an alleged false return upon an execution, a demurrer should be sustained to a defense which shows upon its face that it involves a contradiction of the sheriff's return upon the execution, as evidence would not be admissible to support such defense. People ex rel. Kenfield v. Finch, 19 Colo. App. 512, 76 P. 1120 (1904).

A lost execution's day of receipt may be shown by the sheriff's fee book when the sheriff is dead. Bruns v. Clase, 9 Colo. 225, 11 P. 79 (1886).

Source: L. 69: p. 563, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-13-1.

Law reviews. For article, "Enforcing Foreign Country Judgments in Colorado", see 13 Colo. Law. 381 (1984).

13-53-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:
(1) "Foreign judgment" means any judgment, decree, or order of a court of the United States or of any other court, except a protection order or a restraining order as described in section 13-14-104 that is entitled to full faith and credit in this state.

Source: L. 69: p. 563, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-13-2. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1234, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1) amended, p. 554, § 8, effective July 1.

13-53-103. Filing and status of foreign judgments. A copy of any foreign judgment authenticated in accordance with the act of congress or the laws of this state may be filed in the office of the clerk of any court of this state which would have had jurisdiction over the original action had it been commenced first in this state. A judgment so filed has the same effect and is subject to the same procedures, defenses, and proceedings for reopening, vacating, or staying as a judgment of the court of this state in which filed and may be enforced or satisfied in like manner.

Cross references: For foreign actions and decrees, see §§ 13-80-110 and 14-11-101.

ANNOTATION

Full faith and credit inapplicable without judgment itself. Where the only documents filed were: (1) An affidavit of petitioner stating that an order requiring payment of child support by respondent had been entered and that respondent was in arrears in the payments; (2) an order of court that a writ of fieri facias be issued; and (3) the writ of fieri facias, full faith and credit is inapplicable as none of these is a judgment order. Manley v. Manley, 41 Colo. App. 458, 591 P.2d 1042 (1978).

Fines imposed by a foreign court which have been reduced to final judgment and are not subject to modification are judgments entitled to full faith and credit. Gedeon v. Gedeon, 630 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1050, 102 S. Ct. 592, 70 L. Ed.2d 585 (1981).

While a court asked to enforce foreign judgment cannot redetermine merits of case or wisdom of judgment, it always has power to inquire into jurisdiction of foreign court to issue judgment. Hansen v. Pingnot, 739 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1987).

"Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act" does not create defenses to foreign judgments which violate the full faith and credit clause of the federal constitution. Marworth, Inc. v. McGuire, 810 P.2d 653 (Colo. 1991).

To allow Colorado courts to reexamine foreign judgments on their merits would violate intent and purpose of this act and the full faith and credit clause. Marworth, Inc. v. McGuire, 810 P.2d 653 (Colo. 1991).

Where respondents were given notice and opportunity to be heard in foreign court, due process rights were not violated and foreign judgment should be enforced pursuant to this act. Marworth, Inc. v. McGuire, 810 P.2d 653 (Colo. 1991).

Colorado court should have given full faith and credit to Illinois dissolution order which granted the wife sole ownership of federal income tax refund check proceeds since wife became sole owner before checks came into creditor's possession and creditor's judgment did not give the creditor any interest in said checks. No provision of this act or the failure of party to act pursuant to the provisions of this act affects the obligation of the court. Pardee v. Mostow, 757 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1988).

Enforcement Act applies to a foreign judgment recognized under the principles of comity and is entitled to full faith and credit. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court has no authority to enter orders or issue writs to enforce foreign judgment when plaintiff fails to file authenticated copy of such judgment but merely files affidavit describing the foreign judgment. Griggs v. Gibson, 754 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1988).

If foreign judgment was rendered without personal jurisdiction over the defendant, the judgment is void and will not be enforced. Tucker v. Vista Fin. Corp., 192 Colo. 440, 560 P.2d 453 (1977); O'Brien v. Eubanks, 701 P.2d 614 (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 904, 106 S. Ct. 272, 88 L. Ed.2d 233 (1985).

Where foreign default judgment was silent on issue of jurisdiction and plaintiff tendered no evidence contradicting defendant's affidavit stating that he did not transact any business in foreign state within meaning of foreign state's long-arm statute, plaintiff failed to establish that foreign state existence of default judgment raised presumption of valid jurisdiction. Hansen v. Pingnot, 739 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1987).

Since a foreign judgment filed in Colorado is subject to the same procedures, defenses, and proceedings for reopening, vacating, or staying as a judgment of a Colorado court, trial court must hear defendant's motion for relief from judgment based on defenses brought under C.R.C.P. 60. Marworth v. McGuire, 787 P.2d 200 (Colo. App. 1989).

Institution of an original action based on the constitutional provisions of full faith and credit is not required to enforce a foreign judgment; filing under this act is sufficient. Marworth v. McGuire, 787 P.2d 200 (Colo. App. 1989).

Judgment lien, based on a domesticated out-of-state judgment, must be revived under Colorado procedural law for the lien to be extended. To extend a judgment lien beyond six years after the date of judgment, Colorado procedural law requires a judgment to be revived pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54(h) and a transcript of the revival to be filed with the clerk and recorder. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Kopfman, 205 P.3d 437 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 226 P.3d 1068 (Colo. 2010).

A party may file a foreign judgment in any court that would have had jurisdiction over the underlying action had it been filed in Colorado. It does not require, as a condition of enforceability, that the county in which it is filed be a proper venue under C.R.C.P. 98. L & R Exploration Venture v. Grynberg, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

13-53-104. Notice of filing. (1) At the time of the filing of the foreign judgment, the judgment creditor or his lawyer shall make and file with the clerk of court an affidavit setting forth the name and last-known post-office address of the judgment debtor and the judgment creditor.

(2) Promptly upon the filing of the foreign judgment and the affidavit, the clerk shall mail notice of the filing of the foreign judgment to the judgment debtor at the address given and shall make a note of the mailing in the docket. The notice shall include the name and post-office address of the judgment creditor and the judgment creditor's lawyer, if any, in this state. In addition, the judgment creditor may mail a notice of the filing of the judgment to the judgment debtor and may file proof of mailing with the clerk. Lack of mailing notice of filing by the clerk shall not affect the enforcement proceedings if proof of mailing by the judgment creditor has been filed.

(3) No execution or other process for enforcement of a foreign judgment filed under this article shall issue until ten days after the date the judgment is filed.

ANNOTATION

Notice provisions satisfy due process. Where the basic requirements of notice and hearing have been met in a foreign court, the post-judgment notice provisions of this section satisfy the requirements of due process. Gedeon v. Gedeon, 630 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1050, 102 S. Ct. 592, 70 L. Ed.2d 585 (1981).

13-53-105. Stay. (1) If the judgment debtor shows the court that an appeal from the foreign judgment is pending or will be taken or that a stay of execution has been granted, the court shall stay enforcement of the foreign judgment until the appeal is concluded, the time for appeal expires, or the stay of execution expires or is vacated upon proof that the judgment debtor has furnished the security for the satisfaction of the judgment required by the state in which it was rendered.

(2) If the judgment debtor shows the court any ground upon which enforcement of a judgment of a court of this state would be stayed, the court shall stay enforcement of the foreign judgment for an appropriate period upon requiring the same security for satisfaction of the judgment which is required in this state.

ANNOTATION

Colorado court is not required to stay enforcement of a judgment from another state without a bond being posted even though the judgment could have been stayed in the state in which the judgment was entered without the posting of a bond. Dependable Ins. v. Auto. Warranty, 797 P.2d 1308 (Colo. App. 1990).

13-53-106. Fees. (1) (a) On and after July 1, 2008, any person filing a foreign judgment shall pay to the clerk of the court one hundred sixty-six dollars.

(b) Fees for docketing, transcription, or other enforcement proceedings shall be as provided for judgments of the courts of this state.

(c) Each fee collected pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall be transmitted to the state treasurer and divided as follows:

(I) Ninety dollars shall be deposited in the general fund;

(II) Sixty dollars shall be deposited in the judicial stabilization cash fund created in section 13-32-101 (6);

(III) Fifteen dollars shall be deposited in the justice center cash fund created in section 13-32-101 (7) (a); and

(IV) One dollar shall be deposited in the general fund pursuant to section 2-5-119, C.R.S.

(2) Notwithstanding the amount specified for the fee in subsection (1) of this section, the chief justice of the supreme court by rule or as otherwise provided by law may reduce the amount of the fee if necessary pursuant to section 24-75-402 (3), C.R.S., to reduce the uncommitted reserves of the fund to which all or any portion of the fee is credited. After the uncommitted reserves of the fund are sufficiently reduced, the chief justice by rule or as otherwise provided by law may increase the amount of the fee as provided in section 24-75-402 (4), C.R.S.

Annotator's note. Since § 13-54-102 is similar to repealed CSA, C. 93, § 14, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing these provisions have been included in the annotations to § 13-54-102.

Constitutionality. This section does not violate the uniformity clause of § 8 of art. VIII, U.S. Const., or the supremacy clause, art. VI, cl. 2, U.S. Const. In re Parrish, 19 Bankr. 331 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

On its face this section clearly applies to all writs of execution, regardless of underlying claim. Packard v. Packard, 33 Colo. App. 308, 519 P.2d 1221 (1974).

The only exception is specified in § 13-54-103, which denies exemptions if the writ of execution issues on a judgment for the purchase price of the property exempted. Packard v. Packard, 33 Colo. App. 308, 519 P.2d 1221 (1974).

The purpose of exemption is to preserve to the debtor his means of support. Watson v. Lederer, 11 Colo. 577, 19 P. 602 (1888); Smith v. Pueblo Mercantile & Credit Ass'n, 82 Colo. 364, 260 P. 109 (1927).

And to preserve the home for the family. Repeated decisions are to the effect that the purpose of these statutes is to preserve the home for the family, and, to that end, to protect it from alienation by one spouse without the concurrence of the other, and also from execution or attachment arising from any debt, contract, or civil obligation. In re Youngstrom, 153 F. 98 (8th Cir. 1907).

Exemptions are to be liberally construed. The exemption laws of the state are for the benefit of residents, and they are to be liberally construed. Sandberg v. Borstadt, 48 Colo. 96, 109 P. 419 (1910).

As indicated in the constitution. The liberal policy of this state in regard to exemption laws is indicated by the organic law. Section 1 of art. XVIII, Colo. Const., expressly declares that "the general assembly shall pass liberal homestead and exemption laws". The decisions of the courts should be in harmony with this policy. Martin v. Bond, 14 Colo. 466, 24 P. 326 (1890); Hawkins v. Mosher, 8 Colo. App. 31, 44 P. 763 (1896).

Exemptions provided by this section for the purposes intended are favored. A perversion of the statute to admit of fraudulent purposes should be avoided by the courts; however, a construction so strict as to defeat its purpose and design should not prevail. Penrose v. Stevens, 100 Colo. 83, 65 P.2d 697 (1937).

This section relates solely to civil actions. Enderman v. Alexander, 68 Colo. 110, 187 P. 729 (1920).

The statutory right to an exemption is personal and individual, and must be exercised in relation to the property of the individual claiming it. McCrimmon v. Linton, 4 Colo. App. 420, 36 P. 300 (1894).

Right cannot be exercised in respect to partnership property. McCrimmon v. Linton, 4 Colo. App. 420, 36 P. 300 (1894).

Exemptions apply to the estate of a mental incompetent. The exemption provisions of this section are applicable to the assets in the estate of a mental incompetent, and insurance proceeds in such an estate are exempt from an approved claim of the Colorado state hospital.

State v. Estate of Butler, 30 Colo. App. 246, 491 P. 2d 102 (1971).

Benefits received by individuals at state mental hospital from veterans administration and the Colorado old age pension program may be applied to cover costs of care at the hospital under former § 27-12-104 and therefore are not exempt under this section. In re Estate of Nau, 183 P.3d 626 (Colo. App. 2007).

While property may be exempt from levy, there is no statute which exempts it from liens. Noxon v. Glaze, 11 Colo. App. 503, 53 P. 827 (1898).

Exemption can be claimed only from levy and sale upon execution or attachment. As the common-law process of distress for rent does not exist in this state, it is only from levy and sale upon execution or attachment that exemption can be claimed. Replevin on the ground of exemption will lie only where property has been seized by execution or attachment. The statute exempting property from levy does not exempt it from a landlord's lien. Noxon v. Glaze, 11 Colo. App. 503, 53 P. 827 (1898).

Cognovit waiving exemptions is invalid. Colorado has held that a stipulation in a cognovit note which waived the right of exemption was invalid as against public policy. In re Rade, 205 F. Supp. 336 (D. Colo. 1962).

General waiver. A general waiver of "any and all exemptions permitted by law" in a promissory note is invalid as against public policy. Beneficial Finance Co. of Colo. v. Schmuhl, 713 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1986).

Implied waiver. Combined note and security agreement result in an implied waiver of $6000 residential mobile home exemption. Beneficial Finance Co. of Colo. v. Schmuhl, 713 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1986).

An ordinary chattel mortgage given on property which is later claimed as exempt will prevail over the exemption. In re Rade, 205 F. Supp. 336 (D. Colo. 1962).

Exemption applicable to judgment for arrearages in child support and alimony. The exemption from levy under writ of execution set forth in subsection (1)(j) applies to a judgment for arrearages in child support and alimony. Packard v. Packard, 33 Colo. App. 308, 519 P.2d 1221 (1974).

The exemption would apply only to the debtor's equity. When mortgaged property is claimed as exempt by a bankrupt, the exemption applies to the equity and not to the specific items of property. In re Cummings, 413 F.2d 1281 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Horton, 397 U.S. 915, 90 S. Ct. 918, 25 L. Ed.2d 95 (1970); Centennial Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Schmuhl, 690 P.2d 882 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Beneficial Finance Co. of Colo. v. Schmuhl, 713 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1986); In re Holcomb, 54 Bankr. 59 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1985).

Vendor's assignee cannot resort to exempt property to satisfy judgment. If the vendor takes a promissory note for the property sold, and transfers the note to a third party, such voluntary transfer of the note does not carry with it to the assignee the right to resort to exempt property to satisfy a judgment which he as assignee may recover upon the note. Whether the heir or personal representative of a deceased vendor would succeed to the privilege of his decedent under the proviso statute was not involved in the controversy in Weil v. Nevitt, 18 Colo. 10, 31 P. 487 (1892).

Garnishment of former spouse's pension as indemnification for tax liability is not precluded by subsection (1)(s) exempting pension funds from levy and sale under writ of attachment or execution in "any action" brought after a specified date where relevant action was dissolution, not motion to compel payment of tax. In re Plank, 881 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

II. EXEMPT PROPERTY.

A. In General.

The application of the amended Colorado exemption limits set forth in this section to a loan and security agreement that was entered into prior to the enactment of the amended exemption statute does not constitute a "retrospective" application of state law in violation of art. II, § 11, of the Colorado Constitution and § 2-4-202. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

The application also does not constitute an unconstitutional "taking" of the loan collateral under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution and the Constitution of the state of Colorado. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

The application also does not violate the respective "contracts" clauses of the United States and Colorado Constitutions. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Notwithstanding the exemption created by subsection (1)(a), public policy prevents the application of an attorney's charging lien against funds owing to a parent as child support. In re Etcheverry, 921 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1996).

Wife is not a "single person" within meaning of this section and she is not entitled to any claims for exemption as a "single person". In re Hellman, 474 F. Supp. 348 (D. Colo. 1979).

Where husband and wife file separately for bankruptcy, both the husband and the wife are entitled to the exemptions provided in paragraphs (c) and (e) of subsection (1). In re Hellman, 474 F. Supp. 348 (D. Colo. 1979).

Subsection (1)(f) permits but one claim for exemption and where the trustee had allowed that claim in the computation of the assets available for the creditors of the husband, the wife's claim for a similar exemption was disallowed. In re Hellman, 474 F. Supp. 348 (D. Colo. 1979).

Debtor may claim exemptions under subsection (1)(g) and (1)(i) on the same property. In re Case, 66 Bankr. 44 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986); In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

And each debtor can claim the full amount of the exemption under both subsection (1)(g) and (1)(i) as these are personal exemptions belonging to each debtor on personalty. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

"Implements" are defined in Anderson's Law Dictionary to be: "Things necessary to any trade, without which the work cannot be performed". Eckman v. Poor, 38 Colo. 200, 87 P. 1088 (1906).

Damages for personal injuries includes damages recovered in actions for breach of warranty, fraud, deceit, or false imprisonment as well as damages for loss of consortium. In re Keyworth, 47 Bankr. 966 (D. Colo. 1985).

But excludes damages under the "Wrongful Death Act" unless the claim was for damages for personal injury suffered by the debtor and punitive damages since they are awarded not because of personal injury but because of malicious, wanton, and reckless actions. In re Keyworth, 47 Bankr. 966 (D. Colo. 1985).

The exemption for damages for personal injury does not apply to punitive damages that are awarded to punish the wrongdoer and not to compensate the plaintiff for injury. Miller v. Accelerated Bureau of Collections, Inc., 932 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1996).

Subsection (1)(n) does not protect the net proceeds of a personal injury judgment from garnishment for child support obligation. The plain language of § 13-54-106 clearly permits the garnishment of otherwise exempt property or income for the collection of child support arrearages. Drachmeister v. Brassart, 93 P.3d 566 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (1)(o)(II) exemption for mobile home. Under subsection (1)(o)(II), each debtor in a joint case in bankruptcy is entitled to an exemption for a mobile home used as a place of residence and of which each debtor is an owner. In re Janesofsky, 22 Bankr. 973 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

Moneys from federally guaranteed student loan in student's bank account are exempt from garnishment for judgment based on antecedent business debt owed by student. Schaerrer v. Westman Comm'n Co., 769 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1989).

Funds of defendant were not exempt from garnishment even though those funds were derived from a federal court order requiring defendant to make restitution as a part of a criminal case. Newburn v. RFB Petroleum, Inc., 775 P.2d 93 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where a non-custodial parent owes a duty of child support, such parent may not offset that obligation against a personal judgment that the non-custodial parent may have against the custodial parent. Hall v. Hall-Stradley, 776 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1989).

Exemption for jewelry was denied where debtor failed to provide court with current market value of specific items. In re Raymond, 132 Bankr. 53 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991).

Debtor's annuity was not a life insurance policy for purposes of exemption under subsection (1)(l). In re Raymond, 132 Bankr. 53 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991).

Because the statute has no restrictive conditions, the term "avails" in subsection (1)(l) includes the cash surrender value of life insurance policies. In re Griesse, 172 Bankr. 336 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 1995 amendment to subsection (1)(l)).

An adoption expense credit is not an earned income tax credit and, therefore, does not qualify as exempt property under subsection (1)(o). Earned income is not an element of eligibility for the adoption expense credit. Subsection (1)(o) refers to the very unique tax credit program that is based upon earned income. It does not create a generic exemption for all tax credits that use income as a qualifying factor. In re Walsh, 298 B.R. 894 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2003).

B. Agriculture.

Debtors engaged in agriculture as their principal occupation where they began trucking to save their farming business, a business that had been a way of life for each of them and for at least three generations for each of their families; they began trucking with reluctance; debtor wife steadfastly resisted driving a truck but finally did so only as a last resort to save the farming business; it is fairly common for farmers and ranchers in the area to take on employment outside of the family farm for at least part of the year in order to supplement farm income and pay bills; most, if not all, of the income from trucking was dedicated to paying the bills related to the family and its farming and ranching business; both debtors expressed a credible and sincere intent to return to working full-time as farmers/ranchers once they were able to get back on their feet financially; and, while they drove trucks approximately 40 hours per week, they and their children also continued to raise cattle and manage the farm in their spare time. The debtors can, therefore, claim exemptions under subsection (1)(g). In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Debtors' remaining livestock are in the nature of breeding stock, without which it would be virtually impossible for debtors to obtain a fresh start. The stock is therefore exempt from levy as "tools of the trade" under subsection (1)(g). In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

C. Household Goods.

Ownership interest required before exemption may be claimed. Each Colorado debtor in a joint case is entitled to claim up to $1,500 a piece in household goods or tools of trade; however, the debtor must have an ownership interest in the property before any exemption may be claimed. In re Ferguson, 15 Bankr. 439 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981); In re Reeder, 60 Bankr. 312 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986).

Where husband and wife are two separate debtors in a joint petition in bankruptcy, under subsection (1)(e), each is entitled to claim a $1,500 exemption for a total exemption of $3,000 for household goods. In re Alvarez, 14 Bankr. 940 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

Where husband and wife file separately for bankruptcy, both the husband and the wife are entitled to the exemptions provided in paragraphs (c) and (e) of subsection (1). In re Hellman, 474 F. Supp. 348 (D. Colo. 1979).

Subsection (1)(e) exemption superior to nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest. A nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtors' household goods and household furnishings under § 522 (f) of the federal bankruptcy code, is void to the extent that it impairs the exemption to which the debtors would be entitled under subsection (1)(e) if no security interest existed. Redin v. Fidelity Fin. Servs., 14 Bankr. 727 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981); In re Weiss, 51 Bankr. 224 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1985).

Guns do not constitute household goods when primarily used as recreational items. In re Greenlee, 61 Bankr. 257 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986).

Tractor qualified as a household good because it was necessary to the functioning of the household. In re Sarmiento, 363 B.R. 189 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

D. Stock in Trade.

Debtor may claim exemptions under subsection (1)(g) and (1)(i) on the same property. In re Case, 66 Bankr. 44 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986); In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

And each debtor can claim the full amount of the exemption under both subsection (1)(g) and (1)(i) as these are personal exemptions belonging to each debtor on personality. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

The words "stock in trade", in subsection (1)(i), apply to the merchant or shopkeeper, as well as to the mechanic, and include the stock of goods kept on sale by the merchant. Weil v. Nevitt, 18 Colo. 10, 31 P. 487 (1892).

Therefore it includes liquors of a saloon-keeper. Weil v. Nevitt, 18 Colo. 10, 31 P. 487 (1892).

Debtors may claim exemptions under subsection (1)(i) where evidence demonstrated that equipment was not only used by the debtors in their farming and ranching operations but was an integral part of those operations. In re Larsen, 260 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

A debtor may claim a motor vehicle as exempt pursuant to subsection (1)(i) so long as the vehicle qualifies for the exemption. In re Van Winkle, 265 B.R. 247 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2002); In re Black, 280 B.R. 258 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2002).

Debtor entitled to claim truck as exempt equipment pursuant to subsection (1)(i) where debtor used and kept the truck for the specific purpose of carrying on debtor's occupation. In re Van Winkle, 265 B.R. 247 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2002).

Debtor entitled to claim motor vehicle under subsection (1)(i) where debtor used the vehicle to carry on a gainful occupation. In re Sackett, 394 B.R. 544 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2008).

Failure to make selection under this section is waiver of right. A defendant in attachment, claiming under subsection (1)(i), of "implements or stock in trade used or kept for the purpose of carrying on his trade or business", not specifically exempt by law, is entitled to select such articles as are suitable to his trade or business; and a failure on his part to make such selection, is a waiver of his right thereto. Behymer v. Cook, 5 Colo. 395 (1880).

Property subject to levy and sale under § 13-54-103 cannot become exempt under subsection (1)(i). Behymer v. Cook, 5 Colo. 395 (1880).

Exemption for stock in trade cannot exceed statutory limit. The supreme court of Colorado has made statements indicating it would not exempt a tool or instrument, or stock in trade, exceeding the value set by the statute. Watson v. Lederer, 11 Colo. 577, 19 P. 602 (1888).

E. Motor Vehicles.

Law reviews. For article, "Exemption of Automobiles from Levy Under Execution or Attachment", see 10 Dicta 143 (1933). For note, "The Status of an Automobile Under the Exemption Laws of Colorado", see 10 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 269 (1938).

Subsection (1)(j) provides for an exemption where the debtor uses a motor vehicle for carrying on any gainful occupation. In re Rade, 205 F. Supp. 336 (D. Colo. 1962).

Legal title to an automobile is not a requirement of subsection (1)(j)(I). Subsection (1)(j)(I) allows a debtor to exempt one or more motor vehicles kept and used by the debtor. Hill v. Koching, 338 B.R. 463 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2005).

Use of vehicle on public highways is not a requirement of subsection (1)(j)(I). In re Sarmiento, 363 B.R. 189 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

Debtors entitled to claim tractor as exempt motor vehicle. In re Sarmiento, 363 B.R. 189 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

The application of subsection (1)(j)(II)(A) is expressly limited to debtors who are themselves elderly or disabled and not to a debtor who keeps and uses a motor vehicle for the purpose of obtaining medical care for a disabled dependent. In re Coleman, 208 Bankr. 739 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

Debtor's son's manic-depressive mental condition was not disabling under subsection (1)(j)(II)(A) where there was no evidence or offer of proof of any inability of the son to maintain gainful employment. In re Coleman, 208 Bankr. 739 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

For evidence supporting ruling that automobile was not exempt, see Law v. Simon, 110 Colo. 545, 136 P.2d 520 (1943).

F. Pensions and Retirement Plans.

Subsection (1)(s) applies only to original actions, writs of garnishments, issued by a court on or after May 1, 1991. Guidry v. Sheet Metal Wkrs. Intern. Ass'n, Local 9, 10 F.3d 700 (10th Cir. 1993).

And the exemption does not apply in any action for dissolution of marriage in which the petition was filed before May 1, 1991. In re LeBlanc, 944 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1997).

Plain meaning of "retirement plan" is not limited to plans that possess attributes of ERISA-qualified or tax-qualified plans. A future retirement obligation by company is therefore exempt from attachment or garnishment under subsection (1)(s). Dillabaugh v. Ellerton, 259 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2011).

G. Life Insurance.

Statute exempts from garnishment the "cash surrender value" of a life insurance policy up to $25,000. In re Gedgaudas, 978 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1999).

The exclusion from the exemption is the only garnishable or attachable asset, measured by the incremental increases in "cash value" occasioned by the making of contributions to the policy through payment of premiums. In re Gedgaudas, 978 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1999).

13-54-102.5. Child support payments - exemption - deposit into custodial account.

(1) Any past or present child support obligation owed by a parent or child support payment made by a parent that is required by a support order is exempt from levy under writ of attachment or writ of execution for any debt owed by either parent. A child support payment is no longer exempt under the provisions of this section if the recipient of the payment intermingles the payment with any other moneys.

(2) A child support payment is only exempt under the provisions of subsection (1) of this section after the payment is deposited in a bank, savings and loan, or credit union account if the account is a custodial account for the benefit of the child designated for child support payments and if no moneys other than child support payments made pursuant to a support order or interest earned on the moneys in the account are deposited into the account.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1210, § 2, effective May 22.

ANNOTATION

Notwithstanding the exemption created by subsection (1), public policy prevents the application of an attorney's charging lien against funds owing to a parent as child support. In re Etcheverry, 921 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1996).

Special coordinator appointed to arbitrate during a post-dissolution of marriage proceeding violated this section by requesting that her fees be paid from child support funds deposited in the court registry. Although the coordinator did not employ writs of attachment or execution to obtain payment, coordinator's behavior was functionally equivalent to extracting payment for a parent's debt from a child support payment. In re Eggert, 53 P.3d 794 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-54-103. No exemption for purchase price. None of the property described in section 13-54-102 shall be exempt from levy and sale on writ of attachment or writ of execution for the purchase price of such property.

Source: L. 59: p. 532, § 3. CRS 53: § 77-13-3. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-2-3.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-54-103 is similar to the repealed second proviso to CSA, C. 13, § 14 and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is for the protection of the vendor who has parted with his property without getting his pay for it; it is a privilege personal to the vendor. Weil v. Nevitt, 18 Colo. 10, 31 P. 487 (1892).

It is analogous to the vendor's lien for purchase price of real estate. The privilege which the statute secures to the vendor would seem to bear a close analogy to the vendor's lien for the purchase price of real estate. Weil v. Nevitt, 18 Colo. 10, 31 P. 487 (1892).

No property is exempt from levy to satisfy a claim for the purchase money thereof. Behymer v. Cook, 5 Colo. 395 (1880).

This section itself does not create a lien on exempt property. As this section indicates, exempt personal property is subject to levy of attachment for the purchase price thereof. But it has been held that such a statutory provision in itself does not create a lien in exempt property. In re Rade, 205 F. Supp. 336 (D. Colo. 1962).

It has been indicated that a favorable attitude towards equitable liens prevails in Colorado. In re Rade, 205 F. Supp. 336 (D. Colo. 1962).

13-54-104. Restrictions on garnishment and levy under execution or attachment.

(1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Disposable earnings" means that part of the earnings of any individual remaining after the deduction from those earnings of any amounts required by law to be withheld and after the deduction of the cost of any health insurance provided by the individual pursuant to section 14-14-112, C.R.S. In the case of an order for the support of a spouse, former spouse, or dependent child, "disposable earnings" includes moneys voluntarily deposited in tax-deferred compensation funds.

(b) (I) "Earnings" means:

(A) Compensation paid or payable for personal services, whether denominated as wages, salary, commission, or bonus;

(B) Funds held in or payable from any health, accident, or disability insurance.

(II) For the purposes of writs of garnishment that are the result of a judgment taken for arrearages for child support or for child support debt, for restitution for the theft, embezzlement, misappropriation, or wrongful conversion of public property, or in the event of a judgment for a willful and intentional violation of fiduciary duties to a public pension plan where the offender or a related party received direct financial gain, "earnings" also means:

(A) Workers' compensation benefits;

(B) Any pension or retirement benefits or payments, including but not limited to those paid pursuant to articles 51, 54, 54.5, and 54.6 of title 24, C.R.S., and articles 30.5 and 31 of title 31, C.R.S.;

(C) Payment to an independent contractor for labor or services, dividends, severance pay, royalties, monetary gifts, monetary prizes, excluding lottery winnings not required by the rules of the Colorado lottery commission to be paid only at the lottery office, taxable distributions from general partnerships, limited partnerships, closely held corporations, or limited liability companies, interest, trust income, annuities, capital gains, or rents;

(D) Any funds held in or payable from any health, accident, disability, or casualty insurance to the extent that such insurance replaces wages or provides income in lieu of wages; and

(E) Tips declared by the individual for purposes of reporting to the federal internal revenue service or tips imputed to bring the employee's gross earnings to the minimum wage for the number of hours worked, whichever is greater.

(III) For the purposes of writs of garnishment issued by the state agency responsible for administering the state medical assistance program, which writs are issued as a result of a judgment for medical support for child support or for medical support debt, “earnings” includes:

(A) Payments received from a third party to cover the health care cost of the child but which payments have not been applied to cover the child’s health care costs;

(A.5) Unemployment insurance benefits; and

(B) State tax refunds.

(IV) For the purposes of writs of garnishment issued by a county department of social services responsible for administering the state public assistance programs, which writs are issued as a result of a judgment for a debt for fraudulently obtained public assistance, fraudulently obtained overpayments of public assistance, or excess public assistance paid for which the recipient was ineligible, “earnings” shall include workers’ compensation benefits.

(V) For the purposes of attachments of earnings or writs of garnishment that are the result of a judgment taken for court assessments including fines, fees, costs, restitution, and surcharges pursuant to section 16-11-101.6 or section 16-18.5-105, C.R.S., “earnings” also means those enumerated under subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b).

(2) (a) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, the maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual for any workweek which is subjected to garnishment or levy under execution or attachment may not exceed:

(I) For debts other than debts under subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a), the lesser of:

(A) Twenty-five percent of the individual’s disposable earnings for that week; or

(B) The amount by which the individual’s disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the federal minimum hourly wage prescribed by section 206 (a) (1) of title 29 of the United States Code in effect at the time the earnings are payable; or

(C) The amount by which the individual’s disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the state minimum hourly wage pursuant to section 15 of article XVIII of the state constitution in effect at the time the earnings are payable;

(II) For debts for fraudulently obtained public assistance or fraudulently obtained overpayments collected pursuant to section 26-2-128 (1) (a), C.R.S., the lesser of:

(A) Thirty-five percent of the individual’s disposable earnings for that week; or

(B) The amount by which the individual’s disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the federal minimum hourly wage prescribed by section 206 (a) (1) of title 29 of the United States Code in effect at the time the earnings are payable; or

(C) The amount by which the individual’s disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the state minimum hourly wage pursuant to section 15 of article XVIII of the state constitution in effect at the time the earnings are payable.

(b) In the case of earnings for any pay period other than a week, a multiple of the federal minimum hourly wage or the state minimum hourly wage, equivalent in effect to that set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall be used.

(3) (a) The restrictions of subsection (2) of this section do not apply in the case of:

(I) Any order for the support of any person issued by a court of competent jurisdiction or in accordance with an administrative procedure which is established by state law, which affords substantial due process, and which is subject to judicial review;

(II) Any order of any court of the United States having jurisdiction over cases under chapter 13 of title 11 of the United States Code, the federal bankruptcy code of 1978;

(III) Any debt due for any state or federal tax.

(b) (I) The maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual for any workweek which is subject to garnishment or levy under execution or attachment to enforce any order for the support of any person shall not exceed:

(A) Where such individual is supporting his spouse or dependent child, other than a spouse or child with respect to whose support such order is used, fifty percent of such individual’s disposable earnings for that week; and

(B) Where such individual is not supporting a spouse or dependent child as described in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), sixty percent of such individual’s disposable earnings for that week.

(II) With respect to the disposable earnings of any individual for any workweek, the fifty percent specified in sub-subparagraph (A) of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall be deemed to be fifty-five percent, and the sixty percent specified in sub-subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall be deemed to be sixty-five percent if and to the extent that such earnings are subject to garnishment or wage assignment or income assignment or levy under execution or attachment to enforce a support order with respect to a period that is prior to the twelve-week period that ends with the beginning of such workweek.

(III) Notwithstanding the maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual which is subject to garnishment as provided in this paragraph (b), a debtor who is totally and permanently disabled and who establishes that at least seventy-five percent of his income is derived from any disability income or benefits may object to the amount of the aggregate disposable earnings subject to garnishment under this paragraph (b). The court, upon consideration of the circumstances of the parties, may provide for garnishment in an amount less than such maximum amounts.

(4) The restrictions established by this section shall be adhered to whether or not the employer of the debtor is subject to garnishee process.

Annottator's note. Since § 13-54-104 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 93, § 16, cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Earnings received do not lose their character as "wages" and become capital. It has been argued with much ingenuity that the earnings of the laborer, when received by him, are no longer wages, but capital; that the exemption statute has performed its office when it has enabled the laborer to secure his wages from his employer without let or hindrance; and that thereafter the statute cannot be invoked in his favor. This section cannot be thus reasoned away. Such a construction is narrow and illiberal. It would compel the laborer to leave his earnings in the hands of his employer, or else forego the protection of the statute altogether. It would not only deprive him of the privilege of depositing his earnings with any bank or other depository for safekeeping, but would subject his wages to supplemental proceedings even in his own pocket; for, if earnings once received immediately lose their character as wages, then it is evident that the laborer could never retain his earnings for a single hour without exposing them to the very perils which the statute was designed to avert. Such a construction would practically frustrate the beneficial objects of the statute. Rutter v. Shumway, 16 Colo. 95, 26 P. 321 (1891).

Earnings include money received according to the work done. The earnings of defendant were according to the work done, and not according to the length of employment. This fact does not preclude them from being "earnings" within the meaning of the statute. Stranger v. Harris, 77 Colo. 340, 236 P. 1001 (1925).

The fact that some capital, and some assistants, enter into the work, does not prevent the income from the contract from being "earnings" within the meaning of our statute. Stranger v. Harris, 77 Colo. 340, 236 P. 1001 (1925).

Employee's interest in erstwhile retirement plan is not earnings. Where employee terminated his employment and never did qualify for, any pension or retirement benefits, employee's interest in erstwhile employer's retirement plan cannot be considered "earnings". Fin. Acceptance Co. v. Breaux, 160 Colo. 510, 419 P.2d 955 (1966).

Shares of common stock debtor purchased through an employee stock purchase plan are not exempt earnings pursuant to this section and § 5-5-105. In re Kramer, 339 P.3d 761 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

Termination payments held earnings for exempt services. Termination payments which may be paid to the debtor pursuant to an insurance agent's agreement after the filing of his Chapter 7 petition are not payments due him under a covenant not to compete but are earnings for services which are exempt under this section. In re Marshburn, 5 Bankr. 711 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1980).

The whole spirit of acts such as this section is such that it was intended to protect the exempt property from all manner of coercive process of the law, and not merely to protect the earnings of the debtor and other exempt property from seizure by means of the processes technically known as attachment, execution, or garnishment, but to preserve them for the benefit of his family against any appropriation for the payment of his debts not authorized by law to which he does not consent. Fin. Acceptance Co. v. Breaux, 160 Colo. 510, 419 P.2d 955 (1966).

Attorney's fees not deductible before computing percentage of disposable earnings available for garnishment. Rios v. Mireles, 937 P.2d 840 (Colo. App. 1996).

A defendant cannot counterclaim for wages that are exempt. In an action for wages exempt by statute from levy under execution, attachment, or garnishment which are due from a defendant, the defendant cannot counterclaim a debt due from the plaintiff to him. Fin. Acceptance Co. v. Breaux, 160 Colo. 510, 419 P.2d 955 (1966).

Subsection (1.1) held invalid. Since the federal constitution reserves to Congress the right to legislate bankruptcy exemptions, this attempt by the state to create a separate bankruptcy exemption was impermissible. The exemption provided by this subsection was one which served to protect a judgment debtor in bankruptcy but did not protect him from execution and levy. In re Mata, 115 Bankr. 288 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990) (decided prior to 1991 repeal of subsection (1.1)).

Since this subsection makes specific reference to ERISA plans, it is clear that this provision must be considered to have been preempted by the explicit provisions of ERISA. In re Starkey, 116 Bankr. 259 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990) (decided prior to 1991 repeal of subsection (1.1)).

Subsection (2), which limits an exemption in pension plan benefits to 75% of the "avails" of any such plan, is preempted by the ERISA provision which mandates a 100% exemption. In re Starkey, 116 Bankr. 259 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

Deferred compensation plans are "earnings" within the meaning of this section and not a "trust". In re Vann, 113 Bankr. 704 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990) (decided prior to 1991 amendment to subsection (1)(b)).

Future commissions based on renewal of insurance policies qualify as "earnings" under subsection (1)(b) because they are "compensation . . . payable for personal services". Therefore, all renewal commissions are "earnings" that would be entitled to the statutory exemption. In re Fuchs, 189 Bankr. 811 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1995).

Personal injury settlement proceeds do not constitute "earnings" as the term is defined in this section. Therefore, the statutory exemptions and methods of computing "disposable earnings" subject to garnishment of earnings do not apply. People ex rel. J.W., 174 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applicability of exemption. The exemption provided for in this section only applies to that portion of a pension or profit sharing plan that is interest or income and not to the corpus of such plan. In re Toner, 105 Bankr. 978 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989); In re Alagna, 107 Bankr. 301 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

The exemption in this section does not apply in an action for dissolution of marriage commenced by petition before May 1, 1991. In re LeBlanc, 944 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1997).

Preemption of section. This section is preempted with respect to ERISA qualified pensions or plans. In re Alagna, 107 Bankr. 301 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

Debtors are permitted under the Bankruptcy Code and this section to exempt 75% of the entire balance of their IRA's from the bankruptcy estate. In re Kulp, 949 F.2d 1106 (10th Cir. 1991).

Wages paid to subcontractor do not lose characterization of "earnings" by virtue of having been deposited in joint marital account. In re Kobernusz, 160 Bankr. 844 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1993).

Attorney's lien is not "required to be withheld" until it is enforced and should not be calculated as part of garnishable "disposable earnings" until that time. Rios v. Mireles, 937 P.2d 840 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court's determination that defendant was not supporting other dependents was supported by record. Rios v. Mireles, 937 P.2d 840 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant not entitled to more interest than has accrued on the amount due. Rios v. Mireles, 937 P.2d 840 (Colo. App. 1996).

Statutory limit on percent of wage that can be garnished is subject to fraud exception. Where debtor and garnishee colluded to avoid paying employee's wages until garnishment period had ended, court properly held garnishee liable for 100% of wages. Hoyman v. Coffin, 976 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in In re McCue, 645 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1982); Bernstein v. Richardson, 34 Bankr. 611 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

13-54-105. No exemption for taxes. Nothing in this article shall be construed to exempt any property of any debtor from sale for the payment of any taxes legally assessed.

Exemptions applicable to all writs - exception for child support. The exemptions provided by this article shall extend and apply to writs of attachment, execution, and garnishment issued out of any court of record and by municipal courts, except those writs which are the result of a judgment taken for arrearages for child support or for child support debt which are subject to the exemptions set forth in section 13-54-104 (3).

13-54-107. Exemptions in bankruptcy. The exemptions provided in section 522 (d) of the federal bankruptcy code of 1978, title 11 of the United States Code, as amended, are denied to residents of this state. Exemptions authorized to be claimed by residents of this state shall be limited to those exemptions expressly provided by the statutes of this state.

Constitutionality. This section does not violate the uniformity clause of § 8 of art. VIII, U.S. Const., or the supremacy clause, art. VI, cl. 2, U.S. Const. In re Parrish, 19 Bankr. 331 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982); In re Robinson, 44 Bankr. 292 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1984).

This section is constitutional, notwithstanding the fact that Colorado does not provide an exemption for alimony and support. Ranes v. Molen, 31 Bankr. 70 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Debtor's claim that entire section is unconstitutional because second sentence exceeds state authority to deny federal exemptions is not addressed because debtor lacked standing to question the constitutionality of the statute. Hinkson v. Pfeiderer, 729 F.2d 697 (10th Cir. 1984).

Purpose of revision of exemption schedules. When Colorado revised its exemption schedules, it sought to meet congressional criticism that most of the state exemption laws are outmoded, designed for more rural times, and hopelessly inadequate to serve the needs of and provide a fresh start for modern urban debtors'. In re Parrish, 19 Bankr. 331 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

State exemption scheme conforms to federal legislative attempt. Colorado's scheme of bankruptcy exemptions is in conformity with the federal legislative intent to provide the required "fresh start" to debtors in bankruptcy. In re Parrish, 19 Bankr. 331 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

Debtor limited to state exemptions. Because Colorado's bankruptcy exemptions are not inconsistent with the federal scheme of exemptions, a debtor may use only those exemptions provided for in Colorado law. In re Parrish, 19 Bankr. 331 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

Colorado has "opted out" and denied to its residents the right to choose the exemptions in 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), thus confining its debtors to those exemptions enumerated in the Colorado statutes. In re Janesofsky, 22 Bankr. 973 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

Colorado exemptions are available only to Colorado residents. Since debtor may not claim Colorado exemptions because she is not a Colorado resident, and since the 730-day domiciliary requirement in the federal bankruptcy code renders her ineligible to claim exemptions under any state's laws, debtor may claim federal exemptions. In re Underwood, 342 B.R. 358 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

Debtor denied exemptions in 11 U.S.C. § 522 (d) because Colorado has "opted out" of said exemptions as allowed by federal law. Hinkson v. Pfeiderer, 729 F.2d 697 (10th Cir. 1984).

Federal nonbankruptcy exemptions available to debtors. Colorado did not intend to deny the federal nonbankruptcy exemptions to debtors in this state, nor could Colorado deny those exemptions to its citizens. Those exemptions are specifically reserved to all debtors in 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(2)(A). Thus, the federal nonbankruptcy exemptions are available to Colorado debtors. Ranes v. Molen, 31 Bankr. 70 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Recorded encumbrance is secure claim. Where an encumbrance requiring payment of annual and special assessments is established by a prior recording of which the property owner had constructive notice when she accepted the deed, and where she also had actual notice from the contents of her deed, itself, the lienor holds a secured claim which a bankruptcy debtor must provide for. Lincoln v. Cherry Creek Homeowners Ass'n, 30 Bankr. 905 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Judicial liens in bankruptcy. Judicial liens impair a bankruptcy debtor's equity where they are created subsequent to the establishment of a homestead right and no waiver is obtained from the property owner. Consequently, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522 and §§ 13-54-107, 38-41-201 and 38-41-202, these liens are null and void and judicial liens. Lincoln v. Cherry Creek Homeowners Ass'n, 30 Bankr. 905 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Applied in Redin v. Fidelity Fin. Servs., 14 Bankr. 727 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

13-54.5-102. Continuing garnishment - creation of lien. (1) In addition to garnishment proceedings otherwise available under the laws of this state in any case in which a money judgment is obtained in a court of competent jurisdiction, the judgment creditor or its assignees shall be entitled, on notice to the judgment debtor required by section 13-54.5-105, to apply to the clerk of such court for garnishment against any garnishee. To the extent that the earnings are not exempt from garnishment, such garnishment shall be a lien and continuing levy upon the earnings due or to become due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor.

(2) Garnishment pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be a lien and continuing levy against said earnings due for one hundred eighty-two days following service of the writ or for one hundred eighty-two days following the expiration of any writs with a priority under section 13-54.5-104, but such lien shall be terminated earlier than one hundred eighty-two days if earnings are no longer due, the underlying judgment is vacated, modified, or satisfied in full, or the writ is dismissed; except that a continuing garnishment may be suspended for a specified period of time by the judgment creditor upon agreement with the judgment debtor, which agreement shall be in writing and filed by the judgment creditor with the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered and a copy of which shall be delivered by the judgment creditor to the garnishee.

Property or earnings subject to garnishment. (1) Any earnings owed by the garnishee to the judgment debtor at the time of service of the writ of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee and all earnings accruing from the garnishee to the judgment debtor from such date of service up to and including the ninetieth day thereafter shall be subject to the process of continuing garnishment. A garnishee shall not be required to collect, possess, or control the judgment debtor's tips, and any such tips shall not be owed by a garnishee to a judgment debtor.

(2) Any indebtedness, intangible personal property, or tangible personal property capable of manual delivery, other than earnings, owned by the judgment debtor and in the possession and control of the garnishee at the time of service of the writ of garnishment upon the garnishee shall be subject to the process of garnishment.

ANNOTATION

Not federally guaranteed student loan. Moneys in student's bank account, which are proceeds of federally guaranteed student loan, are not garnishable pursuant to a judgment based on antecedent business debt of student. Schaerrer v. Westman Comm'n Co., 769 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1989).

Judgment debtor's right to annual discretionary disbursement of the corpus of a trust is not a garnishable asset. The right to annual disbursement of funds from principal is a power of appointment, and a power of appointment is neither property nor a property right. Univ. Nat'l Bank v. Rhoadarmer, 827 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1991).

13-54.5-104. Priority between multiple garnishments. (1) (a) Only one writ of continuing garnishment against earnings due the judgment debtor shall be satisfied at one time. When more than one writ of continuing garnishment has been issued against earnings due the same judgment debtor, they shall be satisfied in the order of service on the garnishee. Except as provided in this subsection (1), a lien and continuing levy obtained pursuant to this article shall have priority over any subsequent garnishment lien or wage attachment.

(b) Where a continuing garnishment has been suspended for a specific period of time by agreement of the parties pursuant to the provisions of section 13-54.5-102 (2), such suspended continuing garnishment shall have priority over any writ of continuing garnishment served on the garnishee after such suspension has expired.

(c) (I) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection (1), a continuing garnishment obtained pursuant to section 14-14-105, C.R.S., for the satisfaction of debts or judgments for child support shall have priority over any other continuing garnishment.

(II) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection (1), a continuing garnishment obtained pursuant to section 26-2-128 (1) (a), C.R.S., for the satisfaction of a judgment for fraudulently obtained public assistance or fraudulently obtained overpayments has priority over any other continuing garnishment other than a garnishment for collection of child support under subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c).

(2) (a) Any writ of continuing garnishment served upon a garnishee while any previous writ is still in effect shall be answered by the garnishee with a statement that he has been served previously with one or more writs of continuing garnishment against earnings due the judgment debtor and specifying the date on which all such liens are expected to terminate.

(b) Upon the termination of a lien and continuing levy obtained pursuant to this article, any other writ of continuing garnishment which has been issued or which is issued subsequently against earnings due the judgment debtor shall have priority in the order of service on the garnishee, and no priority shall be given to any previous continuing lienholder whose lien has terminated. The person who serves a writ of continuing garnishment on a garnishee shall note the date and time of such service.

(1) (a) In a case of continuing garnishment where the judgment debtor objects to the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings, the judgment debtor shall have seven days from receipt of the copy of the writ of continuing garnishment required by section 13-54.5-105 within which to resolve the issue of such miscalculation, by agreement with the garnishee, during which time the garnishee shall not tender any moneys to the clerk of the court. If such objection is not resolved within seven days and after good faith effort, the judgment debtor may file a written objection with the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered setting forth with reasonable detail the grounds for such objection. The judgment debtor shall, by certified mail, return receipt requested, deliver immediately a copy of such objection to the judgment creditor or his or her attorney of record.

(b) In a case where a garnishee, pursuant to a writ of garnishment, holds any personal property of the judgment debtor other than earnings which the judgment debtor claims to be exempt, said judgment debtor, within fourteen days after being served with the notice of exemption and pending levy required by section 13-54.5-106, shall make and file with the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered a written claim of exemption setting forth with reasonable detail a description of the property claimed to be exempt, together with the grounds for such exemption. (3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, a judgment debtor failing to make a written objection or claim of exemption may, at any time within one hundred eighty-two days from receipt of a copy of the writ of continuing garnishment required by section 13-54.5-105 or from service of the notice of exemption and pending levy required by section 13-54.5-106 and for good cause shown, move the court in which the judgment was entered to hear an objection or a claim of exemption as to any earnings or property levied in garnishment, the amount of which the judgment debtor claims to have been miscalculated or which the judgment debtor claims to be exempt. Such hearing may be granted upon a showing of mistake, accident, surprise, irregularity in proceedings, newly discovered evidence, events not in the control of the judgment debtor, or such other grounds as the court may allow.

13-54.5-109. Hearing on objection or claim of exemption. (1) (a) Upon the filing of an objection pursuant to section 13-54.5-108 (1) (a) or the filing of a claim of exemption pursuant to section 13-54.5-108 (1) (b), the court in which the judgment was entered shall set a time for the hearing of such objection or claim, which shall be not more than fourteen days after filing. The clerk of the court where such objection or claim is filed shall immediately inform the judgment creditor or his or her attorney of record and the judgment debtor or his or her attorney of record by telephone, by mail, or in person of the date set for such hearing.

(b) The certificate of the clerk of the court that service of notice of such hearing has been made in the manner and form stated in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), which certificate has been attached to the court file, shall constitute prima facie evidence of such service, and such certificate of service filed with the clerk of the court is sufficient return of such service.

(2) Upon such hearing, the court shall summarily try and determine whether the amount of the judgment debtor's exempt earnings was correctly calculated by the garnishee or whether the property held by the garnishee is exempt and shall enter an order or judgment setting forth the determination of the court. If the amount of exempt earnings is found to have been miscalculated or if said property is found to be exempt, the court shall order the clerk of the court to remit the amount of over-garnished earnings, or the garnishee to remit such exempt property, to the judgment debtor within seven days.

(3) Where the judgment debtor moves the court to hear an objection or claim of exemption within the time provided by section 13-54.5-108 (3) and the judgment giving rise to such claim has been satisfied against property or earnings of the judgment debtor, the court shall hear and summarily try and determine whether the amount of the judgment debtor's earnings paid to the judgment creditor was correctly calculated and whether the judgment debtor's property sold in execution was exempt and shall issue an order setting forth the determination of the court. If such amount of earnings is found to have been miscalculated or if such property is found to be exempt, the court shall order the judgment creditor to remit the amount of the over-garnished earnings or such exempt property or the value thereof to the judgment debtor within seven days.

(4) Any order or judgment entered by the court as provided for in subsections (2) and (3) of this section is a final judgment or order for the purpose of appellate review.

13-55-102. Service of notice of levy. Notice of such levy or seizure of any property under a writ of execution, writ of attachment, or other order of court shall be served upon the defendant debtor by delivering a copy of such notice to the defendant debtor personally or by leaving a copy of such notice at the usual abode of the defendant debtor with some member of his family over the age of fifteen years. In the event the defendant is a nonresident, or absent from the state or conceals himself or herself so personal service cannot be had upon him or her, then service of such notice of levy or seizure shall be made by publication thereof for a period of fourteen days in some newspaper published in the county in which said property was so levied upon or seized, or, if there is no newspaper published in such county, then like publication shall be made in a newspaper in an adjoining county, and the clerk of the court of record shall mail a copy of such notice to the defendant debtor directed to him or her at his or her last-known address, postage prepaid. Such notice, with proof of service thereof and, in case of publication, affidavit of publication and affidavit of mailing of notice shall be filed with the clerk of the court of record from which such writ of execution, writ of attachment, or other order of court was issued.

ANNOTATION

This prescribed procedure must be strictly followed. The remedy of attachment is in derogation of the common law, and must be strictly followed. Any failure to conform to prescribed procedures, all being necessary and mandatory, is fatal and the writ is of no validity. Jayne v Peck, 155 Colo. 513, 395 P.2d 603 (1964).

13-55-103. Proceedings for sale stayed. Upon the filing of a written claim of exemption, all further proceedings with relation to the sale or other disposition of said property shall be stayed until the matter of such claim of exemption is determined.

13-55-104. Hearing on claim. (1) Upon the filing of such claim of exemption, the court of record shall set a time for the hearing of such claim of exemption, which shall not be less than seven days nor more than fourteen days thereafter. A written notice of the time and place of such hearing shall be given by the defendant or his or her attorney to the officer who made such levy or seizure, and to the plaintiff in said action or his or her attorney of record, by leaving a copy of such notice with said officer or his deputy at his office and by leaving a copy thereof with the plaintiff or his or her attorney of record, or notice may be given to the plaintiff by mailing a copy of such notice of hearing to the attorney of record of the plaintiff at least seven days in advance of date set for the hearing.

(2) The affidavit of the defendant or his attorney that service of notice of such hearing has been made in the manner and form stated, attached to the original notice, shall constitute prima facie evidence of such service, and such affidavit of service filed with the clerk of the court is sufficient return of such service. Such hearing may be continued from time to time in the discretion of the court. In case of the absence of the district judge from the county in which said claim of exemption has been filed with the clerk of the district court or in case of other inability of the district judge to act, the county judge of such county if possessing the qualifications of a district judge in cases of claims for exemption arising therein may set the time of hearing and hear and determine such claims, sitting as a judge of the district court, and his judgment, findings, or orders entered therein shall be of the same force and effect as though made by the district judge.

13-55-105. Court enters order or judgment. Upon such hearing, the court shall summarily try and determine the question as to whether or not the property, or any part thereof, so levied upon, seized, and taken into possession by the officer making such levy, as set forth in said written claim of exemption, is exempt and shall enter an order or judgment setting forth the determination of the court. If any of said property is found to be exempt, the court shall order the sheriff or other officer to return such property so found to be exempt to the defendant within forty-eight hours, unless same is ordered sold as provided in section 13-55-109.

13-55-106. Order or judgment is final. Any order or judgment entered by the court as provided for by section 13-55-105 is a final judgment or order for the purpose of appellate review.

13-55-107. Failure to claim - effect. In case the defendant debtor fails to make written claim of exemption as provided in section 13-55-101, he conclusively waives his right of exemption under the statutes of this state and has no right of action against the officer making such levy or seizure or against the plaintiff on account of such levy or seizure on the ground of levying upon exempt property.

Source: L. 35: p. 247, § 7. CSA: C. 93, § 36. CRS 53: § 77-4-7. C.R.S. 1963: § 77-4-7.

13-55-108. Damages. If, after hearing of claim of exemption, the court determines that the property levied upon and seized, or any part thereof, is exempt and the officer making the levy in all matters obeys and abides by the order or judgment of the court, no right of action for other than actual damages suffered by the defendant shall exist against said officer or the plaintiff on account of such levy or seizure upon the ground of levying upon or seizure of exempt property. If such officer does not return the property seized and so found to be exempt within forty-eight hours, unless same is ordered sold as provided in section 13-55-109, then he is liable in damages for three times the value of the property seized.

13-55-109. Court may order sale - proceeds. In case the court finds that a portion of such property is exempt to such value as is by statute fixed as being exempt but that the property seized is of a greater value and said property so seized cannot be readily divided, the court may order said property to be sold, and out of the first proceeds of said sale the defendant debtor shall be paid the amount, as is provided by statute, of his exemption. The disposal of the balance of the proceeds of said sale shall await the further order of the court. If such property is divisible, the court shall fix the value of each item thereof and shall require the defendant to select therefrom such items as the defendant may choose of an aggregate value not to exceed the amount of his exemptions, and the disposal of the balance of such property shall await the further order of the court. No sale of property seized or levied upon under a writ of attachment shall be ordered sold until after final judgment in said action has been rendered in favor of the plaintiff.

ANNOTATION

Failure to provide for homestead exemption deprived court of jurisdiction to proceed. Where, in its order authorizing the trustee to sell the interest of the bankrupt as well as the trustee's interest, the bankruptcy court failed to provide for separation of the proceeds and payment to bankrupt of the amount of the homestead, the bankruptcy court did not have jurisdiction of the property at the time of sale, and thus the sale by the bankruptcy court was void. Baker v. Allen, 34 Colo. App. 363, 528 P.2d 922 (1974).

CERTIFICATES OF LEVY

13-56-101. Certificate of levy - notice. When in any case a writ of attachment or a writ of execution is issued from any district or county court and a levy thereunder is made upon real estate, it is the duty of the sheriff or officer making the levy to file a certificate of such fact with the recorder of the county where such real estate is situate, and, from and after the filing, such levy shall take effect as to creditors and bona fide purchasers without notice and not before.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Foreclosures by the Public Trustee", see 9 Dicta 6 (1931). For article, "Executions and Levies on Tangible Property", see 27 Dicta 143 (1950).

The purpose of this section is to enable the creditor to seize property, and hold it for the satisfaction of the judgment to be obtained in the cause, and of course the lien of the attachment cannot be greater than the indebtedness stated in the affidavit and writ. Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392 (1874) (decided prior to L. 19, p. 295, § 1, the earliest source of § 13-56-101).

An imperfect statement may constitute notice. That the plaintiff, by an imperfect statement of his case, may give such notice of his right as will affect purchasers and creditors as well as the defendant in the cause, there is every reason to believe. If, for instance, the creditor should state the facts upon information and belief instead of upon his own knowledge, or if he should claim several distinct sums of money and then state the aggregate amount of them incorrectly, he would probably give to all full notice of his right, although not in the precise manner prescribed by the act. Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392 (1874).

and creditors who acquire an interest in the property during the pendency of the suit are entitled to stand upon the record as it existed at the time such interest was acquired, and, of course, they cannot be supposed to have knowledge of any matter of which the record does not advise them. Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392 (1874).

Purchasers are presumed to have knowledge of the filed statement. Whatever the rule may be as to the defendant, it is clear that purchasers of the attached property take it subject to the lien of the plaintiff for the sum stated in the affidavit and writ, with accruing interest, if he shall obtain judgment in that action for so much. To this extent, the record which is made for that purpose advises them of the incumbrance upon the property, and, therefore, they may be presumed to have knowledge of the fact. Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392 (1874).

Until creditors file their transcript or make a levy they have no lien on the real estate. Routt County Mining Co. v. Stutheit, 101 Colo. 254, 72 P.2d 692 (1937).

Applied in Baker v. Allen, 34 Colo. App. 363, 528 P.2d 922 (1974).

13-56-102. Writs from other county. Writs of attachment and writs of execution may issue from any district or county court of any county to the sheriff or other proper officer of such county or any other county, and, when in such cases a levy is made upon real estate in such other county, it is the duty of the sheriff or other officer making such levy to file a certificate of such fact with the recorder of his county, and, from and after the filing of the same, such levy shall take effect as to creditors and bona fide purchasers without notice and not before.

13-56-103. Lien of six years' duration. The lien of an attachment or execution levied on real estate shall continue for six years from the filing of the certificate thereof, as provided in section 13-56-101, unless the same is sooner released or discharged or unless the judgment in the case is satisfied.

13-56-104. Recorder to file and record. It is the duty of the recorder of the proper county to file and record the certificates mentioned in this part 1 in a book to be kept for that purpose, for which he shall be entitled to the same fees as for recording other papers, to be paid by the plaintiff in such execution or attachment and taxed and collected by the sheriff as other costs.

SALE OF LANDS

13-56-201. Hours - notice - penalty - irregularity. (1) No lands or tenements shall be sold by virtue of any execution unless such sale is at public venue and between the hours of nine in the morning and the setting of the sun on the same day nor unless the time and place of holding such sale has been previously advertised for the space of twenty days, by publishing notices of the time and place thereof in some daily or weekly newspaper printed and published in the county where such lands and tenements are situate or, if there is no such newspaper printed in the county, by posting such notices, printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, in three of the most public places in the county where the lands may be situated specifying the names of the plaintiff and defendant in the execution. In all such notices, the lands or tenements to be sold shall be described with reasonable certainty by setting forth their number or by some other appropriate description, and such notices shall comply with section 24-70-109, C.R.S.

(2) If any sheriff or other officer sells any lands or tenements by virtue of any such execution, otherwise than in the manner aforesaid, or without such previous notice, the sheriff or other officer so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars for every offense to be recovered, with costs of suit, in any court of record in this state by the person whose lands were advertised and sold. No such offense nor any irregularity on the part of the sheriff or other officer having the execution shall affect the validity of any sale made under it, unless it appears that the purchaser had notice of such irregularity.

Law reviews. For article, "Again — How Many Times?", see 21 Dicta 62 (1944). For article, "Executions and Levies on Tangible Property", see 27 Dicta 143 (1950).

Generally a successful bid becomes a final and binding purchase. When a judgment creditor or other party makes a successful bid and purchases property at a sheriff's execution sale, it becomes a final and binding purchase subject to the statutory rights of redemption. If later it is discovered that the amount bid was in excess of the value, the judgment creditor or other party is nevertheless bound by his bid and a court in the exercise of its equity jurisdiction cannot on this ground alone set aside a sheriff's execution sale. If, in addition, however, the excessive bid was made because of the proven fraud and false representations of the judgment debtor, who would benefit by a high bid, then the court may have sufficient grounds to nullify the sheriff's sale. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Benham, 163 Colo. 255, 430 P.2d 90 (1967).

Where no fraud exists, mistaken bid will not nullify sale. The property was adequately and fully described. Plaintiff mistakenly believed he was bidding on defendants' residence property, rather than on vacant land. No fraud is shown, and there exists no basis for nullifying the sheriff's execution sale. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Benham, 163 Colo. 255, 430 P.2d 90 (1967).

So ordinarily, inadequacy of price paid is not sufficient cause for setting aside a judicial sale. Generally in addition, it must appear that there were such irregularities in connection with the sale, or such fraud practiced, as tended to prevent the property levied upon from being sold at a fairly adequate price. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Benham, 163 Colo. 255, 430 P.2d 90 (1967).

The law does not recognize fractions of a day, and a notice published on February 16 was 20 days prior to the sale on March 8; and this section was observed. Leppel v. Kus, 38 Colo. 292, 88 P. 448 (1906).

ANNOTATION

A judgment lien which attaches to specific property of a party during his lifetime is not dissolved by his death, but survives and is enforceable against the real estate of the decedent, and such lien may be enforced by the lienholder without filing a claim against the estate and independently of the estate proceeding. Willis v. Neilson, 32 Colo. App. 129, 507 P.2d 1106 (1973).

13-58-102. Execution to issue after one year. When any judgment becomes a lien and the defendant dies before execution is issued thereon, the remedy of the person in whose favor the judgment has been rendered shall not be delayed nor suspended by reason of the nonage of any heir of such defendant. No execution shall issue upon such judgment until the expiration of one year after the death of the defendant, nor shall any law of this state which gives no preference to the claims of a creditor of a deceased debtor be so construed as to impair or affect the lien of any judgment.

ANNOTATION

The effect of this section is to make the judgment the property of the administrator. Being property it should be treated like other assets of the estate. Bright v. Schmitt, 76 Colo. 329, 231 P. 159 (1924).
Section applies only where the estate has an interest in the judgment. It is clear that this section only applies where the property in the judgment remains in the judgment plaintiff. The statute does not reach the case of a judgment plaintiff who has parted with all interest in the judgment by assignment. Christ v. Flannagan, 13 Colo. 140, 46 P. 683 (1896).

An assignee's right to execution on a judgment is not impaired by this section. Christ v. Flannagan, 23 Colo. 140, 46 P. 683 (1896).

13-58-104. Lien of judgment not abated by death. The lien created by law on property shall not abate or cease by reason of the death of any plaintiff, but the same shall survive in favor of the executor or administrator of the testator or intestate, whose duty it is to have the judgment enforced in the manner provided in section 13-58-103.

13-58-105. Administrator to buy on execution. When it is necessary in order to secure the collection of any judgment in favor of any executor or administrator, it is the duty of such executor or administrator to bid for and become the purchaser of real estate at a sheriff's sale, which real estate so purchased shall be assets in his hands and may be again sold by him upon the order of the court of probate, and the moneys arising from such sale shall be paid over and accounted for as other moneys in his hands.

Judgments Against Municipal Corporations

13-60-101. Levy to pay judgment against municipality - procedure.

13-60-101. Levy to pay judgment against municipality - procedure. (1) When a judgment for the payment of money is given and rendered against any municipal or quasi-municipal corporation of the state, or against any officer thereof, in an action prosecuted by or against him in his official capacity or name of office, such judgment being an obligation of such municipality, and when by reason of vacancy in office or for any other cause the duly constituted tax assessing and collecting officers fail or neglect to provide for the payment of such judgment or fail to make a tax levy to pay such judgment, the judgment creditor may file a transcript of such judgment with the board of county commissioners of the county, and counties if more than one, in which such public corporation is situated. Thereupon, the county commissioners shall levy a tax as provided in subsection (2) of this section upon all the taxable property within the limits of such public corporation for the purpose of making provision for the payment of such judgment, which tax shall be collected by the county treasurer, and, when collected by the county treasurer, it shall be paid over, as fast as collected by him, to the judgment creditor, or his assigns, upon the execution and delivery of proper vouchers therefor.

(2) The power conferred to pay such judgment by special levy of such tax is in addition to the taxing power given and granted to such public corporation to levy taxes for other purposes. The board of county commissioners shall levy under this section on all taxable property within said municipal or quasi-municipal corporation such taxes as are sufficient to discharge such judgment in the next fiscal year; but in no event shall such annual levy pursuant to this section and section 24-10-113, C.R.S., exceed a total of ten mills for one or more judgments, exclusive of mill levies for other purposes of such public corporation. The board of county commissioners shall continue to levy such taxes not to exceed a total of ten mills annually, exclusive of mill levies for other purposes of such public corporation, but in no event less than ten mills if such judgment will not be discharged by a lesser levy, until such judgment is discharged.

(3) Any taxes levied to pay the last payment upon or to pay any such judgment shall be valid, whether or not the sum sought to be raised thereby exceeds the sum due on such judgment, principal, and interest. Such excess of the sum required shall not exceed a sum equal to ten percent of such required sum, and no sale of real estate made to make such taxes shall be invalid by reason of such excess if the same is within said specified limit. All levies to pay judgments shall be made as near as possible to raise a sum equal to that due on the judgment to pay for which the tax is levied. Nevertheless, any excess levied, if such excess does not exceed ten percent of the sum due and desired to be paid, shall not invalidate any tax levy upon or tax sale of real or personal estate made to raise, make, or collect the sum due and excess. Any excess collected by the county treasurer remaining in his hands after paying all judgments in full, transcripts thereof having been filed with the county commissioners, shall be paid by him to the treasurer of such public corporation and become part of the general fund of such public corporation. This section shall not prevent said public corporation from paying any judgment from any other funds it may have in its treasury available for that purpose. The provisions of this section shall not apply to counties.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is derived from Section 1 of the Uniform Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act of 1962.

1. The defined terms "foreign state" and "foreign judgment" in the 1962 Act have been changed to "foreign country" and "foreign-country judgment" in order to make it clear that the Act does not apply to recognition of sister-state judgments. Some courts have noted that the "foreign state" and "foreign judgment" definitions of the 1962 Act have caused confusion as to whether the Act should apply to sister-state judgments because "foreign state" and "foreign judgment" are terms of art generally used in connection with recognition and enforcement of sister-state judgments. See, e.g., Eagle Leasing v. Amandus, 476 N.W.2d 35 (S.Ct. Iowa 1991) (reversing lower court's application of UFMJRA to a sister-state judgment, but noting lower court's confusion was understandable as "foreign judgment" is term of art normally applied to sister-state judgments). See also, Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act § 1 (defining "foreign judgment" as the judgment of a sister state or federal court).

The 1962 Act defines a "foreign state" as "any governmental unit other than the United States, or any state, district, commonwealth, territory, insular possession thereof, or the Panama Canal Zone, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, or the Ryuku Islands." Rather than simply updating the list in the 1962 Act's definition of "foreign state," the new definition of "foreign country" in this Act combines the "listing" approach of the 1962 Act's "foreign state" definition with a provision that defines "foreign country" in terms of whether the judgments of the particular government's courts are initially subject to the Full Faith and Credit Clause standards for determining whether those judgments will be recognized. Under this new definition, a governmental unit is a "foreign country" if it is (1) not the United States or a state, district, commonwealth, territory or insular possession of the United States; and (2) its judgments are not initially subject to Full Faith and Credit Clause standards.

The Full Faith and Credit Clause, Art. IV, section 1, provides that "Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State, and the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records, and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof." Whether the judgments of a governmental unit are subject to the Full Faith and Credit Clause may be determined by judicial interpretation of the Full Faith and Credit Clause or by statute, or by a combination of these two sources. For example, pursuant to the authority granted by the second sentence of the Full Faith and Credit Clause, Congress has passed 28 U.S.C.A. § 1738, which provides inter alia that court records from "any State, Territory, or Possession of the United States" are entitled to full faith and credit under the Full Faith and Credit Clause. In Stoll v. Gottlieb, 305 U.S. 165, 170 (1938), the United States Supreme Court held that this statute also requires that full faith and credit be given to judgments of federal courts. States also have made determinations as to whether certain types of judgments are subject to the Full Faith and Credit Clause. E.g. Day v. Montana Dept. Of Social & Rehab. Servs., 900 P.2d 296 (Mont. 1995) (tribal court judgment not subject to Full Faith and Credit, and should be treated with same deference shown foreign-country judgments). Under the definition of "foreign country" in this Act, the determination as to whether a governmental unit's judgments are subject to full faith and credit standards should be made by reference to any relevant law, whether statutory or decisional, that is applicable "in this state."

The definition of "foreign country" in terms of those judgments not subject to Full Faith and Credit standards also has the advantage of more effectively coordinating the Act with the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act. That Act, which establishes a registration procedure for the enforcement of sister state and equivalent judgments, defines a "foreign judgment" as "any judgment, decree, or order of a court of the United States or of any other court which is entitled to full faith and credit in this state." Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act, § 1 (1964). By defining "foreign country" in the Recognition Act in terms of those judgments not subject to full faith and credit standards, this Act makes it clear that the Enforcement Act and the Recognition Act are mutually exclusive - if a foreign money judgment is subject to full faith and credit standards, then the Enforcement Act's registration procedure is available with regard to its enforcement; if the foreign money judgment is not subject to full faith and credit standards, then the foreign money judgment may not be enforced until recognition of it has been obtained in accordance with the provisions of the Recognition Act.

2. The definition of "foreign-country judgment" in this Act differs significantly from the 1962 Act's definition of "foreign judgment." The 1962 Act's definition served in large part as a scope provision for the Act. The part of the definition defining the scope of the Act has been moved to section 3, which is the scope section.

3. The definition of "foreign-country judgment" in this Act refers to "a judgment" of "a court" of the foreign country. The foreign-country judgment need not take a particular form - any order or decree that meets the requirements of this section and comes within the scope of the Act under Section 3 is subject to the Act. Similarly, any competent government tribunal that issues such a "judgment" comes within the term "court" for purposes of this Act. The judgment, however, must be a judgment of an adjudicative body of the foreign country, and not the result of an alternative dispute mechanism chosen by the parties. Thus, foreign arbitral awards and agreements to arbitrate are not covered by this Act. They are governed instead by federal law, Chapter 2 of the U.S. Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 201-208, implementing the United Nations Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards and Chapter 3 of the U.S. Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 301-307, implementing the Inter-American Convention on International Commercial Arbitration. A judgment of a foreign court confirming or setting aside an arbitral award, however, would be covered by this Act.

4. The definition of “foreign-country judgment” does not limit foreign-country judgments to those rendered in litigation between private parties. Judgments in which a governmental entity is a party also are included, and are subject to this Act if they meet the requirements of this section and are within the scope of the Act under Section 3.

ANNOTATION

Annotator’s note. Since § 13-62-102 is similar to § 13-62-102 as it existed prior to the 2008 repeal and reenactment of article 62 of title 13, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Definition of “foreign state” requires that the foreign government has entered into a reciprocity agreement with the United States before judgments from its courts will be recognized in Colorado. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

Reciprocity requirement in definition of “foreign state” does not necessarily render the act meaningless. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-62-103. Applicability. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, this article applies to a foreign-country judgment to the extent that the judgment:

- (a) Grants or denies recovery of a sum of money; and
- (b) Under the law of the foreign country where rendered, is final, conclusive, and enforceable.

(2) This article does not apply to a foreign-country judgment, even if the judgment grants or denies recovery of a sum of money, to the extent that the judgment is:

- (a) A judgment for taxes;
- (b) A fine or other penalty; or
- (c) A judgment for divorce, support, or maintenance, or other judgment rendered in connection with domestic relations.

(3) A party seeking recognition of a foreign-country judgment has the burden of establishing that this article applies to the foreign-country judgment.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is based on Section 2 of the 1962 Act. Subsection (b) contains material that was included as part of the definition of “foreign judgment” in Section 1(2) of the 1962 Act. Subsection (c) is new.

1. Like the 1962 Act, this Act sets out in subsection 3(a) two basic requirements that a foreign-country judgment must meet before it comes within the scope of this Act - the foreign-country judgment must (1) grant or deny recovery of a sum of money and (2) be final, conclusive and enforceable under the law of the foreign country where it was rendered. Subsection 3(b) then sets out three types of foreign-country judgments that are excluded from the coverage of this Act, even though they meet the criteria of subsection 3(a) - judgments for taxes, judgments constituting fines and other penalties, and judgments in domestic relations matters. These exclusions are comparable to those contained in Section 1(2) of the 1962 Act.

2. This Act applies to a foreign-country judgment only to the extent the foreign-country judgment grants or denies recovery of a sum of money. If a foreign-country judgment both grants or denies recovery of a sum of money and provides for some other form of relief, this Act would apply to the portion of the judgment that grants or denies monetary relief, but not to the portion that provides for some other form of relief. The U.S. court, however, would be left free to decide to recognize and enforce the non-monetary portion of the judgment under principles of comity or other applicable law. See Section 11.

3. In order to come within the scope of this Act, a foreign-country judgment must be final, conclusive, and enforceable under the law of the foreign country in which it was rendered. This requirement contains three distinct, although inter-related concepts. A judgment is final when it is not subject to additional proceedings in the rendering court other than execution. A judgment is conclusive when it is given effect between the parties as a determination of their legal rights and obligations. A judgment is enforceable when the legal procedures of the state to ensure that the judgment debtor complies with the judgment are available to the judgment creditor to assist in collection of the judgment.

While the first two of these requirements - finality and conclusiveness - will apply with regard to every foreign-country money judgment, the requirement of enforceability is only relevant when the judgment is one granting recovery of a sum of money. A judgment denying a sum of money obviously is not subject to enforcement procedures, as there is no monetary award to enforce. This Act, however, covers both judgments granting and those denying recovery of a sum of money. Thus, the fact that a foreign-country judgment denying recovery of a sum of money is not enforceable does not mean that such judgments are not within the scope of the Act. Instead, the requirement that the judgment be enforceable should be read to mean that, if the foreign-country judgment grants recovery of a sum of money, it must be enforceable in the foreign country in order to be within the scope of the Act.

Like the 1962 Act, subsection 3(b) requires that the determinations as to finality, conclusiveness and enforceability be made using the law of the foreign country in which the judgment was rendered. Unless the foreign-country judgment is final, conclusive, and (to the extent it grants recovery of a sum of money) enforceable in the foreign country where it was rendered, it will not be within the scope of this Act.

4. Subsection 3(b) follows the 1962 Act by excluding three categories of foreign-country money judgments from the scope of the Act - judgments for taxes, judgments that constitute fines and penalties, and judgments in domestic relations matters. The domestic relations exclusion has been redrafted to make it clear that all judgments in domestic relations matters are excluded from the Act, not just judgments "for support" as provided in the 1962 Act. This is consistent with interpretation of the 1962 Act by the courts, which extended the "support" exclusion in the 1962 Act beyond its literal wording to exclude other money judgments in connection with domestic matters. E.g., Wolff v. Wolff, 389 A.2d 413 (My. App. 1978) ("support" includes alimony).

Recognition and enforcement of domestic relations judgments traditionally has been treated differently from recognition and enforcement of other judgments. The considerations with regard to those judgments, particularly with regard to jurisdiction and finality, differ from those with regard to other money judgments. Further, national laws with regard to domestic relations vary widely, and recognition and enforcement of such judgments thus is more appropriately handled through comity than through use of this uniform Act. Finally, other statutes, such as the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act and the federal International Child Support Enforcement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 659a (1996), address various aspects of the recognition and enforcement of domestic relations awards. Under Section 11 of this Act, courts are free to recognize money judgments in domestic relations matters under principles of comity or otherwise, and U.S. courts routinely enforce money judgments in domestic relations matters under comity principles.

Foreign-country judgments for taxes and judgments that constitute fines or penalties traditionally have not been recognized and enforced in U.S. courts. See, e.g., Restatement Third of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 483 (1986). Both the "revenue rule," under which the courts of one country will not enforce the revenue laws of another country, and the prohibition on enforcement of penal judgments seem to be grounded in the idea that one country does not enforce the public laws of another. See id. Reporters' Note 2. The exclusion of tax judgments and judgments constituting fines or penalties from the scope of the Act reflects this tradition. Under Section 11, however, courts remain free to consider whether such judgments should be recognized and enforced under comity or other principles.

A judgment for taxes is a judgment in favor of a foreign country or one of its subdivisions based on a claim for an assessment of a tax. Thus, a judgment awarding a plaintiff restitution of the purchase price paid for an item would not be considered in any part a judgment for taxes, even though one element of the recovery was the sales tax paid by the plaintiff at the time of purchase. Such a judgment would not be one designed to enforce the revenue laws of the foreign country, but rather one designed to compensate the plaintiff. Courts generally hold that the test for whether a judgment is a fine or penalty is determined by whether its purpose is remedial in nature, with its benefits accruing to private individuals, or it is penal in nature, punishing an offense against public justice. E.g., Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. Hoffman, 665 F.Supp 73 (D. Mass. 1987) (finding that Belgium judgment was not penal even though the proceeding forming the basis of the suit was primarily criminal where Belgium court considered damage petition a civil remedy, the judgment did not constitute punishment for an offense against public justice of Belgium, and benefit of the judgment accrued to private judgment creditor, not Belgium). Thus, a judgment that awards compensation or restitution for the benefit of private individuals should not automatically be considered penal in nature and therefore outside the scope of the Act simply because the action is brought on behalf of the private individuals by a government entity. Cf. U.S.-Australia Free Trade Agreement, art.14.7.2, U.S.-Austl., May 18, 2004 (providing that when government agency obtains a civil monetary judgment for purpose of providing restitution to consumers, investors, or customers who suffered economic harm due to fraud, judgment generally should not be denied recognition and enforcement on ground that it is penal or revenue in nature, or based on other foreign public law).

5. Under subsection 3(b), a foreign-country money judgment is not within the scope of this Act "to the extent" that it comes within one of the excluded categories. Therefore, if a foreign-country money judgment is only partially within one of the excluded categories, the non-excluded portion will be subject to this Act.

6. Subsection 3(c) is new. The 1962 Act does not expressly allocate the burden of proof with regard to establishing whether a foreign-country judgment is within the scope of the Act. Courts applying the 1962 Act generally have held that the burden of proof is on the person seeking recognition to establish that the judgment is final, conclusive and enforceable where rendered. E.g., Mayekawa Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Sasaki, 888 P.2d 183, 189 (Wash. App. 1995) (burden of proof on creditor to establish judgment is final, conclusive, and enforceable where rendered); Bridgeway Corp. v. Citibank, 45 F.Supp.2d 276, 285 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (party seeking recognition must establish that there is a final judgment, conclusive and enforceable where rendered); S.C.Chimexim S.A. v. Velco Enterprises, Ltd., 36 F. Supp.2d 206, 212 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (Plaintiff has the burden of establishing conclusive effect). Subsection (3)(c) places the burden of proof to establish whether a foreign-country judgment is within the scope of the Act on the party seeking recognition of the foreign-country judgment with regard to both subsection (a) and subsection (b).

13-62-104. Standards for recognition of foreign-country judgment. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, a court of this state shall recognize a foreign-country judgment to which this article applies.

(2) A court of this state may not recognize a foreign-country judgment if:

(a) The judgment was rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law;

(b) The foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant; or

(c) The foreign court did not have jurisdiction over the subject matter.

(3) A court of this state need not recognize a foreign-country judgment if:

(a) The defendant in the proceeding in the foreign court did not receive notice of the proceeding in sufficient time to enable the defendant to defend;

(b) The judgment was obtained by fraud that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case;

(c) The judgment or the claim for relief on which the judgment is based is repugnant to the public policy of this state or of the United States;

(d) The judgment conflicts with another final and conclusive judgment;

(e) The proceeding in the foreign court was contrary to an agreement between the parties under which the dispute in question was to be determined otherwise than by proceedings in that foreign court;

(f) In the case of jurisdiction based only on personal service, the foreign court was a seriously inconvenient forum for the trial of the action;

(g) The judgment was rendered in circumstances that raise substantial doubt about the integrity of the rendering court with respect to the judgment; or

(h) The specific proceeding in the foreign court leading to the judgment was not compatible with the requirements of due process of law.

(4) A party resisting recognition of a foreign-country judgment has the burden of establishing that a ground for nonrecognition stated in subsection (2) or (3) of this section exists.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is based on Section 4 of the 1962 Act.

1. This Section provides the standards for recognition of a foreign-country money judgment.

ment. Section 7 sets out the effect of recognition of a foreign-country money judgment under this Act.

2. Recognition of a judgment means that the forum court accepts the determination of legal rights and obligations made by the rendering court in the foreign country. See, e.g. Restatement (Second) of Conflicts of Laws, Ch. 5, Topic 3, Introductory Note (recognition of foreign judgment occurs to the extent the forum court gives the judgment “the same effect with respect to the parties, the subject matter of the action and the issues involved that it has in the state where it was rendered.”) Recognition of a foreign-country judgment must be distinguished from enforcement of that judgment. Enforcement of the foreign-country judgment involves the application of the legal procedures of the state to ensure that the judgment debtor obeys the foreign-country judgment. Recognition of a foreign-country money judgment often is associated with enforcement of the judgment, as the judgment creditor usually seeks recognition of the foreign-country judgment primarily for the purpose of invoking the enforcement procedures of the forum state to assist the judgment creditor’s collection of the judgment from the judgment debtor. Because the forum court cannot enforce the foreign-country judgment until it has determined that the judgment will be given effect, recognition is a prerequisite to enforcement of the foreign-country judgment. Recognition, however, also has significance outside the enforcement context because a foreign-country judgment also must be recognized before it can be given preclusive effect under res judicata and collateral estoppel principles. The issue of whether a foreign-country judgment will be recognized is distinct from both the issue of whether the judgment will be enforced, and the issue of the extent to which it will be given preclusive effect.

3. Subsection 4(a) places an affirmative duty on the forum court to recognize a foreign-country money judgment unless one of the grounds for nonrecognition stated in subsection (b) or (c) applies. Subsection (b) states three mandatory grounds for denying recognition to a foreign-country money judgment. If the forum court finds that one of the grounds listed in subsection (b) exists, then it must deny recognition to the foreign-country money judgment. Subsection (c) states eight nonmandatory grounds for denying recognition. The forum court has discretion to decide whether or not to refuse recognition based on one of these grounds. Subsection (d) places the burden of proof on the party resisting recognition of the foreign-country judgment to establish that one of the grounds for nonrecognition exists.

4. The mandatory grounds for nonrecognition stated in subsection (b) are identical to the mandatory grounds stated in Section 4 of the 1962 Act. The discretionary grounds stated in subsection 4(c)(1) through (6) are based on subsection 4(b)(1) through (6) of the 1962 Act. The discretionary grounds stated in subsection 4(c)(7) and (8) are new.

5. Under subsection (b)(1), the forum court must deny recognition to the foreign-country money judgment if that judgment was “rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law.” The standard for this ground for nonrecognition “has been stated authoritatively by the Supreme Court of the United States in Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S.113, 205 (1895). As indicated in that decision, a mere difference in the procedural system is not a sufficient basis for nonrecognition. A case of serious injustice must be involved.” Cmt § 4, Uniform Foreign Money-Judgment Recognition Act (1962). The focus of inquiry is not whether the procedure in the rendering country is similar to U.S. procedure, but rather on the basic fairness of the foreign-country procedure. Kam-Tech Systems, Ltd. v. Yardeni, 74 A.2d 644, 649 (N.J. App. 2001) (interpreting the comparable provision in the 1962 Act); accord, Society of Lloyd’s v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473 (7th Cir. 2000) (procedures need not meet all the intricacies of the complex concept of due process that has emerged from U.S. case law, but rather must be fair in the broader international sense) (interpreting comparable provision in the 1962 Act). Procedural differences, such as absence of jury trial or different evidentiary rules are not sufficient to justify denying recognition under subsection (b)(1), so long as the essential elements of impartial administration and basic procedural fairness have been provided in the foreign proceeding. As the U.S. Supreme Court stated in Hilton:

Where there has been opportunity for a full and fair trial abroad before a court of competent jurisdiction conducting the trial upon regular proceedings, after due citation or voluntary appearance of the defendant, and under a system of jurisprudence likely to secure an impartial administration of justice between the citizens of its own country and those of other countries, and there is nothing to show either prejudice in the court, or in the system of laws under which it was sitting, or fraud in procuring the judgment, or any other special reason why the comity of this nation should not allow it full effect then a foreign-country judgment should be recognized. Hilton, 159 U.S. at 202.

6. Under section 4(b)(2), the forum court must deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Section 5(a) lists six bases for personal jurisdiction that are adequate as a matter of law to establish that the foreign court had personal jurisdiction. Section 5(b) makes clear that other grounds for personal jurisdiction may be found sufficient.

7. Subsection 4(c)(2) limits the type of fraud that will serve as a ground for denying recognition to extrinsic fraud. This provision is consistent with the interpretation of the comparable provision in subsection 4(b)(2) of the 1962 Act by the courts, which have found that only extrinsic fraud - conduct of the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case - is sufficient under the 1962 Act. Examples of extrinsic fraud would be when the plaintiff deliberately had the initiating process served on the defendant at the wrong address, deliberately gave the defendant wrong information as to the time and place of the hearing, or obtained a default judgment against the defendant based on a forged confession of judgment. When this type of fraudulent action by the plaintiff deprives the defendant of an adequate opportunity to present its case, then it provides grounds for denying recognition of the foreign-country judgment. Extrinsic fraud should be distinguished from intrinsic fraud, such as false testimony of a witness or admission of a forged document into evidence during the foreign proceeding. Intrinsic fraud does not provide a basis for denying recognition under subsection 4(c)(2), as the assertion that intrinsic fraud has occurred should be raised and dealt with in the rendering court.

8. The public policy exception in subsection 4(c)(3) is based on the public policy exception in subsection 4(b)(3) of the 1962 Act, with one difference. The public policy exception in the 1962 Act states that the relevant inquiry is whether "the [cause of action] [claim for relief] on which the judgment is based" is repugnant to public policy. Based on this "cause of action" language, some courts interpreting the 1962 Act have refused to find that a public policy challenge based on something other than repugnancy of the foreign cause of action comes within this exception. E.g., Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co., Inc. v. Ramon, 169 F.3d 317, (5th Cir. 1999) (refusing to deny recognition to Mexican judgment on promissory note with interest rate of 48 % because cause of action to collect on promissory note does not violate public policy); Guinness PLC v. Ward, 955 F.2d 875 (4th Cir. 1992) (challenge to recognition based on post-judgment settlement could not be asserted under public policy exception); The Society of Lloyd's v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325 (5th Cir. 2002) (rejecting argument legal standards applied to establish elements of breach of contract violated public policy because cause of action for breach of contract itself is not contrary to state public policy); cf. Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992) (judgment creditor argued British libel judgment should be recognized despite argument it violated First Amendment because New York recognizes a cause of action for libel). Subsection 4(c)(3) rejects this narrow focus by providing that the forum court may deny recognition if either the cause of action or the judgment itself violates public policy. Cf. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, § 482(2)(d) (1986) (containing a similarly-worded public policy exception to recognition).

Although subsection 4(c)(3) of this Act rejects the narrow focus on the cause of action under the 1962 Act, it retains the stringent test for finding a public policy violation applied by courts interpreting the 1962 Act. Under that test, a difference in law, even a marked one, is not sufficient to raise a public policy issue. Nor is it relevant that the foreign law allows a recovery that the forum state would not allow. Public policy is violated only if recognition or enforcement of the foreign-country judgment would tend clearly to injure the public health, the public morals, or the public confidence in the administration of law, or would undermine "that sense of security for individual rights, whether of personal liberty or of private property, which any citizen ought to feel." Hunt v. BP Exploration Co. (Libya) Ltd., 492 F. Supp. 885, 901 (N.D. Tex. 1980).

The language "or of the United States" in subsection 4(c)(3), which does not appear in the 1962 Act provision, makes it clear that the relevant public policy is that of both the State in which recognition is sought and that of the United States. This is the position taken by the vast majority of cases interpreting the 1962 public policy provision. E.g., Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup.Ct. N.Y. 1992) (British libel judgment denied recognition because it violates First Amendment).

9. Subsection 4(c)(5) allows the forum court to refuse recognition of a foreign-country judgment when the parties had a valid agreement, such as a valid forum selection clause or agreement to arbitrate, providing that the relevant dispute would be resolved in a forum other than the forum issuing the foreign-country judgment. Under this provision, the forum court must find both the existence of a valid agreement and that the agreement covered the subject matter involved in the foreign litigation resulting in the foreign-country judgment.

10. Subsection 4(c)(6) authorizes the forum court to refuse recognition of a foreign-country judgment that was rendered in the foreign country solely on the basis of personal service when the forum court believes the original action should have been dismissed by the court in the foreign country on grounds of forum non conveniens.

11. Subsection 4(c)(7) is new. Under this subsection, the forum court may deny recognition to a foreign-country judgment if there are circumstances that raise substantial doubt about the integrity of the rendering court with respect to that judgment. It requires a showing of corruption in the particular case that had an impact on the judgment that was rendered. This provision may be contrasted with subsection 4(b)(1), which requires that the forum court refuse recognition to the foreign-country judgment if it was rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals. Like the comparable provision in subsection 4(a)(1) of the 1962 Act, subsection 4(b)(1) focuses on the judicial system of the foreign country as a whole, rather than on whether the particular judicial proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment was impartial and fair. See, e.g., The Society of Lloyd's v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); CIBC Mellon Trust Co. v. Mora Hotel Corp., N.V., 743 N.Y.S.2d 408, 415 (N.Y. App. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); Society of Lloyd's v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473, 477 (7th Cir. 2000) (interpreting the 1962 Act). On the other hand, subsection 4(c)(7) allows the court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if it finds a lack of impartiality and fairness of the tribunal in the individual proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that corruption and bribery is so prevalent throughout the judicial system of the foreign country as to make that entire judicial system one that does not provide impartial tribunals versus showing that bribery of the judge in the proceeding that resulted in the particular foreign-country judgment under consideration had a sufficient impact on the ultimate judgment as to call it into question.

12. Subsection 4(c)(8) also is new. It allows the forum court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the court finds that the specific proceeding in the foreign court was not compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. Like subsection 4(c)(7), it can be contrasted with subsection 4(b)(1), which requires the forum court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the forum court finds that the entire judicial system in the foreign country where the foreign-country judgment was rendered does not provide procedures compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. While the focus of subsection 4(b)(1) is on the foreign country's judicial system as a whole, the focus of subsection 4(c)(8) is on the particular proceeding that resulted in the specific foreign-country judgment under consideration. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that there has been such a breakdown of law and order in the particular foreign country that judgments are rendered on the basis of political decisions rather than the rule of law throughout the judicial system versus a showing that for political reasons the particular party against whom the foreign-country judgment was entered was denied fundamental fairness in the particular proceedings leading to the foreign-country judgment.

Subsections 4(c)(7) and (8) both are discretionary grounds for denying recognition, while subsection 4(b)(1) is mandatory. Obviously, if the entire judicial system in the foreign country fails to satisfy the requirements of impartiality and fundamental fairness, a judgment rendered in that foreign country would be so compromised that the forum court should refuse to recognize it as a matter of course. On the other hand, if the problem is evidence of a lack of integrity or fundamental fairness with regard to the particular proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment, then there may or may not be other factors in the particular case that would cause the forum court to decide to recognize the foreign-country judgment. For example, a forum court might decide not to exercise its discretion to deny recognition despite evidence of corruption or procedural unfairness in a particular case because the party resisting recognition failed to raise the issue on appeal from the foreign-country judgment in the foreign country, and the evidence establishes that, if the party had done so, appeal would have been an adequate mechanism for correcting the transgressions of the lower court.

13. Under subsection 4(d), the party opposing recognition of the foreign-country judgment has the burden of establishing that one of the grounds for nonrecognition set out in subsection 4(b) or (c) applies. The 1962 Act was silent as to who had the burden of proof to establish a ground for nonrecognition and courts applying the 1962 Act took different positions on the issue. Compare Bridgeway Corp. v. Citibank, 45 F.Supp. 2d 276, 285 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (plaintiff has burden to show no mandatory basis under 4(a) for nonrecognition exists; defendant has burden regarding discretionary bases) with The Courage Co. LLC v. The ChemShare Corp., 93 S.W.3d 323, 331 (Tex. App. 2002) (party seeking to avoid recognition has burden to prove ground for nonrecognition). Because the grounds for nonrecognition in Section 4 are in the nature of defenses to recognition, the burden of proof is most appropriately allocated to the party opposing recognition of the foreign-country judgment.

ANNOTATION

Foreign judgments recognized under principles of comity are entitled to full faith and credit. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo.

App. 1995) (decided prior to 2008 repeal and reenactment).

13-62-105. Personal jurisdiction. (1) A foreign-country judgment may not be refused recognition for lack of personal jurisdiction if:

- (a) The defendant was served with process personally in the foreign country;
- (b) The defendant voluntarily appeared in the proceeding, other than for the purpose of protecting property seized or threatened with seizure in the proceeding or of contesting the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant;
- (c) The defendant, before the commencement of the proceeding, had agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign court with respect to the subject matter involved;
- (d) The defendant was domiciled in the foreign country when the proceeding was instituted or was a corporation or other form of business organization that had its principal place of business in, or was organized under the laws of, the foreign country;
- (e) The defendant had a business office in the foreign country and the proceeding in the foreign court involved a claim for relief arising out of business done by the defendant through that office in the foreign country; or
- (f) The defendant operated a motor vehicle or airplane in the foreign country and the proceeding involved a claim for relief arising out of that operation.

(2) The list of bases for personal jurisdiction in subsection (1) of this section is not exclusive. The courts of this state may recognize bases of personal jurisdiction other than those listed in subsection (1) of this section as sufficient to support a foreign-country judgment.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This provision is based on Section 5 of the 1962 Act. Its substance is the same as that of Section 5 of the 1962 Act, except as noted in Comment 2 below with regard to subsection 5(a)(4).

1. Under section 4(b)(2), the forum court must deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Section 5(a) lists six bases for personal jurisdiction that are adequate as a matter of law to establish that the foreign court had personal jurisdiction. Section 5(b) makes it clear that these bases of personal jurisdiction are not exclusive. The forum court may find that the foreign court had personal jurisdiction over the defendant on some other basis.

2. Subsection 5(a)(4) of the 1962 Act provides that the foreign court had personal jurisdiction over the defendant if the defendant was

“a body corporate” that “had its principal place of business, was incorporated, or had otherwise acquired corporate status, in the foreign state.” Subsection 5(a)(4) of this Act extends that concept to forms of business organization other than corporations.

3. Subsection 5(a)(3) provides that the foreign court has personal jurisdiction over the defendant if the defendant agreed before commencement of the proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign court with regard to the subject matter involved. Under this provision, the forum court must find both the existence of a valid agreement to submit to the foreign court’s jurisdiction and that the agreement covered the subject matter involved in the foreign litigation resulting in the foreign-country judgment.

13-62-106. Procedure for recognition of foreign-country judgment. (1) If recognition of a foreign-country judgment is sought as an original matter, the issue of recognition shall be raised by filing an action seeking recognition of the foreign-country judgment.

(2) If recognition of a foreign-country judgment is sought in a pending action, the issue of recognition may be raised by counterclaim, cross-claim, or affirmative defense.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is new.

1. Unlike the 1962 Act, which was silent as to the proper procedure for seeking recognition of a foreign-country judgment, Section 6 of this Act expressly sets out the ways in which the issue of recognition may be raised. Under section 6, the issue of recognition always must be raised in a court proceeding. Thus, section 6 rejects decisions under the 1962 Act holding that the registration procedure found in the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act could be utilized with regard to recognition of a foreign-country judgment. E.g. Society of Lloyd's v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473 (7th Cir. 2000). The Enforcement Act deals solely with the enforcement of sister-state judgments and other judgments entitled to full faith and credit, not with the recognition of foreign-country judgments.

More broadly, section 6 rejects the use of any registration procedure in the context of the foreign-country judgments covered by this Act. A registration procedure represents a balance between the interest of the judgment creditor in obtaining quick and efficient recognition and enforcement of a judgment when the judgment debtor has already been provided with an opportunity to litigate the underlying issues, and the interest of the judgment debtor in being provided an adequate opportunity to raise and litigate issues regarding whether the foreign-country judgment should be recognized. In the context of sister-state judgments, this balance favors use of a truncated procedure such as that found in the Enforcement Act. Recognition of sister-state judgments normally is mandated by the Full Faith and Credit Clause. Courts recognize only a very limited number of grounds for denying full faith and credit to a sister-state judgment - that the rendering court lacked jurisdiction, that the judgment was procured by fraud, that the judgment has been satisfied, or that the limitations period has expired. Thus, the judgment debtor with regard to a sister-state judgment normally does not have any grounds for opposing recognition and enforcement of the judgment. The extremely limited grounds for denying full faith and credit to a sister-state judgment reflect the fact such judgments will have been rendered by a court that is subject to the same due process limitations and the same overlap of federal statutory and constitutional law as the forum state's courts, and, to a large extent, the same body of court precedent and socio-economic ideas as those shaping the law of the forum state. Therefore, there is a strong presumption of fairness and competence attached to a sister-state judgment that justifies use of a registration procedure.

The balance between the benefits and costs of a registration procedure is significantly different, however, in the context of recognition and enforcement of foreign-country judgments. Unlike the limited grounds for denying full faith and credit to a sister-state judgment, this Act provides a number of grounds upon which recognition of a foreign-country judgment may be denied. Determination of whether these grounds apply requires the forum court to look behind the foreign-country judgment to evaluate the law and the judicial system under which the foreign-country judgment was rendered. The existence of these grounds for nonrecognition reflects the fact there is less expectation that foreign-country courts will follow procedures comporting with U.S. notions of fundamental fairness and jurisdiction or that those courts will apply laws viewed as substantively tolerable by U.S. standards than there is with regard to sister-state courts. In some situations, there also may be suspicions of corruption or fraud in the foreign-country proceedings. These differences between sister-state judgments and foreign-country judgments provide a justification for requiring judicial involvement in the decision whether to recognize a foreign-country judgment in all cases in which that issue is raised. Although the threshold for establishing that a foreign-country judgment is not entitled to recognition under Section 4 is high, there is a sufficiently greater likelihood that significant recognition issues will be raised so as to require a judicial proceeding.

2. This Section contemplates that the issue of recognition may be raised either as an original matter or in the context of a pending proceeding. Subsection 6(a) provides that in order to raise the issue of recognition of a foreign-country judgment as an initial matter, the party seeking recognition must file an action for recognition of the foreign-country judgment. Subsection 6(b) provides that when the recognition issue is raised in a pending proceeding, it may be raised by counterclaim, cross-claim or affirmative defense, depending on the context in which it is raised. These rules are consistent with the way the issue of recognition most often was raised in most states under the 1962 Act.

3. An action seeking recognition of a foreign-country judgment under this Section is an action on the foreign-country judgment itself, not an action on the underlying cause of action that gave rise to that judgment. The parties to an action under Section 6 may not relitigate the merits of the underlying dispute that gave rise to the foreign-country judgment.

4. While this Section sets out the ways in which the issue of recognition of a foreign-country judgment may be raised, it is not intended to create any new procedure not currently existing in the state or to otherwise effect existing state procedural requirements. The parties to an action in which recognition of a for-foreign-country judgment is sought under Section 6 must comply with all state procedural rules with regard to that type of action. Nor does this Act address the question of what constitutes a sufficient basis for jurisdiction to adjudicate with regard to an action under Section 6. Courts have split over the issue of whether the presence of assets of the debtor in a state is a sufficient basis for jurisdiction in light of footnote 36 of the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 210 n.36 (1977). This Act takes no position on that issue.

5. In states that have adopted the Uniform Foreign-Money Claims Act, that Act will apply to the determination of the amount of a money judgment recognized under this Act.

13-62-107. Effect of recognition of foreign-country judgment. (1) If the court in a proceeding under section 13-62-106 finds that the foreign-country judgment is entitled to recognition under this article then, to the extent that the foreign-country judgment grants or denies recovery of a sum of money, the foreign-country judgment is:

(a) Conclusive between the parties to the same extent as the judgment of a sister state entitled to full faith and credit in this state would be conclusive; and

(b) Enforceable in the same manner and to the same extent as a judgment rendered in this state.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: The substance of subsection 7(1) is based on Section 3 of the 1962 Act. Subsection 7(2) is new.

1. Section 5 of this Act sets out the standards for the recognition of foreign-country judgments within the scope of this Act, and places an affirmative duty on the forum court to recognize any foreign-country judgment that meets those standards. Section 6 of this Act sets out the procedures by which the issue of recognition may be raised. This Section sets out the consequences of the decision by the forum court that the foreign-country judgment is entitled to recognition.

2. Under subsection 7(1), the first consequence of recognition of a foreign-country judgment is that it is treated as conclusive between the parties in the forum state. Section 7(1) does not attempt to establish directly the extent of that conclusiveness. Instead, it provides that the foreign-country judgment is treated as conclusive to the same extent that a judgment of a sister state that had been determined to be entitled to full faith and credit would be conclusive. This means that the foreign-country judgment generally will be given the same effect in the forum state that it has in the foreign country where it was rendered. Subsection 7(1), however, sets out the minimum effect that must be given to the foreign-country judgment once recognized. The forum court remains free to give the foreign-country judgment a greater preclusive effect in the forum state than the judgment would have in the foreign country where it was rendered. Cf. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, § 481 cmt c (1986).

3. Under subsection 7(2), the second consequence of recognition of a foreign-country judgment is that, to the extent it grants a sum of money, it is enforceable in the forum state in accordance with the procedures for enforcement in the forum state and to the same extent that a judgment of the forum state would be enforceable. Cf. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 481 (1986) (judgment entitled to recognition is enforceable in accordance with the procedure for enforcement of judgments applicable where enforcement is sought). Thus, under subsection 7(2), once recognized, the foreign-country judgment has the same effect and is subject to the same procedures, defenses and proceedings for reopening, vacating, or staying a judgment of a comparable court in the forum state, and can be enforced or satisfied in the same manner as such a judgment of the forum state.

13-62-108. Stay of proceedings pending appeal of foreign-country judgment. If a party establishes that an appeal from a foreign-country judgment is pending or will be taken, the court may stay any proceedings with regard to the foreign-country judgment until the appeal is concluded, the time for appeal expires, or the appellant has had sufficient time to prosecute the appeal and has failed to do so.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is the same substantively as section 6 of the 1962 Act, except that it adds as an additional measure for the duration of the stay "the time for appeal expires."

1. Under Section 3 of this Act, a foreign-country judgment is not within the scope of this Act unless it is conclusive and enforceable where rendered. Thus, if the effect of appeal under the law of the foreign country in which the judgment was rendered is to prevent it from being conclusive or enforceable between the parties, the existence of a pending appeal in the foreign country would prevent the application of this Act. Section 8 addresses a different situation. It deals with the situation in which either (1) the party seeking a stay has demonstrated that it intends to file an appeal in the foreign country, although the appeal has not yet been filed or (2) an appeal has been filed in the foreign country, but under the law of the foreign country filing of an appeal does not affect the conclusiveness or enforceability of the judgment. Section 8 allows the forum court in those situations to determine in its discretion that a stay of proceedings is appropriate.

13-62-109. Statute of limitations. An action to recognize a foreign-country judgment must be commenced within the earlier of the time during which the foreign-country judgment is effective in the foreign country or fifteen years from the date that the foreign-country judgment became effective in the foreign country.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This Section is new. The 1962 Act did not contain a statute of limitations. Some courts applying the 1962 Act have used the state's general statute of limitations, e.g., Vrozos v. Sarantopoulos, 552 N.E.2d 1053 (Ill. App. 1990) (as Recognition Act contains no statute of limitations, general five-year statute of limitations applies), while others have used the statute of limitations applicable with regard to enforcement of a domestic judgment, e.g., La Societe Anonyme Goro v. Conveyor Accessories, Inc., 677 N.E. 2d 30 (Ill. App. 1997).

1. Under Section 3 of this Act, this Act only applies to foreign-country judgments that are conclusive, and if the judgment grants recovery of a sum of money, enforceable where rendered. Thus, if the period of effectiveness of the foreign-country judgment has expired in the foreign country where the judgment was rendered, the foreign-country judgment would not be subject to this Act. This means that the period of time during which a foreign-country judgment may be recognized under this Act normally is measured by the period of time during which that judgment is effective (that is, conclusive and, if applicable, enforceable) in the foreign country that rendered the judgment. If, however, the foreign-country judgment remains effective for more than fifteen years after the date on which it became effective in the foreign country, Section 9 places an additional time limit on recognition of a foreign-country judgment. It provides that, if the foreign-country judgment remains effective between the parties for more than fifteen years, then an action to recognize the foreign-country judgment under this Act must be commenced within that fifteen year period.

2. Section 9 does not address the issue of whether a foreign-country judgment that can no longer be the basis of a recognition action under this Act because of the application of the fifteen-year limitations period in Section 9 may be used for other purposes. For example, a common rule with regard to judgments barred by a statute of limitations is that they still may be used defensively for purposes of offset and for their preclusive effect. The extent to which a foreign-country judgment with regard to which a recognition action is barred by Section 9 may be used for these or other purposes is left to the other law of the forum state.

13-62-110. Uniformity of interpretation. In applying and construing this uniform act, consideration must be given to the need to promote uniformity of the law with respect to its subject matter among states that enact it.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This Section is substantively the same as Section 8 of the 1962 Act. The section has been rewritten to reflect current NCCUSL practice.

13-62-111. Saving clause. This article does not prevent the recognition under principles of comity or otherwise of a foreign-country judgment not within the scope of this article.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article R&RE, p. 103, § 1, effective August 5.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source: This section is based on Section 7 of the 1962 Act.

1. Section 3 of this Act provides that this Act applies only to certain foreign-country judgments that grant or deny recovery of a sum of money. The purpose of this Act is to establish the minimum standards for recognition of those judgments. Section 11 makes clear that no negative implication should be read from the fact that this Act does not provide for recognition of other foreign-country judgments. Rather, this Act simply does not address the issue of whether foreign-country judgments not within its scope under Section 3 should be recognized. Courts are free to recognize those foreign-country judgments not within the scope of this Act under common law principles of comity or other applicable law.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-62-111 is similar to § 13-62-108 as it existed prior to the 2008 repeal and reenactment of article 62 of title 13, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

A foreign judgment may be recognized under the common law doctrine of comity where defendants were represented by counsel during foreign proceedings, the foreign court had personal and subject matter jurisdiction, there was no evidence of fraud, and defendants did not claim that they were denied the opportunity in the foreign proceedings of a full, fair, and impartial trial. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

Reciprocity is not required for recognition of foreign judgments in Colorado as a matter of comity. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-62-112. Applicability. This article applies to all actions commenced on or after August 5, 2008, in which the issue of recognition of a foreign-country judgment is raised.

13-62.1-102. Scope. (1) This article applies only to a foreign-money claim in an action or distribution proceeding.

(2) This article applies to foreign-money issues even if other law under the conflict of laws rules of this state applies to other issues in the action or distribution proceeding.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 878, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

13-62.1-103. Variation by agreement. (1) The effect of this article may be varied by agreement of the parties made before or after commencement of an action or distribution proceeding or the entry of judgment.

(2) Parties to a transaction may agree upon the money to be used in a transaction giving rise to a foreign-money claim and may agree to use different moneys for different aspects of the transaction. Stating the price in a foreign money for one aspect of a transaction does not alone require the use of that money for other aspects of the transaction.

13-62.1-104. Determining money of the claim. (1) The money in which the parties to a transaction have agreed that payment is to be made is the proper money of the claim for payment.

(2) If the parties to a transaction have not otherwise agreed, the proper money of the claim, as in each case may be appropriate, is the money:

- (a) Regularly used between the parties as a matter of usage or course of dealing;
- (b) Used at the time of a transaction in international trade, by trade usage or common practice, for valuing or settling transactions in the particular commodity or service involved; or
- (c) In which the loss was ultimately felt or will be incurred by the party claimant.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 878, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

13-62.1-105. Determining amount of the money of certain contract claims. (1) If an amount contracted to be paid in a foreign money is measured by a specified amount of a different money, the amount to be paid is determined on the conversion date.

(2) If an amount contracted to be paid in a foreign money is to be measured by a different money at the rate of exchange prevailing on a date before default, that rate of exchange applies only to payments made within a reasonable time after default, not exceeding thirty days. Thereafter, conversion is made at the bank-offered spot rate on the conversion date.

(3) A monetary claim is neither usurious nor unconscionable because the agreement on which it is based provides that the amount of the debtor's obligation to be paid in the debtor's money, when received by the creditor, must equal a specified amount of the foreign money of the country of the creditor. If, because of unexcused delay in payment of a judgment or award, the amount received by the creditor does not equal the amount of the foreign money specified in the agreement, the court or arbitrator shall amend the judgment or award accordingly.

13-62.1-106. Asserting and defending foreign-money claim. (1) A person may assert a claim in a specified foreign money. If a foreign-money claim is not asserted, the claimant makes the claim in United States dollars.

(2) An opposing party may allege and prove that a claim, in whole or in part, is in a different money than that asserted by the claimant.

(3) A person may assert a defense, set-off, recoupment, or counterclaim in any money without regard to the money of other claims.

(4) The determination of the proper money of the claim is a question of law.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 879, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

13-62.1-107. Judgments and awards on foreign-money claims; times of money conversion; form of judgment. (1) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, a judgment or award on a foreign-money claim must be stated in an amount of the money of the claim.

(2) A judgment or award on a foreign-money claim is payable in that foreign money or, at the option of the debtor, in the amount of United States dollars which will purchase that foreign money on the conversion date at a bank-offered spot rate.

(3) Assessed costs must be entered in United States dollars.

(4) Each payment in United States dollars must be accepted and credited on a judgment or award on a foreign-money claim in the amount of the foreign money that could be purchased by the dollars at a bank-offered spot rate of exchange at or near the close of business on the conversion date for that payment.

(5) A judgment or award made in an action or distribution proceeding on both (i) a defense, set-off, recoupment, or counterclaim and (ii) the adverse party's claim, must be netted by converting the money of the smaller into the money of the larger, and by subtracting the smaller from the larger, and specify the rates of exchange used.

(6) A judgment substantially in the following form complies with subsection (1) of this section:

[IT IS ADJUDGED AND ORDERED, that Defendant           (insert name)           pay to Plaintiff           (insert name)           the sum of           (insert amount in the foreign money)           plus interest on that sum at the rate of           (insert rate - see Section 9)           percent a year or, at the option of the judgment debtor, the number of United States dollars which will purchase the           (insert name of foreign money)           with interest due, at a bank-offered spot rate at or near the close of business on the banking day next before the day of payment, together with assessed costs of           (insert amount)           United States dollars.]

(7) If a contract claim is of the type covered by section 13-62.1-105 (1) or (2), the judgment or award must be entered for the amount of money stated to measure the obligation to be paid in the money specified for payment or, at the option of the debtor, the number of United States dollars which will purchase the computed amount of the money of payment on the conversion date at a bank-offered spot rate.

(8) A judgment must be [filed] [docketed] [recorded] and indexed in foreign money in the same manner, and has the same effect as a lien, as other judgments. It may be discharged by payment.

Editor's note: Section 9, which is referenced in the form in subsection (6), is found at § 13-62.1-109.

13-62.1-108. Conversions of foreign money in distribution proceeding. The rate of exchange prevailing at or near the close of business on the day the distribution proceeding is initiated governs all exchanges of foreign money in a distribution proceeding. A foreign-money claimant in a distribution proceeding shall assert its claim in the named foreign money and show the amount of United States dollars resulting from a conversion as of the date the proceeding was initiated.

13-62.1-109. Pre-judgment and judgment interest. (1) With respect to a foreign-money claim, recovery of pre-judgment or pre-award interest and the rate of interest to be applied in the action or distribution proceeding, except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, are matters of the substantive law governing the right to recovery under the conflict-of-laws rules of this state.

(2) The court or arbitrator shall increase or decrease the amount of pre-judgment or pre-award interest otherwise payable in a judgment or award in foreign-money to the extent required by the law of this state governing a failure to make or accept an offer of settlement or offer of judgment, or conduct by a party or its attorney causing undue delay or expense.

(3) A judgment or award on a foreign-money claim bears interest at the rate applicable to judgments of this state.

13-62.1-110. Enforcement of foreign judgments. (1) If an action is brought to enforce a judgment of another jurisdiction expressed in a foreign money and the judgment is recognized in this state as enforceable, the enforcing judgment must be entered as provided in section 13-62.1-107, whether or not the foreign judgment confers an option to pay in an equivalent amount of United States dollars.

(2) A foreign judgment may be [filed] [docketed] [recorded] in accordance with any rule or statute of this state providing a procedure for its recognition and enforcement.

(3) A satisfaction or partial payment made upon the foreign judgment, on proof thereof, must be credited against the amount of foreign money specified in the judgment, notwithstanding the entry of judgment in this state.

(4) A judgment entered on a foreign-money claim only in United States dollars in another state must be enforced in this state in United States dollars only.

13-62.1-111. Determining United States dollar value of foreign-money claims for limited purposes. (1) Computations under this section are for the limited purposes of the section and do not affect computation of the United States dollar equivalent of the money of the judgment for the purpose of payment.

(2) For the limited purpose of facilitating the enforcement of provisional remedies in an action, the value in United States dollars of assets to be seized or restrained pursuant to a writ of attachment, garnishment, execution, or other legal process, the amount of United States dollars at issue for assessing costs, or the amount of United States dollars involved for a surety bond or other court-required undertaking, must be ascertained as provided in subsections (3) and (4) of this section.

(3) A party seeking process, costs, bond, or other undertaking under subsection (2) of this section shall compute in United States dollars the amount of the foreign money claimed from a bank-offered spot rate prevailing at or near the close of business on the banking day next preceding the filing of a request or application for the issuance of process or for the determination of costs, or an application for a bond or other court-required undertaking.

(4) A party seeking the process, costs, bond, or other undertaking under subsection (2) of this section shall file with each request or application an affidavit or certificate executed in good faith by its counsel or a bank officer, stating the market quotation used and how it was obtained, and setting forth the calculation. Affected court officials incur no liability, after a filing of the affidavit or certificate, for acting as if the judgment were in the amount of United States dollars stated in the affidavit or certificate.

13-62.1-112. Effect of currency revalorization. (1) If, after an obligation is expressed or a loss is incurred in a foreign money, the country issuing or adopting that money substitutes a new money in place of that money, the obligation or the loss is treated as if expressed or incurred in the new money at the rate of conversion the issuing country establishes for the payment of like obligations or losses denominated in the former money.

(2) If substitution under subsection (1) of this section occurs after a judgment or award is entered on a foreign-money claim, the court or arbitrator shall amend the judgment or award by a like conversion of the former money.

13-64-102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly determines and declares that it is in the best interests of the citizens of this state to assure the continued availability of adequate health care services to the people of this state by containing the significantly increasing costs of malpractice insurance for medical care institutions and licensed medical care professionals, and that such is rationally related to a legitimate state interest. To attain this goal and in recognition of the exodus of professionals from health care practice or from certain portions or specialties thereof, the general assembly finds it necessary to enact this article limited to the area of medical malpractice to preserve the public peace, health, and welfare.

(2) The general assembly further determines and declares:

(a) The purpose of enacting the "Health Care Availability Act" and amendments thereto is to clearly and unequivocally state the intent of the general assembly that, in order to promote the purposes set forth in subsection (1) of this section, the limitations of liability set forth in section 13-64-302 are hereby reaffirmed; and

(b) All noneconomic damages of any kind whatsoever, whether direct or derivative, including but not limited to grief, loss of companionship, pain and suffering, inconvenience, emotional stress, impairment of quality of life, physical impairment, disfigurement, and damages for any other nonpecuniary harm awarded in a medical malpractice action, shall not exceed the limitations on noneconomic loss or injury specified in section 13-64-302.

13-64-201. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly declares the purposes of enacting this part 2 are to:

- (c) Pay damages as the losses are found to accrue;
- (d) Assure that payments of damages more nearly serve the purposes for which they are awarded;
- (e) Reduce the burden on public assistance costs created by the dissipation of lump-sum payments; and
- (f) Conform to the income tax policies in the federal “Internal Revenue Code of 1986” and the laws of this state with respect to compensation for personal injuries.

- (4) (a) “Health care professional” means any person licensed in this state or any other state to practice medicine, chiropractic, nursing, physical therapy, podiatry, dentistry, pharmacy, optometry, or other healing arts. #### ANNOTATION

Physical impairment is a recoverable item of damages under Colorado law as used in subsection (5). Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

Noneconomic damages for physical impairment and disfigurement are not included in the definition of noneconomic loss contained in § 13-64-302. Preston v. Dupont, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

13-64-203. Periodic payments. (1) In any civil action for damages in tort brought against a health care professional or a health care institution, the trial judge shall enter a judgment ordering that awards for future damages be paid by periodic payments rather than by a lump-sum payment if the award for future damages exceeds the present value of one hundred fifty thousand dollars, as determined by the court.

(2) In any such action in which the award for future damages is one hundred fifty thousand dollars or less, present value, the trial judge may order that awards for future damages be paid by periodic payments.

13-64-204. Special damages findings required. (1) If liability is found in a trial under this part 2, the trier of fact, in addition to other appropriate findings, shall make separate findings for each claimant specifying the amount of:

- (a) Any past damages for each of the following types:
  - (I) Medical and other costs of health care;
  - (II) Other economic loss except loss of earnings;
  - (III) Loss of earnings; and
  - (IV) Noneconomic loss;

  - (IV) Noneconomic loss which would be incurred for the life of the claimant or any lesser period.

(2) The calculation of all future damages under subparagraphs (I), (II), and (IV) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section shall reflect the costs and losses during the period of time, including life expectancy, if appropriate, that the claimant will sustain those costs and losses. The calculation of loss under subparagraph (III) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section shall be based on loss during the period of time the claimant would have earned income but for the injury upon which the claim is based.

(3) The fact that payment of any judgment will be paid by periodic payments shall not be disclosed to a jury.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Health Care Litigation in Colorado: A Survey of Recent Decisions", see 30 Colo. Law. 91 (August 2001).

The Health Care Availability Act limits the total recovery for all noneconomic loss or injury to $250,000, including any such loss or injury resulting from physical impairment or disfigurement as set forth in § 13-21-102.5. Plaintiffs may not recover for a separate category of damages for physical impairment and disfigurement in addition to the statutory categories set forth in this section. Ledstrom by and through Ledstrom v. Keeling, 10 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 1998).

This section does not prohibit recovery for physical impairment. Damages for physical impairment are recoverable under the laws of this state as either economic or noneconomic loss and court did not err in instructing jury to determine separately the amount of past damages attributable to any physical impairment and any future damages allocable to any physical impairment. Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

This section requires determination of present value of future damages but does not require presentation of expert testimony as to the calculation of present value. Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

13-64-205. Determination of judgment to be entered. (1) In order to determine what judgment is to be entered on a verdict requiring findings of special damages under this part 2, the court shall proceed as follows:

(a) The court shall apply to the findings of past and future damages any applicable rules of law, including setoffs, credits, comparative fault, additurs, and remittiturs in calculating the respective amounts of past and future damages each claimant is entitled to recover and each party is obligated to pay. The court shall preserve the rights of any subrogee to be paid in a lump sum.

(b) The court shall specify the payment of attorney fees and litigation expenses in a manner separate from the periodic installments payable to the claimant, either in a lump sum or by periodic installments, pursuant to any agreement entered into between the claimant or beneficiary and his attorney, computed in accordance with the applicable principles of law.

(c) The court shall enter judgment in a lump sum for past damages and for any damages payable in lump sum or otherwise under paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection (1).

(d) After hearing relevant expert testimony, the jury shall determine the present value of future damages and, except as provided in paragraphs (e) and (f) of this subsection (1), the court shall enter judgment for the periodic payment of future damages. The court, in considering evidence of the need for one or more future major medical proceedings or services, may enter judgment for lump-sum payment therefor, payable either immediately or at some designated date or dates in the future.

(e) Upon petition of a party before entry of judgment and a finding of incapacity to fund the periodic payments, the court, at the election of the claimant or at the election of the beneficiaries in an action for wrongful death, shall enter a judgment for the present value of the periodic payments.

(f) The plaintiff who meets the criteria set forth in this subsection (1) may elect to receive the immediate payment to the plaintiff of the present value of the future damage award in a lump-sum amount in lieu of periodic payments. In order to exercise this right, the plaintiff must either:

(I) (A) Have reached his or her eighteenth birthday by the time the periodic payment order is entered;

(B) Not be an incapacitated person, as defined in section 15-14-102 (5), C.R.S.; and

(C) Have been provided financial counseling and must be making an informed decision; or

(II) Be a person under disability who has a legal representative authorized to take action on his or her behalf, as described in section 13-81-102.

(2) For purposes of paragraph (f) of subsection (1) of this section, "legal representative", "person under disability", and "take action" shall have the same meanings as provided in section 13-81-101.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Health Care Litigation in Colorado: A Survey of Recent Decisions", see 30 Colo. Law. 91 (August 2001).

Subsection (1)(b) does not preclude or affect a prevailing defendant's right to recover costs and does not imply a repeal of § 13-16-105. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

Subsection (1)(f) excludes an "incapacitated person" from those who may elect to receive a lump-sum payment regardless of whether such person also is a "protected person". Rodriguez ex rel. Rodriguez v. HealthONE, 24 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 50 P.3d 879 (Colo. 2002); Garhart v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

Subsection (1)(f) is rationally related to a legitimate government objective and, therefore, is constitutional and does not violate the respondent's equal protection rights. Protecting "incapacitated persons represented by conservators" from prematurely exhausting their judgments is a legitimate governmental objective and subsection (1)(f) is rationally related to this legitimate governmental objective. HealthONE v. Rodriguez ex rel. Rodriguez, 50 P.3d 879 (Colo. 2002); Garhart v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

Statute as amended in 2007 is not unconstitutional special legislation. By covering all minor and incapacitated persons who receive large medical malpractice verdicts, the statute plainly has general future applicability. Vitetta v. Corrigan, 240 P.3d 322 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court construed the Health Care Availability Act in harmony with § 13-16-105 and C.R.C.P. 54(d) to allow a prevailing defendant to recover costs in a medical negligence action. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

13-64-206. Periodic installment obligations. (1) A judgment for periodic payments under this part 2 shall provide that:

(a) Such periodic payments are fixed and determinable as to amount and time of payment;

(b) Such periodic payments cannot be accelerated, deferred, increased, or decreased by the recipient of such payments; and

(c) The recipient of such payments shall be a general creditor of the qualified insurer.

(2) Unless the court directs otherwise and the parties otherwise agree, payments shall be scheduled at one-month intervals. Payments for damages accruing during the scheduled intervals are due at the beginning of the intervals. For good cause shown, the court may direct that periodic payments shall continue for an initial term of years notwithstanding the death of the judgment creditor during that term.

(3) Money damages awarded for loss of future earnings shall not be reduced or payments terminated by reason of the death of the judgment creditor. Any such remaining periodic payments shall be paid to the heirs and devisees of the judgment creditor. Payments for future damages other than loss of future earnings shall cease at the death of the judgment creditor.

ANNOTATION

Although the federal government is not subject to the Colorado Health Care Availability Act (HCAA), under the Federal Tort Claims Act the government is to be treated in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances. Therefore the government was entitled to receive a reversionary interest in that part of an award to a seriously injured child resulting from the government's negligence that would approximate the result contemplated by the HCAA. Hill v. U.S., 81 F.3d 118 (10th Cir. 1996).

13-64-207. Form of funding. (1) A judgment for periodic payments entered in accordance with this part 2 shall provide for payments to be funded in one or more of the following forms approved by the court:

(a) Annuity contract issued by a company licensed to do business as an insurance company under the laws of this state;

(b) An obligation or obligations of the United States;

(c) Evidence of applicable and collectible liability insurance from one or more qualified insurers;

(d) An agreement by one or more personal injury liability assignees to assume the obligation of the judgment debtor;

(e) An obligation of the state of Colorado or of a public entity other than the state which is self-insured as provided in section 24-10-115, 24-10-115.5, or 24-10-116, C.R.S.; or

(f) Any other satisfactory form of funding.

(2) The court shall require that the annuity contract or other form of funding permitted by subsection (1) of this section show that portion of each periodic payment which is attributable to loss of future earnings and that portion attributable to all other future damages.

Source: L. 88: Entire article added, p. 616, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Section gives discretion to trial court in entering its judgment for periodic payments.

Trial court not required to approve an order allowing defendant to purchase an annuity at a cost less than the jury's present value award even if the annuity pays the plaintiff the equivalent of the future value of damages. Garhart ex rel. Tinsman v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 168 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2007).

13-64-208. Funding the obligation. (1) If the court enters a judgment for periodic payments under this part 2, then each party liable for all or a portion of the judgment, unless found to be incapable of doing so, shall separately or jointly with one or more others provide the funding for the periodic payments in a form prescribed in section 13-64-207, within sixty days after the date the judgment is entered. A liability insurer having a contractual obligation and any other person adjudged to have an obligation to pay all or part of a judgment for periodic payments on behalf of a judgment debtor is obligated to provide such funding to the extent of its contractual or adjudged obligation if the judgment debtor has not done so.

(2) A judgment creditor or successor in interest and any party having rights under subsection (4) of this section may move that the court find that funding has not been provided with regard to a judgment obligation owing to the moving party. Upon so finding, the court shall order that funding complying with this article be provided within thirty days. If funding is not provided within that time and subsection (3) of this section does not apply, then the court shall calculate the present value of the periodic payment obligation and enter a judgment for that amount in favor of the moving party.

(3) If a judgment debtor who is the only person liable for a portion of a judgment for periodic payments fails to provide funding, then the right to present value payment described in subsection (2) of this section applies only against that judgment debtor and the portion of the judgment so owed.

(4) If more than one party is liable for all or a portion of a judgment requiring funding under this part 2 and the required funding is provided by one or more but fewer than all of the parties liable, the funding requirements are satisfied and those providing funding may proceed under subsection (2) of this section to enforce rights for funding or present value payment to satisfy or protect rights of reimbursement from a party not providing funding.

13-64-209. Assignment of periodic payments. (1) An assignment by a judgment creditor or an agreement by such person to assign any right to receive periodic payments for future damages contained in a judgment entered under this part 2 is enforceable only as to amounts:

- (a) To secure payment of alimony, maintenance, or child support;
- (b) For the costs of products, services, or accommodations provided or to be provided by the assignee for medical or other health care; or
- (c) For attorney fees and other expenses of litigation incurred in securing the judgment.

13-64-210. Exemption of benefits. Except as provided in section 13-64-209, periodic payments for future damages contained in a judgment entered under this part 2 for loss of earnings are exempt from garnishment, attachment, execution, and any other process or claim to the extent that wages or earnings are exempt.

Source: L. 88: Entire article added, p. 617, § 1, effective July 1.

13-64-211. Settlement agreements and consent judgments. Nothing in this part 2 is to be construed to limit or affect the settlement of actions triable under this part 2 nor shall it apply to the settlement of actions except as otherwise agreed to by the parties. Parties to an action on a claim for personal injury may, but are not required to, file with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending or, if none is pending, with the clerk of a court of competent jurisdiction over the claim a settlement agreement for future damages payable in periodic payments. The settlement agreement may provide that one or more sections of this part 2 apply to it.

13-64-212. Satisfaction of judgment. Upon entry of an order by the court that the form of funding complies with section 13-64-207 and that the funding of the obligation complies with section 13-64-208, the court shall order a satisfaction of judgment and discharge of the judgment debtor.

13-64-301. Financial responsibility. (1) As a condition of active licensure or authority to practice in this state, every physician or dentist, and every health care institution as defined in section 13-64-202, except as provided in section 13-64-303.5, that provides health care services shall establish financial responsibility, as follows:

- (a) (I) If a dentist, by maintaining commercial professional liability insurance coverage with an insurance company authorized to do business in this state or an eligible nonadmitted insurer allowed to insure in Colorado pursuant to article 5 of title 10, C.R.S., in a minimum indemnity amount of five hundred thousand dollars per incident and one million five hundred thousand dollars annual aggregate per year; except that this requirement is not applicable to a dentist who is a public employee under the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

(II) The board of dental examiners may, by rule, exempt from or establish lesser financial responsibility standards than those prescribed in this section for classes of dentists who:

- (A) Perform dental services as employees of the United States government;
- (B) Render limited or occasional dental services;
- (C) Perform less than full-time active dental services because of administrative or other nonclinical duties or partial or complete retirement; or
- (D) Provide uncompensated dental care to patients but do not otherwise provide any compensated dental care to patients.

(III) The board of dental examiners may exempt from or establish lesser financial responsibility standards for a dentist for reasons other than those described in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a) that render the limits provided in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) unreasonable or unattainable.

(IV) Nothing in this paragraph (a) shall preclude or otherwise prohibit a licensed dentist from rendering appropriate patient care on an occasional basis when the circumstances surrounding the need for care so warrant.

(a.5) (I) If a physician, by maintaining commercial professional liability insurance coverage with an insurance company authorized to do business in this state or an eligible nonadmitted insurer allowed to insure in Colorado pursuant to article 5 of title 10, C.R.S., in a minimum indemnity amount of one million dollars per incident and three million dollars annual aggregate per year; except that this requirement is not applicable to a physician who is a public employee under the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

(II) The Colorado medical board may, by rule, exempt from or establish lesser financial responsibility standards than those prescribed in this paragraph (a.5) for classes of physicians who:

- (A) Perform medical services as employees of the United States government;
- (B) Render limited or occasional medical services;
- (C) Perform less than full-time active medical services because of administrative or other nonclinical duties or partial or complete retirement; or
- (D) Provide uncompensated health care to patients but do not otherwise provide any compensated health care to patients.

(III) The Colorado medical board may exempt from or establish lesser financial responsibility standards for a physician for reasons other than those described in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a.5) that render the limits provided in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a.5) unreasonable or unattainable.

(IV) Nothing in this paragraph (a.5) shall preclude or otherwise prohibit a licensed physician from rendering appropriate patient care on an occasional basis when the circumstances surrounding the need for care so warrant.

(b) If a health care institution, by maintaining, as a condition of licensure, certification, or other authority to render health care services in this state, commercial professional liability insurance coverage with an insurance company authorized to do business in this state or an eligible nonadmitted insurer allowed to insure in Colorado pursuant to article 5 of title 10, C.R.S., in a minimum indemnity amount of five hundred thousand dollars per incident and three million dollars annual aggregate per year; except that this requirement is not applicable to a certified health care institution that is a public entity under the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act". In the event a health care institution does not have a commercial professional liability insurance policy in compliance with this paragraph (b), or the limits of professional liability insurance coverage are in excess of any self-insured retention amount, or there is a deductible other than zero dollars, the health care institution shall procure evidence that the commissioner of insurance has accepted and approved an alternative form of establishing financial responsibility in compliance with paragraph (c), (d), or (e) of this subsection (1), in accordance with applicable rules promulgated by the division of insurance. The health care institution shall furnish evidence of alternative financial responsibility compliance to the department of public health and environment as part of the health care institution's application for an initial or renewal license, certification, or other authority.

(c) In the alternative, by maintaining a surety bond in a form acceptable to the commissioner of insurance in the amounts set forth in paragraph (a), (a.5), or (b) of this subsection (1);

(d) As an alternative, by depositing cash or cash equivalents as security with the commissioner of insurance in such applicable amounts;

(e) As an alternative, any other security acceptable to the commissioner of insurance, which may include approved plans of self-insurance.

(2) Each such physician or dentist, as a condition of receiving and maintaining an active or inactive license or other authority to provide health care services and each health care institution, as a condition of receiving and maintaining an active license, certification, or other authority to provide health care services in this state, shall furnish the appropriate authority which issues and administers such license, certification, or other authority with evidence of compliance with subsection (1) of this section. No such license, certification, or other authority shall be issued or renewed unless such evidence of compliance has been furnished.

(3) Notwithstanding the minimum amount specified in paragraph (a.5) of subsection (1) of this section, if the Colorado medical board receives two or more reports pursuant to section 13-64-303 during any twelve-month period regarding a physician, the minimum amount of financial responsibility for that physician shall be twice the amount specified in paragraph (a.5) of subsection (1) of this section. The Colorado medical board may reduce the additional amount if the physician, upon motion, presents sufficient evidence to the Colorado medical board that one or more of the reports involved an action or claim that did not represent any substantial failure to adhere to accepted professional standards of care. The board may reduce the additional amount to an amount that would be fair and conscionable.

(I) "Derivative noneconomic loss or injury" means noneconomic loss or injury to persons other than the person suffering the direct or primary loss or injury. "Derivative noneconomic loss or injury" does not include punitive or exemplary damages.

(II) (A) “Direct noneconomic loss or injury” means nonpecuniary harm for which damages are recoverable by the person suffering the direct or primary loss or injury, including pain and suffering, inconvenience, emotional stress, physical impairment or disfigurement, and impairment of the quality of life. “Direct noneconomic loss or injury” does not include punitive or exemplary damages.

(B) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit a recovery for economic damages, whether past or future, resulting from physical impairment or disfigurement.

(b) The total amount recoverable for all damages for a course of care for all defendants in any civil action for damages in tort brought against a health care professional, as defined in section 13-64-202, or a health care institution, as defined in section 13-64-202, or as a result of binding arbitration, whether past damages, future damages, or a combination of both, shall not exceed one million dollars, present value per patient, including any claim for derivative noneconomic loss or injury, of which not more than two hundred fifty thousand dollars, present value per patient, including any derivative claim, shall be attributable to direct or derivative noneconomic loss or injury; except that, if, upon good cause shown, the court determines that the present value of past and future economic damages would exceed such limitation and that the application of such limitation would be unfair, the court may award in excess of the limitation the present value of additional past and future economic damages only. The limitations of this section are not applicable to a health care professional who is a public employee under the “Colorado Governmental Immunity Act” and are not applicable to a certified health care institution which is a public entity under the “Colorado Governmental Immunity Act”. For purposes of this section, “present value” has the same meaning as that set forth in section 13-64-202 (7). The existence of the limitations and exceptions thereto provided in this section shall not be disclosed to a jury.

(c) Effective July 1, 2003, the damages limitation of two hundred fifty thousand dollars described in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1) shall be increased to three hundred thousand dollars, which increased amount shall apply to acts or omissions occurring on or after said date. It is the intent of the general assembly that the increase reflect an adjustment for inflation to the damages limitation.

(2) In any civil action described in subsection (1) of this section, prejudgment interest awarded pursuant to section 13-21-101 that accrues during the time period beginning on the date the action accrued and ending on the date of filing of the civil action is deemed to be a part of the damages awarded in the action for the purposes of this section and is included within each of the limitations on liability that are established pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Health Care Litigation in Colorado: A Survey of Recent Decisions”, see 30 Colo. Law. 91 (August 2001).

Constitutional. The provisions of this act and the damage limitations of this section do not violate the equal protection clause. Scholz v. Metro. Pathologists, P.C., 851 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993).

Since there is no constitutional right to a civil jury trial, the Health Care Availability Act (HCAA) damage cap does not impermis- sibly infringe on the right to a jury trial. Garhart v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

The HCAA damage cap does not violate separation of powers. The cap does not interfere with the remittur authority of the courts. The court still has the authority to reduce the award by remittur. The HCAA damage cap does not infringe on the court’s rule-making authority. Since the damage cap involves a substantive exercise of the general assembly’s power to define and limit a cause of action, there is no infringement on court rules that relate to damages and jury awards. Garhart v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

The limitations of this section apply to any professional corporation or entity regardless of whether the injury was caused by a licensed health care professional or an unlicensed member of the staff. Scholz v. Metro. Pathologists, P.C., 851 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993).

Liability limitation can be applied to employer of licensed pharmacist who committed negligence that led to injury. Although employer was not a licensed health care professional within the literal language of the statute, as it was neither a licensed person nor a professional corporation or professional entity comprised of licensed persons, had the licensed pharmacist who worked for employer been named as defendant, she or he would have come within the definition of a health care professional, and the liability limitation would have applied to that individual. In the context of this case, liability arose strictly from defendant's capacity as the employer of a licensed professional who committed a negligent act. Accordingly, the limitations of this section apply. Price v. Walgreen Co., 322 F. Supp. 2d 1179 (D. Colo. 2004).

Prejudgment interest is not included in the damage cap provided in this section. Scholz v. Metro. Pathologists, P.C., 851 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993) (decided prior to 1995 amendment).

Prejudgment interest is subject to statutory damages cap. Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

Under § 13-21-101, prejudgment interest must be calculated based on the amount awarded by the final judgment, regardless of the jury's determination. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

The HCAA creates a limited exception to the interest formula regarding the accumulation of prefilng and prejudgment interest, which formula is created in § 13-21-101. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsection (2) includes prefilng interest, which begins when the action has accrued and ends when the action is filed, but not prejudgment interest within the $250,000 cap on noneconomic damages. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

Noneconomic damages for physical impairment and disfigurement are not included in the definition of noneconomic loss contained in this section. Preston v. Dupont, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

Provisions of the act unambiguously limit recovery for noneconomic damages against health care professionals to $250,000 for a course of care of one patient regardless of the number of plaintiffs or the number of defendants. Evans v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

Limitations of damages for all defendants are governed by this act rather than the general damages statute because of the particular type of action, medical malpractice claims, and the particular class of defendants, health care professionals, involved. Evans v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

Plaintiffs were unable to establish they were treated any differently from other persons whose cause of action accrued at the same time and, therefore, could not establish disparate treatment for an equal protection claim. Garhart v. Columbia/HealthONE, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

A damage cap should be applied to the jury award before apportionment of the award pursuant to the jury's allocation of fault. Garhart v. Columbia/Healthone, L.L.C., 95 P.3d 571 (Colo. 2004).

No challenge for cause for juror with specific knowledge of damages caps under HCAA notwithstanding requirement in subsection (1) that prevents disclosure of such damage limitations to the jury. Trial court did not err in rejecting defendant's challenge for cause for prospective juror with special knowledge of the caps because this is not a ground set forth in C.R.C.P. 47 (e) for dismissal of a potential juror. Dupont v. Preston, 9 P.3d 1193 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

The $250,000 cap on noneconomic damages in this section does not limit damages for physical impairment or disfigurement in a medical malpractice case, and, therefore, it is proper for the court to instruct a jury to award a separate category of damages for physical impairment and disfigurement. Preston v. Dupont, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

However, damages for physical impairment and disfigurement are subject to the HCAA's one million dollar damages limitation. Wallbank v. Rothenberg, 74 P.3d 413 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applicable standard of review of a trial court determination of good cause and unfairness for purposes of the exception to the total damages cap is whether the trial court abused its discretion. Wallbank v. Rothenberg, 140 P.3d 177 (Colo. App. 2006).

Moving party bears burden of proving good cause and unfairness in order to exceed the cap on total damages. Wallbank v. Rothenberg, 140 P.3d 177 (Colo. App. 2006).

13-64-302.5. Exemplary damages - legislative declaration - limitations - distribution of damages collected. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that it is in the public interest to establish a consistent and uniformly applicable standard for the determination, amount, imposition, and distribution of exemplary monetary damages arising from civil actions and arbitration proceedings alleging professional negligence in the practice of medicine. It is the intent of the general assembly that any such exemplary damages serve the public purposes of deterring negligent acts and where appropriate provide a form of punishment that is in addition to the disciplinary and licensing sanctions available to the Colorado medical board.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, the exemplary damages provided for in this section and authorized to be imposed upon a health care professional shall be the only such damages imposed as a result of the negligence claim.

(3) In any civil action or arbitration proceeding alleging negligence against a health care professional, exemplary damages may not be included in any initial claim for relief. A claim for such exemplary damages may be asserted by amendment to the pleadings only after the substantial completion of discovery and only after the plaintiff establishes prima facie proof of a triable issue. If the court or arbitrator allows such an amendment to the complaint under this subsection (3), it may also, in its discretion, permit additional discovery on the question of exemplary damages.

(4) In any civil action or arbitration proceeding in which compensatory damages are assessed against a health care professional, the judge or arbitrator, in his discretion, and only if it is shown at the trial or proceeding that the action complained of was attended by circumstances of fraud, malice, or willful and wanton conduct, may allow the trier of fact to impose reasonable exemplary damages, as provided in this subsection (4). The degree of proof shall be as provided in section 13-25-127 (2).

(b) The standards for awarding and the amount of exemplary damages, if imposed upon such health care professional, shall be as provided in sections 13-21-102 and 13-25-127 (2).

(5) (a) No exemplary damages shall be imposed under subsection (4) of this section which were the result of the use of any drug or product approved for use by any state or federal regulatory agency and used within the approved standards therefor, or used in accordance with standards of prudent health care professionals.

(b) No exemplary damages shall be imposed under subsection (4) of this section which were the result of the use of any drug or product subject to the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) when the clinically justified use of such drug or product is beyond the regulatory approvals or standards therefor and is in accordance with standards of prudent health care professionals, and when such use has been agreed to pursuant to the written informed consent of the recipient.

(6) No exemplary damages shall be assessed against a health care professional as a result of the acts of others unless he specifically directed the act to be done or ratified the same.

(7) For the purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires, "health care professional" has the same meaning set forth in section 13-64-202 (4).

ANNOTATION

Trial court's failure to dismiss plaintiffs' claim for exemplary damages from plaintiffs' initial pleading was not reversible error where claim was found to be sufficiently supported to allow its presentation in plaintiffs' case-in-chief. Evans v. Colo. Permanente Medical Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

This section plainly limits recovery only against a health care professional or a health care institution. Because the nonparty at fault was neither of those, the court correctly refused to reduce the noneconomic damages award to the statutory limit prior to apportioning fault. Chavez v. Parkview Episcopal Med. Ctr., 32 P.3d 609 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court did not err in denying plaintiff's request to amend complaint to seek exemplary damages when materials presented amounted to a prima facie showing of negligence only. Sheron v. Lutheran Med. Ctr., 18 P.3d 796 (Colo. App. 2000).

While this section allows the court, in its discretion, to permit additional discovery on the question of exemplary damages, it does not require the court to permit such discovery or to continue the trial at defendant's request. Reigel v. SavaSeniorCare L.L.C., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

13-64-303. Judgments and settlements - reported. Any final judgment, settlement, or arbitration award against any health care professional or health care institution for medical malpractice shall be reported within fourteen days by such professional's or institution's medical malpractice insurance carrier in accordance with section 10-1-120, 10-1-121, 10-1-124, or 10-1-125, C.R.S., or by such professional or institution if there is no commercial medical malpractice insurance coverage to the licensing agency of the health care professional or health care institution for review, investigation, and, where appropriate, disciplinary or other action. Any health care professional, health care institution, or insurance carrier that knowingly fails to report as required by this section shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than two thousand five hundred dollars. Such penalty shall be determined and collected by the district court in the city and county of Denver. All penalties collected pursuant to this section shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the general fund.

13-64-303.5. Exclusion - mental health care facilities. The provisions of section 13-64-301 do not apply to any outpatient mental health care facility, including but not limited to a community mental health center or clinic, and to any extended care facility or hospice with sixteen or fewer inpatient beds, including but not limited to nursing homes or rehabilitation facilities. The department of public health and environment shall by rule establish financial responsibility standards which are less than those prescribed in this section for classes of health care institutions which have less risk of exposure to medical malpractice claims or for other reasons that render the limits provided in section 13-64-301 (1) (b) unreasonable or unattainable.

PROCEDURES AND EVIDENCE IN MEDICAL MALPRACTICE ACTIONS

Law reviews: For article, "1988 Update on Colorado Tort Reform Legislation — Part I", see 17 Colo. Law. 1719 (1988); for article, "1990 Update on Colorado Tort Reform Legislation", see 19 Colo. Law. 1529 (1990).

13-64-401. Qualifications as expert witness in medical malpractice actions or proceedings. No person shall be qualified to testify as an expert witness concerning issues of negligence in any medical malpractice action or proceeding against a physician unless he not only is a licensed physician but can demonstrate by competent evidence that, as a result of training, education, knowledge, and experience in the evaluation, diagnosis, and treatment of the disease or injury which is the subject matter of the action or proceeding against the physician defendant, he was substantially familiar with applicable standards of care and practice as they relate to the act or omission which is the subject of the claim on the date of the incident. The court shall not permit an expert in one medical subspecialty to testify against a physician in another medical subspecialty unless, in addition to such a showing of substantial familiarity, there is a showing that the standards of care and practice in the two fields are similar. The limitations in this section shall not apply to expert witnesses testifying as to the degree or permanency of medical or physical impairment.

ANNOTATION

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur cannot be used to avoid the requirements of this section, at least when there is no evidence or inference that the defendant had any control over the instrumentality causing the injury. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-64-402. Collateral source evidence. (1) In any action in a court or arbitration proceeding for personal injury against a health care provider for professional negligence, the plaintiff shall, within sixty days after the commencement thereof, serve written notice thereof to the third party payor or provider of any amount paid or payable as a medical benefit pursuant to any health, sickness, or accident insurance or plan, which provides health benefits, or any contract or agreement of any group, organization, partnership, or corporation to provide, pay for, or reimburse the cost of medical, hospital, dental, or other health care services, and shall file a copy thereof with the court or arbitrator. Such service shall be made pursuant to section 10-3-107 (1) or (1.5), C.R.S., or pursuant to the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(2) If such third party payor or provider of such benefits has a right of subrogation for such payments, it shall file with the court or arbitrator written notice of such subrogated claim, without specifying a definite amount, within ninety days after receipt of the notice required in subsection (1) of this section, and transmit a copy thereof to the party plaintiff. Failure to file such written notice shall constitute a waiver of such right of subrogation as to such action.

(3) Before entering final judgment, the court shall determine the amount, if any, due the third party payor or provider and enter its judgment in accordance with such finding.

(4) The provisions of this section shall not apply to section 25.5-4-301, C.R.S.

Source: L. 88: Entire article added, p. 620, § 1, effective July 1. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 269, § 1, effective April 16. L. 2006: (4) amended, p. 2001, § 47, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Recovery of Medical Expenses by Insured Medical Malpractice Victims", see 33 Colo. Law. 113 (July 2004).

There is no indication that the provision in this section creating a mechanism for insurers to assert their subrogation rights for medical benefits paid to a plaintiff is meant to supplant a prevailing party's right to recover costs. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court construed the Health Care Availability Act in harmony with § 13-16-105 and C.R.C.P. 54(d) to allow a prevailing defendant to recover costs in a medical negligence action. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

13-64-403. Agreement for medical services - alternative arbitration procedures - form of agreement - right to rescind. (1) It is the intent of the general assembly that an arbitration agreement be a voluntary agreement between a patient and a health care provider and no medical malpractice insurer shall require a health care provider to utilize arbitration agreements as a condition of providing medical malpractice insurance to such health care provider. Making the use of arbitration agreements a condition to the provision of medical malpractice insurance shall constitute an unfair insurance practice and shall be subject to the provisions, remedies, and penalties prescribed in part 11 of article 3 of title 10, C.R.S.

(1.5) Exemplary damages may be awarded in any arbitration proceeding held pursuant to this section in accordance with section 13-21-102 (1) to (3) and (6). Any award of exemplary damages in a proceeding held pursuant to this section may be modified by the district court upon petition to the district court alleging that the award of such damages was either excessive or inadequate.

(2) Any agreement for the provision of medical services which contains a provision for binding arbitration of any dispute as to professional negligence of a health care provider that conforms to the provisions of this section shall not be deemed contrary to the public policy of this state, except as provided in subsection (10) of this section.

(3) Any such agreement shall have the following statement set forth as part of the agreement: "It is understood that any claim of medical malpractice, including any claim that medical services were unnecessary or unauthorized or were improperly, negligently, or incompetently rendered or omitted, will be determined by submission to binding arbitration in accordance with the provisions of part 2 of article 22 of this title, and not by a lawsuit or resort to court process except as Colorado law provides for judicial review of arbitration proceedings. The patient has the right to seek legal counsel concerning this agreement, and has the right to rescind this agreement by written notice to the physician within ninety days after the agreement has been signed and executed by both parties unless said agreement was signed in contemplation of the patient being hospitalized, in which case the agreement may be rescinded by written notice to the physician within ninety days after release or discharge from the hospital or other health care institution. Both parties to this agreement, by entering into it, have agreed to the use of binding arbitration in lieu of having any such dispute decided in a court of law before a jury."

(4) Immediately preceding the signature lines for such an agreement, the following notice shall be printed in at least ten-point, bold-faced type:

NOTE: BY SIGNING THIS AGREEMENT YOU ARE AGREEING TO HAVE ANY ISSUE OF MEDICAL MALPRACTICE DECIDED BY NEUTRAL BINDING ARBITRATION RATHER THAN BY A JURY OR COURT TRIAL.

YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO SEEK LEGAL COUNSEL AND YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO RESCIND THIS AGREEMENT WITHIN NINETY DAYS FROM THE DATE OF SIGNATURE BY BOTH PARTIES UNLESS THE AGREEMENT WAS SIGNED IN CONTEMPLATION OF HOSPITALIZATION IN WHICH CASE YOU HAVE NINETY DAYS AFTER DISCHARGE OR RELEASE FROM THE HOSPITAL TO RESCIND THE AGREEMENT.

NO HEALTH CARE PROVIDER SHALL WITHHOLD THE PROVISION OF EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES TO ANY PERSON BECAUSE OF THAT PERSON'S FAILURE OR REFUSAL TO SIGN AN AGREEMENT CONTAINING A PROVISION FOR BINDING ARBITRATION OF ANY DISPUTE ARISING AS TO PROFESSIONAL NEGLIGENCE OF THE PROVIDER.

NO HEALTH CARE PROVIDER SHALL REFUSE TO PROVIDE MEDICAL CARE SERVICES TO ANY PATIENT SOLELY BECAUSE SUCH PATIENT REFUSED TO SIGN SUCH AN AGREEMENT OR EXERCISED THE NINETY-DAY RIGHT OF RESCISSION.

(5) Once signed, the agreement shall govern all subsequent provision of medical services for which the agreement was signed until or unless rescinded by written notice.

Written notice of such rescission may be given by a guardian or conservator of the patient if the patient is incapacitated or a minor. Where the agreement is one for medical services to a minor, it shall not be subject to disaffirmation by the minor if signed by the minor's parent or legal guardian.

(6) The patient shall be provided with a written copy of any agreement subject to the provisions of this section at the time that it is signed by the parties.

(7) No health care provider shall refuse to provide medical care services to any patient solely because such patient refused to sign such an agreement or exercised the ninety-day right of rescission.

(8) No health care provider shall withhold the provision of emergency medical services to any person because of that person's failure or refusal to sign an agreement containing a provision for binding arbitration of any dispute arising as to professional negligence of the provider.

(9) If a health care provider refuses to provide medical care services to any patient in violation of subsection (7) of this section or withholds the provision of emergency medical services to any person in violation of subsection (8) of this section or fails to comply with the requirements of subsection (3) or (4) or both of this section, such refusal or withholding of services shall constitute unprofessional conduct as such term is used under the relevant licensing statute governing that particular care provider, and the appropriate authority which conducts disciplinary proceedings relating to such health care provider shall consider and take appropriate disciplinary action against such health care provider as provided under the relevant licensing statute.

(10) Even where it complies with the provisions of this section, such an agreement may nevertheless be declared invalid by a court if it is shown by clear and convincing evidence that:

(a) The agreement failed to meet the standards for such agreements as specified in this section; or

(b) The execution of the agreement was induced by fraud; or

(c) The patient executed the agreement as a direct result of the willful or negligent disregard of the patient's right to refrain from such execution; or

(d) The patient executing the agreement was not able to communicate effectively in spoken and written English, unless the agreement is written in his native language.

(11) No such agreement may be submitted to a patient for approval when the patient's condition prevents the patient from making a rational decision whether or not to execute such an agreement.

(12) For the purposes of this section:

(a) (I) "Health care provider" means any person licensed or certified by the state of Colorado to deliver health care and any clinic, health dispensary, or health facility licensed by the state of Colorado. The term includes any professional corporation or other professional entity comprised of such health care providers as permitted by the laws of this state.

(II) (A) Nothing in this paragraph (a) shall be construed to permit a professional service corporation, as described in section 12-36-134, C.R.S., to practice medicine.

(B) Nothing in this paragraph (a) shall be construed to otherwise create an exception to the corporate practice of medicine doctrine.

(b) "Professional negligence" means a negligent act or omission by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services, which act or omission is the proximate cause of personal injury or wrongful death, as long as such services are within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Arbitration of Medical Malpractice Disputes", see 18 Colo. Law. 897 (1989). For article, "Mandatory Arbitration and the Medical Malpractice Plaintiff", see 27 Colo. Law. 77 (May 1998).

When an arbitration provision does not comply with subsections (3) and (4), these subsections govern the arbitration provision and are not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act. Although the arbitration provision in the HMO contract does extend to wrongful death actions filed by a member's non-party spouse, the respondent is not bound by the arbitration provision because it does not comply with subsections (3) and (4). The Colorado Health Care Availability Act governs the arbitration provision because the McCarran-Ferguson Act exempts this provision from federal preemption by the Federal Arbitration Act. Allen v. Pacheco, 71 P.3d 375 (Colo. 2003) (disagreeing with the reasoning of the federal district court in Morrison v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, annotated below).

Subsections (3) and (4) are inconsonant with, and therefore preempted by, the Federal Arbitration Act. The Colorado Uniform Arbitration Act, § 13-22-210 et seq., places no text or form limitations on arbitration agreements. Thus, the effect of the provisions in subsection (3) and (4) is to place arbitration clauses in medical services agreements in a class apart not only from any contract but also from all other arbitration agreements. By doing so, the Health Care Availability Act singularly limits their validity. Morrison v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, 983 F. Supp. 937 (D. Colo. 1997).

If dispute resolution procedures include arbitration of professional negligence claims against health care providers who provide med- ical services, the patient must be notified of this fact in a manner consistent with the Health Care Availability Act requirements. Evans v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

Fact that agreement to arbitrate was obtained by a health maintenance organization on behalf of a doctor and nurses does not create a conflict with the Colorado Health Maintenance Organization Act; the Health Care Availability Act applies to any agreement for the provision of medical services by a health care provider. Evans v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

A doctor, nurses, and a professional entity comprised of physicians are each a "health care provider" within the meaning of subsection (12). Evans v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 902 P.2d 867 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996).

Providing a copy of the agreement to the attorney-in-fact who signed the agreement on behalf of the patient satisfies subsection (6)'s requirement that the patient receive a copy of the agreement. *Moffett v. A person who holds a medical durable power of attorney, in selecting a long-term health care facility, has the power to execute applicable admissions forms, including arbitration agreements, unless that power is restricted by the principal. Subsection (11) may not be construed in isolation from statutes governing powers of attorney. Moffett v. Life Care Ctrs. of Am., 187 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 219 P.3d 1068 (Colo. 2009).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-71-104 is similar to § 13-71-103 as it existed prior to the 1989 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Trial court has discretion concerning a prospective juror's ability to render satisfactory jury service when questions of the juror's ability to serve are raised because of a physical disability, and absent an abuse of discretion, the trial court's decision will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Janes, 942 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Coughlin, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Although the better practice is for the trial court to interview the prospective juror and enter findings pursuant to this section, trial court did not abuse its discretion by excusing the prospective juror for cause without entering such findings when juror had reported an attention deficit disorder and potential difficulty understanding testimony without taking notes. In light of the trial court's ban on note taking, the court properly determined that the potential juror's condition prevented her from performing the duties and responsibilities of a juror as required under this section. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Elements of fair cross-section requirement. To establish a prima facie violation of the fair cross-section requirement, defendant must show that: (1) The group alleged to be excluded is a distinct group in the community; (2) the representation of this group in venires is not fair and reasonable in relation to the number of such persons in the community; and (3) this underrepresentation is due to systematic exclusion of the group in the jury-selection process. State v. Janes, 942 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1997).

Defendant had no standing to assert rights of excluded juror under federal Americans with Disabilities Act where juror herself had asked to be excused due to physical disability. State v. Janes, 942 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1997).

ish surnames were on grand jury. Prosecution succeeded in offering race-neutral explanation for jury selection process. People v. Cerrone, 867 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 900 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1995).

Prosecution's failure to voir dire juror and use of peremptory challenge to exclude juror from service can demonstrate intent to discriminate because of race. The use of peremptory challenges to exclude jurors because of race violates the equal protection clause. To establish discriminatory use of peremptory challenges, the defendant must make a prima facie showing the challenges were used to discriminate against a juror because of race. The party using the peremptory challenge must have a non-racial reason for using the challenge. However, failure to voir dire can demonstrate intent to exclude jurors on the basis of race. Applying non-racial criteria for peremptory challenge differently to different jurors can also indicate a peremptory challenge used to discriminate because of race. People v. Gabler, 958 P.2d 505 (Colo. App. 1997).

The state's actions were inherently discriminatory in excluding an economic class from the opportunity to participate in grand jury service based on generalized assumptions concerning hourly wage earners. Although the state's actions were discriminatory and violated the requirements of this section, they did not prejudice the defendants who, following indictment by the grand jury, were afforded full procedural protections in their trials before petit juries. Cerrone v. People, 900 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1995).

Statute does not "eliminate" § 16-10-103. This statute was enacted after the passage of § 16-10-103 and general assembly is assumed to have been aware of that statute at that time, both statutes should be read together so as to give effect to each, particular statutes prevail over general and statutory repeal by implication is not favored, and § 16-10-103 applies only in criminal trials while this statute applies generally to all jury trials. People v. Veloz, 946 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1997).

13-71-105. Qualifications for juror service. (1) Any person who is a United States citizen and resides in a county or lives in such county more than fifty percent of the time, whether or not registered to vote, shall be qualified to serve as a trial or grand juror in such county. Citizenship and residency status on the date that the jury service is to be performed shall control.

(2) A prospective trial or grand juror shall be disqualified, based on the following grounds:

(a) Being under the age of eighteen;

(b) Inability to read, speak, and understand the English language;

(c) Inability, by reason of a physical or mental disability, to render satisfactory juror service. Any person claiming this disqualification shall submit a letter, if the jury commissioner requests it, from a licensed physician, licensed advanced practice nurse, or authorized Christian science practitioner, stating the nature of the disability and an opinion that such disability prevents the person from rendering satisfactory juror service. The physician, licensed advanced practice nurse, or authorized Christian science practitioner shall apply the following guideline: A person shall be capable of rendering satisfactory juror service if the person is able to perform a sedentary job requiring close attention for three consecutive business days for six hours per day, with short breaks in the morning and afternoon sessions.

(d) Sole responsibility for the daily care of a permanently disabled person living in the same household to the extent that the performance of juror service would cause a substantial risk of injury to the health of the disabled person. Jurors who are regularly employed at a location other than their households may not be disqualified for this reason. Any person claiming this disqualification shall, if the jury commissioner requests it, submit a letter from a licensed physician, licensed advanced practice nurse, or authorized Christian science practitioner stating the name, address, and age of the disabled person, the nature of care provided by the prospective juror, and an opinion that the performance of juror service would cause a substantial risk of injury to the disabled person.

(e) Residence outside of the county with no intention of returning to the county at any time during the succeeding twelve months;

(f) Selection and service as an impaneled trial or grand juror in any municipal, tribal, military, state, or federal court within the preceding twelve months or being scheduled for juror service within the next twelve months. Any person claiming this disqualification must submit a letter or other formal acknowledgment from the appropriate authority verifying his or her prior or pending juror service.

(g) Appearance as a prospective juror in state court in accordance with the provisions of section 13-71-120 within the current calendar year. Any person claiming this disqualification shall submit a letter or other formal acknowledgment from the appropriate authority verifying such prior juror appearance. This exemption, however, does not apply in emergency circumstances as provided for in section 13-71-112.

(h) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 32, § 2, effective August 2, 2000.)

(3) A prospective grand juror shall be disqualified if he or she has previously been convicted of a felony in this state, any other state, the United States, or any territory under the jurisdiction of the United States.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-71-109 as it existed prior to 1989.

ANNOTATION

The U.S. Constitution does not forbid states to prescribe relevant qualifications for their jurors. The states remain free to confine the selection to citizens, to persons meeting specified qualifications of age and educational attainment, and to those possessing good intelligence, sound judgment, and fair character. People v. Lee, 93 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2003).

The fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution and the equal protection clause do not apply to preemptory challenges to persons with disabilities. The fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution and the equal protection clause prohibit the use of peremptory challenges to discriminate against potential jurors based on race or gender. However, excluding jurors on the basis of a physical disability, even if it is assumed such physical disability is within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act, is not prohibited. Donelson v. Fritz, 70 P.3d 539 (Colo. App. 2002).

Section applicable to municipal courts of record. The statutory disqualifications for jury service in this section should be applied since there are no other references in the statutes to jury qualifications or disqualifications. City of Aurora v. Rhodes, 689 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1984).

With respect to the requirement that the juror be a "resident of the county", a juror summoned to a municipal court qualifies as long as he resides in that part of the county located within the territorial limits of the municipality. City of Aurora v. Rhodes, 689 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1984).

Trial court has discretion concerning a prospective juror's ability to render satisfactory jury service when questions of the juror's ability to serve are raised because of a physical disability, and absent an abuse of discretion, the trial court's decision will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Janes, 942 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1997).

Failure of juror to meet qualification is not absolute prohibition. The failure of a prospective juror to meet a qualification for jury service operates as a basis of a challenge for cause rather than as an absolute prohibition to service. Accordingly, that challenge is waived if counsel does not use reasonable diligence on voir dire to determine if a challenge for cause exists. People v. Crespin, 635 P.2d 918 (Colo. App. 1981).

Failure of prospective juror to meet a qualification for jury service operates as a basis of a challenge for cause rather than as an absolute prohibition to service. People v. Orozco, 49 P.3d 1212 (Colo. App. 2002).

Inability to understand English grounds for disqualification. If a juror is, in fact, unable to read, speak, and understand the English language, then she will be disqualified by this section. However, whether the juror was so impaired is a fact question for the trial court. People v. Rodriguez, 638 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Duncan, 33 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Lee, 93 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2003).

Findings on juror's ability to understand English binding on appeal. Where the trial court finds that a juror is able to understand, speak and read the English language adequately and where such findings are not refuted in the record, they are binding on appeal. People v. Rodriguez, 638 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Duncan, 33 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court abused its discretion by requiring a qualification to be satisfied by reliance upon the abilities of other jurors. Requiring one juror to depend on other jurors in order to understand the proceedings diminishes the role of the dependent juror and undermines the defendant's right to have the charges decided by 12 independent jurors. People v. Orozco, 49 P.3d 1212 (Colo. App. 2002).

Presumptions regarding judge's findings. Where there is sufficient evidence to support the trial judge's findings as to the English language skills of a juror without regard to the judge's personal knowledge of the juror, it is presumed that the trial judge disregarded any incompetent evidence in making his determination. People v. Rodriguez, 638 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1981).

Tests for competency set forth in this section operate as basis for challenging juror for cause. People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973).

Defendant waives objection to juror when he has knowledge but does not challenge. Where defense counsel does not on voir dire ask questions dealing with previous criminal record of jurors and defendant possesses information of juror's felony record before jury renders verdict, but does not move for new trial until after guilty verdict, defendant waives objections to competency of juror. People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973).

Knowing that a juror was in the Air Force, counsel should, at the very least, have taken the opportunity on voir dire to inquire further into why he considered himself a resident. His failure to exercise this opportunity constitutes a waiver of the residency requirement. People v. Crespin, 635 P.2d 918 (Colo. App. 1981).

Statute no longer disqualifies convicted felons whose voting rights have not been restored from serving on a jury. People v. Ellis, 148 P.3d 205 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendant had no standing to assert rights of excluded juror under federal Americans with Disabilities Act where juror herself had asked to be excused due to physical disability. State v. Janes, 942 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1997).

Juror opposed to capital punishment may be excluded. It is not error to exclude from the jury those persons who state that they would not be able to consider and impose the death penalty under any circumstances because of religious, ethical, or moral scruples against the death penalty. People v. Craig, 179 Colo. 115, 498 P.2d 942, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1077, 93 S. Ct. 690, 34 L. Ed.2d 666 (1972).

Juror's religious reservation on judging another cannot be a ground for challenge under C.R.C.P. 47(e)(1). Action Realty v. Brethouwer, 633 P.2d 522 (Colo. App. 1981).

A person is domiciled in a given county if the home or place in which his or her habitation is fixed and to which he or she has the present intention of returning after a departure or absence is situated there, regardless of the duration of the absence. People v. White, 242 P.3d 1121 (Colo. 2010).

Juror was qualified under this section to serve as a trial juror since juror had lived in the county more than fifty percent of the time for the preceding four years, although juror paid Ohio income tax and voted in Ohio, juror had lived in the county for four and one-half years, had his car registered in Colorado, was employed by the United States Air Force, and was awaiting relocation at the time of his jury service. People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-71-106. Jury commissioners. The chief judge of each judicial district shall appoint a jury commissioner for each county within that judicial district. Each jury commissioner shall be compensated as determined by the supreme court pursuant to section 13-3-105, but no court employee who serves as a jury commissioner shall receive any compensation in addition to a regular salary.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-71-105 as it existed prior to 1989.

13-71-107. Master juror list. (1) Each year, the state court administrator shall obtain from the secretary of state a voter registration list for each county in the state. The state court administrator shall also obtain licensed driver lists from the department of revenue, and, where available, the department of revenue shall match said drivers license records with the most recent address of the individual used for income tax purposes and supply any additional income tax address to the court administrator. The state court administrator may obtain other lists of residents of the state as necessary and desirable. The voter registration lists, as supplemented and modified by other lists, may be used to compile the master juror list for the following year. A copy of the master juror list that does not contain addresses of the jurors shall be open to the public for examination as a public record.

(2) Any person who has custody, possession, or control of any list to be used in compiling the master juror list shall furnish, upon request, a copy of that list to the state court administrator.

ANNOTATION

Use of voter registration lists as sole source of names for jury duty is constitutionally permissible. Craig v. Wyse, 373 F. Supp. 1008 (D. Colo. 1974).

Unless use of voter registration lists results in systematic exclusion of cognizable group or class of qualified citizens, in which case they are not constitutionally permissible as sole source of names for jury duty. Craig v. Wyse, 373 F. Supp. 1008 (D. Colo. 1974).

Persons constitutionally excluded from jury selection process. Persons under the age of 21, who had not lived in Colorado for one year, who had not lived in their precinct for at least 32 days, and who had not registered to vote or had not voted in the last election, can be excluded from the jury selection process without rendering the process unconstitutional. Craig v. Wyse, 373 F. Supp. 1008 (D. Colo. 1974).

dates in the succeeding year.

(2) In order to more equitably distribute the responsibility for juror appearance and service throughout the qualified population of each county and to avoid repeatedly summoning the same individuals for jury appearance and service, the state court administrator shall implement reasonable procedures to match prior year records of juror selection, appearance, and service in the state courts with the prospective juror names included in the master juror wheel. To the extent practical, the prior juror selection and service records shall be used to prioritize the juror names in the master juror wheel. To the extent practical, individuals with the least amount of jury appearances or service in the most recent years shall be summoned prior to individuals who have appeared or served more recently.

13-71-109. 13-71-110. Juror selection and summoning. A jury commissioner shall specify the number of trial jurors needed for each day's juror pool or for selection of a grand jury within that commissioner's county. The state court administrator shall then randomly select the specified number of jurors required from the master juror wheel and shall issue a summons to each selected prospective juror, either personally or by mail addressed to the usual residence or post-office address of the prospective juror.

13-71-111. Contents of juror summons. (1) The juror summons shall state: Whether the anticipated service is that of a trial or grand juror; the beginning date of the juror service; the name, address, hour, and room number, if any, of the courthouse or office to which the juror shall report on the first day of service; the fact that a knowing failure to obey the summons without justifiable excuse is a violation of section 18-8-612, C.R.S., and a class 3 misdemeanor punishable as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.; and such other information and instructions as are deemed appropriate by the state court administrator or the jury commissioner.

(2) Every prospective juror shall also receive with the summons:

(a) Notice of the qualifications for juror service; and

(b) Instructions to jurors for retrieving juror service acknowledgment information, as described in section 13-71-132.

13-71-112. 13-71-113. Modification of juror service. In order to meet the urgent needs of the court, a jury commissioner may modify the date, location, or other condition of trial or grand juror service and may notify the prospective juror of the modification by telephone or other appropriate means.

13-71-114. Cancellation of juror service. Whenever it appears that the number of jurors scheduled to appear is in excess of the number needed, a jury commissioner may cancel the trial or grand juror service of a prospective juror and may notify the juror by telephone or other appropriate means. Any juror whose service has been cancelled is not considered disqualified under section 13-71-105 (2) (f) but may be randomly reselected for further service within the succeeding twelve months.

13-71-115. Juror questionnaires. (1) On or before the first day of the term of trial or grand juror service, each juror shall be given a juror questionnaire requesting the following information about the juror: Name, sex, date of birth, age, residence, and marital status; the number and ages of children; educational level and occupation; whether the juror is regularly employed, self-employed, or unemployed; spouse's occupation; previous juror service; present or past involvement as a party or witness in a civil or criminal proceeding; and such other information as the jury commissioner deems appropriate after consulting with the judges in the judicial district. The questionnaire shall contain a declaration by the juror that the information supplied is, to the best of the juror's knowledge, true and an acknowledgment that a willful misrepresentation of a material fact is a class 3 misdemeanor punishable as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S. Immediately below the declaration, the questionnaire shall contain a place for the signature of the juror. A notice that the completed questionnaire is not a public record shall appear prominently on its face.

(2) Unless the court orders otherwise, the jury commissioner shall provide copies of the appropriate completed questionnaires to the trial judge and counsel for use during jury selection. With the exception of the names of qualified jurors and disclosures made during jury selection, information on the questionnaires shall be held in confidence by the court, the parties, trial counsel, and their agents. Upon the completion of jury selection, the parties and their counsel shall return all copies of the completed questionnaires to the court for immediate destruction. The original completed questionnaires for all prospective jurors shall be sealed in an envelope and retained in the court's file but shall not constitute a public record.

service pursuant to section 13-71-119.5, the person's name shall not be included in the juror pool and the court shall notify the person that he or she is excused from jury service.

ANNOTATION

Although the general rule of this section requires certain information to be made available to defense counsel, the defendant was not prejudiced by the trial court's refusal to supply defense counsel with the addresses of the jurors. People v. Vigil, 718 P.2d 496 (Colo. 1986).

Erroneous destruction of juror questionnaires is not per se prejudice. The defendant must establish some sort of prejudice in conjunction with the destruction of the juror questionnaires to show prejudice to the appeal. People v. Blankenship, 30 P.3d 698 (Colo. App. 2000).

13-71-116. Trial juror's right to one postponement. A trial juror shall have the right to one postponement of the term of juror service. Such postponement shall not last more than six months, but may extend into the next calendar year. To exercise this right, the juror shall notify the jury commissioner by telephone or in writing requesting an alternate date to which juror service may be postponed. A jury commissioner, in his or her discretion, may set the date to which the juror's service is postponed. A jury commissioner shall notify the juror by telephone or in writing of the new date.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-71-112 as it existed prior to 1989.

13-71-116.5. Postponement related to co-employee jury service. Upon notice by an employee, a jury commissioner shall postpone and reschedule the service of a summoned juror who is regularly employed by an employer with five or fewer full-time employees or their equivalent if, during the same period, another employee of the employer has been summoned for jury service. A postponement issued pursuant to this section shall not affect a person's right to a postponement of jury service pursuant to section 13-71-116.

13-71-117. Assignment of courthouse location. Every trial and grand juror shall be notified on the summons, or otherwise, to perform juror service at a designated court location within each county. The jury commissioner or the court may permit a juror to serve at a different courthouse location within the county upon a finding that service at the original location would be a hardship.

13-71-118. Telephone notice. The jury commissioner or the court may permit a trial or grand juror to be available for juror service or continued juror service upon telephone notice. Such a juror shall provide the court with a telephone number at which the juror may be reached, with certainty, and shall agree to resume juror service, if necessary, not more than one hour after receiving telephone notice.

13-71-119. Deferments and excuses - limitations. (1) It shall be the policy of this article that every trial juror shall be prepared to serve three trial days except as otherwise provided in this section or in section 13-71-104, 13-71-105, or 13-71-119.5.

(2) The court or the jury commissioner may defer or advance the term of service of the trial or grand juror upon a finding as provided in section 13-71-104, 13-71-105, or 13-71-119.5. The court may excuse a juror from grand juror service upon a finding of hardship or inconvenience, taking into consideration the length of grand juror service. The court may excuse a juror from trial juror service upon a finding of extreme hardship. The court may dismiss a trial or grand juror at any time in the best interest of justice.

(3) The court, after a hearing, may excuse and discharge an impaneled juror prior to jury deliberation upon a finding of extreme hardship, and such discharge shall not be grounds for objection or a mistrial as long as the statutorily or constitutionally required number of jurors remain able to proceed with the trial and deliberation. The court, after a hearing, may excuse and discharge a juror participating in jury deliberation only upon a finding of an emergency or for any other compelling reason. If the statutorily or constitutionally required number of jurors does not remain to hear evidence or to participate in jury deliberation after the discharge of a juror, the trial may continue with the lesser number of jurors only upon agreement of all parties on the record. The court may discharge an impaneled juror who has not appeared for juror service upon a finding that there is a strong likelihood that an unreasonable delay in the trial would occur if the court were to await the appearance of the juror. The court may exercise any authority granted in this section at any time before or during a juror's term of service.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-71-119 is similar to § 13-71-112 as it existed prior to the 1989 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Jurors excused only for statutory reasons. Jury service being an obligation of citizenship, the court should not excuse a person otherwise qualified for jury service for any reason short of the statutory criteria. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

"Undue hardship" may include undue financial burden. What constitutes "undue hardship" sufficient to excuse a juror lies within the discretion of the trial court, and includes one for whom jury service would impose an undue financial burden. People v. Reese, 670 P.2d 11 (Colo. App. 1983).

13-71-119.5. Persons entitled to be excused from jury service. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that it is the policy of this state that all qualified citizens have an obligation to serve on juries when summoned by the courts of this state unless excused in accordance with the provisions of this article.

(2) (a) (I) A person shall be excused temporarily from service as a juror if his or her jury service would cause undue or extreme physical hardship to him or her or to another person under his or her direct care or supervision.

(II) The provisions of this subsection (2) shall apply notwithstanding the fact that the person does not have sole responsibility for the care of another person as described in section 13-71-105 (2) (d).

(b) A judge or jury commissioner of the court for which a person was summoned for jury service shall determine whether jury service would cause the prospective juror or another person under his or her direct care undue or extreme physical hardship.

(c) A person who requests to be excused under this subsection (2) shall take all actions necessary to obtain a determination on the request before the date on which the person is scheduled to appear for jury duty.

(d) For purposes of this subsection (2), undue or extreme physical hardship shall be limited to circumstances in which a person:

(I) Would be required to abandon a person under his or her direct care or supervision because of the inability to obtain an appropriate substitute care provider during the period of jury service; or

(II) Would suffer physical hardship possibly resulting in illness or disease.

(e) A person who requests to be excused under the provisions of this subsection (2) may provide the judge or jury commissioner documentation that supports the request to be excused, including but not limited to medical statements from licensed physicians, proof of dependency or guardianship, or other similar documents. The judge or jury commissioner may excuse a person if the documentation clearly supports the request to be excused. The documents comprising the documentation described in this subsection (2) shall not be deemed public records and shall not be disclosed to the public.

(3) A person who is temporarily excused pursuant to this section shall become eligible for qualification as a juror when the temporary excuse expires, as determined by the court. A person may be permanently excused only if the judge or jury commissioner determines that the grounds for being excused from jury service are permanent in nature.

(4) The provisions of this section shall not apply to impaneled jurors or to deliberating jurors described in section 13-71-119.

13-71-120. Length of juror service. Trial juror service shall be for a one-day term unless a juror is assigned to or impaneled on an incompleated trial when the one-day term ends, or unless the court orders otherwise. Nothing shall prevent a trial juror from serving on more than one jury or participating in more than one trial during the term; except that a trial juror whose deliberation ended with a verdict shall not be required to participate in a second trial even though the juror may not have completed the first day of juror service at the time of the commencement of the second trial. Jurors awaiting assignment to a trial shall be discharged as early as possible after it has been determined that their services will not be needed. Grand juror service shall be for a term of twelve months unless the court discharges the jurors earlier or enlarges such term upon a finding that the efficient administration of justice so requires; except that in no event shall a grand jury serve for longer than eighteen months.

13-71-121. Extended trials. Before a jury is impaneled, the court shall inform the jurors if a trial is expected to last more than three trial days and may excuse a juror from performing juror service in that trial upon a finding of hardship or inconvenience, taking into account the expected length of the trial. Any juror so excused shall otherwise complete the term of juror service.

13-71-122. Failure to appear - delinquency notice. The jury commissioner may send a delinquency notice by certified or first-class mail to any trial or grand juror who has failed to appear for juror service. The purposes of delinquency notices shall be only to notify the jurors of their delinquent status and to rectify the problem by appropriate means. The jury commissioner shall have discretionary authority to resolve delinquent juror problems.

13-71-123. Enforcement of juror duties. The court shall take whatever action may be appropriate to enforce the provisions of this article. Upon a finding that a juror will not appear to perform or complete juror service or in response to the court's order, the court may take such action as is likely to compel the juror to appear.

13-71-125. Compensation and reimbursement. The compensation and reimbursement policy of this article shall be to prevent, insofar as possible, financial hardship for any juror because of the performance of juror service. Where financial hardship exists, the court shall attempt to place the juror in the same financial position as such juror would have been were it not for the performance of juror service.

13-71-126. Compensation of employed jurors during first three days of service. All regularly employed trial or grand jurors shall be paid regular wages, but not to exceed fifty dollars per day unless by mutual agreement between the employee and employer, by their employers for the first three days of juror service or any part thereof. Regular employment shall include part-time, temporary, and casual employment if the employment hours may be determined by a schedule, custom, or practice established during the three-month period preceding the juror's term of service.

13-71-127. Financial hardship of employer or self-employed juror. The court shall excuse an employer or a self-employed juror from the duty of compensation for trial or grand juror service upon a finding that it would cause financial hardship. When such a finding is made, a juror shall receive reasonable compensation in lieu of wages from the state for the first three days of juror service or any part thereof. Such award shall not exceed fifty dollars per day of juror service. A court hearing on an employer's extreme financial hardship shall occur no later than thirty days after the tender of the juror service acknowledgment information to the employer. The request for a court hearing shall be made in writing to the jury commissioner.

13-71-128. Reimbursement of unemployed jurors during first three days of service. Each trial or grand juror who is unemployed may apply to the jury commissioner on the first day of juror service and shall be reimbursed by the state for reasonable travel, child care, and other necessary out-of-pocket expenses, except food, for the first three days of juror service or any part thereof. The state court administrator shall establish guidelines for the reimbursement of unemployed trial and grand jurors. No award for an unemployed juror shall exceed fifty dollars per day of juror service, and the court shall approve, prior to reimbursement, any award which is outside the guidelines. Any juror who is not regularly employed, including, but not limited to, retired persons, homemakers, students, unemployed persons, and persons receiving unemployment benefits, shall be entitled to reimbursement under this section. Juror service shall not cause a person to lose unemployment benefits.

The court shall provide for reasonable costs of jury sequestration.

13-71-132. Juror service acknowledgment information - requests - payment.
(1) The juror service acknowledgment shall contain the following information: The name of the juror; the jury commissioner contact information and the number of days of juror service performed; a declaration of the duty of the employer to compensate an employed juror for the first three days, or any part thereof, of juror service; the right of an employer to be excused from such duty by the court upon a showing of extreme financial hardship; and any other information deemed appropriate by the jury commissioner. The jury commissioner shall retain juror service acknowledgment information for each juror and make it available electronically via the internet for twelve months after the juror completes his or her service.

(2) If a juror requests juror service acknowledgment information relating to his or her juror service at any time during the twelve-month period described in subsection (1) of this section, the jury commissioner shall provide the information within sixty days after the request.

(3) Trial juror payments for each juror's service shall be processed by the state by check or electronic funds transfer within ten days after the conclusion of the juror's service. Enforcement of employer's duty to compensate jurors. Any employer who fails to compensate an employed juror under the applicable provisions of this article and who has not been excused from such duty of compensation shall be liable to the employed juror. If the employer fails to compensate a juror within thirty days after tender of the juror service acknowledgment information, the juror may commence a civil action in any court having jurisdiction over the parties. 13-71-134. Penalties and enforcement remedies for harassment by employer.
(1) An employer shall not deprive an employed juror of employment or any incidents or benefits thereof, nor shall an employer harass, threaten, or coerce an employee because the employee receives a juror summons, responds thereto, performs any obligation or election of juror service as a trial or grand juror, or exercises any right under any section of this article. An employer shall make no demands upon any employed juror which will substantially interfere with the effective performance of juror service. The employed juror may commence a civil action for such damages or injunctive relief or both, as may be appropriate, for a violation of this section. The court may award treble damages and reasonable attorney fees to the juror upon a finding of willful misconduct by the employer. Any trial of such an action shall be to the court without a jury.

(2) Any employer who willfully violates this section commits willful harassment of a juror by an employer, as defined in section 18-8-614, C.R.S., which is a class 2 misdemeanor punishable as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Defendant waived the right to the defense that a corporation, and not the individual defendant, was the employer. The defendant failed to assert that she was not an "employer" until after the conclusion of the trial. Levy-Wegrzyn v. Ediger, 899 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1994).

Plaintiff is entitled to reasonable attorney fees for defending the judgment on appeal. The fundamental purpose of awarding attorney fees is to make the plaintiff whole and this purpose would be frustrated by a requirement that plaintiff pay attorney fees to defend the employer's appeal. Levy-Wegrzyn v. Ediger, 899 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1994).

13-71-135. Juror orientation program. The office of the state court administrator shall establish guidelines for the orientation of prospective jurors.

(2) Absent a court order to the contrary, upon request, the jury commissioner shall make available for inspection by counsel or pro se parties a list of prospective jurors containing the jurors' names and addresses.

ANNOTATION

Although the general rule of this section requires certain information to be made available to defense counsel, the defendant was not prejudiced by the trial court's refusal to supply defense counsel with the addresses of the jurors. People v. Vigil, 718 P.2d 496 (Colo. 1986).

13-71-137. Duties and responsibilities of interpreters for jurors who are deaf or hard of hearing. The court may provide, through the list of available resources coordinated through the Colorado commission for the deaf and hard of hearing pursuant to section 26-21-106 (4), C.R.S., a qualified interpreter, as defined in section 13-90-202 (8), to assist during a trial a juror who is deaf or hard of hearing. In the presence of the jury, the court shall instruct the qualified interpreter to make true and complete translations of all court proceedings to the juror who is deaf or hard of hearing to the best of the qualified interpreter's ability. The qualified interpreter shall be subject to the same orders and admonitions given to the jurors. The court shall permit a qualified interpreter to be present and assist a juror who is deaf or hard of hearing during the deliberations of the jury. In the presence of the jury, the court shall instruct the qualified interpreter to refrain from participating in any manner in the deliberation of the jury and to refrain from having any communications with any member of the jury regarding deliberation, except for true and complete translations of jurors' remarks made during deliberation. A jury verdict reached in the presence of a qualified interpreter, during deliberation, shall be valid.

The written motion shall be filed prior to the swearing in of the jury selected to try the case and shall be accompanied by one or more affidavits specifying the supporting facts and demographic data. If the court finds that the affidavit or affidavits, if true, demonstrate such a substantial failure, the moving party shall be entitled to present testimony by any person responsible for the implementation of this article, any records used in the selection and summoning of jurors, and any other relevant evidence. If the court determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that in selecting the jury there has been a substantial failure to comply with this article, the court shall discharge the jury panel and stay proceedings pending the summoning of a new juror pool.

(2) The procedures described in this section shall be the exclusive means by which a party may challenge a jury on the ground that the juror pool was not selected in conformity with this article.

13-71-140. Irregularity in selecting, summoning, and managing jurors. The court shall not declare a mistrial or set aside a verdict based upon allegations of any irregularity in selecting, summoning, and managing jurors, or in limiting the length of any term of juror service, or based upon any other defect in any procedure performed under this article unless the moving party objects to such irregularity or defect as soon as possible after its discovery and demonstrates specific injury or prejudice.

Alternate jurors shall be summoned in the same manner, have the same qualifications, be subject to the same examination and challenges, take the same oath, and have the same functions, powers, and privileges as regular jurors. An alternate juror who does not replace a regular juror shall be discharged at the time the jury retires to consider its verdict, unless otherwise provided by law, by agreement of the parties, or by order of the court. ### ANNOTATION

The purpose of seating an alternate juror is to have available another juror when, through unforeseen circumstances, a juror is unable to continue to serve. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984); Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

A trial court is in the best position to evaluate whether a juror is unable to serve, and its decision to excuse a juror will not be disturbed absent a gross abuse of discretion. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984); Hardesty v. Pino, 222 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2009).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-72-101 is similar to repealed § 78-6-1, C.R.S. 1963, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

This section provides for the statutory grand jury. Buchler v. District Court, 158 Colo. 205, 405 P.2d 950 (1965).

Grand jury is an adjunct of the court. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

This section fixes the time when such grand jury shall be impaneled. Buchler v. District Court, 158 Colo. 205, 405 P.2d 950 (1965).

Service for full 18 months legislative intent. By enacting this section, the general assembly intended to allow a grand jury to serve for a full 18 months. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Indictment against a defendant is not void merely because the grand jury returned the same at a term of court subsequent to the term in which it was organized. Buchler v. District Court, 158 Colo. 205, 405 P.2d 950 (1965).

Where a lawfully impaneled grand jury holds over into a term of court subsequent to the one in which it was organized, and at such succeeding term of court is still recognized by the court as a lawful body, it is a good and sufficient grand jury de facto and indictments returned by it are not void, but valid; and such is especially true where a de jure grand jury has not in the meantime been impaneled. Buchler v. District Court, 158 Colo. 205, 405 P.2d 950 (1965).

Court has authority to ensure that grand jury's function is reasonably facilitated. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Court's power relative to grand jury includes, among other things, authority to protect the grand jury from working unreasonable hours, meeting in unreasonable places, or from service under otherwise unreasonable conditions. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Power of court to discharge grand jury does not justify judicial interference with the internal affairs and investigations of a legally constituted grand jury. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Court may not dictate nor inquire into areas which are being investigated by grand jury, for to authorize such an endeavor would contravene the very purpose for which the system was devised. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Grand jury mandatory in counties of at least 100,000. The court must convene a grand jury if the county in which the grand jury is to conduct an investigation is populated by at least 100,000 inhabitants. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Additional grand jury at court's discretion. The court may exercise its discretion in ruling on a district attorney's motion to summon an additional grand jury and should not grant the request unless good cause has been shown. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Grand jury should not be utilized as handmaiden to district attorney. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Denial of petition to impanel is not abuse of discretion. Ross v. Ogburn, 646 P.2d 390 (Colo. 1982).

Motion when one grand jury inadequate to handle volume and burden of investigations. If a district attorney feels that one grand jury is inadequate to handle the volume and the burden of investigations which he has ordered, he may make a motion to the court to summon an additional grand jury. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Grand jury should not be used in routine cases or for political or other improper purposes. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

Information rather than grand jury in ordinary criminal cases. Criminal justice system in Colorado is not geared to the use of the grand jury in every criminal case, as the district attorney should utilize the information as the charging document in the ordinary case. Losavio v. Kikel, 187 Colo. 148, 529 P.2d 306 (1974).

13-72-102. Number of jurors. A grand jury shall consist of twelve persons, and the assent of nine jurors shall be necessary for the returning of a true bill; but, upon motion of the district attorney and for good cause shown, the court may cause to be convened, impaneled, and sworn a grand jury consisting of twenty-three members, and the assent of twelve members shall be necessary for the returning of a true bill when said grand jury consists of twenty-three members. At any meeting of the grand jury at least nine grand jurors shall constitute a quorum.

13-72-103. Selection of jury panel. In drawing the list of jurors, the court shall select from no less than seventy-five names thereon and from such additional lists of names as the court may order, or from such lesser number as may be called to serve as jurors, the names of either twelve or twenty-three persons who shall constitute a grand jury and four alternate grand jurors. The members of the county grand jury shall be selected by the chief judge with the advice of the district attorney. The court may close to the public part or all of the selection process when reasonably necessary to protect the grand jury process or the security of the grand jurors. The length of term served by a county grand jury shall be as provided in section 13-71-120. The court, upon its own motion or at the request of the district attorney, shall enter an order to preserve the confidentiality of all information that might identify grand jurors when reasonably necessary to protect the grand jury process or the security of the grand jurors. In the absence of such an order, upon request, the jury commissioner shall make available for inspection by members of the public a list of grand jurors containing only the grand jurors' names and juror numbers. The court may strike the name of any juror who appears to the court to be incompetent or unqualified to serve.

13-72-104. Foreman appointed - duties. Before a grand jury at any term of court is sworn or affirmed, the court shall appoint a foreman of such jury and an alternate foreman to act in the absence of the foreman, and such foreman or alternate foreman has power to administer an oath or affirmation to any and all witnesses who may be required to testify before such jury. He shall also endorse upon every bill that may be presented to a grand jury the finding of such jury that the same is "a true bill" or "not a true bill", as the case may be, and sign his name thereto before the same is returned into court.

ANNOTATION

Under this section until the bill is indorsed "a true bill", and signed and presented, it is not an indictment. Bd. of County Comm'rs v.

Graham, 4 Colo. 201 (1878) (decided under repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 95, § 61).

13-72-105. Oath of foreman - jurors. (1) Before a grand jury enters upon its duties, an oath or affirmation shall be administered to the foreman, as follows:

"You, as foreman of this inquest, do solemnly swear or affirm that you will diligently inquire into, and true presentment make, of all such matters and things as shall be given you in charge, or shall otherwise come to your knowledge touching the present service; you will present no person through malice, hatred, or ill will, and that you will leave no one unrepresented through fear, favor, or affection, or for any fee or reward or the hope or promise thereof; that you will keep secret your own counsel and that of your fellows touching the present service, and that in all your presentments, you will present the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, according to the best of your skill and understanding, so help you God.”

(2) An oath or affirmation shall be administered to the other grand jurors as follows: “You and each of you do solemnly swear or affirm that you will well and truly keep and observe the oath that” A.B., “your foreman, has just taken before you, so help you God.”

ANNOTATION

Annotator’s note. Since § 13-72-105 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 95, § 62, a relevant case construing those provisions has been included in the annotations to this section.

Generally mere juror prejudice will not invalidate an indictment. The general rule is that neither the bias nor prejudice of a grand juror, nor his interest in a prosecution, other than a direct pecuniary interest, nor the fact that he has formed, or expressed an opinion will so disqualify him as to render invalid indictments returned by the grand jury. But this would not be true where jurors had determined, through malice or bribery, to violate their oaths. Joslyn v. People, 67 Colo. 297, 184 P. 375 (1919).

If juror enters into agreement to violate oath, he is in contempt. Under this section if, before taking oath, a juror has entered into an agreement or conspiracy to violate it, and as a grand juror he is engaged in consummating that agreement or conspiracy, he is clearly in contempt and may be punished. Joslyn v. People, 67 Colo. 297, 184 P. 375 (1919).

13-72-106. Attendance excused - discharged - prospective jurors. At any time for cause shown, the court may excuse a grand juror permanently and, if so excused, the court shall select a replacement grand juror from one of the four alternate grand jurors chosen pursuant to section 13-72-103. The excuse or discharge of a grand juror shall be in accordance with the procedures specified in the “Colorado Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act”, article 71 of this title. The discharge of any such grand juror shall in no way or manner affect any indictment found by the grand jury as it was composed either before or after such charge.

Editor’s note: Amendments to this section by House Bill 89-1252 and Senate Bill 89-041 were harmonized.

13-72-107. Juror giving information - oath. When any member of a grand jury gives information touching any matter pending before such jury, he shall take an oath or affirmation in the same manner as other witnesses.

13-73-101. Petition for impaneling - determination by chief judge. (1) The general assembly finds that the state grand jury exists because of the need to investigate and prosecute crime without regard to county or judicial district boundaries in cases involving organized crime, criminal activity in more than one judicial district, or unusual difficulties in the investigation or adjudication of a matter or cases in which the attorney general has authority to prosecute. The state grand jury is intended, therefore, to be a law enforcement tool with statewide jurisdiction.

(2) When the attorney general deems it to be in the public interest to convene a grand jury that has jurisdiction extending beyond the boundaries of any single county, the attorney general may petition the chief judge of any district court for an order in accordance with the provisions of this article. Said chief judge may, for good cause shown, order the impaneling of a state grand jury that shall have statewide jurisdiction. In making a determination as to the need for impaneling a state grand jury, the judge shall require a showing that the matter cannot be effectively handled by a grand jury impaneled pursuant to article 72 or 74 of this title, such grand juries being referred to in this article as a "county grand jury" or a "judicial district grand jury", respectively.

Grand jury may return indictment based on facts inquired into. A properly impaneled grand jury may return an indictment based on facts discovered by it during investigation of matters it is authorized to inquire into when the facts supporting the indictment show the commission of offenses beyond its authorization. People v. Hower, 626 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1981).

The statutory powers granted to the attorney general under § 24-31-101 are not enlarged by this article. People ex rel. Tooley v. District Court, 190 Colo. 486, 549 P.2d 774 (1976).

Neither by express provision nor by implication did the general assembly grant the attorney general the right to prosecute all indictments returned by a state grand jury. People ex rel. Tooley v. District Court, 190 Colo. 486, 549 P.2d 774 (1976).

This section expressly gives the attorney general the power to petition the chief judge of a district court for the impanelment of a state grand jury, and no executive order by the governor is required. People v. Valdez, 928 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1996).

Impaneling of statewide grand jury was proper where district court chief judge found that attorney general had made a showing of good cause, matter could not be effectively handled by county grand jury, and it was in the 13-73-102. Powers and duties - applicable law - rules and regulations. A state grand jury shall have the same powers and duties and shall function in the same manner as a county grand jury, except that its jurisdiction shall extend throughout the state. The law applicable to county grand juries shall apply to state grand juries except when such law is inconsistent with the provisions of this article. The supreme court may promulgate such procedural rules as it deems necessary to govern the procedures of state grand juries.

13-73-103. List of prospective jurors - selection - membership - term. The state court administrator, upon receipt of an order of a chief judge of the district court granting a petition to impanel a state grand jury, shall prepare a list of prospective state grand jurors drawn from existing jury lists of the several counties. In preparing the list of prospective state grand jurors, the state court administrator need not include names of jurors from every county within the state, but the state court administrator may select jurors from counties near the county in which the chief judge requesting the list presides. The chief judge granting the order shall impanel the state grand jury from the list compiled by the state court administrator. A state grand jury shall be composed of twelve or twenty-three members, as provided in section 13-72-102, but not more than one-fourth of the members of the state grand jury shall be residents of any one county. The members of the state grand jury shall be selected by the chief judge with the advice of the attorney general. The chief judge may close to the public part or all of the selection process when reasonably necessary to protect the grand jury process or the security of the grand jurors. The length of term served by a state grand jury shall be as provided in section 13-71-120. The court, upon its own motion or at the request of the attorney general, shall enter an order to preserve the confidentiality of all information that might identify state grand jurors when reasonably necessary to protect the state grand jury process or the security of the state grand jurors. In the absence of such an order, upon request, the state court administrator shall make available for inspection by members of the public a list of state grand jurors containing only the state grand jurors' names and juror numbers.

ANNOTATION

No authority of attorney general or designee to confer full grand jury subpoena power on police officers. Responsibility to present evidence to statewide grand jury pursuant to this section combined with authority to appoint deputies pursuant to § 24-31-103 does not give the attorney general or his designee authority to confer full grand jury subpoena power on police officers by naming them as strike force investigators. People v. Corr, 682 P.2d 20 (Colo. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 855, 105 S. Ct. 181, 83 L. Ed.2d 115 (1984).

13-73-107. Return of indictment or presentment - designation of venue - consolidation of indictments - sealing of indictment. (1) Any indictment by a state grand jury shall be returned to the chief judge who is supervising the statewide grand jury without any designation of venue. Thereupon, the chief judge shall, by order, designate any county in the state as the county of venue for the purpose of trial. Once venue is designated by the chief judge, a change of venue may be granted only as provided by article 6 of title 16, C.R.S. The chief judge may, by order, direct the consolidation of an indictment returned by a county grand jury with an indictment returned by a state grand jury and fix venue for trial. (2) The court, upon motion of the attorney general, shall order the indictment to be sealed and no person may disclose the existence of the indictment until the defendant is in custody or has been admitted to bail except when necessary for the issuance or execution of a warrant or summons.

II. PARAGRAPH (a).

A. Applicability.

Law reviews. For article, "State Statutes of Limitation Contrasted and Compared", see 3 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 106 (1931).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-101 (1)(a) is similar to former § 13-80-107 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (a).

This provision applies only to personal actions. Folda Real Estate Co. v. Jacobsen, 75 Colo. 16, 223 P. 748 (1924).

This provision applies only to actions on contract. Bonfils v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 Colo. 563, 189 P. 775 (1920); People ex rel. Fed. Land Bank v. Ginn, 106 Colo. 417, 106 P.2d 479 (1940).

Such as where a breach of the covenant of seisin, if any, occurred at the time of the giving of the deed in 1921, and action thereon was not commenced until 1926, the right of action was barred by this section. Stone v. Rozich, 88 Colo. 399, 297 P. 999 (1931).

Covenant of seisin is broken, if at all, when made. The general rule is that a covenant of seisin is broken, if at all, when it is made, hence a counterclaim for breach of the covenant of seisin asserted in a foreclosure action more than three years after delivery of the conveyance in which the alleged breach occurred is barred by this section. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962).

action upon such right is barred by statute. Berkey v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 48 Colo. 104, 110 P. 197 (1910).

It bars action three years after it accrues. Since a covenant is a personal action, it seems, therefore, to come within the class of actions described in this provision and is barred in three years from the date the cause of action accrues. Hayden v. Patterson, 39 Colo. 15, 88 P. 437 (1906).

Infringing contractual rights covered by former § 13-80-110. Statutory claim alleging a tortious discriminatory wrong, infringing contractual rights, was covered by the provisions of former § 13-80-110 (now § 13-80-102 (1)(a)). Zuniga v. AMFAC Foods, Inc., 580 F.2d 380 (10th Cir. 1978).

A purchase and sale contract for corporate stock is governed by this provision. An action against executors of a deceased stockholder on alleged contract for the purchase and transfer of corporate stock, brought more than eight years after right of transfer accrued, was barred by this provision. Goeddel v. Aircraft Fin., Inc., 152 Colo. 419, 382 P.2d 812 (1963).

As is a claim based on a contract filed in an estate more than seven years after the breach thereof, was barred by the statute of limitations. Koon v. Barmettler, 134 Colo. 221, 301 P.2d 713 (1956).

Promissory estoppel claims arising from the failure of a retiree's health insurance policy to cover a heart transplant were contract claims and, accordingly, were barred by the three-year statute of limitations. Berg v. State Bd. of Agric., 919 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1996).

Contractor's claims for breach of contract, quantum meruit, rescission, and restitution for mistake are governed by the provisions of this section rather than the two-year limitation provision for tort claims in § 13-80-102. CAMAS Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 36 P.3d 135 (Colo. App. 2001).

This provision is sufficiently broad to encompass an action on an implied warranty of fitness of a house. F & S Constr. Co. v. Berube, 322 F.2d 782 (10th Cir. 1963); Miehle Co. v. Smith-Brooks Printing Co., 303 F. Supp. 501 (D. Colo. 1969).

The implied warranty must arise from an express contract. Where admission document mentions only general duty nursing and does not refer to conditions of hospital or fitness of premises for plaintiff, there may be implied warranty that hospital is fit for intended use by patient, but no implied warranty arises from terms of admission document. Therefore, general statute of limitations relating to express contracts is inapplicable. Adams v. Poudre Valley Hosp. Dist., 31 Colo. App. 252, 502 P.2d 1127 (1972).

A suit for specific performance based on contract is governed by this provision. Notwithstanding plaintiff's use of the term specific performance, when the action, from the facts as pled, is on a breach of contract wherein the plaintiff seeks a liquidated, determinable amount of money due him from the defendant, this action is governed by the statute permitting an action to be commenced within six years for actions of debt founded upon any contract and is not governed by the three-year statute of limitations. Uhl v. Fox, 31 Colo. App. 13, 498 P.2d 1177 (1972).

If the contractual shortening of a statute of limitations is prohibited, the contractual and statutory limitations periods are incompatible and, therefore, in conflict. Grant Family Farms, Inc. v. Colo. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 155 P.3d 537 (Colo. App. 2006).

Subsection (1)(a) contains no language prohibiting the contractual shortening of the three-year limitations period; therefore, a contractual period shorter than the three-year period is not in conflict with subsection (1)(a). Grant Family Farms, Inc. v. Colo. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 155 P.3d 537 (Colo. App. 2006).

Under statute of limitations applicable to actions for trespass, cause of action in seepage cases accrues when damaged land is first visibly affected. Hickman v. N. Sterling Irrig. Dist., 748 P.2d 1349 (Colo. App. 1987).

It was not until a judgment was rendered against insured that the insured or its assignee could have brought a failure to indemnify action against the insurer since that assignee had not sustained any damage until it had obtained a judgment against the insured from whom it was unable to collect. Flatiron Paving v. Great Sw. Fire, 812 P.2d 668 (Colo. App. 1990).

Action was within the three-year period following the accrual of claims where judgment against insured was dated November 19, 1984, and insured's assignee's action against insurer was commenced May 14, 1987. Flatiron Paving v. Great Sw. Fire, 812 P.2d 668 (Colo. App. 1990).

This provision applies to a claim for breach of express warranty to repair or replace even if the party against whom the claim is asserted is protected by the "contractor's statute", § 18-80-104. Hersh Cos. v. Highline Vill. Assocs., 30 P.3d 221 (Colo. 2001).

Statute of limitations under this section for action in breach of warranty did not start to run until plaintiffs knew, or should have known, of the government's adverse possession of the property. Upton v. Griffiths, 831 P.2d 504 (Colo. App. 1992).

"Liquidated debt" and "unliquidated, determinable amount" construed. For purposes of determining whether this section or § 13-80-103.5 applies, a debt is deemed "liquidated" if the amount due is capable of ascertainment by reference to an agreement or by simple computation. A debtor's dispute of or defenses against such claim, or any setoff or counterclaim interposed, does not affect this result. Similarly, if a contract fixes a price per unit of performance, a claim based thereon is "determinable" even though the number of units performed must be proven and is subject to dispute. Rotenberg v. Richards, 899 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1995).

A claim based on quantum meruit is not liquidated or determinable, because it seeks only reasonable compensation for services rendered, in an amount to be determined by the fact-finder. Rotenberg v. Richards, 899 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1995).

Where a statute requires presentment of a claim to a county and prohibits suit until the claim has been rejected, the statute of limitations is tolled between the time the claim is filed and the time it is acted upon by the county where there is no suggestion that contractor failed to prosecute its claims in good faith and with diligence. CAMAS Colo., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 36 P.3d 135 (Colo. App. 2001).

B. Nonapplicability.

This provision does not apply to an action against a stockholder for an assessment upon his stock. Sweet v. Barnard, 66 Colo. 526, 182 P. 22 (1919).

Nor to a proceeding before the utilities commission to recover excessive charges. This provision has no application to a proceeding before the utilities commission demanding reparation for an excessive charge by a common carrier. The proceeding is not an action within the meaning of the statute. Bonfils v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 Colo. 563, 189 P. 775 (1920).

A claim of divorced wife for support money for minor child held not barred under this provision. Burke v. Burke, 127 Colo. 257, 255 P.2d 740 (1953).

This provision is not applicable to action on debt founded upon a contract. Notwithstanding plaintiff's use of the term specific performance, when the action, from the facts as pled, is on a breach of contract wherein the plaintiff seeks a liquidated, determinable amount of money due him from the defendant, this action is governed by the statute permitting an action to be commenced within six years for actions of debt founded upon any contract and is not governed by the three-year statute of limitations. Uhl v. Fox, 31 Colo. App. 13, 498 P.2d 1177 (1972).

Nor an action alleging negligence and implied warranty. Under Colorado law, actions alleging negligence and implied warranty were subject to six-year statute of limitations, rather than three-year statute. Miehle Co. v. Smith-Brooks Printing Co., 303 F. Supp. 501 (D. Colo. 1969).

This provision nonapplicable to an action on the official bond of a county clerk and recorder founded upon his alleged negligence in erroneously transcribing the legal description of real property contained in a deed of trust on the records in his office was an ex delicto action, hence this section did not apply. People ex rel. Fed. Land Bank v. Ginn, 106 Colo. 417, 106 P.2d 479 (1940).

Nor any action where the state is a party or considerably interested. The statute may not be invoked against the state, and even though the state as such was not a party to this action, it is unquestionably true that a considerable part of the money stolen belonged to the state. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 100 Colo. 398, 68 P.2d 555 (1937).

The specific statute of limitations provision in § 38-26-105 controls over the general civil action provision in this section, because the provisions of § 38-26-105 specifically apply to the construction project that is the subject of the plaintiff's action. Pat's Constr. Serv., Inc. v. Ins. Co. of the W., 141 P.3d 885 (Colo. App. 2005).

The statute of limitations does not apply to an action to quiet title brought by a person in possession of real property. Martinez v. Archuleta-Padia, 143 P.3d 1112 (Colo. App. 2006).

III. PARAGRAPH (c).

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-101 (1)(c) is similar to former §§ 13-80-108 (1)(a) and 13-80-109 as said sections existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (c).

Within limit of this provision doctrine of laches applies. This provision fixes a limitation beyond which the courts cannot extend the time, but within this limit the peculiar doctrine of courts of equity should prevail as to laches. Great W. Mining Co. v. Woodmas, 14 Colo. 90, 23 P. 908 (1890).

Federal courts apply doctrine in analogy to statutes of limitations. The federal courts, sitting in equity, are not bound by the statutes of limitations of the states, but they apply the doctrine of laches in analogy to them. If a suit discloses no extraordinary facts or circumstances, they apply the bar of laches at the expiration of the time prescribed by the statute of the state for the limitation of an action at law of like character, but if unusual conditions of extraordinary circumstances make it inequitable to allow the prosecution of a suit after a briefer, or to forbid its maintenance after a longer period than that fixed by the statute, the chancellor will not be bound by the statute, but will determine the extraordinary case in accordance with the equities which condition it. Redd v. Brun, 157 F.

In federal diversity suits this provision applies at law and equity. When jurisdiction of the federal court is based solely on the diversity of citizenship of the parties, this provision is applicable to equitable as well as to legal actions. Under such circumstances recovery cannot be had in the federal court if the law of the forum would bar recovery had the action been brought in the state court. Cont'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Tri-State Gen. Agency, Inc., 185 F. Supp. 208 (D. Colo. 1960).

This section in no way bars the admission of evidence. The rule in Colorado is that parties who rely upon fraud and upon failure to discover it in order to avoid the bar must allege and prove not only when the fraud was discovered, but the facts and circumstances under which it was obtained. Defendant could not be liable for fraudulent acts discovered over three years from the date on which the action was begun. The statute of limitations goes to the cause of action and not to the evidence in support of it. The statute does not bar the admission of evidence of continuing representations as in this case. J. F. White Eng'r Corp. v. Gen. Ins. Co. of Am., 351 F.2d 231 (10th Cir. 1965).

It was the intent of the general assembly in enacting this section to control all actions brought by a patient arising out of the patient-physician relationship. Koch v. Sadler, 759 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1988).

The statute of limitations for a lawsuit brought under § 38-10-117 is three years. In re Walden, 207 Bankr. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

B. Applicability.

This provision applies only to personal actions. Folda Real Estate Co. v. Jacobsen, 75 Colo. 16, 223 P. 748 (1924).

This section applies to actions under section 10(b) of the federal Securities Exchange Act. An action under section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 arising from alleged violation of rule 10b-5(1) and (3) might, on certain facts, more accurately be deemed similar to an action "based upon implied or constructive fraud", for which subsection (1) provides a three-year statute of limitations. Trussell v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 228 F. Supp. 757 (D. Colo. 1964).

Either because violation is constructive fraud. Most acts violative of section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act would be readily cognizable in Colorado as "constructive fraud", or indeed, as traditional common-law fraud. Trussell v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 228 F. Supp. 757 (D. Colo. 1964).

Or is subject to the residuary clause. Subsequent to this enactment the three-year residuary statute of limitations might arguably have applied to an action under section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Trussell v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 228 F. Supp. 757 (D. Colo. 1964).

This provision applies to private suits under section 10 (b) of the federal Securities Exchange Act. There is no federal statute of limitations applicable to actions brought under section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The limitations statute of the forum state in which the alleged prohibited acts occurred applies to a private suit for damages under section 10(b), the Colorado statute of limitation for fraud, which requires that suit be brought within three years after discovery of fraud by the aggrieved party, applies. deHaas v. Empire Petroleum Co., 435 F.2d 1223 (10th Cir. 1970).

Former § 13-80-108 applied to actions under section 10(b) of the federal Securities Exchange Act since there is no federal statute of limitations on these actions. Laymon v. McComb, 524 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1981).

There is no federal statute of limitations applicable to provisions of sections 10(b) and 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

Federal law may control tolling of limitations when state statute applicable. Though the limitations period for an action brought in federal district court based on claims arising under section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933 and sections 10(b) and 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is supplied by the law of Colorado, the circumstances which will toll the running of the statute are matters of federal law. Ohio v. Peterson, Lowry, Rall, Barber & Ross, 472 F. Supp. 402 (D. Colo. 1979), aff'd, 651 F.2d 687 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 895, 102 S. Ct. 392, 70 L. Ed.2d 209 (1981).

Federal law governs tolling of the statute. Although the limitation period is supplied by the forum state of Colorado, it is a matter of federal law as to the circumstances that will toll a state statute applied to private actions under the securities laws. Under the federal doctrine of tolling as applied to fraud actions where the party injured by the fraud remains in ignorance of it without any fault or want of diligence or care on his part, the bar of the statute does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered, though there be no special circumstances or efforts on the part of the party committing the fraud to conceal it from the knowledge of the other party. deHaas v. Empire Petroleum Co., 435 F.2d 1223 (10th Cir. 1970).

Former § 13-80-108 applied to civil claims under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. Victoria Oil Co. v. Lancaster Corp., 587 F. Supp. 429 (D. Colo. 1984).

Statute of limitations questions may be appropriately resolved by a F.R.C.P. 12 (b) motion. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

This provision is applicable to transfers of land obtained by undue influence. If a grantee obtains transfers of land by exerting undue influence over the grantor, and the transfers were due to no other cause, this section of the statute of limitations would apply. James v. James, 75 Colo. 164, 225 P. 208 (1924); Blizzard v. Penley, 186 F. Supp. 746 (D. Colo. 1960).

Action for damages for fraudulent conspiracy is barred after three years by this section. Pipe v. Smith, 5 Colo. 146 (1879); Farncomb v. City & County of Denver, 64 Colo. 13, 171 P. 66 (1917); Littlejohn v. Grand Int'l Bhd. of Locomotive Eng'rs, 92 Colo. 275, 20 P.2d 311 (1933).

An action to set aside a decree obtained without notice, which to the prejudice of the plaintiff substantially modifies and changes the rights of the parties as set forth in a former decree entered in an adjudication of priorities to the use of water, is not brought for the purpose of determining the priority of appropriation to water but is purely one for relief on the ground of fraud, and if any statute of limitation is applicable it is this provision. Peck Lateral Ditch Co. v. Pella Irrigating Ditch Co., 19 Colo. 222, 34 P. 988 (1893).

An action upon a promissory note to recover a personal judgment, and, incidentally, to foreclose a lien on shares of stock, although involving the sufficiency of the assignment of such stock, is not an action for relief on the ground of fraud and so barred by this section. Murto v. Lemon, 19 Colo. App. 314, 75 P. 160 (1904); Equitable Sec. Co. v. Johnson, 36 Colo. 377, 85 P. 840 (1906).

This provision applies to frauds perpetrated by those not bearing a fiduciary relation to the party defrauded. Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900).

This provision does not apply to an action to have the foreclosure of a trust deed set aside for fraud. Barlow v. Hitzler, 40 Colo. 109, 90 P. 90 (1907).

Real estate statutes of limitations are elsewhere. The subsequent passage of specific limitation statutes to real estate actions contained in § 38-41-101 et seq. seems conclusive that these sections do not, and never were intended to, apply as limitations upon actions of that kind. Munson v. Marks, 52 Colo. 553, 124 P. 187 (1912).

Thus where a plaintiff asked for a money judgment for damages resulting from fraud in a real estate transaction, it is held that this provision did not apply. Ahart v. Sutton, 79 Colo. 145, 244 P. 306 (1926).

This provision has no application to a bill to remove a cloud upon title. Elder v. Rich- mond Gold & Silver Mining Co., 58 F. 536 (8th Cir. 1893); Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900); Ballard v. Golob, 34 Colo. 417, 83 P. 376 (1905); Munson v. Marks, 52 Colo. 553, 124 P. 187 (1912); Munson v. Keim, 53 Colo. 576, 127 P. 1026 (1912).

Section possibly applicable to § 11-51-123. It is apparent that, under one or another of three statutes, a three-year statute of limitations was provided by Colorado law for civil actions arising out of § 11-51-123. Ohio v. Peterson, Lowry, Rall, Barber & Ross, 472 F. Supp. 402 (D. Colo. 1979), aff'd, 651 F.2d 687 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 895, 102 S. Ct. 392, 70 L. Ed.2d 209 (1981).

Former § 13-80-108 inapplicable to breach of fiduciary duties. Former § 13-80-108 was not applicable to claims premised on breach of fiduciary duties, or constructive trust, or negligence. Morgan v. Dain Bosworth, 545 F. Supp. 953 (D. Colo. 1982); Elk River Assocs. v. Huskin, 691 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1984).

Paragraph (c) applies to cases brought under the federal Commodity Exchange Act. Ebrahimi v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 852 F.2d 516 (10th Cir. 1988).

Neither § 13-80-102 (a) nor § 13-80-102 (g) applies to a claim brought under § 43 (a) of the federal Lanham Act. Instead, Colorado's three-year statute of limitations for fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, and deceit, paragraph (c) of this section, governs such claims. Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

Paragraph (c) applies to fraudulent conveyance actions, and the action accrues on the date that such fraud is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. In re Munoz, 111 Bankr. 928 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

Paragraph (c) does not apply to motions for relief from judgment on grounds of fraud under C.R.C.P. 60(b)(2). In re Adoption of P.H.A., 899 P.2d 345 (Colo. App. 1995).

Mere knowledge that product was defective is not knowledge which would enable plaintiff to discover fraud in connection with transaction. Balistreri Greenhouses v. Roper Corp., 767 P.2d 736 (Colo. App. 1988), cert. dismissed, 773 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1989).

Whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations is normally a jury fact question, but if the complaint shows the action was brought after the statute of limitations period and the defendant has pled the statute of limitations, the plaintiff has the burden to show tolling of the statute of limitations. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

IV. PARAGRAPH (d).

Discovery rule is applicable to wrongful death actions. Rauschenberger v. Radetsky, 745 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1987).

This section, and not the California statute of limitations for tort actions, through operation of the borrowing statute, § 13-80-110, applies to action filed by Colorado resident against a Colorado resident that resulted from an accident that took place in California, if the action is within the scope of the Colorado No Fault Act. Grulke v. Erickson, 920 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1995).

V. PARAGRAPH (f).

Law reviews. For article, "Conclusiveness of United States Oil Shale Placer Mining Claim Patents", see 43 Den. L. Ctr. J. 24 (1966).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-101 (1)(f) is similar to former § 13-80-114 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (f).

This provision applies only to personal actions. Folda Real Estate Co. v. Jacobsen, 75 Colo. 16, 223 P. 748 (1924).

This provision is applicable in a suit to enforce a trust, constructive or otherwise. Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900); James v. James, 75 Colo. 164, 225 P. 208 (1924); Vandewiele v. Vandewiele, 110 Colo. 556, 136 P.2d 523 (1943).

To suit against purchaser from trustee who conveyed in contravention of trust. One who purchases property from a trustee who conveys in contravention of his trust is a trustee by construction of law, and in no sense the trustee of an express trust. He holds in hostility to all the world, and whoever would assert the fiduciary character of his holding must bring his action within the limitation prescribed by this provision. Harding v. Burris, 52 Colo. 132, 119 P. 1063 (1911).

In suit to compel specific performance by trustees, this provision is applicable. Farris v. Wirt, 16 Colo. App. 1, 63 P. 946 (1901).

When the action is leased on an existing trust, this provision applies. Indemnity Ins. Co. of N. Am. v. Smith, 101 Colo. 61, 70 P.2d 109 (1930).

For applicability to guardian's handling of a minor's estate, see Parsons v. Shackleford, 117 Colo. 545, 188 P.2d 437 (1948).

The existence of a fiduciary relationship between directors and stockholders makes this provision applicable. Hall v. Swan, 117 Colo. 349, 188 P.2d 437 (1947); Polk v. Hergert Land & Cattle Co., 5 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2000).

This provision applies to an action to foreclose a deed of trust. See Rowe v. Mulvane, 25 Colo. App. 502, 139 P. 1041 (1914).

Daughter's claim for breach of fiduciary duty alleging that she was rightful owner of winning lottery ticket taken by mother was proper under this provision but time-barred due to three-year statute of limitations. Curtis v. Counce, 32 P.3d 585 (Colo. App. 2001).

This provision does not apply to action to remove cloud of title. Manson v. Marks, 52 Colo. 553, 124 P. 187 (1912); Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Zehr, 54 Colo. 185, 129 P. 828 (1913).

Not to an action against a stockholder for an assessment. Sweet v. Barnard, 66 Colo. 526, 182 P. 22 (1919).

This section does not apply in a case where partnership property is held in trust, the trust being partly discharged and never denied. Heuschkel v. Wagner, 78 Colo. 61, 239 P. 873 (1925).

The existence of a fiduciary relationship of a financial planner or investment adviser is a material fact that must be determined before the limitation on a breach of fiduciary duty can be determined. Johnston v. Cigna Corp., 916 P.2d 643 (Colo. App. 1996).

A claim for relief under (f) accrues when the breach is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Anderson v. Somatogen, Inc., 940 P.2d 1079 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because record established that plaintiff knew or should have known of the existence of the alleged breach of fiduciary duty by defendant over three years prior to filing her claim for breach of fiduciary duty, the trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment and dismissing plaintiff's claims. Colburn v. Kopit, 59 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2002).

VI. PARAGRAPH (h).

Under paragraph (h), actions for replevin or for taking, detaining, or converting goods or chattels must be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues. A cause of action for wrongful possession of personal property, goods, or chattels accrues at the time the wrongful possession is discovered or should have been discovered through reasonable diligence. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court found that, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, claimant should have discovered alleged wrongful possession of rugs in 1992 when they were not returned with paintings. Because claimant did not file return of the rugs until 1997, two years after the statute of limitations had run, no error by trial court in granting partial summary judgment for estate as to that part of claim. In re Estate of Krotiuk, 12 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2000).

Reference in paragraph (h) to § 13-80-103.5 does not pertain to the phrase "all actions to recover a liquidated debt or an unliquidated, determinable amount of money due to the person bringing the action"; such language pertains to actions for breach of contract. Curtis v. Counce, 32 P.3d 585 (Colo. App. 2001).

VII. PARAGRAPH (j).

Paragraph (j) applies to tort action brought by automobile accident victim against driver of another vehicle under the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act. Applicability of paragraph (j) is not limited to actions brought by insured against insurer and the more specific language of paragraph (j) controls over the more general two-year statute of limitations. Cox v. Jones, 802 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd, 828 P.2d 218 (Colo. 1992).

Plaintiff's claim was intertwined with the no fault act and subject to the three-year statute of limitations in subsection (1)(j), rather than the general two-year limitation, where plaintiff was obligated to pay and did pay benefits required under the act, the plaintiff's action was specifically authorized by the act, and the action was brought because the vehicle driven by the defendant was not insured as required under the act. Amco Ins. Co. v. Rockwell, 940 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1997).

Statute of limitations for personal injury action arising under the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act begins to run on the date that both the physical injury and its cause are known or should have been known by exercise of reasonable diligence, even though action may not be filed until it is reasonably expected that medical expenses will exceed $2,500. Jones v. Cox, 828 P.2d 218 (Colo. 1992).

Three-year statute of limitation applies to personal injury actions filed by an insured motorist against an insured motorist involved in an automobile accident and such statute of limitation begins to run from the date the plaintiff knows or should know of the physical injury and its cause. Lee v. Bettale, 829 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1992).

Where actual payment was an element of plaintiff's claim under § 10-4-713 (2)(a), the plaintiff's right to bring a direct action for reimbursement did not accrue until the benefits were actually paid. The statute of limitations began to run on the date of payment and not on the date of the accident. Sakala v. Safeco Ins. Co., 833 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1992).

Paragraph (j) applies to tort actions brought against a sheriff's department arising from an alleged automobile accident involving a departmental vehicle. Because statutes of limitation are in derogation of a valid claim, the longer period of limitations in paragraph (j) should prevail over the shorter period in § 13-80-103 (1)(c) which could arguably be applicable in this situation. Reider v. Dawson,

When a claim under the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act involves a public entity the time limit for filing an action is governed by this section rather than § 13-80-102, the governmental immunity section. Reg'l Transp. Dist. v. Voss, 890 P.2d 663 (Colo. 1995).

VIII. PARAGRAPH (k).

Law reviews. For article, "Statutes of Limitation in the Conflict of Laws Borrowing Statutes", see 32 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 287 (1960).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-101 (1)(k) is similar to former § 13-80-119 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (k).

This provision does not violate full faith and credit clause of constitution. The constitutional provision requiring full faith and credit to be given the judgments of other states is not violated by a statute imposing a reasonable period of limitation upon the bringing of suits on such judgments. A six-year period of limitation is not unreasonable. Kelly v. Heller, 74 Colo. 470, 222 P. 648 (1924).

This provision does not bar a cause of action which accrued without the state more than six years before the commencement of the action, but only that it shall be lawful to plead the same in bar of the action. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953).

This provision and former § 13-80-118 (now § 13-80-110) should be construed together as an entirety. Simon v. Wilnes, 97 Colo. 78, 47 P.2d 406 (1935).

The statute of limitation in former § 13-80-119 was not applicable to filings under the uniform enforcement of foreign judgments act, § 13-53-101 et seq. Hunter Tech., Inc. v. Scott, 701 P.2d 645 (Colo. App. 1985).

IX. PARAGRAPH (n).

Motorcycle is a motor vehicle for purposes of the phrase "arises out of the use or operation of a motor vehicle" in subsection (1)(n). Gonzales v. City & County of Denver, 998 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 17 P.3d 137 (Colo. 2001).

Where injury to plaintiff arose out of his own operation of motorcycle, plaintiff's tort action arose out of the use or operation of a motor vehicle and three-year statute of limitation under subsection (1)(n) applies rather than two-year limit under § 13-80-102 (1)(a). Court declined to read a limitation into the statute that subsection (1)(n) of this section only applied to injuries arising out of the alleged tortfeasor's use or operation of a motor vehicle.

Gonzales v. City & County of Denver, 998 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 17 P.3d 137 (Colo. 2001).

13-80-102. General limitation of actions - two years. (1) The following civil actions, regardless of the theory upon which suit is brought, or against whom suit is brought, shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action accrues, and not thereafter:

(a) Tort actions, including but not limited to actions for negligence, trespass, malicious abuse of process, malicious prosecution, outrageous conduct, interference with relationships, and tortious breach of contract; except that this paragraph (a) does not apply to any tort action arising out of the use or operation of a motor vehicle as set forth in section 13-80-101 (1) (n);

(b) All actions for strict liability, absolute liability, or failure to instruct or warn;

(c) All actions, regardless of the theory asserted, against any veterinarian;

(d) All actions for wrongful death;

(e) Repealed.

(f) All actions against any public or governmental entity or any employee of a public or governmental entity for which insurance coverage is provided pursuant to article 14 of title 24, C.R.S.;

(g) All actions upon liability created by a federal statute where no period of limitation is provided in said federal statute;

(h) All actions against any public or governmental entity or any employee of a public or governmental entity, except as otherwise provided in this section or section 13-80-103;

(i) All other actions of every kind for which no other period of limitation is provided;

(j) All actions brought under section 42-6-204, C.R.S.;

(k) All actions brought under section 13-21-109 (2).

Source: L. 86: Entire article R&RE, p. 696, § 1, effective July 1; (1)(j) added, p. 707, § 2, effective July 1. L. 87: (1)(b) amended and (1)(e) repealed, pp. 567, 569, §§ 2, 8, effective July 1. L. 88: (1)(c) amended, p. 627, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(k) added, p. 757, § 4, effective July 1. L. 94: (1)(a) amended, p. 2824, § 2, effective July 1; (1)(j) amended, p. 2549, § 33, effective January 1, 1995.

Editor's note: The provisions of this section are similar to provisions of several former sections as they existed prior to 1986. For a detailed comparison, see the comparative tables located in the back of the index.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Medical Products and Services Liability: Public Policy Requires Legislative Innovation and Judicial Restraint", see 53 Den. L. J. 387 (1976). For article, "Federal Practice and Procedure", see 56 Den. L.J. 491 (1979). For article, "Federal Practice and Procedure", see 58 Den. L.J. 371 (1981).

Annotator's note. For cases concerning when a cause of action accrues under this section, see the annotations to § 13-80-108.

Applicability of amendment. In order to determine whether an amendment, which required discovery of negligence and the seriousness and character of injuries, applied to a case, it was necessary to determine whether a cause of action had accrued prior to the effective date of the amendment. Valenzuela v. Mercy Hosp., 34 Colo. App. 5, 521 P.2d 1287 (1974).

Cause of action barred by effect of amendment. Where a plaintiff did not file her action within one year of the effective date of an amendment, her cause of action was barred, even though under the statute in effect at the time of the incident would have allowed her to bring the action until 1985. Licano v. Krausnick, 663 P.2d 1066 (Colo. App. 1983).

Statute of limitations not violative of due process unless time fixed amounts to denial of justice. The general rule is that a statute of limitations, including a statute which is to be applied retroactively, does not violate due process unless the time fixed by the statute is manifestly so limited as to amount to a denial of justice. Mishek v. Stanton, 200 Colo. 514, 616 P.2d 135 (1980).

The statute of limitations was not tolled by the pendency of a prior action commenced in another state which was dismissed and transferred to Colorado. Cook v. G.D. Searle & Co., Inc., 759 F.2d 800 (10th Cir. 1985).

Existence of statute which prohibited filing of claim did not toll statute of limitations under doctrine of equitable tolling although statute was eventually held unconstitutional. Overheiser v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 814 P.2d 12 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where plaintiffs' affidavits demonstrated that some, although not all, of defendants' acts complained of occurred within limitation period, but complaint did not identify them, trial court should have permitted filing of amended complaint because original complaint put defendant sufficiently on notice of ongoing nature of claims. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

Because statutes of limitation are in derogation of a presumptively valid claim, a longer period of limitations should prevail if two statutes are arguably applicable. Amco Ins. Co. v. Rockwell, 940 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1997).

A claim that is accompanied by an insufficient funds check for payment of fees is not considered filed for purposes of this statute. The claim is not considered filed for purposes of the statute of limitations until the filing fee is actually paid. Broker House Int'l, Ltd. v. Bendelow, 952 P.2d 860 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in Denny v. Hutchinson Sales Corp., 649 F.2d 816 (10th Cir. 1981); Weedin v. United States, 509 F. Supp. 1052 (D. Colo. 1981); Yarbro v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 655 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1982); Banks v. St. Mary's Hosp. & Med. Center, 558 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1983); State v. Young, 665 P.2d 108 (Colo. 1983); Marriott v. Goldstein, 662 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1983); Jones v. Consol. Freightways Corp., 776 F.2d 1458 (1985).

II. PARAGRAPH (a).

Law reviews. For article, "New Role for Nonparties in Tort Actions — The Empty Chair", see 15 Colo. Law. 1650 (1986). For article, "Tort Reform's Impact on Contract Law", see 15 Colo. Law. 2206 (1986).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-102 (1)(a) is similar to former § 13-80-110 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (a).

Two-year limitation period is not unconstitutional. As applied to automobile accident case, period is not unreasonably short and does not deny litigants access to courts; nor did reduction from former six-year limitation period violate equal protection guarantees. Dove v. Delgado, 808 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1991).

The state cannot claim exemption from the statute of limitations by relying on the doctrine of nullum tempus occurrit regi (time does not run against the king). Shootman v. Dept. of Transp., 926 P.2d 1200 (Colo. 1996).

Injuries caused by defendant's reckless disregard of plaintiff's safety. If the evidence establishes that the injuries were the result of acts of the defendant which were in reckless disregard of plaintiff's safety, it can be said that plaintiff has established a claim which is subject to the statute of limitations. Hackbart v. Cincinnati Bengals, Inc., 601 F.2d 516 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 275, 62 L. Ed.2d 188 (1979).

Infringing contractual rights covered by former § 13-80-110. Statutory claim alleging a tortious discriminatory wrong, infringing contractual rights, was covered by the provisions of former § 13-80-110. Zuniga v. AMFAC Foods, Inc., 580 F.2d 380 (10th Cir. 1978).

Claim for bad-faith breach of an insurance contract is subject to two-year limitation period set forth in this section. Harmon v. Fred S. James & Co., 899 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1994).

No tolling under course-of-treatment exception or "continuing violation" doctrine in a bad-faith breach of workers' compensation insurance case, because insurer's failure to pay benefits when due puts claimant on notice of the fact of injury and its cause even if there is only a single episode of unreasonable behavior. Harmon v. Fred S. James & Co., 899 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1994).

Irrigation pipeline constituted a continuing trespass. Accordingly, plaintiff's trespass claim was not barred by the statute of limitations. Sanderson v. Heath Mesa Homeowners Ass'n, 183 P.3d 679 (Colo. App. 2008).

Day of the act or event from which period runs not to be included in computation. In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by statute, the day of the act or event from which the designated period of time begins to run is not to be included, but the last day of the period is to be included. Cade v. Regensberger, 804 P.2d 238 (Colo. App. 1990).

Claims arising before July 1, 1986, covered by former § 13-80-110. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Discovery rule" did not apply to claims for negligence and outrageous conduct arising from alleged sexual assault on minors. Despite therapists' and plaintiffs' statements that plaintiffs did not realize the full import of defendant's actions until plaintiffs sought counseling years after the assaults, plaintiffs' admissions of emotional upset at time of assaults and knowledge that defendant's actions were improper and illegal indicated that plaintiffs were on adequate notice of the essential elements of the tort. Therefore, cause of action accrued when plaintiffs reached the age of majority and statutory limitation would apply to their claims. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

If a plaintiff files a motion to amend accompanied by an amended complaint pursuant to C.R.C.P. 15(a), and if the motion, amended complaint, and summons are served on a defendant before expiration of the statute of limitations, then the statute of limitations is tolled until the trial court rules on plaintiff's motions. Moore v. Grossman, 824 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to amendment of this subsection (3)(c)).

Claim against title company did not arise when conduct occurred but when plaintiffs discovered injury and could tie the actions by the title company to the injury. Plaintiffs were not entitled to six-year statute of limitations pursuant to former § 13-80-110, but were limited to two years by this section. Callahan v. First Am. Title Ins. Co., 837 P.2d 769 (Colo. App. 1992).

Plaintiff knew, or should have known by the exercise of reasonable diligence, of the injury to his reputation and the cause of that injury; consequently, because the complaint was filed more than two years after plaintiff learned of the statements, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's claims for libel, slander, and outrageous conduct as barred by subsection (1)(a) of this section and § 13-80-103 (1)(a). Taylor v. Goldsmith, 870 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1994).

Because record established that plaintiff knew or should have known of the existence of the alleged negligence and outrageous conduct by defendant over three years prior to filing her claim for negligence and outrageous conduct, the trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment and dismissing plaintiff's claims. Colburn v. Kopit, 59 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2002).

The statute of limitations for an action against an attorney for legal malpractice begins to run at the time the client discovers, or through reasonable diligence should have discovered, the negligent act of the attorney. Once a client becomes aware of her attorney's negligence, and damages in the form of legal fees are incurred to ameliorate the impact of that negligence, she has suffered injury for purposes of the accrual of a legal claim. Client need not await the outcome of her appeal before being charged with knowledge of attorney's negligence. Jacobson v. Shine, 859 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1993).

A pending appeal in the underlying litigation that is the basis for a legal malpractice claim does not toll the statute of limitations. Thus, where plaintiff's attorney admitted, during a pretrial hearing held in the underlying litigation, that he may have committed malpractice, the statute of limitations began to run even though the plaintiff's attorney filed a subsequent appeal in the underlying litigation. Broker House Int'l, Ltd. v. Bendelow, 952 P.2d 860 (Colo. App. 1998).

Statute of limitations not equitably tolled. Malpractice claim against an accountant was not equitably tolled when the accountant was a witness in a case before the internal revenue service. Noel v. Hoover, 12 P.3d 328 (Colo. App. 2000).

Statute of limitation not tolled on a legal malpractice claim while a criminal defendant either pursues a direct appeal or seeks post-conviction relief. Defendant must file and preserve his claim within the limitations period, but may seek a stay in the civil action until the criminal case is resolved. Morrison v. Goff, 74 P.3d 409 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 91 P.3d 1050 (Colo. 2004).

Holding is consistent with the doctrine of equitable tolling which permits tolling of statute of limitations only where the defendant's wrongful conduct prevented the plaintiff from asserting the claim in a timely manner or truly exceptional circumstances prevented the plaintiff from filing the claim despite diligent efforts. Morrison v. Goff, 74 P.3d 409 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 91 P.3d 1050 (Colo. 2004).

Approach furthers the statute of limitations' goals of promoting justice, preventing unnecessary delay, and avoiding the litigation of stale claims. Approach also protects attorneys from being forced to defend stale malpractice claims and furthers judicial economy by expediting the litigation of claims. Morrison v. Goff, 91 P.3d 1050 (Colo. 2004).

Wife's legal malpractice claim that attorney negligently stipulated to a modification of a temporary order to allow a trustee in liquidation to take possession and sell stock held as marital property to satisfy a judgment against husband arose when federal bankruptcy court denied wife's claim to interest in the stock proceeds and not when the federal district court affirmed the denial on appeal. Jacobson v. Shine, 859 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1993).

Actions against home inspectors must be brought within two years after the buyer discovers or should have discovered a problem arising from a faulty inspection. Gleason v. Becker-Johnson Assocs., Inc., 916 P.2d 662 (Colo. App. 1996).

Outrageous conduct is a separate tort, even though it may be premised on conduct amounting to a battery. Therefore, the applicable statute of limitations under this section is two years from the date of accrual for outrageous conduct, rather than the one year limit under § 13-80-103 for battery. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

Further, where a claim may be pursued on two theories having different limitations, the longer limitation applies. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

The statute of limitations in this section, and not that in § 16-5-401 (1)(a) applies to a theft claim brought under § 18-4-405. Michaelson v. Michaelson, 923 P.2d 237 (Colo. App. 1995).

Neither subsection (1)(a) nor subsection (1)(g) applies to a claim under § 43 (a) of the federal Lanham Act. Instead, Colorado's three-year statute of limitations for fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, and deceit, § 13-80-101 (1)(c), governs such claims. Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

Plaintiff's claim was intertwined with the no fault act and subject to the three-year statute of limitations in § 13-80-101 (1)(j), rather than the general two-year limitation under subsection (1)(a), where plaintiff was obligated to pay and did pay benefits required under the act, the plaintiff's action was specifically authorized by the act, and the action was brought because the vehicle driven by the defendant was not insured as required under the act. Amco Ins. Co. v. Rockwell, 940 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1997).

Where injury to plaintiff arose out of his own operation of motorcycle, plaintiff's tort action arose out of the use or operation of a motor vehicle and three-year statute of limitation under § 13-80-101 (1)(n) applies rather than two-year limit under subsection (1)(a). Gonzales v. City & County of Denver, 998 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 17 P.3d 137 (Colo. 2001).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-102 (1)(c) is similar to former § 13-80-105 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (c).

This provision is not "special legislation" prohibited by § 25 of art. V, Colo. Const. McCarty v. Goldstein, 151 Colo. 154, 376 P.2d

It is general and uniform in operation. This section providing that no action shall be maintained to recover damages from persons licensed to practice certain of the healing professions, including dentistry, unless such action be instituted within two years after the action accrued, is not special legislation prohibited by § 25 of art. V, Colo. Const., it being general and uniform in its operation upon all in like situation. McCarty v. Goldstein, 151 Colo. 154, 376 P.2d 691 (1962).

It is not discriminatory and does not deny equal protection of the law to attorneys, scientists, engineers, nurses, x-ray technicians, and other professional persons who should be entitled to equal protection of the law. McCarty v. Goldstein, 151 Colo. 154, 376 P.2d 691 (1962).

This statute is enacted for the purpose of promoting justice, discouraging unnecessary delay, and forestalling the prosecution of stale claims, not for the benefit of the negligent. It should not be construed to defeat justice. The negligence is equally damaging and the victim equally helpless regardless of the motive for concealment. Rosane v. Senger, 112 Colo. 363, 149 P.2d 372 (1944).

This statute has exactly the same effect as would a contract of employment which provided that no action could be maintained against the doctors unless brought within two years from the date of the performance of the operation. Any excuse which would defeat such express contract is equally effective to toll the statute and impossible to give notice as such. Rosane v. Senger, 112 Colo. 363, 149 P.2d 372 (1944).

An action for malpractice is neither a purely tortious nor a contractual action, but a hybrid, for which a specific limitation has been prescribed by this section. Maercklein v. Smith, 129 Colo. 72, 266 P.2d 1095 (1954).

Limitation statutes relating to assault, assault and battery, malicious injury, and fraud have no application to actions for malpractice based on negligence of a physician or surgeon. Maercklein v. Smith, 129 Colo. 72, 266 P.2d 1095 (1954).

Where express contract exists between plaintiff and defendant, plaintiff's action thereon is not barred by two-year statute of limitations, but six-year statute dealing with express contracts is applicable. Adams v. Poudre Valley Hosp. Dist., 31 Colo. App. 252, 502 P.2d 1127 (1972).

If there is an express contract, patient must prove it. In an action against physicians and surgeons for damages for alleged malpractice, if the patient made a contract with the physician and a surgeon, the terms of the contract must be disclosed and proven. The burden of proof hereof rests upon plaintiff. Maercklein v. Smith, 129 Colo. 72, 266 P.2d 1095 (1954).

A hospital's general duty of nursing is not an express contract. Where admission document mentions only general duty nursing and does not refer to conditions of hospital or fitness of premises for plaintiff, there may be implied warranty that hospital is fit for intended use by patient, but no implied warranty arises from terms of admission document. Therefore, general statute of limitation relating to express contracts is inapplicable. Adams v. Poudre Valley Hosp. Dist., 31 Colo. App. 252, 502 P.2d 1127 (1972).

This section is aimed solely at the maintaining of an action. Wyatt v. Burnett, 95 Colo. 414, 36 P.2d 768 (1934).

Patient may use claim as a defense against doctor's suit. The defense of reduction of recoupment, which arises out of the same transaction as the claim, survives as long as the cause of action upon the claim exists, although an affirmative action on the subject of it may be barred by the statute of limitations. A counterclaim, if barred by the statute, is available only for recoupment although for that purpose it may be used as long as plaintiff's cause of action exists. Wyatt v. Burnett, 95 Colo. 414, 36 P.2d 768 (1934).

IV. PARAGRAPH (d).

Discovery rule is applicable to wrongful death actions. Rauschenberger v. Radetsky, 745 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1987).

Applied in Aberkals v. Blake, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1231 (D. Colo. 2009).

V. PARAGRAPH (g).

Law reviews. For article, "Civil Rights", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with the applicable statute of limitations for actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 67 (1985).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-102 (1)(g) is similar to former § 13-80-106 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (g).

Applicability to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. All civil rights claims are to be generally, uniformly characterized, regardless of discrete facts involved, as actions for injury to personal rights. Wilson v. Garcia, 731 F.2d 640 (10th Cir. 1984), aff'd, 471 U.S. 261, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed.2d 254 (1985). (For previous cases dealing with the statute of limitations in actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Mucci v. Falcon Sch. Dist. No. 49, 655 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1982) and McKay v. Hammond, 730 F.2d 1367 (10th Cir. 1984).)

tions made applicable to actions upon a liability created by a federal statute for which actions no period of limitations is provided in such statute would seem to be, on its face, an unconstitutional discrimination against a multitude of federal claims to which a shorter statute of limitations was purportedly applied for no other reason than that they were federal claims, leaving a three-year statute of limitations for residuary state claims. Wolf Sales Co. v. Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., 105 F. Supp. 506 (D. Colo. 1952); Trussell v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 228 F. Supp. 757 (D. Colo. 1964).

Residuary statute should be used. The residuary three-year statute of limitations in former § 13-80-108(1)(b) (now subsection (1)(i)) must take precedence over the two-year statute of limitations in former § 13-80-106. Trussell v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 228 F. Supp. 757 (D. Colo. 1964).

Nothing in the Occupational Safety and Health Act suggests congressional intention to adopt state statutes of limitations. Marshall v. Intermountain Elec. Co., 614 F.2d 260 (10th Cir. 1980).

Absence of public interest may involve state statutes. An action which, although brought in the name of the United States, involves no public rights or interests may be subject to a state statute of limitations. Marshall v. Intermountain Elec. Co., 614 F.2d 260 (10th Cir. 1980).

Where action is brought by government to enforce private as well as public rights, state statutes of limitations do not apply to bar the action even though no federal period of limitations is provided. However, unlike the rule relating to actions brought exclusively for the benefit of the federal government, the doctrine of laches may be applied in these hybrid cases to limit relief. Marshall v. Intermountain Elec. Co., 614 F.2d 260 (10th Cir. 1980).

Federal law may control tolling of limitations when state statute applicable. Though the limitations period for an action brought in federal district court based on claims arising under section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933 and §§ 10(b) and 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is supplied by the law of Colorado, the circumstances which will toll the running of the statute are matters of federal law. Ohio v. Peterson, Lowry, Rall, Barber & Ross, 472 F. Supp. 402 (D. Colo. 1979), aff'd, 651 F.2d 687 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 895, 102 S. Ct. 392, 70 L. Ed.2d 209 (1981).

Action based on federal gasoline controls. This section applies to an action based on violations of federal regulation of gasoline prices and allocation control. Siegel Oil Co. v. Gulf Oil Corp., 556 F. Supp. 302 (D. Colo. 1982), aff'd, 701 F.2d 149 (Temp. Em. Ct. App. 1983).

Armco Recreational Prods., Inc., 419 F. Supp. 464 (D. Colo. 1976).

In an action based on federal civil rights law, court applied period of limitations of this section. Salazar v. Dowd, 256 F. Supp. 220 (D. Colo. 1966); Merrigan v. Affiliated Bankshares of Colo., Inc., 775 F. Supp. 1408 (D. Colo. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 278 (10th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 823, 113 S. Ct. 76, 121 L.Ed.2d 40 (1992); Workman v. Jordan, 32 F.3d 475 (10th Cir. 1994).

The applicable statute of limitations for a §1983 action, even one asserted against a law enforcement officer, is the two-year limitation period established under subsection (1)(g). Nieto v. State, 952 P.2d 834 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 993 P.2d 493 (Colo. 2000).

Two-year statute of limitations applies to actions arising under title II of the federal Americans with Disabilities Act. Hughes v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 594 F. Supp. 2d 1226 (D. Colo. 2009).

Former § 13-80-108 applied to actions under section 10(b) of the federal Securities Exchange Act since there is no federal statute of limitations on these actions. Laymon v. McComb, 524 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1981).

There is no federal statute of limitations applicable to provisions of sections 10(b) and 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

Former § 13-80-108 applied to civil claims under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. Victoria Oil Co. v. Lancaster Corp., 587 F. Supp. 429 (D. Colo. 1984).

Statute of limitations questions may be appropriately resolved on rule 12 (b), F.R.C.P. motion. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

Continuing violation of civil rights statute not barred. Alleged discrimination in writing physical damage insurance, a violation of the civil rights statute, was a continuing violation when the policy was renewed in 1971 and 1972, and the statute of limitations contained in this section did not bar the claim based on such discrimination. Ben v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 374 F. Supp. 1199 (D. Colo. 1974).

Neither subsection (1)(a) nor subsection (1)(g) applies to a claim under § 43 (a) of the federal Lanham Act. Instead, Colorado's three-year statute of limitations for fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, and deceit, § 13-80-101 (1)(c), governs such claims. Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

VI. PARAGRAPH (h).

Subsection (1)(h) applies to all actions against governmental entities, regardless of the theory upon which suit is brought. Bad Boys of Cripple Creek Mining Co. v. City of Cripple Creek, 996 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

A claim for inverse condemnation against a city is a civil action against a governmental entity and is governed by subsection (1)(h). Bad Boys of Cripple Creek Mining Co. v. City of Cripple Creek, 996 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

The two-year limitation period of subsection (1)(h) for claims to be brought against a governmental entity is not applicable to the contract claims brought by employees and former employees against a city. To do so would allow a governmental entity to bring a contract claim against a nongovernmental entity within a three-year or longer period while a nongovernmental entity would be required to bring a similar claim against a governmental entity within a two-year period. Fishburn v. City of Colo. Springs, 919 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1995).

The six-year limitation period of § 13-80-103.5 (1)(a) applies even against a governmental entity to recover a liquidated debt or an unliquidated, determinable amount of money due. Fishburn v. City of Colo. Springs, 919 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1995).

Negligence action against a city based on respondeat superior is not barred under subsection (1)(h) even though the underlying negligence action against the city's employee is barred under § 13-80-103 (1)(c). Gallegos v. City of Monte Vista, 976 P.2d 299 (Colo. App. 1998).

VII. PARAGRAPH (i).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-102 (1)(i) is similar to § 13-80-108 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this paragraph (i).

This section is the general statute of limitations applying to all actions or proceedings for which a special period is not provided. Bd. of Trustees of Policemen's Pension Fund v. Koman, 133 Colo. 598, 298 P.2d 737 (1956).

When damages being apportioned under the Workers' Compensation Act arise from settlement of a tort case, and the apportionment case is a separate cause of action, the act does not govern the time frame and conditions under which the offset must be determined. Accordingly, the two-year catch-all statute of limitations, pursuant to subsection (1)(i), applies. Harrison v. Pinnacol Assurance, 107 P.3d 969 (Colo. App. 2004).

Claims for disability retirement benefits. The statute of limitations in former § 13-80-108 (1)(b) (now this paragraph (i)) governed cases involving claims for disability retirement benefits from the public employees' retirement association in the absence of a special statute of limitations in the act which provided for such claims. Flanigan v. Pub. Employees' Retirement Ass'n, 191 Colo. 198, 551 P.2d 702 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1068, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 786 (1977).

This section governs time period in which to file for pensions. The general assembly has not enacted a special limitation on the time for filing pension claims, hence, this section governs. Bd. of Trustees of Policemen's Pension Fund v. Koman, 133 Colo. 598, 298 P.2d 737 (1956).

The right to receive a pension may be barred by this section. The right to receive a pension is a very different right from the right to receive payment once the basic right to receive the pension itself has been determined. Once the right to receive a pension has been determined, then the receipt of the pension is a continuing one. The basic or primary right (to receive the pension) is not a continuing one and may be barred by laches or by a statute of limitations. Bd. of Trustees of Policemen's Pension Fund v. Koman, 133 Colo. 598, 298 P.2d 737 (1956).

This paragraph governs 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions. The two-year residual statute is best suited to govern actions that confer a general remedy for injuries to personal rights, and, therefore, this paragraph applies to civil rights actions under § 1983. Arvia v. Black, 722 F. Supp. 644 (D. Colo. 1989); Blake v. Dickason, 997 F.2d 749 (10th Cir. 1993); Workman v. Jordan, 32 F.3d 475 (10th Cir. 1994).

This section applies to personal actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 as such claims are subject to this state's residual statute of limitation. Dillingham v. Univ. of Colo. Bd. of Regents, 790 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1989); Riel v. Reed, 760 F. Supp. 852 (D. Colo. 1990); Stump v. Gates, 777 F. Supp. 808 (D. Colo. 1991); Blake v. Dickason, 997 F.2d 749 (10th Cir. 1993).

The two-year statute of limitations applies to claims brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Siblerud v. Colo. State Bd. of Agric., 896 F. Supp. 1506 (D. Colo. 1995).

Malicious prosecution claims under § 1983 do not accrue until the underlying criminal convictions are terminated in the plaintiff's favor because a plaintiff neither knows nor has reason to know of an injury that constitutes the basis of a claim until such termination. Allen v. City of Aurora, 892 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1994).

Action for partnership accounting falls under two-year period of limitations. No statute of limitations specifically addresses an action for partnership accounting. Tafoya v. Perkins, 932 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1996).

13-80-102.5. Limitation of actions - medical or health care. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, no action alleging negligence, breach of contract, lack of informed consent, or other action arising in tort or contract to recover damages from any health care institution, as defined in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, or any health care professional, as defined in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, shall be maintained unless such action is instituted within two years after the date that such action accrues pursuant to section 13-80-108 (1), but in no event shall an action be brought more than three years after the act or omission which gave rise to the action.

(2) For the purposes of this section:

(a) "Health care institution" means any hospital, health care facility, dispensary, clinic, or other institution which is licensed or certified as such under the laws of this state.

(b) "Health care professional" means any physician, nurse, dentist, chiropractor, pharmacist, optometrist, psychologist, podiatrist, physical therapist, or other health care practitioner who is licensed to perform such profession under the laws of this state.

(3) The limitation of actions provided in subsection (1) of this section shall not apply under the following circumstances:

(a) If the act or omission which gave rise to the cause of action was knowingly concealed by the person committing such act or omission, in which case the action may be maintained if instituted within two years after the person bringing the action discovered, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence and concern should have discovered, the act or omission; or

(b) If the act or omission consisted of leaving an unauthorized foreign object in the body of the patient, in which case the action may be maintained if instituted within two years after the person bringing the action discovered, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence and concern should have discovered, the act or omission; or

(c) If both the physical injury and its cause are not known or could not have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence; or

(d) If the action is brought by or on behalf of:

(I) A minor under eight years of age who was under six years of age on the date of the occurrence of the act or omission for which the action is brought, in which case the action may be maintained at any time prior to his attaining eight years of age; or

(II) A person otherwise under disability as defined in section 13-81-101, in which case the action may be maintained within the time period as provided in section 13-81-103.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "1988 Update on Colorado Tort Reform Legislation — Part I", see 17 Colo. Law. 1790 (1988).

Annotator's note. For annotations relating to the statute of repose, formerly found in § 13-80-105 prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article and now found in this section, see the annotations for § 13-80-108 under the headings "VII. Injuries." and "IX. Former Statute of Repose."

Given the express language of the knowing concealment exception, it is necessary for a patient to demonstrate only that a negligent act or omission has been committed by the physician and then knowingly concealed, but not necessary to show that the patient also suspected or discovered that concealment. Boyett v. Smith, 888 P.2d 294 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 908 P.2d 508 (Colo. 1995) (decided under former § 13-80-105 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article).

Applicability to minors. Subsection (3)(d)(I) applies only if the child is represented by a legal guardian at the time the alleged negligence occurs. Otherwise, the child may file suit at any time before age 18 or within two years after a legal guardian is appointed. This result is required to harmonize this section with the disability statutes, § 13-81-101, et seq., and applies to both the two-year limitation period and the three-year period of repose set forth in subsection (1). Hane by and through Jabalera v. Tubman, 899 P.2d 332 (Colo. App. 1995).

There is no exception to the statute of limitations under this section for actions derivative of those brought by a person under disability. Bartlett v. Elgin, 973 P.2d 694 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 994 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1999).

The language of this section is unambiguous, thus because defendant was not a "health care professional", the general limitations for tort actions under §§ 13-80-101 and 13-80-102 applied. Colburn v. Kopit, 59 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-80-103. General limitation of actions - one year. (1) The following civil actions, regardless of the theory upon which suit is brought, or against whom suit is brought, shall be commenced within one year after the cause of action accrues, and not thereafter:

(a) The following tort actions: Assault, battery, false imprisonment, false arrest, libel, and slander;

(b) All actions for escape of prisoners;

(c) All actions against sheriffs, coroners, police officers, firefighters, national guardsmen, or any other law enforcement authority;

(d) All actions for any penalty or forfeiture of any penal statutes;

(e) All actions under the "Motor Vehicle Repair Act of 1977", article 9 of title 42, C.R.S.;

(f) Repealed.

(g) All actions for negligence, fraud, willful misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds brought under section 12-61-303, C.R.S.;

(h) All actions against a person alleging liability for a penalty for commission of a class A or a class B traffic infraction, as defined in section 42-4-1701, C.R.S.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals", see 38 Dicta 133 (1961).

Annotator's note. For cases concerning when a cause of action accrues under this section, see the annotations to § 13-80-108.

Held constitutional. This section does not violate due process and is not unconstitutionally vague because of its failure to include or incorporate a definition of the term "any other law enforcement authority." Delta Sales Yard v. Patten, 870 P.2d 554 (Colo. App. 1993).

A statute of limitations is enacted for the purpose of promoting justice, discouraging unnecessary delay, and forestalling the prosecution of stale claims. Klamm Shell v. Berg, 165 Colo. 540, 441 P.2d 10 (1968).

Assertion of defense held timely filed. Where plaintiffs file an amended complaint and defendants interpose the affirmative defense of statute of limitations for the first time in their amended answer to the amended complaint, the defense is timely filed. Griffen v. Pate, 644 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1981).

CRS 53, § 135-4-2 (now § 2-5-124), had the effect of reenacting former §§ 13-80-102, 13-80-116, and 13-81-103(1)(c) despite repealing clause of 1939 act originally enacting § 13-81-103. Kuckler v. Whisler, 191 Colo. 260, 552 P.2d 18 (1976).

Filing of an EEOC action does not operate to toll the one-year limit of former section. Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

For inapplicability of this section when gist of cause of action is conspiracy, see Clark v. Machette, 92 Colo. 365, 21 P.2d 182 (1933).

Applied in Williams v. Burns, 463 F. Supp. 1278 (D. Colo. 1979); Ellis v. Rocky Mt. Empire Sports, Inc., 43 Colo. App. 166, 602 P.2d 895 (1979); Griffin v. Pate, 644 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1981); Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Berry v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 656 P.2d 721 (Colo. App. 1982); Marlandis v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., 703 F.2d 1152 (10th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 824, 104 S. Ct. 92, 78 L. Ed.2d 99 (1983); Russell v. McMillen, 685 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1984).

II. PARAGRAPH (a).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-103 (1)(a) is similar to former § 13-80-102 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (a).

A. Assault and Battery.

Where evidence shows no negligence, action must be for assault and subject to this section. Where plaintiff brings action to recover for injuries received as result of being beaten by defendant, and where complaint alleges negligence on part of defendant, but evidence indicates that beating was intentional and that no element of negligence was involved, action is founded on assault and is subject to one-year statute of limitations. Maes v. Tuttoilmondo, 31 Colo. App. 248, 502 P.2d 427 (1972).

Statute will not apply when defendant's assault causes delay. To apply the one-year statute of limitations rigidly to a situation where a plaintiff is rendered insane as a result of an assault and battery which condition prevents a timely filing of an action against the intentional tortfeasor would result in callous injustice. Rather than promoting justice, the statute of limitations would then become an effective instrument for injustice. When this situation occurs, trial courts properly may turn to estoppel or fashion an equitable exception to the statutory limitation period. Klamm Shell v. Berg, 165 Colo. 540, 441 P.2d 10 (1968).

One-year limitation period did not apply to complaint alleging negligent supervision arising out of a fight at a company-sponsored Christmas party. Bradley v. Guess, 797 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1989).

Statute not tolled. The fact that a professional team did not permit service of process on a team member at the team facility during the season or the preseason training camp did not toll the statute of limitations for an alleged assault and battery. MacMillan v. Bruce, 900 P.2d 131 (Colo. 1995).

Outrageous conduct is a separate tort, even though it may be premised on conduct amounting to a battery. Therefore, the applicable statute of limitations under § 13-80-102 is two years from the date of accrual for outrageous conduct, rather than the one year limit under this section for battery. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

Further, where a claim may be pursued on two theories having different limitations, the longer limitation applies. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

B. False Arrest.

An action for damages for malicious prosecution is not an action for false arrest and barred by the one-year statute of this section. Lowen v. Hilton, 142 Colo. 200, 351 P.2d 881 (1960).

C. Libel.

By this section actions for slander and libel must be commenced within one year after the cause of action accrues or they are barred. Bush v. McMann, 12 Colo. App. 504, 55 P. 956 (1899).

Even "new" claims must be asserted within the one year. In action for libel, where counts one and two in amended complaint constitute "new" claims, and are not asserted against defendant within one year after the cause of action accrued, the courts are now barred by the provision of this section. Walker v. Associated Press, 160 Colo. 361, 417 P.2d 486 (1966).

Libel claim barred if filed after statute has run. The relation back doctrine, in C.R.C.P. 15(c) does not permit a party to maintain a claim for libel filed after the statute of limitations in this section has run. Even v. Longmont United Hosp. Ass'n, 629 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1981).

Each publication of a defamatory statement must be pled as a separate claim for limitations purposes under this section. Corporon v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 708 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1985).

Plaintiff knew, or should have known by the exercise of reasonable diligence, of the injury to his reputation and the cause of that injury; consequently, because the complaint was filed more than two years after plaintiff learned of the statements, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's claims for libel, slander, and outrageous conduct as barred by subsection (1)(a) and § 13-80-102 (1)(a). Taylor v. Goldsmith, 870 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court erred in determining that plaintiff's complaint is barred by the statute of limitations when complaint alleges facts that show complaint was filed within the statutory time limitations. Burke v. Greene, 963 P.2d 1119 (Colo. App. 1998).

III. PARAGRAPH (c).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-103 (1)(c) is similar to former § 13-80-103 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (c).

This section is framed in the interest of the official named and his bondsmen. People ex rel. Tritch v. Cramer, 15 Colo. 155, 25 P. 302 (1890).

The purpose of this section is to prevent annoyance and injustice through the prosecution against the officers mentioned of stale demands predicated upon official neglect or other misconduct. People ex rel. Tritch v. Cramer, 15 Colo. 155, 25 P. 302 (1890).

If possible, it should be so construed as also to protect litigants from remediless wrongs. People ex rel. Tritch v. Cramer, 15 Colo. 155, 25 P. 302 (1890).

When the wrong committed by the sheriff furnishes the real and substantial foundation of the cause of action this section is applicable. People v. Putnam, 52 Colo. 517, 122 P. 796 (1912).

A cause of action only accrues when a sheriff's negligence or misconduct prevents or retards the vindication of a private right. People ex rel. Tritch v. Cramer, 15 Colo. 155, 25 P. 302 (1890).

The term "sheriff" is used in its generic sense and includes the whole class of officers performing the duties of the office of sheriff and includes deputy sheriff. Bailey v. Clausen, 192 Colo. 297, 557 P.2d 1207 (1976).

"Any other law enforcement authority" encompasses all peace officers included in the compilation of state-recognized law enforcement authorities contained in § 18-1-901, C.R.S. Delta Sales Yard v. Patten, 870 P.2d 554 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 892 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1995).

Paragraph applicable to sheriff's actions regardless of whether they are secured by bond. Cain v. Guzman, 761 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1988).

Receipt of investigative report is not the time at which cause of action accrues where party alleging injury filed notice stating injury occurred on a different, earlier date and complaint substantiated the earlier date. Mosher v. City of Lakewood, 807 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1991).

Internal investigation by city would not have resulted in any civil relief to plaintiff and exhaustion of those procedures was not required as a necessary condition precedent to the institution of a legal action against the defendants. Mosher v. City of Lakewood, 807 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1991).

One-year statute of limitation did apply to claims against police officer whose police dog attacked neighbor. Even though officer was off-duty at time, he was still acting in his official capacity because he was required by departmental policy to keep the police dog at his home. Kliwer by and through Kliwer v. Sopata, 797 F. Supp. 1569 (D. Colo. 1992).

Section 13-80-101 (1)(j) applies to tort actions brought against a sheriff's department arising from an alleged automobile accident involving a departmental vehicle. Because statutes of limitation are in derogation of a valid claim, the longer period of limitations in § 13-80-103 (1)(j) should prevail over the shorter period in paragraph (c) which could arguably be applicable in this situation. Reider v. Dawson, 856 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 872 P.2d 212 (Colo. 1994).

Even though an underlying negligence action against a city's employee is barred under subsection (1)(c), a negligence action against the city based on respondeat superior is not barred under § 13-80-102 (1)(h). Gallegos v. City of Monte Vista, 976 P.2d 299 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court erred in applying the one-year statute of limitations to a § 1983 action asserted against a corrections employee. The appropriate period is the 2-year limitation period of § 13-80-102. Nieto v. State, 952 P.2d 834 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 993 P.2d 493 (Colo. 2000).

IV. PARAGRAPH (d).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-103 (1)(d) is similar to former § 13-80-104 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this paragraph (d).

Action must be brought within one year after commission of offense. Where an action was not brought until the expiration of one year after the offense was committed, plaintiff had no cause of action for the "penalty". Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Tanner, 19 Colo. 559, 36 P. 541 (1894); Morris v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 25 Colo. App. 416, 139 P. 582 (1914).

Statute of limitations is jurisdictional. The statute authorizing forfeiture for a public nuisance is penal in nature. In an action premised on a penal statute as opposed to a civil claim, the statute of limitations is jurisdictional in nature, in that it specifies the time period during which a cause of action exists. Since the statute of limitations is jurisdictional, it may be raised at any stage of the proceeding, including a motion to dismiss. People v. Steinberg, 672 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1983).

In order for this section to apply, the action must have been brought to enforce a "penalty" provided for by statute. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977); Dorney v. Harris, 482 F. Supp. 323 (D. Colo. 1980).

This section held not to apply to a forfeiture of workers' compensation benefits under § 8-42-402 because such forfeiture applied automatically upon conviction. Wolford v. Pinnacle Assurance, 81 P.3d 1079 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 107 P.3d 947 (Colo. 2005).

Exemplary damages in this state constitute a penalty provided for by statute. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977).

The one-year limitation of this section applies to prayers for punitive damages. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977); Dorney v. Harris, 482 F. Supp. 323 (D. Colo. 1980).

Special one-year limitation in section applies to actions created by penal statutes, not prayers for damages arising out of claims for relief not based on penal statutes. Wise v. Olan Mills, Inc., 495 F. Supp. 257 (D. Colo. 1980).

Prayer for punitive or exemplary damages is not "claim" at all, in the sense of a claim for relief or cause of action to which a statute of limitations is directed. Wise v. Olan Mills, Inc., 495 F. Supp. 257 (D. Colo. 1980).

A claim for punitive damages is not barred by this section where the claim is based on an underlying tort claim, and is not just a suit for a penalty. Alley v. Gubser Dev. Co., 569 F. Supp. 36 (D. Colo. 1983).

Claim for exemplary damages premised on § 13-21-102 is not an action for a penalty or forfeiture within the meaning of this section and is thus not barred. Adams v. Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc., 686 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section does not apply to exemplary damage claims. Moon v. Platte Valley Bank, 634 P.2d 1036 (Colo. App. 1981).

Claim for punitive damages under § 13-21-102, being ancillary to an independent civil claim for actual damages, is not an action for the recovery of a penalty of a penal statute within the intentment of the one year limitation period of this section. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Claim must sustain cause independent of tort action. Where plaintiff's claim for exemplary damages was incapable of sustaining an independent cause of action but instead was dependent upon the underlying tort claim, plaintiff's claim for punitive damages was not a suit or action for a penalty or forfeiture. Dorney v. Harris, 482 F. Supp. 323 (D. Colo. 1980).

Claim alleging violation of fiduciary duties not action for penalty or forfeiture. Plaintiff's claim for relief alleging violation of fiduciary duties by the defendant, and seeking punitive damages for actions allegedly attended by circumstances of fraud, insult, and wanton and reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights was not an action for a penalty or forfeiture within the meaning of this section. Res. Exploration & Mining, Inc. v. Itel Corp., 492 F. Supp. 515 (D. Colo. 1980).

Nor claim based upon § 13-21-102. This section does not apply to exemplary damage claims. Moon v. Platte Valley Bank, 634 P.2d 1036 (Colo. App. 1981).

Punitive damages. Claims for punitive damages under § 13-21-102, being ancillary to an independent civil claim for actual damages, is not an action for the recovery of a penalty of a penal statute within the intentment of the limitation period of this section. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Penalty may be provided for in separate statute. Where the general assembly has selected a one-year limitation period for statutes providing for penalties, it is inconsequential whether the penalty is provided for within the statute establishing the underlying cause of action, or in a separate statute which is parasitic to the existence of the underlying cause of action. The legislative intent to penalize and the legislative intent to limit the time within which such penalty actions may be brought remain the same. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977).

While this section has been applied to statutes which contain both a substantive cause of action and a penalty provision for noncompliance, there is no indication that it is limited to such applications. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977).

This section applies to recovery of penalty for unjust discrimination in freight charges. Section 40-31-102 providing for the recovery of a penalty for unjust discrimination in the matter of freight charges was held subject to this section. Goodridge v. Union Pac. Ry., 35 F. 35 (8th Cir. 1888).

This section applies to a claim pursuant to § 1132(c) of the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, since the most analogous state law claim is a claim for civil penalties pursuant to a penal statute. Adams v. Cyprus Amax Mineral Co., 44 F. Supp.2d 1126 (D. Colo. 1999).

For inapplicability of this section to a private treble damage suit under federal anti-trust laws, see Wolf Sales Co. v. Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., 105 F. Supp. 506 (D. Colo. 1952).

This section does not apply to proceeding before public utilities commission seeking reparation for excessive charges for service. Bonfils v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 Colo. 563, 189 P. 775 (1920).

This section does not apply to penalties for nonpayment of taxes. Penalties that are added to taxes as damages or interest on account of nonpayment are not such penalties as are contemplated by this section. Pinnacle Gold Mining Co. v. People, 58 Colo. 86, 143 P. 837 (1914).

Statute is not suspended by institution of suit by foreign corporation which failed to pay privilege tax. The attempted institution of an action in the courts of Colorado by a corporation organized under the laws of another state, which has not paid the privilege fee imposed by the statute, has not the effect to stay the course of the statute of limitations. When the statutory period has elapsed the action is barred even though during the whole of that period the action appeared upon the docket of the court as a pending action, and the corporation afterwards paid the tax. W. Elec. Co. v. Pickett, 51 Colo. 415, 118 P. 988 (1911).

A general denial presents the defense of the limitation prescribed by this section. W. Elec. Co. v. Pickett, 51 Colo. 415, 118 P. 988 (1911).

Rule that statute is deemed waived if not pleaded does not apply. The general rule in civil actions that the statute of limitations is a special privilege, and must be pleaded in apt time, or is deemed waived, does not apply to penal actions. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Tanner, 19 Colo. 559, 36 P. 541 (1894).

If plaintiff fails to bring suit in a year, he has no cause of action. When a penal statute gives plaintiff the right to recover a penalty by suing for it, this section makes his cause of action dependent upon his bringing suit within a certain period; so that if he fails to bring his suit within such period he has no cause of action remaining. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Tanner, 19 Colo. 559, 36 P. 541 (1894).

The treble damages provision of § 38-12-103, being penal in nature, is governed by the one-year statute of limitations; however, the recovery of the actual security deposit and the award of attorney's fees, being remedial in nature, are limited by the six-year statute of limitations. Carlson v. McCoy, 193 Colo. 391, 566 P.2d 1073 (1977).

The limitation period for actions for a penalty or forfeiture under penal statutes does not run against the state, in accordance with the general rule that statutes of limitation do not run against the state unless the statute specifically or by necessary implication so provides. Gibbs v. Colo. Mined Land Reclamation Bd., 883 P.2d 592 (Colo. App. 1994).

13-80-103.5. General limitation of actions - six years. (1) The following actions shall be commenced within six years after the cause of action accrues and not thereafter:

(a) All actions to recover a liquidated debt or an unliquidated, determinable amount of money due to the person bringing the action, all actions for the enforcement of rights set forth in any instrument securing the payment of or evidencing any debt, and all actions of replevin to recover the possession of personal property encumbered under any instrument securing any debt; except that actions to recover pursuant to section 38-35-124.5 (3), C.R.S., shall be commenced within one year;

(b) All actions for arrears of rent;

(c) All actions brought under section 13-21-109, except actions brought under section 13-21-109 (2);

(d) All actions by the public employees' retirement association to collect unpaid contributions from employers for persons who are not members or inactive members at the time the association first notifies an employer of its claim for unpaid contributions. This paragraph (d) shall apply to causes of action as provided in section 24-51-402 (2), C.R.S.

(e) All actions brought for restitution and civil penalties pursuant to section 25.5-4-306, C.R.S.

Annotator's notes. (1) Since § 13-80-103.5 is similar to former § 13-80-110 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations of this section.

(2) For cases concerning when a cause of action accrues under this section, see the annotations to § 13-80-108.

The statute of limitations is intended to make parties more vigilant in asserting their supposed rights, and to deter them from bringing actions on state claims when witnesses may have died or moved away, or their recollection become impaired, or when other evidences may have disappeared, so that the truth of matters in controversy might be difficult of ascertainment. Toothaker v. City of Boulder, 13 Colo. 219, 22 P. 468 (1889).

It is to be construed liberally. It is the settled law in Colorado that courts look with favor upon statutes of limitation and construe them liberally. Chuchuru v. Chutchurru, 185 F.2d 62 (10th Cir. 1950).

The statute of limitations is regarded as a statute of repose, having regard to the peace and welfare of society, "not enacted to protect persons from claims fictitious in their origin, but from ancient claims, whether well or ill-founded, which may have been discharged, but the evidence of discharge lost". Hittson v. Davenport, 3 Colo. 597 (1877); Patterson v. Fort Lyon Canal Co., 36 Colo. 175, 84 P. 807 (1906).

It is a bar to the remedy and not to the right. Brereton v. Benedict, 41 Colo. 16, 92 P. 238 (1907); Holmquist v. Gilbert, 41 Colo. 113, 92 P. 232 (1907); Foot v. Burr, 41 Colo. 192, 92 P. 236 (1907); Brown v. Bell, 46 Colo. 163, 103 P. 380 (1909); Cooley v. Rowan, 71 Colo. 17, 203 P. 669 (1922); Wyatt v. Burnett, 95 Colo. 414, 36 P.2d 768 (1934); Rogers v. Rogers, 96 Colo. 473, 44 P.2d 909 (1935); Kiles v. Trinchera Irrigation Dist., 136 F.2d 894 (10th Cir. 1943).

Running of statute does not extinguish debt. While the statute of limitations may cause the remedy on a debt to be lost, it does not extinguish the debt. Estate of Ramsey v. State, Dept. of Rev., 42 Colo. App. 163, 591 P.2d 591 (1979).

A statute of limitations drafted to relate to special cases controls over a general statute of limitations. Mohawk Green Apartments v. Kramer, 709 P.2d 955 (Colo. App. 1985).

Statute of limitations is personal bar which may be raised or waived by the defendant. Estate of Ramsey v. State, Dept. of Rev., 42 Colo. App. 163, 591 P.2d 591 (1979).

Statute of limitations may be waived. The statute of limitations is a personal defense of which a defendant may or may not avail himself at his pleasure. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 368, 36 P. 646 (1894); Owers v. Olathe Silver Mining Co., 6 Colo. App. 1, 39 P. 980 (1895); Foot v. Burr, 41 Colo. 192, 92 P. 236 (1907).

And is deemed waived if not pleaded. The statute of limitations may be waived, and where not pleaded in the first instance, it is presumed to have been waived. Owers v. Olathe Silver Mining Co., 6 Colo. App. 1, 39 P. 980 (1895); Chivington v. Colo. Springs Co., 9 Colo. 597, 14 P. 212 (1886); Atchinson T. & S. F. R. R. v. Tanner, 19 Colo. 559, 36 P. 541 (1894); Brown v. Bell, 46 Colo. 163, 103 P. 380 (1909).

Waiver for indefinite time permanently removing bar of statute is void. Agreement in a promissory note, that "we, the makers hereby waive all benefits of the statute of limitations", being a waiver for an indefinite time, and permanently removing the statute of limitations from operation, is void, and does not preclude the maker from interposing the statute of limitations as a defense. First Nat'l Bank v. Mock, 70 Colo. 517, 203 P. 272 (1921).

Attorney may not waive. The maker of a promissory note barred by the statute of limitations directs an attorney to attend a sale of land under a trust deed given to secure the note, and "protect his interest". He has no authority to waive the statute of limitations for his client. Ferris v. Curtis, 53 Colo. 340, 127 P. 236 (1912); First Nat'l Bank v. Mock, 70 Colo. 517, 203 P. 272 (1921).

Statutes of limitations are not retroactive unless expressly so providing. Since statutes of limitations are remedial only, it is competent for the general assembly to make them operate retroactively, but it must do so by expressly so providing. Edelstein v. Carlile, 33 Colo. 54, 78 P. 680 (1904); Bonfils v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 Colo. 563, 189 P. 775 (1920); Jones v. O'Connell, 87 Colo. 103, 285 P. 762 (1930).

Action cannot be revived by general assembly after bar has attached. When the bar of a statute of limitations has once attached, the action cannot be revived by an act of the general assembly. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Colo. Loan & Trust Co., 20 Colo. 1, 36 P. 793 (1894).

Twenty-year period prescribed for execution upon judgments in § 13-52-102 and not the six-year period in this section is the applicable statute of limitations for child support arrearages. In re Aragon, 773 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1989).

Statute of limitations runs against a city acting in its proprietary capacity in an action to recover unpaid utilities charges due to an error in billing procedure. Colo. Springs v. Timberlane Assoc., 807 P.2d 1177 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd on other grounds, 824 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1992).

Function in which government is acting is not dispositive of whether limited sovereign immunity attaches. City is not immune from statute of limitations in action upon contract claim. Colo. Springs v. Timberlane Assoc., 824 P.2d 776 (Colo. 1992).

The six-year limitation period of subsection (1)(a) applies even against a governmental entity to recover a liquidated debt or an unliquidated, determinable amount of money due. Fishburn v. City of Colo. Springs, 919 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1995).

The two-year limitation period of § 13-80-102 (1)(h) for claims to be brought against a governmental entity is not applicable to the contract claims brought by employees and former employees against the city. Because to do so would allow a governmental entity to bring a contract claim against a nongovernmental entity within a three-year or longer period while a nongovernmental entity would be required to bring a similar claim against a governmental entity within a two-year period. Fishburn v. City of Colo. Springs, 919 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1995).

State statute of limitation rather than federal statute of limitation governs an action filed by a private party who is the assignee of a promissory note held by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as receiver. Tivoli Ventures, Inc. v. Tallman, 852 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1992).

An equitable tolling of a statute of limitations is limited to situations in which either the defendant has wrongfully impeded the plaintiff's ability to bring the claim or truly extraordinary circumstances prevented the plaintiff from filing his or her claim despite diligent efforts. Neither the actions of the defendants nor the lawsuit against the third party in this case in any way impeded the litigant's right to file suit. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Hartman, 911 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1996).

When a creditor on multiple debts applies an undesignated partial payment by the debtor to a debt on which the statute of limitations has not yet run, the payment tolls the statute of limitations on that debt. Drake v. Tyner, 914 P.2d 519 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in Kanarado Mining & Dev. Co. v. Sutton, 36 Colo. App. 375, 539 P.2d 1325 (1975); Carpenters & Millwrights Health Benefit Trust Fund v. Gardiner Dry Walling Co., 573 F.2d 1172 (10th Cir. 1978); Duncan v. Schuster-Graham Homes, Inc., 194 Colo. 441, 578 P.2d 637 (1978); *Tamblyn v. ## II. APPLICABLE ACTIONS.

A statute of limitations is applied only to cases clearly within its provisions. Glenn v. Mitchell, 71 Colo. 394, 207 P. 84 (1922); Wyatt v. Burnett, 95 Colo. 414, 36 P.2d 768 (1934).

This section is a general statute of limitations on the enforcement of debts, including debts evidenced by a promissory note secured by a deed of trust. After a party reduces a promissory note to judgment, the more specific six- and 15-year limitations periods established by §§ 13-52-102 and 38-29-205 apply to the resulting judgment lien and original deed of trust respectively. The merger of the promissory note into the judgment does not discharge the debt or extinguish the lien of the deed of trust. Mortgage Invs. Corp. v. Battle Mountain Corp., 70 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2003).

Application to foreign corporation. Former § 13-80-110 could not be applied to subject a foreign corporation to greater liabilities than were imposed upon a similarly situated domestic corporation. Casselman v. Denver Tramway Corp., 39 Colo. App. 306, 568 P.2d 84 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 195 Colo. 241, 577 P.2d 293 (1978).

Since this state has by § 7-8-122 (1) adopted a two-year statute of limitations applicable to dissolved domestic corporations, it would be both illogical and unconstitutional to apply to a foreign corporation, which has been dissolved pursuant to the laws under which it is governed by its state of incorporation, and which has received a certificate of withdrawal from this state, a statute of limitations which would subject it to liability for a period longer than that which this state would apply to a dissolved domestic corporation. Casselman v. Denver Tramway Corp., 39 Colo. App. 306, 568 P.2d 84 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 195 Colo. 241, 577 P.2d 293 (1978).

This statute is a meritorious defense to an action on a promissory note. First Nat'l Bank v. Mock, 70 Colo. 517, 203 P. 272 (1921).

This statutory section only applies when there is a contract between the parties. Pound v. Fletter, 39 P.3d 1241 (Colo. App. 2001).

Action for money loaned may be brought within six years from last interest payment. The statute of limitations is not a bar to an action for money loaned when brought within six years from the date of the last payment of interest. Purdy v. Deprez, 39 Colo. 68, 88 P. 972 (1907).

It applies to action to recover usurious interest. The applicable statute of limitations for the common-law remedy of money had and received to recover usurious interest paid then is six years. Dennis v. Bradbury, 236 F. Supp. 683 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd and reh'g denied, 368 F.2d 905 (10th Cir. 1966).

Reimbursement under lease. Where a long-term lease agreement is executed, and where the lessor subsequently pays the applicable sales taxes and invoices the amount paid to the lessee, but the lessee refuses to make reimbursement, this section is the applicable statutory section. Columbine Beverage Co. v. Cont'l Can Co., 662 P.2d 1094 (Colo. App. 1982).

In an action by a builder against the owners for damages for breach of contract prior to completion of construction, where the builder sought a liquidated determinable amount of money due it from the owners, i.e., 10 percent of the estimated cost of the house, it was an action of debt founded upon a contract included within the meaning of this section. Comfort Homes, Inc. v. Peterson, 37 Colo. App. 516, 549 P.2d 1087 (1976).

Statute inapplicable to claims for replevin, conversion, theft, and breach of bailment brought by daughter against mother with respect to mother's taking of winning lottery ticket; this section applicable only to claims based in contract. Curtis v. Counce, 32 P.3d 585 (Colo. App. 2001).

"Liquidated debt" and "unliquidated, determinable amount" construed. A debt is deemed "liquidated" if the amount due is capable of ascertainment by reference to an agreement or by simple computation. A debtor's dispute of or defenses against such claim, or any setoff or counterclaim interposed, does not affect this result. Similarly, if a contract fixes a price per unit of performance, a claim based thereon is "determinable" even though the number of units performed must be proven and is subject to dispute. Rotenberg v. Richards, 899 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1995); applied in Interbank Inv. v. Vail Valley Consol. Water, 12 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2000); Portercare Adventist Health Sys. v. Lego, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

A claim based on quantum meruit is not liquidated or determinable, because it seeks only reasonable compensation for services rendered, in an amount to be determined by the fact-finder. Rotenberg v. Richards, 899 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1995); Portercare Adventist Health Sys. v. Lego, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Statute does not apply to amount owed from partnership accounting. Because the amount due from the partnership accounting was not capable of ascertainment by reference to the partnership agreement or by a simple computation derived from the agreement, the statute does not apply. Tafoya v. Perkins, 932 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1996).

A hospital bill is not an agreement between parties, but rather a statement of charges, and so is not a "liquidated" or "determinable" sum. As such, it is governed by the three-year statute of limitations for recovery under § 13-80-101, not the six-year statute of limitations prescribed by this section. Portercare Adventist Health Sys. v. Lego, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Action under § 10-4-708 of Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act covered by this section as an action in debt or in assumpsit. Winstead v. Criterion Ins. Co., 781 P.2d 170 (Colo. App. 1989).

An action for negligent misrepresentation is based upon simple negligence, and thus such an action was governed by the former six-year statute of limitations rather than the three-year statute of limitations generally applicable for fraud. Ebrahimi v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 794 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1989).

Claim for breach of contract against construction contractor is not governed by two-year statute of limitations for actions against contractors and builders (now § 13-80-104) but by six-year statute of limitations for contract actions in this section, but claim against contractor for damages caused by delays in construction is covered by two-year statute. Frisco Motel P'ship v. H.S.M. Corp., 791 P.2d 1195 (Colo. App. 1989).

ERISA action to recover pension and benefit contributions is analogous to state breach of contract action and subject to the six year statute of limitations under this section. Trustees of Health Ben. Trust v. Lillard and Clark, 780 F. Supp. 738 (D. Colo. 1990); Aull v. Cavalcade Pension Plan, 988 F. Supp. 1360 (D. Colo. 1997).

The Colorado statute of limitations for the enforcement of rights which are set forth in an instrument securing the payment of a debt is six years after the claim for relief accrues and a claim for relief on a promissory note accrues the day after the note matures. Tivoli Ventures, Inc. v. Bumann, 870 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1994).

13-80-103.7. General limitation of actions - sexual assault or sexual offense against a child - six years. (1) Notwithstanding any other statute of limitations specified in this article, or any other provision of law that can be construed to reduce the statutory period set forth in this section, any civil action based on a sexual assault or a sexual offense against a child shall be commenced within six years after a disability has been removed for a person under disability, as such term is defined in subsection (3.5) of this section, or within six years after a cause of action accrues, whichever occurs later, and not thereafter. Nothing in this section shall be construed to extend the statutory period with respect to vicarious liability.

(2) For the purpose of this section, "sexual assault" means subjecting another person of any age to sexual contact, as defined in section 18-3-401 (4), C.R.S.; sexual intrusion, as

The statute of limitations applies to each installment due on a note separately and does not begin to run on any one installment until that installment is due. Right to foreclose on note is not extinguished because certain payments are more than six years overdue and foreclosure proceedings are just begun. Application of Church, 833 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1992).

If a money obligation is payable in installments, a separate cause of action arises on each installment and the statute of limitations begins to run against each installment when it becomes due, regardless of whether the holder possesses the option to declare all installments payable in the event of default on a single payment. Application of Church, 833 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1992).

In the case of a default on installment payments, the statute of limitations must be deemed to commence running on the date of the cure as to any installment payments due prior to that date. Parker v. Luttrell, 926 P.2d 179 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because the statute of limitations under this section had not run as of the date when the FDIC's claim for relief on promissory note accrued, the federal statute of limitations preempted this section as a result of the FDIC's receivership. Tivoli Ventures, Inc. v. Bumann, 870 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1994).

Assignment of a promissory note by the FDIC to private party allows the assignee to seek recovery pursuant to the federal statute of limitations, facilitates expunging the federal system of failed bank assets, and is consistent with the intent and language of the federal statute as well as the requirements of the common law. Tivoli Ventures, Inc. v. Bumann, 870 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1994).

This section does not apply to a contract action for insurance coverage in which no third party was damaged. Union Pac. R.R. Co. v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, 37 P.3d 524 (Colo. App. 2001).

The statute of limitations does not apply to an action to quiet title brought by a person in possession of real property. Martinez v. Archuleta-Padia, 143 P.3d 1112 (Colo. App. 2006).

defined in section 18-3-401 (5), C.R.S.; or sexual penetration, as defined in section 18-3-401 (6), C.R.S.

(3) For the purposes of this section, "sexual offense against a child" shall include all offenses listed in section 18-3-411; C.R.S.

(3.5) (a) For the purpose of this section, "person under disability" means any person who is a minor under eighteen years of age, a mental incompetent, or a person under other legal disability and who does not have a legal guardian. "Person under disability" also includes a victim of a sexual assault when the victim is in a special relationship with the perpetrator of the assault or is a victim of a sexual offense against a child or is a victim who is residing in an institutional facility, such as a nursing home, regional center, or residential facility for the treatment and care of persons with mental illness or for the care of persons with developmental disabilities and where the victim is psychologically or emotionally unable to acknowledge the assault or offense and the harm resulting therefrom. For the purpose of this subsection (3.5), "special relationship" means a relationship between the victim and the perpetrator of the sexual assault which is a confidential, trust-based relationship, such as attorney-client, doctor-patient, psychotherapist-patient, minister-parishioner, teacher-student, or familial relationship. It is the intent of the general assembly to leave in place the six-year limitation for adults subjected to a sexual assault except in the situations described in this paragraph (a) in which the victim is in a special relationship with the perpetrator of the assault. In the circumstances in which a victim is in a special relationship with the perpetrator of the assault or is a victim of a sexual offense against a child or a victim who is residing in an institutional facility, such as a nursing home, regional center, or residential facility for the treatment and care of persons with mental illness or for the care of persons with developmental disabilities and where the victim is psychologically or emotionally unable to acknowledge the assault or offense and the harm resulting therefrom, the six-year limitation shall be tolled until the disability is removed. For the purpose of this section, where the plaintiff is a victim of a series of sexual assaults or sexual offenses against a child, the plaintiff need not establish which act of a series of acts caused the plaintiff's injury, and the statute of limitations set forth in this section shall commence with the last in the series of acts, subject to the provisions of this section regarding disability. However, as elements of the cause of action, a person under disability who is psychologically or emotionally unable to acknowledge the assault or offense and the harm resulting therefrom shall have the burden of proving that the assault or offense occurred and that such person was actually psychologically or emotionally unable to acknowledge the assault or offense and the harm resulting therefrom.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 13-90-107, the filing of a claim pursuant to this subsection (3.5) is deemed to be a limited waiver of the doctor-patient privilege or the psychologist-patient privilege to persons who are necessary to resolve the claim, and a doctor or psychologist who provided medical care and treatment or counseling and treatment to the plaintiff for injuries upon which an action under this subsection (3.5) is based may be examined as a witness. All medical records pertaining to any relevant medical care and treatment or counseling and treatment of the plaintiff are admissible into evidence in an action brought pursuant to this subsection (3.5) and shall be available for inspection upon request by the parties to the action.

(c) If the plaintiff brings a civil action under this subsection (3.5) fifteen years or more after the plaintiff attains the age of eighteen, the plaintiff may only recover damages for medical and counseling treatment and expenses, plus costs and attorney fees.

(d) It is the intent of the general assembly in enacting this subsection (3.5) to extend the statute of limitations as to civil actions based on offenses described in subsection (1) of this section as amended on July 1, 1993, for which the applicable statute of limitations in effect prior to July 1, 1993, has not yet run on July 1, 1993.

(3.7) An action may not be brought pursuant to subsection (3.5) of this section if the defendant is deceased or is incapacitated to the extent that the defendant is incapable of rendering a defense to the action.

(4) It is the intent of the general assembly in enacting this section to extend the statute of limitations as to civil actions based on offenses described in subsection (1) of this section for which the applicable statute of limitations in effect prior to July 1, 1990, has not yet run on July 1, 1990.

(5) The provisions of this section shall not be construed to extend or suspend the statute of limitations or statute of repose applicable to a claim alleging negligence in the course of providing professional services in the practice of medicine. This subsection (5) shall not be construed to preclude pursuing a civil action pursuant to this section alleging a sexual offense based on a legal theory other than negligence in the course of providing professional services in the practice of medicine, unless the sexual assault forms the basis for a claim of such negligence.

ANNOTATION

This section does not purport to define when an action for sexual assault on a child "accrues", but rather establishes the six-year limitation period and provides that the period runs from accrual or from the date of removal of disability. Sailsbery v. Parks, 983 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1999).

Statute of limitations set forth in this section is restricted to claims brought against a perpetrator and does not encompass claims against parties other than a perpetrator of a sexual offense. Sandoval v. Archdiocese of Denver, 8 P.3d 598 (Colo. App. 2000).

Claims of intentional sexual assault or battery committed during the provision of medical services are subject to the six-year statute of limitation of this section, unless the sexual touching occurred in a negligent manner. Hurtado v. Brady, 165 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2007).

13-80-103.8. Limitation of civil forfeiture actions related to criminal acts. (1) The following actions shall be commenced within five years after the cause of action accrues, and not thereafter:

- (a) All actions brought pursuant to section 12-55.5-110 (2), C.R.S.;
- (b) All actions brought pursuant to part 3 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S.;
- (c) All actions brought pursuant to part 5 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S.;
- (d) All civil actions brought pursuant to article 17 of title 18, C.R.S.;
- (e) All civil actions brought pursuant to section 42-5-107, C.R.S.

(2) A cause of action shall be deemed to have accrued pursuant to subsection (1) of this section at such time as the alleged offense or conduct giving rise to the claim was discovered. If, when a cause of action accrues against a person pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, such person is out of this state and not subject to service of process or has concealed himself, or the property which is the subject of such a cause of action is concealed or absent from this state, the period limited for the commencement of the action by the statute of limitations pursuant to this section shall not begin to run until such person comes into this state or such property is no longer out of this state or concealed. If, after the cause of action accrues, such person departs from this state and is not subject to service of process or conceals himself, the time of his absence while not subject to service of process or the time of his concealment while not subject to service of process, or any period of time the property which is the subject of such cause of action is removed from this state, shall not be computed as a part of the period within which the action must be brought.

(3) For purposes of computing time pursuant to this section, possession or control of the following forms of property by any person subject to a cause of action pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be deemed to be a continuing offense or continuing conduct:

- (a) All currency, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value furnished or intended to be furnished by any person in exchange for any alleged offense or conduct giving rise to a cause of action;
- (b) All proceeds of any alleged offense or conduct giving rise to a cause of action;
- (c) All currency, negotiable instruments, or securities intended to be used to facilitate any alleged offense or conduct giving rise to a cause of action;

(d) All property derived from or realized through any alleged offense or conduct giving rise to a cause of action.

13-80-103.9. Limitation of actions - failure to perform a background check by a public entity - injury to a child. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Child" means a person under eighteen years of age.

(b) "Education employment required background check" means complying with sections 22-2-119 and 22-32-109.7, C.R.S.

(c) "Sexual offense against a child" shall include all offenses listed in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S.

(2) Notwithstanding any other statute of limitations specified in this article or any other provision of law, a civil action, as described in subsection (3) of this section, against a school district or charter school for failure to perform an education employment required background check may be brought at any time within two years after the age of majority of the plaintiff.

(3) In bringing a civil action for failure to perform an education employment required background check pursuant to this section, a plaintiff shall make a prima facie showing of the following facts and circumstances:

(a) The school district or charter school, in hiring an individual to work with children or in a setting with children, or the department of education did not perform an education employment required background check of the individual, and the failure to conduct the required background check was the result of the school district's or charter school's deliberate indifference or reckless disregard of its obligations to conduct the background check as provided by law; ordinary negligence or unintentional oversight is not sufficient.

(b) The individual, at the time of hiring, had a criminal record that included one or more convictions for the offense of sexual assault as described in section 18-3-402, C.R.S., for a sexual offense against a child, or for child abuse as described in section 18-6-401, C.R.S., or the individual had been dismissed or had resigned from a school district under the circumstances described in section 22-32-109.7 (1) (b), C.R.S.; and

(c) The individual committed one of the following offenses against a child with whom the individual came in contact in the course of his or her employment with the school district or charter school:

(I) Sexual assault as described in section 18-3-402, C.R.S.;

(II) Sexual offense against a child; or

(III) Child abuse as described in section 18-6-401, C.R.S.

(4) An action may not be brought pursuant to subsection (3) of this section if the defendant is deceased or is incapacitated to the extent that the school district or charter school is incapable of rendering a defense to the action.

13-80-104. Limitation of actions against architects, contractors, builders or builder vendors, engineers, inspectors, and others. (1) (a) Notwithstanding any statutory provision to the contrary, all actions against any architect, contractor, builder or builder vendor, engineer, or inspector performing or furnishing the design, planning, supervision, inspection, construction, or observation of construction of any improvement to real property shall be brought within the time provided in section 13-80-102 after the claim for relief arises, and not thereafter, but in no case shall such an action be brought more than six years after the substantial completion of the improvement to the real property, except as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(b) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b), a claim for relief arises under this section at the time the claimant or the claimant's predecessor in interest discovers or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered the physical manifestations of a defect in the improvement which ultimately causes the injury.

(II) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), all claims, including, but not limited to indemnity or contribution, by a claimant against a person who is or may be liable to the claimant for all or part of the claimant's liability to a third person:

(A) Arise at the time the third person's claim against the claimant is settled or at the time final judgment is entered on the third person's claim against the claimant, whichever comes first; and

(B) Shall be brought within ninety days after the claims arise, and not thereafter.

(c) Such actions shall include any and all actions in tort, contract, indemnity, or contribution, or other actions for the recovery of damages for:

(I) Any deficiency in the design, planning, supervision, inspection, construction, or observation of construction of any improvement to real property; or

(II) Injury to real or personal property caused by any such deficiency; or

(III) Injury to or wrongful death of a person caused by any such deficiency.

(2) In case any such cause of action arises during the fifth or sixth year after substantial completion of the improvement to real property, said action shall be brought within two years after the date upon which said cause of action arises.

(3) The limitations provided by this section shall not be asserted as a defense by any person in actual possession or control, as owner or tenant or in any other capacity, of such an improvement at the time any deficiency in such an improvement constitutes the proximate cause of the injury or damage for which it is proposed to bring an action.

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-104 is similar to former § 13-80-127 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

Former § 13-80-127 deemed unconstitutional. Former section was unconstitutional because it granted immunity from suit to certain classes of defendants without any reasonable basis for the classification. McClanahan v. Am. Gilsonite Co., 494 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1980).

Statutory distinctions neither discriminatory nor arbitrary. In view of the differences between construction professionals and materialmen, the legislative judgment to grant one group immunity from suit after a reasonable period of time while denying it to the other is neither invidiously discriminatory nor wholly arbitrary. Cudahy Co. v. Ragnar Benson, Inc., 514 F. Supp. 1212 (D. Colo. 1981).

Former § 13-80-127 constitutional. Requiring claims against builder-vendors to be filed within two years after the claim for relief arises did not violate federal or state constitutional equal protection guarantees. Criswell v. M.J. Brock and Sons, Inc., 681 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1984).

Not retroactive. Former § 13-80-127 was not enacted until 1969, and there is nothing in it which indicates that it was to be given retroactive application. Greene v. Green Acres Constr. Co., 36 Colo. App. 439, 543 P.2d 108 (1975).

Period for suit against architect reasonable. It is not unreasonable for the general assembly to limit to 10 years (now 6 years) the period in which suits may be commenced against architects for design defects, in view of the legislative intent to avoid stale claims and the likelihood that most types of defects would reasonably be discovered within 10 years (now 6 years) of substantial completion. Since this section is rationally related to a permissible state objective, it does not violate due process. Yarbro v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 655 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1982).

Applicability of section. The plain language of this section reflects a legislative intent to apply a shorter limitations period only to claims for personal injury or damage to property other than the defective improvement itself; in cases where the claim relates to the defective improvement itself, the general statutes of limitations appropriate to contract, negligence, warranty, etc., are applicable. Tamblyn v. Mickey & Fox, Inc., 195 Colo. 354, 578 P.2d 641 (1978); Duncan v. Schuster-Graham Homes, Inc., 194 Colo. 441, 578 P.2d 637 (1978).

Statute of limitations specifically drafted to relate to special cases controls over a general statute of limitations and, therefore, this section and not the general statute of limitations controls the time limits for filing. Stanske v. Wazee Elec. Co., 690 P.2d 1291 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 722 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1986); Mohawk Green Apartments v. Kramer, 709 P.2d 955 (Colo. App. 1985).

For purposes of deciding applicability of former § 13-80-127, the principal factor to be considered in determining whether something constitutes an improvement to real property is intention of owner. Enright v. City of Colo. Springs, 716 P.2d 148 (Colo. App. 1985).

In the absence of a formal complaint, arbitration proceeding, or settlement of a dispute where a homeowner has bargained for repair work in exchange for a release of a homebuilder's liability, a homebuilder's repair of damages to a home is not resolution of a "claim" for purposes of triggering the 90-day statute of limitations set forth in subsection (1)(b)(II), and that statute of limitations therefore does not apply to such a homebuilder's related claims against subcontractors. Richmond Am. Homes of Colo., Inc. v. Steel Floors, LLC, 187 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2008).

This section does not deprive a court of jurisdiction to hear a time-barred claim, and reliance on the limitation period must be pleaded and proven as an affirmative defense. Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

Since structure causing injuries to plaintiff was not a product but an improvement to real property, neither city nor contractor could be held liable on a theory of strict liability. Enright v. City of Colo. Springs, 716 P.2d 148 (Colo. App. 1985).

Former statute of repose barred claim. Installation of electrical system to grain elevator is integral part of improvement to real property and is kind of activity intended to be protected under former statute of repose. Stanske v. Wazee Elec. Co., 722 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1986).

Architect may be covered by section even though unlicensed when services first ren- dered. An architect still comes within the protections of this section even though he is not licensed to practice architecture in Colorado at the time design services are first rendered, but becomes licensed in Colorado before the substantial completion of the structure. Yarbro v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 655 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1982).

Section extends to those involved in the actual process of construction, and a designation alone does not determine whether a defendant is protected. A court must examine the defendant's activities using an "activities analysis", which includes an examination of the label placed on a party involved in the building process and whether that party's actions fall within the statute's protected class of activities. Two Denver Highlands v. Stanley Structures, 12 P.3d 819 (Colo. App. 2000).

Claims not limited to deficiencies in structure. This section does not limit claims for deficiencies in the structure itself, as opposed to consequential property damage; thus, a factory owner could sue the designer of a refrigeration unit four years after an accident for the cost of repair of the deficiencies in the system itself. Cudahy Co. v. Ragnar Benson, Inc., 514 F. Supp. 1212 (D. Colo. 1981).

Claim relating to defective improvements not barred by two-year statute of limitations where claim was filed within proper time period under former statute of limitations and where claim was filed within time allowed in applicability clause for amendments to two-year statute of limitations. Johnson v. Graham, 679 P.2d 1090 (Colo. App. 1983).

Action on breach of warranty claim for defects in workmanship is controlled by two-year statute of limitations since defect was discovered more than two years prior to commencement of action, even though warranty was valid for ten years. Mohawk Green Apartments v. Kramer, 709 P.2d 955 (Colo. App. 1985).

Grading of lot is essential and integral to the construction and completion of a house and is part of the improvements to the real property. Therefore, the builder's alleged improper grading of the lot is a "deficiency in an improvement to real property", and buyer's claims are within the scope of this section. Embree v. Am. Continental Corp., 684 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1984).

Since phrase "improvement to real property" is not defined, assumption is that general assembly intended to give it its usual and ordinary meaning and, therefore, indicator light installed as part of overall electrical system is an improvement to property within this section. Stanske v. Wazee Elec. Co., 690 P.2d 1291 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 722 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1986); Anderson v. M.W. Kellogg Co., 766 P.2d 637 (Colo. 1988); Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

The determination whether the construction was an improvement to real property is a matter of law. Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

The principal factor in determining whether an activity constitutes an improvement to real property is the intention of the owner. Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

Concrete used to build garage is an improvement to real property. The owner intended to improve the real property by building a parking garage. The concrete was an essential and predominant part of the garage. Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section inapplicable to damage claims to defective improvements. The two-year statute of limitations for actions concerning the construction of improvements to real property does not apply to claims for damage to improvements which are themselves defective. Olson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. Douglas Jardine, Inc., 626 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1981).

Section 13-21-204 applies to all wrongful death actions absent exception. The language of § 13-21-204 is plainly all-inclusive, and must be construed to apply to all wrongful death actions in the absence of an express exception in this section. McClanahan v. Am. Gilsonite Co., 494 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1980).

Relation back doctrine of rule 15(c), Fed. R. App. P. does not apply in wrongful death action unless the added party was given notice within the period provided by this section. McClanahan v. Am. Gilsonite Co., 494 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1980).

Strict construction. This section is in derogation of prior common law; therefore the terms must be considered to be exclusive and must be construed strictly. Ciancio v. Serafini, 40 Colo. App. 168, 574 P.2d 876 (1977).

Subsection (1)(a) must be strictly construed because it is in derogation of the common law. Prior to the enactment of statutes of limitations relating to construction, builders and contractors were subject to potentially indefinite liability. Gleason v. Becker-Johnson Assocs., Inc., 916 P.2d 662 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section therefore applies only to the actual process of construction and not to an unrelated activity such as a "pre-buy" inspection. Gleason v. Becker-Johnson Assocs., Inc., 916 P.2d 662 (Colo. App. 1996).

A survey which is not part of an improvement or building project does not constitute an "improvement to real property" and actions accruing because of negligence in performing such surveys are not within the purview of this section. Ciancio v. Serafini, 40 Colo. App. 168, 574 P.2d 876 (1977).

Plaintiffs' lack of knowledge of the identity of the engineering defendants at the time they were first aware that there was damage to the house does not toll the statute. Tamblyn v.

Mickey & Fox, Inc., 39 Colo. App. 319, 568 P.2d 491 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 195 Colo. 354, 578 P.2d 641 (1978).

Action by subsequent home owner. A subsequent home owner may maintain an action against a builder for negligence resulting in latent defects which the subsequent purchaser was unable to discover prior to purchase, if the action is filed within the statute of limitations set out in this section. Cosmopolitan Homes, Inc. v. Weller, 663 P.2d 1041 (Colo. 1983).

For implied warranty of fitness and habitability for purchasers of new homes, see Cosmopolitan Homes, Inc. v. Weller, 663 P.2d 1041 (Colo. 1983).

Time for discovery of defect is applied in Criswell v. M.J. Brock and Sons, Inc., 681 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1984); Hipco v. Varco-Pruden, 687 P.2d 540 (Colo. App. 1984).

The issue of whether plaintiff, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have discovered a defect is generally a question of fact, and summary judgment therefore is inappropriate. Wildridge Venture v. Ranco Roofing, Inc., 971 P.2d 282 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Substantial completion" is construed to require no greater state of "completion" of an improvement, at the most, than is required by § 38-22-109 (4). May Dept. Stores v. Univ. Hills, 789 P.2d 434 (Colo. App. 1989).

A claim for relief does not arise until the damaged party possesses reasonable notice or knowledge of not only the existence but also the substantial nature of a defective improvement, both of which factors are issues of material fact which preclude summary judgment. Weiss v. Am. Continental Corp., 765 P.2d 595 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided under former § 13-80-127 prior to the deletion of the reference to the substantial or significant nature of a defect).

Claim for relief arises at time claimant discovers, or should have discovered the physical manifestations of a defect in the improvement that ultimately causes the injury. Two Denver Highlands v. Stanley Structures, 12 P.3d 819 (Colo. App. 2000).

Under this section, claim for relief arises, not on the date of injury, but when the physical manifestation of the defect "which ultimately causes the injury" is discovered. Smith v. Executive Custom Homes, Inc., 209 P.3d 1175 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 230 P.3d 1186 (Colo. 2010).

This section's notice of claim and tolling provisions preclude equitable tolling under the "repair doctrine". Smith v. Executive Custom Homes, Inc., 230 P.3d 1186 (Colo. 2010).

Real estate developer not included under classes of persons listed in section. Calvaresi v. Nat'l Development Co., 772 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1988).

This section begins to run at the same time for all claims of injury caused by defects in design and construction of improvements to real property, including claims based upon theories of indemnity and contribution. The general assembly intended to abolish the distinction, established by the Supreme Court in Duncan v. Shuster-Graham Homes, Inc. (578 P.2d 637 (Colo. 1978)) between the time of accrual for underlying claims involving construction defects, and claims for indemnification arising therefrom. Nelson, Haley, et al. v. Garney Companies, 781 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1989).

Subsection (1)(b)(II) is a statute of limitations tolling provision, not a ripeness provision, that does not bar cross-claims and third-party claims for indemnity or contribution in construction defect lawsuits. Thus, a defendant in a construction defect lawsuit may utilize C.R.C.P. 13 and 14 to bring an indemnity or contribution claim against a party or add a party allegedly responsible for the defect no later than 90 days after termination of the construction defect lawsuit. CLPF-Parkridge v. Harwell Invs., 105 P.3d 658 (Colo. 2005).

The 90-day limitation in subsection (1)(b)(II) applies to a construction professional who is a defendant in the underlying lawsuit and sets forth the time period following a settlement or judgment in which the construction professional may file a separate lawsuit seeking indemnification or contribution. Fire Ins. Exch. v. Monty's Heating & Air Conditioning, 179 P.3d 43 (Colo. App. 2007).

Because the phrase "all claims" in subsection (1)(b)(II) does not include a subrogation claim against a construction professional, the 90-day limitation does not apply. Rather, the two-year statute of limitations governs such claims. Fire Ins. Exch. v. Monty's Heating & Air Conditioning, 179 P.3d 43 (Colo. App. 2007).

The 90-day period set forth in subsection (1)(b)(II)(B) does not toll the six-year statute of repose. Although developer brought action against defendants seeking contribution and indemnity within 90 days after settlement of suit against developer, developer's suit was time-barred by the six-year statute of repose set forth in subsection (2). Thermo Dev., Inc. v. Cent. Masonry Corp., 195 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

The 90-day period set forth in subsection (1)(b)(II)(B) affects only when a claim "arises", and must be brought, for purposes of the two-year statute of limitations and does not relate to the six-year statute of repose. Thermo Dev., Inc. v. Cent. Masonry Corp., 195 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

A statute of limitations takes effect when a claim arises, while a statute of repose bars the bringing of a suit after a set period of time, regardless whether an injury has occurred or a claim has arisen. Thermo Dev., Inc. v. Cent. Masonry Corp., 195 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

The reference in subsection (1)(b)(II) to subsection (1)(a) pertains only to the two-year statute of limitations set forth in § 13-80-102, not to the six-year statute of repose. Thermo Dev., Inc. v. Cent. Masonry Corp., 195 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

This section does not apply to claims based on injuries to real property allegedly caused by negligent acts that occurred during construction activities, but which did not result in a defect in the improvement itself. This section, read and considered as a whole, was intended to apply only to negligence in planning, design, construction, supervision, or inspection that results in a defect in an improvement created by a building professional and not to all injuries stemming from such professional's negligent conduct. Irwin v. Elam Const., Inc., 793 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1990); Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section did not apply to movers since it does not specifically refer to movers, and the movers' efforts in moving a monument does not constitute an improvement to real property. Flatiron Paving v. Great Southwest Fire, 812 P.2d 668 (Colo. App. 1990).

It may be arguable that discovery of the damage resulting from a construction defect caused a claim for relief to arise under this section prior to its 1979 amendment, while knowledge of the nature of the defect itself was required after the amendment. Nevertheless, absent actual knowledge, it was, in either case, the "reasonable person" standard that was to be applied in determining the existence of the requisite constructive knowledge. Villa Sierra Condominium v. Field Corp., 787 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section limits actions against a contractor arising from defects in an improvement due to negligence in planning, design, construction, supervision, or inspection. Irwin v. Elam Const., Inc., 793 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section does not apply to all injuries caused by a contractor's negligent conduct. Irwin v. Elam Const., Inc., 793 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1990); Oliver v. Homestake Enterprises, Inc., 800 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 817 P.2d 979 (Colo. 1991).

Subcontractors are included within the statute. Defendant is a subcontractor whose activities in preparing and installing concrete related to the process of building a structure. The activities of the defendant fall within those protected by the statute. Two Denver Highlands v. Dillingham, 932 P.2d 827 (Colo. App. 1996).

Application of former § 13-80-127 is fact-specific, requiring an examination of the nature of the claim to determine whether it alleges misconduct arising out of an activity the statute was designed to protect. Stanske v. Wazee Elec. Co., 722 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1986); Homestake Enterprises, Inc. v. Oliver, 817 P.2d 979 (Colo. 1991).

Claim for breach of contract against construction contractor is not governed by two-year statute of limitations for actions against contractors and builders in this section but by six-year statute of limitations for contract actions (now § 13-80-103.5), but claim against contractor for damages caused by delays in construction is covered by two-year statute. Frisco Motel P'ship v. H.S.M. Corp., 791 P.2d 1195 (Colo. App. 1989).

Relying on the plain language of this section, salon's fire was a "physical manifestation of a defect". The damage caused by salon's fire, the "injury" in this case, served as the initial discovery of the defect. It was not necessary to know that the defect caused the fire for the fire to be the defect's physical manifestation. United Fire Group v. Powers Elec., Inc., 240 P.3d 569 (Colo. App. 2010).

The existence of a subrogation claim does not alter this section's statute of limitations for construction defects. United Fire Group v. Powers Elec., Inc., 240 P.3d 569 (Colo. App. 2010).

Any claim that salon had against electrician arose on the day of the fire because the salon discovered the fire on that day. Therefore, under subsection (1)(b)(I), the insurer's claim arose on the same day that the salon's claim arose. United Fire Group v. Powers Elec., Inc., 240 P.3d 569 (Colo. App. 2010).

Claim for negligence in installing and operating sprinkler system alleged a "defect" or "deficiency" within the meaning of former § 13-80-127, where system was turned on during freezing weather while construction was still in progress and plaintiff, walking on adjoining sidewalk, was injured by fall on ice which formed as a result. Therefore, two-year limitation period applied to bar plaintiff's claim against contractor. Homestake Enterprises, Inc. v. Oliver, 817 P.2d 979 (Colo. 1991).

Under this section, the limitations period on an indemnification claim begins to run at the same time as that for the underlying claim. This statute modifies common law rule that actions for indemnification accrue when the indemnitor actually pays the liability not when the underlying claim accrues. Nelson, Haley, Patterson and Quirk, Inc. v. Garney Companies, Inc., 781 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1989); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Formwork Servs., Inc., 812 F. Supp. 1127 (D. Colo. 1993).

A presumption arises that § 13-80-127 is the controlling limitations statute if it was in effect when the action commenced, unless § 13-80-104 has express language otherwise. Wood Brothers Homes, Inc. v. Howard, 862 P.2d 925 (Colo. 1993) (decided under former § 13-80-127).

Applied in City of Aurora v. Bechtel Corp., 599 F.2d 382 (10th Cir. 1979); Williams v. Genesee Dev. Co. No. 2, 759 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1988).

13-80-105. Limitation of actions against land surveyors. (1) Notwithstanding any statutory provision to the contrary, all actions against any land surveyor brought to recover damages resulting from any alleged negligent or defective land survey shall be brought within the time provided in section 13-80-101 after the person bringing the action either discovered or in the exercise of reasonable diligence and concern should have discovered the negligence or defect which gave rise to such action, and not thereafter, but in no case shall such an action be brought more than ten years after the completion of the survey upon which such action is based.

(2) For purposes of this section, "land survey" or "improvement survey" means any survey conducted by or under the direction and control of a land surveyor licensed pursuant to the provisions of part 2 of article 25 of title 12, C.R.S., and includes but is not limited to professional land surveying, as defined in section 12-25-202 (6), C.R.S. Nothing in this section shall be construed as extending the period or periods provided by the laws of Colorado or by agreement of the parties for bringing any action, nor shall this section be construed as creating any claim for relief not existing or recognized on or before July 1, 1979.

(3) (a) The limitations set forth in subsections (1) and (2) of this section shall not apply to any survey unless the documentary evidence of such land survey contains, clearly depicted thereon, the following statement:

NOTICE: According to Colorado law you must commence any legal action based upon any defect in this survey within three years after you first discover such defect. In no event may any action based upon any defect in this survey be commenced more than ten years from the date of the certification shown hereon.

(b) If any survey is performed that does not require documentation, the limitations set forth in subsections (1) and (2) of this section shall nevertheless apply if, not more than ninety days after the completion of the survey, written notice of the provisions of this article is provided to all persons holding an interest in the property upon which such survey is conducted.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-127.3 as it existed prior to 1986.

ANNOTATION

This section contains a 10-year statute of repose that sets a date after which a claim may be barred whether or not an injury has been discovered previously. Cornforth v. Larsen, 49 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2002).

Under the plain language of this section, in order for the 10-year statute of repose to apply, a survey must contain the notice required by subsection (3). If a survey does not contain the notice, the 10-year statute of repose has no application and a plaintiff may sue a land surveyor outside of the 10-year time frame. Cornforth v. Larsen, 49 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-80-106. Limitation of actions against manufacturers or sellers of products.

(1) Notwithstanding any other statutory provisions to the contrary, all actions except those governed by section 4-2-725, C.R.S., brought against a manufacturer or seller of a product, regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the action is brought, for or on account of personal injury, death, or property damage caused by or resulting from the manufacture, construction, design, formula, installation, preparation, assembly, testing, packaging, labeling, or sale of any product, or the failure to warn or protect against a danger or hazard in the use, misuse, or unintended use of any product, or the failure to provide proper instructions for the use of any product shall be brought within two years after the claim for relief arises and not thereafter.

(2) If any person entitled to bring any action mentioned in this section is under the age of eighteen years, mentally incompetent, imprisoned, or absent from the United States at the time the cause of action accrues and is without spouse or natural or legal guardian, such person may bring said action within the time limit specified in this section after the disability is removed. If such person has a legal representative, such person's representative shall bring the action within the period of limitation imposed by this section.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-106 is similar to former § 13-80-127.5 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

Section held not to violate equal protection guarantees of United States and Colorado Constitutions. Persichini v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 735 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1987).

By enacting this statute, the legislature made manifest its intent to encompass all forms of product liability actions against manufacturers of products regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the action is brought. Persichini v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 735 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1987); Boyd v. A.O. Smith Harvestore Prods., 776 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where claim is based on allegedly improper design and construction of improvement to real property and not on allegedly defective product, former § 13-80-127 controls the time limits for filing and not former § 13-80-127.5. Stanske v. Wazee Elec. Co., 722 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1986).

Liability of materialmen. Materialmen are in a position distinct from the architect, contractor, engineer or inspector in that the materialman provides manufactured goods and should be held accountable under the general tort rules governing liability for defects in those products. *Yarbro v. 13-80-107. Limitation of actions against manufacturers, sellers, or lessors of new manufacturing equipment. (1) (a) Notwithstanding any statutory provision to the contrary, all actions for or on account of personal injury, death, or property damage brought against a person or entity on account of the design, assembly, fabrication, production, or construction of new manufacturing equipment, or any component part thereof, or involving the sale or lease of such equipment shall be brought within the time provided in section 13-80-102 and not thereafter.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1), no such action shall be brought on a claim arising more than seven years after such equipment was first used for its intended purpose by someone not engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, or leasing such equipment, except when the claim arises from injury due to hidden defects or prolonged exposure to hazardous material.

(c) The time limitation specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1) shall not apply if the manufacturer, seller, or lessor intentionally misrepresented or fraudulently concealed any material fact concerning said equipment which is a proximate cause of the injury, death, or property damage.

(2) As used in this section, "manufacturing equipment" means equipment used in the operation or process of producing a new product, article, substance, or commodity for the purposes of commercial sale and different from and having a distinctive name, character, or use from the raw or prepared materials used in the operation or process.

(3) The provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to a claim against a manufacturer, seller, or lessor, who, in an express written warranty, warranted manufacturing equipment to be free of defects in design, manufacture, or materials for a period of time greater than that set forth in paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, if the injury complained of occurred and the claim for relief arose during the period of the express written warranty.

(4) The provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall not be applicable to indemnity actions brought by a manufacturer, seller, or lessor of manufacturing equipment or any other product against any other person who is or may be liable to said manufacturer, seller, or lessor for all or a portion of any judgment rendered against said manufacturer, seller, or lessor.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-107 is similar to former § 13-80-127.6, as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

This section is substantive law, not procedural, since it is directed to the products liability action created in part 4 of article 21 of this title and qualifies the right to bring an action. Nieman v. Press & Equip. Sales Co., 588 F. Supp. 650 (S. D. Ohio 1984) (decided under former § 13-80-127.6).

Section held constitutional under the equal protection clause of fourteenth amendment. Anderson v. M.W. Kellogg Co., 766 P.2d 637 (Colo. 1988); Eaton v. Jarvis, 965 F.2d 922 (10th Cir. 1992).

Test for this section is whether the defect was not readily apparent or discoverable by a reasonably prudent user. From the legislative history of this section, the legislature did not intend to include the failure to warn within the exception it created for hidden defects under this section. Anderson v. M.W. Kellogg Co., 766 P.2d 637 (Colo. 1988).

The statute does not apply to bar an action when the claim arises from injury due to hidden defects. Niemet v. Gen. Elec. Co., 843 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1992).

Hidden defect exception to the statute of repose operates to prevent the statute from barring plaintiff's action when malfunctioning transformer contained a defect that was present at the time of manufacture and the defect was not discovered, and could not have been discovered, until the entire transformer was cut in half. Niemet v. Gen. Elec. Co., 843 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-80-107.5. Limitation of actions for uninsured or underinsured motorist insurance. (1) Notwithstanding any statutory provision to the contrary, all actions or arbitrations under sections 10-4-609 and 10-4-610, C.R.S., pertaining to insurance protection against uninsured or underinsured motorists shall be commenced within the following time limitations and not thereafter:

(a) An action or arbitration of an "uninsured motorist" insurance claim, as defined in sections 10-4-609 and 10-4-610, C.R.S., shall be commenced or demanded by arbitration demand within three years after the cause of action accrues; except that, if the underlying

Whether a product is unreasonably dangerous because of a defect generally is a question of fact, and the appropriate standard for determination of issue is based upon actual awareness of dangerous condition of machine. Wayda v. Comet Intern. Corp., 738 P.2d 391 (Colo. App. 1987).

Subsection (1)(b) creates a statute of repose rather than a statute of limitations. A statute of repose may bar a claim before an injury occurs because it sets a time after the sale or first use of a product beyond which the manufacturer cannot be held liable. Anderson v. M.W. Kellogg Co., 766 P.2d 637 (Colo. 1988); Villalobos v. Heidelberger Druckmaschinen Artengesellschaft, 869 F. Supp. 1355 (D. Colo. 1994).

Defendant that did not manufacture, sell, or lease the equipment in question may not avail itself of the statute of repose created in subsection (1)(b). Villalobos v. Heidelberger Druckmaschinen Artengesellschaft, 869 F. Supp. 1355 (D. Colo. 1994).

Statute of repose began to run when the "new manufacturing equipment" was first installed and used as intended, not when the alleged defective component was first used. Eaton v. Jarvis, 965 F.2d 922 (10th Cir. 1992).

Printing press falls within the definition of "manufacturing equipment" since the end-product of the press has a character and use distinct from the raw materials used in the printing operation and the final product is prepared exclusively for commercial sale. Villalobos v. Heidelberger Druckmaschinen Artengesellschaft, 869 F. Supp. 1355 (D. Colo. 1994).

bodily injury liability claim against the uninsured motorist is preserved by commencing an action against the uninsured motorist within the time limit specified in sections 13-80-101 (1) (n) and 13-80-102 (1) (d), then an action or arbitration of an uninsured motorist claim shall be timely if such action is commenced or such arbitration is demanded within two years after the insured knows that the particular tortfeasor is not covered by any applicable insurance. In no event shall the insured have less than three years after the cause of action accrues within which to commence such action or demand arbitration.

(b) An action or arbitration of an "underinsured motorist" insurance claim, as defined in section 10-4-609 (4), C.R.S., shall be commenced or demanded by arbitration demand within three years after the cause of action accrues; except that, if the underlying bodily injury liability claim against the underinsured motorist is preserved by commencing an action against the underinsured motorist or by payment of either the liability claim settlement or judgment within the time limit specified in sections 13-80-101 (1) (n) and 13-80-102 (1) (d), then an action or arbitration of an underinsured motorist claim shall be timely if such action is commenced or such arbitration is demanded within two years after the insured received payment of the settlement or judgment on the underlying bodily injury liability claim. In no event shall the insured have less than three years after the cause of action accrues within which to commence such action or demand arbitration.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Action" means a lawsuit commenced in a court of competent jurisdiction; and

(b) "Arbitration demand" means a written demand for arbitration delivered to the insurer that reasonably identifies the person making the claim, the identity of the uninsured or underinsured motorist, if known, and the fact that an uninsured or underinsured motorist insurance arbitration is being demanded.

(3) An uninsured or underinsured motorist cause of action accrues after both the existence of the death, injury, or damage giving rise to the claim and the cause of the death, injury, or damage are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

ANNOTATION

The three-year period in which to commence an action against the uninsured and the two-year period to commence an uninsured motorist claim may run concurrently if the plaintiff knew or, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have known that there was no applicable insurance at the time of the accident. The requirement that a plaintiff use due diligence does not reward self-denial or self-indulgence; therefore, the uninsured's oral advisement at the time of the accident that he or she does not have insurance is enough to commence the two-year limitation period in which to bring a claim against an uninsured motorist carrier. Sulca v. Allstate Ins. Co., 77 P.3d 897 (Colo. App. 2003).

Two-year period began to run at time of accident, when uninsured driver admitted to having been uninsured or, at the latest, when the insured told his or her doctor he or she was involved in uninsured motorist litigation. Therefore, failure to join the insurer as a defendant until more than two years later required dismissal of the claim against the insurer. Trigg v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 129 P.3d 1099 (Colo. App. 2005).

"Relation back" doctrine based on mistake of identity did not apply where plaintiff sued the uninsured motorist for negligence and later added the plaintiff's insurer based on a separate transaction or conduct arising from the insurance contract. Trigg v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 129 P.3d 1099 (Colo. App. 2005).

The two-year period described in the second clause of subsection (1)(a) cannot apply to shorten the length of time to sue an insurer; it can only be applied to lengthen the three-year limitations period by as much as two years if the insured has preserved its rights by suing the driver and the injured person learned the driver was uninsured and filed suit against the insurer within two years after learning of that status. Rider v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 205 P.3d 519 (Colo. App. 2009).

The statute of limitations in subsection (1)(a) does not begin to run when the insured consults with an attorney or an attorney informs the insured that he or she has a claim, but when an insured knew, or should have known in the exercise of reasonable diligence, that there was no applicable insurance. Olson v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 174 P.3d 849 (Colo. App. 2007).

A demand satisfying the statute of limitations described in subsection (1)(b) can be made only under a preexisting mandatory arbitration agreement and not where the parties' agreement acknowledges only that arbitration may occur by consent. Cork v. Sentry Ins., 194 P.3d 422 (Colo. App. 2008).

A "civil action" is a lawsuit that has actually been commenced in a court of competent jurisdiction. Ortiz v. Davis, 902 P.2d 905 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-80-108. When a cause of action accrues. (1) Except as provided in subsection (12) of this section, a cause of action for injury to person, property, reputation, possession, relationship, or status shall be considered to accrue on the date both the injury and its cause are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(2) A cause of action for wrongful death shall be considered to accrue on the date of death.

(3) A cause of action for fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, or deceit shall be considered to accrue on the date such fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, or deceit is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(4) A cause of action for debt, obligation, money owed, or performance shall be considered to accrue on the date such debt, obligation, money owed, or performance becomes due.

(5) A cause of action for balance due on an open account for goods or services shall accrue at the time of the last item of goods or services proved in such account.

(6) A cause of action for breach of any express or implied contract, agreement, warranty, or trust shall be considered to accrue on the date the breach is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(7) A cause of action for wrongful possession of personal property, goods, or chattels shall accrue at the time the wrongful possession is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(8) A cause of action for losses or damages not otherwise enumerated in this article shall be deemed to accrue when the injury, loss, damage, or conduct giving rise to the cause of action is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(9) A cause of action for penalties shall be deemed to accrue when the determination of overpayment or delinquency for which such penalties are assessed is no longer subject to appeal.

(10) A cause of action for recovery of erroneous or excessive refunds of any tax administered under section 39-21-102, C.R.S., shall accrue on the date the department of revenue issues said refund.

(11) A cause of action for a penalty for commission of a class A or a class B traffic infraction, as defined in section 42-4-1701, C.R.S., shall be deemed to accrue on the date the traffic infraction was committed.

(12) A cause of action for bodily injury or property damage arising out of the use or operation of a motor vehicle accrues on the date that both the existence of the injury or damage and the cause of the injury or damage are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(13) A cause of action by the public employees' retirement association against an employer for unpaid contributions shall accrue on the date the nonpayment of contributions is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. This subsection (13) shall apply to causes of action as provided in section 24-51-402 (2), C.R.S.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Substitution of parties is not new cause of action. The substitution of an insurer for an insured as party plaintiff does not constitute the filing of a new cause of action, and the substituted party benefits from the filing date of the original complaint and is not barred by the statute of limitations of the original complaint was timely filed. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Gasper, 630 P.2d 97 (Colo. App. 1981).

A "cause of action" "accrues" based upon the happening of certain extrajudicial events. Ortiz v. Davis, 902 P.2d 905 (Colo. App. 1995).

Severing bad faith tort claims from an administrative proceeding is consistent with the statutory definition of accrual in subsection (1). Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

Critical inquiry of when an action accrues is knowledge of facts essential to the cause of action, not knowledge of the legal theory upon which the action may be brought. Morris v. Geer, 720 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1986); Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995); Murry v. GuideOne Specialty Mut. Ins. Co., 194 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2008).

Inquiry notice does not trigger the discovery rule, and suspicion of a possible connection does not necessarily put a reasonable person on notice of the nature, extent, and cause of an injury. Salazar v. Am. Sterlizer Co., 5 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2000).

This section applies in determining when a cause of action "accrues" in an action for sexual assault on a child. Sailsbery v. Parks, 983 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1999).

Section 13-80-103.7 does not purport to define when an action for sexual assault on a child "accrues", but rather establishes the six-year limitation period and provides that the period runs from accrual or from the date of removal of disability. Sailsbery v. Parks, 983 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment where a genuine issue of material fact as to when plaintiff knew or should have known of her injuries and their cause remained. Sailsbery v. Parks, 983 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1999).

When the statutory scheme of this article is considered as a whole, it manifests a clear intent to prescribe a six-year limitation period for actions to recover a determinable amount of money owed, whether by contractual agreement or not, which, under subsection (4), accrues on the date the debt becomes due. By contrast, all other actions for breach of contract are subject to a three-year limitation period which, under subsection (6), does not accrue until the breach is, or reasonably should have been, discovered. To the extent these two provisions are not reconcilable by construing the scheme as a whole, subsection (4) as the more specific of the two prevails. BP Am. Prod. Co. v. Patterson, 185 P.3d 811 (Colo. 2008).

II. FRAUD, MISREPRESENTATION.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the accrual of causes of action under former § 13-80-109 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to subsection (3).

The three-year statute of limitations begins to run when the defrauded person has knowledge of facts which, in the exercise of proper prudence and diligence, would enable him to discover the fraud perpetuated against him. Norton v. Leadville Corp., 43 Colo. App. 527, 610 P.2d 1348 (1979); Morgan v. Dain Bosworth, 545 F. Supp. 953 (D. Colo. 1982).

The limitations period in this section begins to run when the aggrieved party discovers, or should have discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the facts constituting the fraud. Laymon v. McComb, 524 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1981); Polk v. Hergert Land & Cattle Co., 5 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2000).

The limitations period is tolled until the aggrieved party learns of the fraud or should have discovered it by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Hackbart v. Holmes, 675 F.2d 1114 (10th Cir. 1982); Noland v. Gurley, 566 F. Supp. 210 (D. Colo. 1983).

Allegations of wrongdoing constituted material facts regarding when statute begins to run. Where the plaintiff's affidavit alleges that the defendant made misleading and deceptive statements which allayed any suspicions that the plaintiffs might have had about possible securities law violations, and that the defendant's opposition to the plaintiffs' attempts to conduct discovery to determine the defendant's true financial status prevented discovery of the alleged wrongdoing until 1978, these allegations, if true, constitute material facts regarding when the statute of limitations began to run with respect to the plaintiffs' claims under section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933 and common-law fraud. Norton v. Leadville Corp., 43 Colo. App. 527, 610 P.2d 1348 (1979).

Bad faith tort claims are distinct and separate actions available to workers' compensation claimants in addition to remedies under the Workers' Compensation Act, and the resolution of bad faith tort claims is independent from the resolution of workers' compensation claims. There is no requirement under this section that any element of a workers' compensation claimant's bad faith tort claim be acknowledged or affirmed by an administrative body or other authority before a bad faith tort claim can be pursued. Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

Subsection (3) is inactive until discovery of the fraud. Hunter v. Williams, 96 Colo. 435, 44 P.2d 509 (1935); Miller v. Goff, 100 Colo. 545, 68 P.2d 915 (1937).

Where one is kept in ignorance, by false statements of another, of the true situation concerning a claim which he is entitled to assert against him, the statute of limitations does not begin to run against the deceived party and in favor of the wrongdoer until the former has discovered the truth. Alfred v. Esser, 91 Colo. 466, 15 P.2d 714 (1932); Rogers v. Rogers, 96 Colo. 473, 44 P.2d 909 (1935).

The statute of limitations begins to run when the defrauded person has knowledge of facts which in the exercise of proper prudence and diligence would enable him to discover the fraud perpetrated against him. Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968); Herald Co. v. Seawell, 472 F.2d 1081 (10th Cir. 1972); Hansen v. Lederman, 759 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1988); In re Munoz, 111 Bankr. 928 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990); Chidester v. E. Gas and Fuel Assoc., 859 P.2d 222 (Colo. App. 1992); First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993); In re Walden, 207 Bankr. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

This statute bars a suit three years after knowledge of facts which would awaken a person of ordinary prudence to an inquiry, which, if pursued with reasonable diligence, would lead to a discovery of the facts constituting the fraud as effectually as it limits suits commenced three years after the discovery of the facts constituting the fraud. Swift v. Smith, 79 F. 709 (8th Cir. 1897); Redd v. Brun, 157 F. 190 (8th Cir. 1907).

The possession of means of detecting fraud is same as knowledge. Courts of equity will not interfere if a party slumbers on his rights or the means of detecting fraud. The full possession of the means of detecting a fraud is the same as knowledge. Pipe v. Smith, 5 Colo. 146 (1879); Bowman v. May, 102 Colo. 417, 80 P.2d 327

Where misrepresentations known three years before suit action is barred. Action to rescind contract for the purchase of corporate stock procured by false representations held barred by this section, where all the actionable misrepresentations were known to plaintiff more than three years prior to the commencement of his action. Morgan v. King, 27 Colo. 539, 63 P. 416 (1900); Donovan v. Nat'l Glass Casket Co., 75 Colo. 262, 226 P. 295 (1924); Williams v. Williams, 83 Colo. 180, 263 P. 725 (1927).

Jury must find fraud could not have been discovered within three years. The jury was properly instructed on the requisites for proving fraud, and, if proved, on the necessity of finding that it could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered prior to three years before suit was commenced. Knisley v. Parsons, 172 Colo. 533, 474 P.2d 599 (1970).

Statute does not begin to run until cause of action has accrued. Under this section requiring bills for relief on the grounds of fraud, to be filed within three years after the discovery of the fraud the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the cause of action has accrued, although the party applying for relief may have discovered the fraud before the time the cause of action accrued. Rose v. Dunklee, 12 Colo. App. 403, 56 P. 342 (1899); Arnett v. Berg, 18 Colo. App. 341, 71 P. 636 (1903).

When an action is not a new action but is merely an amendment to an earlier complaint, it relates back to the original complaint. Platte Valley Motor Co. v. Wagner, 130 Colo. 365, 278 P.2d 870 (1954).

Recording of a deed is constructive notice only to persons claiming under same grantor and same chain of title. The recording of a voluntary conveyance is not constructive notice to creditors of the voluntary character of the instrument, or of the insolvency of the grantor, so as to start the statute of limitations against an action to set aside the conveyance as in fraud of creditors. Rose v. Dunklee, 12 Colo. App. 403, 56 P. 342 (1899); Greco v. Pullara, 166 Colo. 465, 444 P.2d 383 (1968).

For stockholders not having knowledge of fraudulent stock transfer, see Irvin v. W. End Dev. Co., 342 F. Supp. 687 (D. Colo. 1972).

Runs from time stockholders knew of stock trust violation. Where the actual sale of stock was concealed from the stockholders until 1965, but the stockholders when they learned of the sale of stock had no reason to object because they were unaware of the restriction on its sale, and they had no knowledge of the restriction until they received copies of the articles of incorporation in 1970, the statute of limitations could not begin to run until the appellees knew in 1970 of the trust which was violated. Irwin v. W. End Dev. Co., 481 F.2d 34 (10th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1158, 94 S. Ct. 915, 34 L. Ed.2d 110 (1974).

Whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations is normally a jury fact question, but if the complaint shows the action was brought after the statute of limitations period and the defendant has pled the statute of limitations, the plaintiff has the burden to show tolling of the statute of limitations. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

A presumption exists that a corporation has knowledge of the content of its files and records, and the presumption may be the basis of a judgment unless contrary evidence exists. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

In dispute between mother and daughter over mother's acquisition of winning lottery ticket, despite fact that money obligation was paid in installments, there was no breach of an agreement that one party would make installment payments to another, thus three-year statute of limitations from date that daughter discovered or should have discovered the injury applied. Curtis v. Counce, 32 P.3d 585 (Colo. App. 2001).

Plaintiff's fraud claims were time-barred. Because conservation deed, which was in plaintiff's chain of title at time of purchase, does not permit open and unfettered access to subject property, it gave actual or constructive notice that defendant's representation was false. As such, statute of limitations ran against plaintiffs before they commenced action. Bolinger v. Neal, 259 P.3d 1259 (Colo. App. 2010).

III. DEBT, OBLIGATION.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the accrual of causes of action under former § 13-80-110 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to subsection (4).

Cause of action against stockholders for unpaid balance of stock arose when assessment was made and statute began to run then. Felker v. Sullivan, 34 Colo. 212, 83 P. 213 (1905); Sweet v. Barnard, 66 Colo. 526, 182 P. 22 (1919).

On a county warrant. The statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action on a county warrant until the conditions upon which it is payable have arisen. Forbes v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 23 Colo. 344, 47 P.388 (1897).

On insufficiently funded pension plan. The date on which the "debt, obligation, money owed, or performance be[came] due" was the date on which the employer transferred insufficient funds to the pension plan. It was on that date, therefore, that the employees' cause of action accrued. Aull v. Cavalcade Pension Plan, 988 F. Supp. 1360 (D. Colo. 1997).

County orders containing no day for payment are payable on demand, and their presentation for payment to the county treasurer, and his indorsement of the fact, constitute demand, acceptance, and promise to pay the amount in money. This gives the holder an immediate right of action, and the statute of limitations commences to run from that date. Schloss v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 1 Colo. App. 145, 28 P. 18 (1891).

On municipal bonds. It would be a harsh and thoroughly impracticable rule to establish that the holder of a claim against a municipality is bound by any consideration of contract to pay the same, as long as the municipality itself recognizes such express contract as a valid and binding obligation. The effect of such a rule would be to permit the municipality to lull the holders of its obligations into inaction, and thereby, taking advantage of its own wrong, deprive them of a valuable right. Therefore, a bondholder had a lawful right to institute suit to recover upon the implied obligation at any time within six years after the district repudiated the express obligation. Geer v. Sch. Dist. No. 11, 111 F. 682 (8th Cir. 1901).

Default in interest payment on note does not precipitate claim. For purposes of the statute of limitations, default in payment of interest does not precipitate a claim on the note even though the note contains an acceleration clause where the holder may elect whether to accelerate payment and chooses not to do so. Temple v. Frank, 41 Colo. App. 332, 585 P.2d 311 (1978).

Claims of royalty owners for underpayment of natural gas royalties accrued when the payments were due under subsection (4), not when the underpayment was or reasonably should have been discovered under subsection (6). BP Am. Prod. Co. v. Patterson, 185 P.3d 811 (Colo. 2008).

Uninsured driver's cause of action for reimbursement of medical expenses paid to such uninsured driver's passenger against insurer of vehicle which caused accident pursuant to § 10-4-713 does not accrue until actual payment of medical expenses. Sakala v. Safeco Ins. Co., 833 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1992).

Coverage for underinsured motorist benefits accrues under the terms of the policy when settlement under the tortfeasor's liability policy is obtained, not on the date of the accident. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. v. Springle, 870 P.2d 578 (Colo. App. 1993).

Pursuant to the terms of the parties' agreement, the notice of default, and § 5-5-111, plaintiff had no right to accelerate the obligation or obtain possession of the mobile home until October 29, 1992, 20 days after the required notice was given. Accordingly, plaintiff's replevin claim did not accrue until that date. Because plaintiff commenced its action on October 6, 1998, which was within six years of that accrual date, the action was timely. Green Tree Fin. v. Short, 10 P.3d 721 (Colo. App. 2000).

IV. BALANCE DUE ON OPEN ACCOUNT.

Statute begins to run from the last item on the account. Walsh v. Welsh, 46 Colo. 344, 104 P. 399 (1909); Lanke v. Am. Med. & Dental Ass'n, 97 Colo. 521, 50 P.2d 790 (1935) (decided under former § 13-80-111).

V. BREACH OF CONTRACT, AGREEMENT.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the accrual of causes of actions under former §§ 13-80-110 and 13-80-114 as said sections existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to subsection (6).

When the undisputed facts demonstrate that a plaintiff discovered or reasonably should have discovered the defendant's conduct as of a particular date, the issue of when the cause of action accrued may be determined as a matter of law. Anderson v. Somatogen, Inc., 940 P.2d 1079 (Colo. App. 1996).

Claim on contract formerly accrued upon failure to perform required act. A claim for relief in actions arising out of nonperformance of contract obligations accrued at the time of failure to perform the act required under the contract. Goeddel v. Aircraft Fin., Inc., 152 Colo. 419, 382 P.2d 812 (1963).

Where contract for sale of land provided that if the vendor failed to procure patent purchaser should receive back all money paid on the contract, limitation would begin to run against an action by the purchaser to recover back money paid, from the time a patent to the land was issued to another party and not from the time the money was paid. Platte Land Co. v. Hubbard, 12 Colo. App. 465, 56 P. 64 (1899).

Claims on executory agreement may accrue yearly. Where defendant's obligations under an agreement were executory in nature, maturing into enforceable duties on a yearly basis, plaintiff's claim for relief from defendant's failure to perform accrued with each delinquent performance. D'Amico v. Smith, 42 Colo. App. 369, 600 P.2d 84 (1979).

Where by agreement personal services are to be compensated only at the death of the party receiving them, the action accrues upon his death, and the statute runs from the same date. Norton's Estate v. McAlister, 22 Colo. App. 293, 123 P. 963 (1912).

Claimant's cause of action to establish constructive trust accrues, for purposes of the statute of limitations, when the claimant is aware, or reasonably should be aware, of facts which would make a reasonable person suspicious of the wrongdoing asserted as the basis of the trust. Lucas v. Abbott, 198 Colo. 477, 601 P.2d 1376 (1979).

Claim to enforce a trust does not accrue upon a constructive trust until the claimant acquires or should have acquired knowledge of the existence of the trust. Abbott v. Lucas, 44 Colo. App. 415, 615 P.2d 37 (1978), aff'd, 198 Colo. 477, 601 P.2d 1376 (1979).

Action accrues upon failure to pay installment of interest on note secured by trust deed if creditor elects to foreclose. A deed of trust securing promissory notes and providing that, upon default of any installment of interest, the whole principal and interest to the time of sale "may at once become due and payable, and the said premises be sold with the same effect as if the indebtedness had matured", if the creditor, after such default, elects to take advantage thereof and direct a sale of the premises pursuant to the power, the cause of action upon the note accrues, and the statute runs, from the time of the default. Lovell v. Goss, 45 Colo. 304, 101 P. 72 (1909).

The statutes of limitations on an action against the estate arising under resulting trusts could not begin to run against claimant until there was a repudiation of the trusts. There being no repudiation of either trust created, the statutes of limitations did not begin to run against the claimant until decedent's death. First Nat'l Bank v. Harry W. Rabb Found., 29 Colo. App. 34, 479 P.2d 986 (1970).

Full possession of the means of detecting a fraud is equivalent to knowledge for the purpose of invoking this section. Parsons v. Shackleford, 117 Colo. 545, 188 P.2d 587 (1948).

Refusal of trustee to convey to beneficiary lands which he holds for him is a repudiation of the trust, setting in motion the statute of limitations. Schlosser v. Schlosser, 62 Colo. 270, 162 P. 153 (1916).

Accrual of action under contract giving option to purchase stock. Under a contract giving an option for the purchase of corporate stock, no cause of action would arise for a breach until the party had attempted to exercise his option and the other had refused to sell. Upon such refusal a cause of action accrued, and an action for specific performance commenced within five years thereafter would not be barred by this section. Johnson v. Johnson, 87 Colo. 207, 286 P. 109 (1930).

In action to quiet title to water rights sold under trust deed, the cause of action does not accrue until after sale by the trustee and final refusal of the irrigation company to continue to deliver the water. Hastings & Heyden Realty Co. v. Gest, 70 Colo. 278, 201 P. 37 (1921).

In suit to cancel excess water rights. Where plaintiff and others bought certain water rights under deeds providing that when rights were sold and in force equal to the estimated capacity of the system of supply water, the title to the canal system should pass to the owners and holders of such water rights, plaintiff's right of action to have excess rights canceled accrued immediately after the contracts and deeds conveying such excess rights were issued, and was barred after five years thereafter by this section. Patterson v. Fort Lyon Canal Co., 36 Colo. 175, 84 P. 807 (1906).

In case of constructive trust statute begins to run from knowledge of trust. In equity, the suitor must allege and prove excuse for delay and want of diligence, especially where it is sought to enforce a constructive trust. Such delay and want of diligence is within this section; but the time begins to run from actual or constructive knowledge of the trust. Cliff v. Cliff, 23 Colo. App. 183, 128 P. 860 (1912).

Statute does not begin to run until recording of trust deed. Under this section the bar of the statute does not begin to run until a tax deed is recorded, for the reason that it is only after it has been filed for record that any title of the owner is conveyed. Morris v. St. Louis Nat'l Bank, 17 Colo. 231, 29 P. 802 (1892); Sayre v. Sage, 47 Colo. 559, 108 P. 160 (1910).

Commission of wrongful act by executor starts running of statute against surety. In Colorado all that is required to expose the surety to liability on the executor's bond is the commission of the wrongful act. The wrongful act occurred when the executor placed the purchasers in possession without payment of the full purchase price, and that wrongful act was judicially recognized in 1955, not in 1965 when the decree of surcharge was entered, and the action is barred. People ex rel. Barker v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 385 F.2d 61 (10th Cir. 1967).

Where an action is brought on an official bond for breach of duty the statute formerly began to run at the time of the occurrence of the consequential injury caused by the officer's breach of duty, and not at the time of the breach. People ex rel. Fed. Land Bank v. Ginn, 106 Colo. 417, 106 P.2d 479 (1940).

Discovery of erroneous levy. In an action by the personal representatives of a taxpayer against a board of county commissioners to recover taxes he had paid for 13 years on lands assessed to him on the mistaken premise that he was the owner thereof, it was held that the representatives were entitled to recover, and the six-year statute of limitations did not apply where almost immediately on discovery of the erroneous levy a refund was demanded and on refusal thereof the action was promptly begun. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Doherty, 114 Colo. 594, 168 P.2d 556 (1946).

A cause of action for breach of trust accrues on date the breach is discovered or should have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence and, therefore, cause of action accrued when plaintiff went to her bank and discovered that the defendant had withdrawn plaintiff's money. Eads v. Dearing, 874 P.2d 474 (Colo. App. 1993).

The injury resulting from a breach of fiduciary duty, triggering accrual of the claim, is the violation of trust not any attendant financial harm. A claim for breach of confidentiality does not require proof of economic loss; the injury is the disclosure of protected information. Indeed, the purpose of such a claim is to remedy not a lost contractual expectation but rather the loss of secrecy. Grynberg v. Shell Exploration B.V., 433 F. Supp. 2d 1229 (D. Colo. 2006), aff'd, 538 F.3d 1336 (10th Cir. 2008), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1585, 173 L. Ed. 2d 677 (2009).

A claim for breach of contract accrues on the date the breach is discovered or should have been discovered through reasonable diligence. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Am. Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co., 897 P.2d 880 (Colo. App. 1995).

A claim for breach of warranty does not accrue until the plaintiff discovers or should have discovered the defendant's refusal or inability to comply with the warranties made. Hersh Cos. v. Highline Vill. Assocs., 30 P.3d 221 (Colo. 2001); Stiff v. BilDen Homes, Inc., 88 P.3d 639 (Colo. App. 2003).

A cause of action for bad-faith breach of insurance contract accrues upon first instance of unreasonable behavior. Harmon v. Fred S. James & Co., 899 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1994).

Statute of limitations for an action contesting a rate increase commences to run when the rate is enacted not when each bill is sent. Bennett Bear Creek Water & San. v. Denver, 907 P.2d 648 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 928 P.2d 1254 (Colo. 1996).

Claims of royalty owners for underpayment of natural gas royalties accrued when the payments were due under subsection (4), not when the underpayment was or reasonably should have been discovered under subsection (6). BP Am. Prod. Co. v. Patterson, 185 P.3d 811 (Colo. 2008).

Withdrawing attorney's claim in quantum meruit against former co-counsel laboring under a contingent fee agreement cannot accrue earlier than the time when recovery occurs in the underlying litigation because that is the earliest time when the unjustness of any retention of the benefit can be determined. Hannon Law Firm, LLC v. Melat, Pressman & Higbie, LLP, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

VI. WRONGFUL POSSESSION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY, GOODS.

The statute of limitations does not begin to run in favor of a bailee until he converts the property to his own use. Austin v. Van Loon, 36 Colo. 196, 85 P. 183 (1906) (decided under former § 13-80-110).

Cause of action for conversion accrued when it was discovered, not on the dates of forged endorsements. Stjernholm v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Amer., 782 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1989).

VII. INJURIES.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the accrual of causes of actions under former §§ 13-80-102, 13-80-105, 13-80-108, and 13-80-110 as said sections existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to subsections (1) and (8) dealing with injuries.

The claim accrues at the time of the disabling injury. Bd. of Trustees of Policemen's Pension Fund v. Koman, 133 Colo. 598, 298 P.2d 737 (1956).

The cause of action accrues in a libel case when the libel is published. Evans v. Republican Publ'g Co., 20 Colo. App. 281, 78 P. 311 (1904); Spears Free Clinic & Hosp. for Poor Children v. Maier, 128 Colo. 263, 261 P.2d 488 (1953).

Period begins to run on date libel occurs. The one-year statutory period for the initiation of a libel action begins to run on the date the alleged libel occurs. Dillingham v. Greeley Publ'g Co., 661 P.2d 700 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 701 P.2d 27 (Colo. 1985).

Where plaintiffs suffered no damages until adverse claim of government was determined to be valid and plaintiffs were found to be trespassers, with the consequent damages resulting from their being required to remove their house from government land, the statute of limitations did not begin to run until the judgment became final. Doyle v. Linn, 37 Colo. App. 214, 547 P.2d 257 (1975).

Action by railroad employees seeking reinstatement to their jobs and damages accrued when the employees resigned their positions with the railroad. Copsy v. Bhd. of Locomotive Engineers, 767 P.2d 676 (10th Cir. 1985).

Damages from water seepage. The action is barred after the lapse of six years from the first visible and sensible appearance of the injury caused by seepage from an irrigation ditch. Middelkamp v. Bessemer Irrigating Co., 46 Colo. 102, 103 P. 280 (1909); Rose v. Agric. Ditch & Reservoir Co., 70 Colo. 446, 202 P. 112 (1921); Zimmerman v. Hinderlider, 105 Colo. 340, 97 P.2d 443 (1939).

In action to recover for damage to land by reason of use of natural channel by reservoir company for carrying water, the statute of limitations began to run when the company commenced using the channel as a carrier, since the land was immediately damaged by such use. Seven Lakes Reservoir Co. v. Majors, 69 Colo. 590, 196 P. 334 (1921).

In a suit by a guest against a landlord for conversion of baggage, the action did not accrue until demand, the refusal of which constituted conversion, at which time the statute of limitations began to run. See Carper v. Risdon, 19 Colo. App. 530, 76 P. 744 (1904); Austin v. Van Loon, 36 Colo. 196, 85 P. 183 (1906); Dutton Hotel Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 69 Colo. 229, 193 P. 549 (1920).

In an action by the owner of abutting property for permanent damages occasioned by the construction and operation of a railroad through a public street in an ordinary and lawful manner, the statute of limitations begins to run from time the railroad company first occupied the street for such purposes. Union Pac. Ry. v. Foley, 19 Colo. 280, 35 P. 542 (1893).

Action for wrongful discharge is an action in tort which accrues when the injury of losing the job occurs and not when notice of termination is given. Lorenz v. Martin Marietta Corp., Inc., 802 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd, 823 P.2d 100 (Colo. 1992).

Cause of action for personal injuries under Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act accrues on the date that both the physical injury and its cause are known or should have been known by exercise of reasonable diligence. Such actions may be filed as soon as it is reasonably expected that claimant's medical expenses will exceed $2,500. Jones v. Cox, 828 P.2d 218 (Colo. 1992).

Although the police investigation report may provide helpful information regarding the claim, the claim itself accrues when the plaintiff is aware of his injuries and their cause. The police department's failure to provide copies of the investigation report does not postpone accrual of the claim. Reider v. Dawson, 856 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 872 P.2d 212 (Colo. 1994).

A cause of action for injury to property shall be considered to accrue on the date both the injury and its cause are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Bad Boys of Cripple Creek Mining Co. v. City of Cripple Creek, 996 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

Plaintiffs' cause of action for inverse condemnation accrued when the city began using the property with plaintiffs' knowledge. Bad Boys of Cripple Creek Mining Co. v. City of Cripple Creek, 996 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

A cause of action accrues when the insured knew, or should have known in the exercise of reasonable diligence, of the injury and its cause, not when the insured consults with an attorney or an attorney informs the insured that he or she has a claim. Olson v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 174 P.3d 849 (Colo. App. 2007).

B. Discovery.

“Injury” in statute of limitations means legal injury and, therefore, statute of limitations in claim for lack of informed consent begins to run when claimant has knowledge of facts which would put reasonable person on notice of nature of injury and that injury was caused by wrongful conduct of another. Mastro v. Brodie, 682 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1984).

A plaintiff cannot commence an action until he knows he has a cause. To say that a cause of action accrues to a person when she may maintain an action thereon and, at the same time, that it accrues before she has or can reasonably be expected to have knowledge of any wrong inflicted upon her is patently inconsistent and unrealistic. She cannot maintain an action before she knows she has one. Owens v. Brochner, 172 Colo. 525, 474 P.2d 603 (1970).

In a professional negligence case the cause of action “accrues” when the patient discovers or, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have discovered the doctor’s negligence. Owens v. Brochner, 172 Colo. 525, 474 P.2d 603 (1970); Nitka v. Bell, 29 Colo. App. 504, 487 P.2d 379 (1971).

In a professional negligence case the cause of action does not accrue until the plaintiff, as a lay person, discovers, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered, that the physician was negligent according to the standards prevailing in the community for members of his profession. Short v. Downs, 36 Colo. App. 109, 537 P.2d 754 (1975).

Critical fact is the plaintiff’s knowledge of facts essential to cause of action. Morris v. Geer, 720 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1986).

In a legal malpractice action, once a client becomes aware of the attorney’s negligence and incurs damage in the form of legal fees to ameliorate the impact of that negligence, he or she, has suffered injury for the purpose of accrual of a legal claim. Moreover, a client’s cause of action can accrue before the attorney ceases representation. Miller v. Byrne, 916 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1995).

When limitations period begins. The limitations period in former § 13-80-108 began to run when the aggrieved party discovered, or should have discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the facts constituting the fraud. Laymon v. McComb, 524 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1981); Polk v. Hergert Land & Cattle Co., 5 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2000).

The limitations period was tolled until the aggrieved party learns of the fraud or should have discovered it by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Hackbart v. Holmes, 675 F.2d 1114 (10th Cir. 1982); Noland v. Gurley, 566 F. Supp. 210 (D. Colo. 1983).

Limitations period did not begin until the trial court determined that the defendant law firm was bound by the offer of settlement and had received an overpayment. Prior to that holding, plaintiff had no right to apply for relief. Berger v. Dixon & Snow, P.C., 868 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1993).

The requisite knowledge under the general discovery rule includes knowledge of facts that would put a reasonable person on notice of the nature and extent of an injury and that the injury was caused by the wrongful conduct of another. Yund v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 200 F. Supp.2d 997 (S.D. Ind. 2002).

Accrual in malpractice claim against engineer or architect. In an action for professional malpractice against an engineer or architect brought under the six-year statute of limitations contained in this section, the cause of action does not accrue until the plaintiff knows, or should know, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, all material facts essential to show the elements of that cause of action. City of Aurora v. Bechtel Corp., 599 F.2d 382 (10th Cir. 1979).

Action for infringement of copyright and theft of trade secret occurred at time when the plaintiff discovered, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have discovered the facts giving rise to his claim. DeGette v. Mine Co. Restaurant, Inc., 751 F.2d 1143 (10th Cir. 1985).

Two-year provision did not begin to run when owner or property first discovered physical processes leading up to injury, but only when he discovered, or in exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered, alleged “defect” in improvement that produced injury. Financial Associates v. G.E. Johnson Const., 723 P.2d 135 (Colo. 1986).

Statute begins to run when unauthorized foreign object is discovered in plaintiff’s body. Where doctors left a large gauze pad inside the incision and body of plaintiff more than 10 years before action was brought and in the interim plaintiff, in order to ascertain the cause of her constant pain and suffering, consulted and was treated by various surgeons and physicians, and when her condition became extremely grave a laparotomy was performed and the gauze pad discovered and removed, this being the first notice to plaintiff of the negligence, carelessness, and recklessness of defendants, it was held that an action, started within two years of this discovery, was not barred by this section. Rosane v. Senger, 112 Colo. 363, 149 P.2d 372 (1944).

no therapeutic or diagnostic purpose or effect. Austin v. Litvak, 682 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1984).

Items not customarily left in a patient's body do not constitute "unauthorized foreign objects" under § 13-80-105 if all of the following are present: (1) The device is intentionally placed in the body or is intentionally allowed to remain therein; (2) the device is allowed to remain in the patient's body with the knowledge and consent of the patient; and (3) its remaining in the patient's body has a therapeutic or diagnostic purpose. If any one of these three elements is missing, the item is an unauthorized foreign object. Nieto v. Chavez, 721 P.2d 1223 (Colo. App. 1986) (decided under law in effect prior to 1986 repeal and reenactment).

Rods surgically inserted in patient's back with patient's knowledge did not constitute "unauthorized foreign objects". Hoary v. Lowe, 734 P.2d 154 (Colo. App. 1987).

This is a jury question. Whether or not the plaintiff actually knew or had reason to know of the cause of her injuries prior to the date of the alleged discovery is a question for the jury. Davis v. Bonebrake, 135 Colo. 506, 313 P.2d 982 (1957); Owens v. Brochner, 172 Colo. 525, 474 P.2d 603 (1970); Nitka v. Bell, 29 Colo. App. 504, 487 P.2d 379 (1971).

The determination of when a plaintiff discovered or should have discovered the seriousness and character of his injuries and the negligence giving rise to his cause of action is an unresolved question of fact, and is therefore, a question for the jury to determine, and summary judgment is improper. DiChellis v. Peterson Chiropractic Clinic, 630 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1981); Phillips v. Beethe, 679 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1984); Mastro v. Brodie, 682 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1984).

And question of timing of discovery of damage for trier of fact. The question of whether or not the plaintiff actually discovered, or should have discovered, that damage occurred and that it probably resulted from professional malpractice is a question which should be left for the trier of fact or, in appropriate cases, summary judgment. City of Aurora v. Bechtel Corp., 599 F.2d 382 (10th Cir. 1979).

Question of fact. The time when a plaintiff discovered, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the negligent conduct giving rise to the cause of action is normally a question of fact that must be resolved by the trier of fact. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995); Murry v. GuideOne Specialty Mut. Ins. Co., 194 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2008).

Whether a medical malpractice action is barred by the statute of limitations is dependent upon the determination of a question of fact as to when the action occurred. Short v. Downs, 36 Colo. App. 109, 537 P.2d 754 (1975).

Issue may be decided as a matter of law where undisputed facts clearly show that plaintiff discovered, or reasonably should have discovered, negligent conduct as of a particular date. Morris v. Geer, 720 P.2d 994 (Colo. App. 1986); Reider v. Dawson, 856 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 872 P.2d 212 (Colo. 1994); Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995); Murry v. GuideOne Specialty Mut. Ins. Co., 194 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2008).

Question of timing of discovery not determination as matter of law. Whether a plaintiff should have discovered the basis of his suit under the doctrine of equitable tolling does not lend itself to determination as a matter of law. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

Summary judgment on issue of diligence improper. Since the issue of proper diligence under Colorado law should apparently be left to a jury, summary judgment on that claim is improper. Morgan v. Dain Bosworth, 545 F. Supp. 953 (D. Colo. 1982).

Statutes of repose, also known as "strict" statutes of limitation, are not subject to the discovery rule codified in this section. Such a statute bars a claim after the specified period regardless of the date on which the claimant discovers the error or omission that gave rise to the claim. Kuhn v. State Dept. of Rev., 897 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1995).

Accrual of personal injury claim based on negligence. A personal injury claim based on alleged negligence accrues on the date both the injury and its cause are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Cade v. Regensberger, 804 P.2d 238 (Colo. App. 1990).

In cases involving personal injury, a plaintiff's claim for relief accrues on the date the fact of injury and its cause are known or should have been known, and a plaintiff's uncertainty as to the full extent of the damage does not prevent the filing of a timely complaint. Taylor v. Goldsmith, 870 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1994).

Accrual of claim based upon libel or slander. Subsection (1) supersedes the accrual rule stated in decisions prior to 1986 and a claim for relief based upon injury to reputation is now considered to accrue on the date both the injury and its cause are known or should have been known by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Taylor v. Goldsmith, 870 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1994).

Once plaintiff knew her injuries were caused by her use of a keyboard, she then had two years to discover the keyboard manufacturer with reasonable diligence. Where the identity of the defendant could be discovered through reasonable diligence, the action was properly barred if not filed within the two-year limitation period. Yoder v. Honeywell, Inc., 900 F. Supp. 240 (D. Colo. 1995).

Receipt of a neurologist's letter stating that a plaintiff's injuries could have been caused by exposure to a toxic substance did not constitute discovery of the cause of her injuries, and the plaintiff proceeded with reasonable diligence when suit was filed less than two years after her receipt of a toxicologist's letter stating that her condition was caused by exposure to a toxic substance. Salazar v. Am. Sterilizer Co., 5 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2000).

Plaintiff knew, or should have known by the exercise of reasonable diligence, of the injury to his reputation and the cause of that injury; consequently, because the complaint was filed more than two years after plaintiff learned of the statements, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's claims for libel, slander, and outrageous conduct as barred by §§ 13-80-102 (1)(a) and 13-80-103 (1)(a). Taylor v. Goldsmith, 870 P.2d 1264 (Colo. App. 1994).

Action against insurance company for bad faith failure to settle resulting in excess liability judgment accrued only after excess liability was ultimately established. Vanderloop v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 769 F. Supp. 1172 (D. Colo. 1991).

Plaintiff's tortious interference with contract claim accrued from the date the fact of injury or damage was evident, although the nature of the contracts at issue left the precise extent of the injury or damage uncertain. Sterebuch v. Goss, 266 P.3d 428 (Colo. App. 2011).

Because plaintiff asserted that respondents were handling claim in bad faith in a letter dated more than two years before filing bad faith claim, the letter evidences that petitioner's bad faith tort claims accrued no later than the date of the letter and the filing exceeded the statute of limitations. Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

Plaintiff's death does not extend the bad faith tort claim accrual date beyond the initial acknowledgment by plaintiff's attorney of bad faith. Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

Claim based on negligence of attorney in drafting contract accrued when client bank knew or reasonably should have known all facts essential to claim and had already incurred some damage as a result, regardless of whether action was classified as arising in tort or in contract. It was not necessary to await suit by other party to contract, or to ascertain the precise extent of damage, before limitation period began to run. Palisades Nat. Bank v. Williams, 816 P.2d 961 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Discovery rule" did not apply to claims for negligence and outrageous conduct arising from alleged sexual assault on minors. Despite therapists' and plaintiffs' statements that plaintiffs did not realize the full import of defendant's actions until they sought counseling years after the assaults, plaintiffs' admissions of emotional upset at time of assaults and knowledge that defendant's actions were improper and illegal indicated that plaintiffs were on adequate notice of the essential elements of the tort. Therefore, cause of action accrued when plaintiffs reached the age of majority. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

Plaintiff knew or should have known both the injury and its cause by the exercise of reasonable diligence. It is not true that, once the affidavit of a psychologist is injected into a case, there is automatically an issue of fact regarding timing. The court found it very important that plaintiff did not argue that he ever repressed his memory that events of alleged sexual abuse by a priest happened but merely his knowledge that the events constituted abuse which harmed him. According to the court, the idea that a person of plaintiff's background and education could be aware of such events and his own troubled psychological state and not tie them together was inconceivable as a matter of law. Consequently, the court granted summary judgment based on the statute of limitations. Ayon v. Gourley, 47 F. Supp.2d 1246 (D. Colo. 1998).

Outrageous conduct is a separate tort, even though it may be premised on conduct amounting to a battery. Therefore, the applicable statute of limitations under § 13-80-102 is two years from the date of accrual for outrageous conduct, rather than the one year limit under § 13-80-103 for battery. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

Further, where a claim may be pursued on two theories having different limitations, the longer limitation applies. Winkler v. Rocky Mtn. Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applied in Miller v. Celotex Corp., 708 F. Supp. 306 (D. Colo. 1989) (decided under former § 13-80-127.5); Stiff v. BilDen Homes, Inc., 88 P.3d 639 (Colo. App. 2003).

C. Fraudulent Concealment.

Law reviews. For note, "Concealment of a Cause of Action as Tolling the Two-Year Statute of Limitation in Malpractice", see 17 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 124 (1944).

Running of statute is delayed when defendant conceals from the plaintiff the existence of the cause. Where the defendants had concealed from the plaintiff the existence of a cause of action during the time that the period of limitations was running, the supreme court held that one may not be permitted to take advantage of his own wrong, and that the alleged cause of action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Klamm Shell v. Berg, 165 Colo. 540, 441 P.2d 10 (1968).

As when doctor assures the patient that nothing is wrong. The fraudulent concealment issue would be applicable, where a plaintiff discovers an injury and then is reassured by the doctor that nothing is wrong. Owens v. Brochner, 172 Colo. 525, 474 P.2d 603 (1970).

The Colorado court does not require a showing of all of the elements of fraud in order to support a finding of "fraudulent concealment" as negligence is equally damaging and the victim equally helpless regardless of the motive for concealment. Murphy v. Dyer, 260 F. Supp. 822 (D. Colo. 1966).

The statute of limitations is not intended to require the commencement of an action when the injured party is justifiably ignorant of the existence of one. The law does not impose upon the injured party a constructive knowledge of facts—i.e., standards of practice, medical causation—which are, indeed, unknown to the court itself without the assistance of expert testimony. Nitka v. Bell, 29 Colo. App. 504, 487 P.2d 379 (1971).

Fraudulent concealment provision of former § 13-80-105 required two wrongs: The original negligent act and the subsequent concealment of same. Adams v. Richardson, 714 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1986).

Knowing concealment and foreign object exceptions apply only to three-year statute of repose and not to two-year statute of limitations in former § 13-80-105. Mastro v. Brodie, 682 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1984).

VIII. TOLLING OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the tolling of the statute of limitations under former § 13-80-110 as said section existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to this section.

Plaintiff has burden of establishing factual basis for tolling of statute. While the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense, when the dates given in the complaint make clear that the right sued upon has been extinguished, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing a factual basis for tolling the statute. Aldrich v. McCulloch Props., Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980).

Federal law may control tolling of limitations when state statute applicable. Though the limitations period for an action brought in federal district court based on claims arising under section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933 and sections 10(b) and 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is supplied by the law of Colorado, the circumstances which will toll the running of the statute are matters of federal law.

Ohio v. Peterson, Lowry, Rall, Barber & Ross, 472 F. Supp. 402 (D. Colo. 1979), aff'd, 651 F.2d 687 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 895, 102 S. Ct. 392, 70 L. Ed.2d 209 (1981).

Time consumed by pendency of action not deductible. A party cannot deduct from the period of the statute of limitations applicable to his case the time consumed by the pendency of an action in which he sought to have the matter adjudicated, but which was dismissed without prejudice to him. Commercial Equity Corp. v. Majestic Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 620 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1980).

Commencement of action within statutory period arrests running of statute. It seems to be the well established rule in all jurisdictions that the commencement of an action within the statutory period to enforce a claim or demand arrests the running of the general statute of limitations against the same. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Flanagan, 21 Colo. App. 467, 122 P. 801 (1912); Kingsley v. Clark, 57 Colo. 352, 141 P. 464 (1914).

Filing and withdrawal of claim against estate does not constitute commencement of an action to prevent the statute of limitations from running. Morse v. Clark, 10 Colo. 216, 14 P. 327 (1887).

The commencement of a class action suspends the applicable statute of limitations as to all asserted members of the class who would have been parties had the suit been permitted to continue as a class action. Once the statute of limitations has been tolled, it remains tolled for all members of the putative class until class certification is denied. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Boellstorff, 540 F.3d 1223 (10th Cir. 2008) (citing Am. Pipe & Constr. Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 94 S. Ct. 756, 38 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1974) and Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983)).

Only the first class action tolls the statute of limitations. If a plaintiff has been a member of the class in two lawsuits, only the first tolls the statute of limitations. The filing of successive class actions cannot serve to perpetually toll the running of the statute of limitations. Jackson v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 258 P.3d 328 (Colo. App. 2011).

The presentation to the county commissioners of a claim against the county, and diligent and active effort by the claimant to induce action by the board, stays the course of the general statute of limitations. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Flanagan, 21 Colo. App. 467, 122 P. 801 (1912).

In workmen's compensation cases the earliest disability for which compensation is either awarded or paid will arrest the running of any statute of limitations. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Sauer, 92 Colo. 565, 22 P.2d 624 (1933).

An indorsement of payment on a promissory note made by or under authority of the maker and within the time fixed by the statute of limitations, interrupts the running of the statute. Christensen v. Woods Mercantile Co., 104 Colo. 463, 91 P.2d 999 (1939).

Book entries corresponding to the date and amount of an indorsement of payment on a promissory note are not sufficient alone to interrupt the running of the statute of limitations or to revive a barred debt. Christensen v. Woods Mercantile Co., 104 Colo. 463, 91 P.2d 999 (1939).

Where claim against estate consists of promissory notes, they must be filed to arrest statute. Where a claim against the estate of a decedent consists in his promissory notes, the notes themselves must be filed in the county court in which administration is pending, and the filing of a list or statement of the notes is not a compliance with the statute and has no effect to stay the operation of the statute of limitations. Gordon-Tiger Mining & Reduction Co. v. Loomer, 50 Colo. 409, 115 P. 717 (1911).

A promise of the administrator to look after a claim for the expenses of administration and bring it forward has no effect to stay the course of the statute. Gordon-Tiger Mining & Reduction Co. v. Loomer, 50 Colo. 409, 115 P. 717 (1911).

Ignorance of the law respecting the remedy which it provides does not prevent the statute from running. Pipe v. Smith, 5 Colo. 146 (1879).

The burden is on the party suing on a debt apparently barred by the statute of limitations to show that the statute has been tolled. Capek v. Monahan, 117 Colo. 131, 184 P.2d 501 (1947).

Statute of limitations not tolled between time of injury and time when investigative report released since report would not result in any civil relief to plaintiff. Mosher v. City of Lakewood, 807 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1991).

A change in the law does not revive claims otherwise barred by a statute of limitations. Kuhn v. State Dept. of Rev., 897 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1995).

No tolling under course-of-treatment exception or "continuing violation" doctrine in a bad-faith breach of workers' compensation insurance case, because insurer's failure to pay benefits when due puts claimant on notice of the fact of injury and its cause even if there is only a single episode of unreasonable behavior. Harmon v. Fred S. James & Co., 899 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1994).

"Continuing violation" doctrine does not apply to shareholder action based on breach of fiduciary duty by directors of corporation. Polk v. Hergert Land & Cattle Co., 5 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2000).

IX. FORMER STATUTE OF REPOSE.

Annotator's note. Relevant cases construing the statute of repose under former § 13-80-105 as said section existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article have been included with the annotations to this section.

Former statute of repose did not deny equal protection. Adams v. Richardson, 714 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1986).

Tolling provisions of § 13-81-103 applied to former § 13-80-105 relating to limitation and repose periods applicable to medical malpractice claims. Southard v. Miles, 714 P.2d 891 (Colo. 1986).

Former statute of repose applied to continuing acts or omissions; however, statute of repose does not bar recovery for acts or omissions that occurred during the last three years preceding institution of suit. Comstock v. Collier, 694 P.2d 1282 (Colo. App. 1984), modified in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 737 P.2d 845 (Colo. 1987).

Negligent misdiagnosis is exception to former three-year statute of repose. Legislative scheme which permits foreign object and knowing concealment claimants to invoke the discovery rule to the three-year statute of repose in former § 13-80-105 but denies such discovery rule to negligent misdiagnosis claimants is unconstitutional as a denial of equal protection and the appropriate remedy is to make claims based on negligent misdiagnosis another exception to the former three-year statute of repose. Austin v. Litvak, 682 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1984).

Whether claim alleged a misdiagnosis claim is applied in Comstock v. Collier, 737 P.2d 845 (Colo. 1987).

Applied in Hoary v. Lowe, 734 P.2d 154 (Colo. App. 1987).

13-80-109. Limitations apply to noncompulsory counterclaims and setoffs. Except for causes of action arising out of the transaction or occurrence which is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim, the limitation provisions of this article shall apply to the case of any debt, contract, obligation, injury, or liability alleged by a defending party as a counterclaim or setoff. A counterclaim or setoff arising out of the transaction or occurrence which is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim shall be commenced within one year after service of the complaint by the opposing party and not thereafter.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-112 as it existed prior to 1986.

ANNOTATION

The language of this provision makes it clear that its purpose is to allow a party against whom a claim has initially been asserted to plead a stale claim only in response to the claim asserted against that party and only if it arises out of the same transaction or occurrence, or the same series thereof. Duell v. United Bank of Pueblo, N.A., 892 P.2d 336 (Colo. App. 1994); Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Farm Credit Bank of Wichita, 226 F.3d 1138 (10th Cir. 2000).

Under Colorado law, the filing of a complaint does toll the statute of limitations on counterclaims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence. The amount of time a defendant has to file such a counterclaim is measured with reference to the plaintiff's complaint, giving the defendant one year, but no more, to file the counterclaim. Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

This section provides that the limitation provisions of this article shall apply to any debt or contract alleged by way of setoff. Bernklau v. Stevens, 150 Colo. 187, 371 P.2d 765 (1962) (decided under former § 13-80-112).

Counterclaims for damages arising from transaction that was the subject of an action to stay arbitration were compulsory and revived under this section. E-21 Eng'g v. Steve Stock & Assocs., 252 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2010).

Under this section, a plaintiff cannot revive time-barred claims simply by re-pleading them as counterclaims to a defendant's compulsory counterclaim. Duell v. United Bank of Pueblo, N.A., 892 P.2d 336 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section does not apply in declaratory judgment actions for nonliability on limitations grounds. The suggestion that a plaintiff in one action can "revive" his concededly stale claims by filing them as counterclaims in a parallel action brought by the defendant solely for the purpose of having those claims declared stale is illogical and unsound. Hamilton v. Cunningham, 880 F. Supp. 1407 (D. Colo. 1995).

Action for declaratory judgment of nonliability based on statute of limitations grounds is not a "claim" triggering the counterclaim revival statute. Such an interpretation of the statute would lead to an absurd result. Tidwell v. Bevan Props., Ltd., 262 P.3d 964 (Colo. App. 2011).

Applied in Plains Metro. Dist. v. Ken-Caryl Ranch, 250 P.3d 697 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-80-110. Causes barred in state of origin. If a cause of action arises in another state or territory or in a foreign country and, by the laws thereof, an action thereon cannot be maintained in that state, territory, or foreign country by reason of lapse of time, the cause of action shall not be maintained in this state.

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-110 is similar to former § 13-80-118 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

This section evidenced the purpose of the general assembly to afford to a debtor sued in Colorado relief from a creditor seeking judgment on a debt barred in the jurisdiction where the cause arose. Simon v. Wilnes, 97 Colo. 78, 47 P.2d 406 (1935).

This section does not violate the "full faith and credit" clause in § 1 of art. IV, U.S. Const. Kelly v. Heller, 74 Colo. 470, 222 P. 648 (1924).

"Arises in another state" must mean in the courts of that state. It cannot mean a right of action not cognizable by the courts of that state. Folda Real Estate Co. v. Jacobsen, 75 Colo. 16, 223 P. 748 (1924).

This section provides in substance that an action shall not be maintained in this state on a claim arising in another state and barred by the laws thereof. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953).

If an action is not barred in the state where the cause of action arose because of the defendant's absence therefrom, it is not barred in Colorado. Schoenfeld v. Neher, 428 F.2d 152 (10th Cir. 1970).

In the absence of a showing, there is a presumption that the law of another jurisdiction tion is the same as the common law of Colorado, but no presumption that it is the same as Colorado statute law. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953).

Specific adoption of the choice of law provision under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act by both Colorado, in § 14-5-604, and Texas overrides application of the general borrowing limitations statute set forth in this section. In re Morris, 32 P.3d 625 (Colo. App. 2001).

Neither the borrowing statute nor the Uniform Conflict of Laws - Limitations Act (UCL-LA), §§ 13-82-101 to 13-82-107, is more specific than the other. Because each statute uses different factors to assign a limitations period, the court is prevented from directly comparing them in order to read one as an exception to the other. Jenkins v. Pan. Canal Ry. Co., 208 P.3d 238 (Colo. 2009).

Because it was enacted more recently, the borrowing statute, and not the UCL-LA, controls. Based on the general assembly's prescribed rules of statutory construction, because the conflicts between the statutes cannot be resolved on specificity and the borrowing statute is the more recent enactment, the borrowing statute applies to plaintiffs' claims. Jenkins v. Pan. Canal Ry. Co., 208 P.3d 238 (Colo. 2009).

13-80-111. Commencement of new action upon involuntary dismissal. (1) If an action is commenced within the period allowed by this article and is terminated because of lack of jurisdiction or improper venue, the plaintiff or, if he dies and the cause of action survives, the personal representative may commence a new action upon the same cause of action within ninety days after the termination of the original action or within the period otherwise allowed by this article, whichever is later, and the defendant may interpose any defense, counterclaim, or setoff which might have been interposed in the original action.

(2) This section shall be applicable to all actions which are first commenced in a federal court as well as those first commenced in the courts of Colorado or of any other state.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-128 as it existed prior to 1986.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-111 is similar to former § 13-80-128 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

Purpose of section. The remedial revival statute reflects a legislative intent to enable litigants to avoid hardships which might result from strict adherence to the provisions of statutes of limitations. Soehner v. Soehner, 642 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1981).

Section inapplicable to wrongful death actions. By its own terms, this section does not apply to wrongful death actions. Ritter v. Aspen Skiing Corp., 519 F. Supp. 907 (D. Colo. 1981); Phillips v. Beethe, 679 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1984).

And to actions under the Federal Arbitration Act, as a result of preemption by 9 U.S.C. § 12. Chilcott Entm't v. John G. Kinnard Co., Inc., 10 P.3d 723 (Colo. App. 2000).

But does apply to medical malpractice claims. This section applies to actions set forth in this article and medical malpractice is one of those claims. Phillips v. Beethe, 679 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1984).

Statute should be liberally interpreted; therefore, the term "a new action" should not be interpreted to mean only one new action. Sharp Bros. Contr. v. Westvaco Corp., 817 P.2d 547 (Colo. App. 1991).

Remedial revival statute tolls the running of the statute of limitations when the original action is terminated for lack of jurisdiction. Failure to file a nonresident cost bond, however, does not affect either subject matter jurisdiction or jurisdiction over the person and, therefore, the remedial revival statute was inapplicable to plaintiff's second complaint. Nguyen v. Swedish Med. Ctr., 890 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1995).

But the remedial revival statute does not toll the statute of limitations where plaintiff's action is not timely filed because plaintiff attempted to pay the filing fees with an insufficient funds check. In such case, the action was not dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Broker House Int'l, Ltd. v. Bendelow, 952 P.2d 860 (Colo. App. 1998).

The remedial revival statute does not toll the statute of limitations where plaintiff's complaint is dismissed due to a lack of capacity to sue, because, in such case, the action is not dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. SMLL, L.L.C. v. Peak Nat'l Bank, 111 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court properly dismissed case on statute of limitations grounds. Trial court had subject matter jurisdiction over deceased defendant named in original complaint and personal jurisdiction over defendant after complaint was amended. Therefore, remedial revival statute could not be invoked because case was not "terminated because of lack of jurisdiction or improper venue" within the meaning of the statute, rather it was dismissed based on the statute of limitations. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

Remedial revival statute cannot be invoked, and untimely amended complaints do not relate back to original complaint. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

13-80-112. When action survives death. If any person entitled to bring any action dies before the expiration of the time limited therefor and if the cause of action does by law survive, the action may be commenced by the personal representative of the deceased person at any time within one year after the date of death and not afterwards if barred by provision of this article.

death, see Barlew v. Hitzler, 40 Colo. 109, 90 P. 90 (1907) (decided under former § 13-80-117).

13-80-113. New promise - effect of payment. No acknowledgment or promise shall be evidence of a new or continuing contract sufficient to take a case out of the operation of the statute of limitations, unless it is in writing signed by the party to be charged; but this section shall not alter the effect of a payment of principal or interest.

This section affects only the mode of proof and does not alter the substantive law. Van Diest v. Towle, 116 Colo. 204, 179 P.2d 984 (1947).

This section applies only to actions in personam. Fastenau v. Asher, 124 Colo. 161, 235 P.2d 587 (1951).

The promise to pay must be express. To remove the bar of the statute of limitations so that a debt otherwise barred may be recovered upon a new promise, there must be an express promise to pay it. Thomas v. Carey, 26 Colo. 485, 58 P. 1093 (1899).

It must be a full recognition of the indebtedness and a promise to pay it. Although, after a new promise, the action can be maintained upon the original consideration, recovery can only be had upon the new contract to pay, hence, it must have the necessary elements of a contract. It must be a full recognition of the indebtedness evidenced by the note, and a promise to pay that particular debt. Sears v. Hicklin, 3 Colo. App. 331, 33 P. 137 (1893).

The debtor may impose conditions. Where the debtor was under no legal obligation whatever to pay the debt, whatever promise he made was entirely voluntary; and the authorities universally recognize his right to impose any condition which he might deem proper. Richardson v. Bricker, 7 Colo. 58, 1 P. 433, 49 Am. R. 344 (1883).

This section does not interfere with general rule as to effect of payment. This section clearly evidences the legislative intent not to interfere with the general rule that the payment of interest, before the running of the statute, removes the demand therefrom, and that proof of payment may be by parol. Lieske v. Swan, 93 Colo. 396, 26 P.2d 807 (1933).

An offer in compromise is not an admission of the debt so as to remove the bar of the statute. Van Diest v. Towle, 116 Colo. 204, 179 P.2d 984 (1947).

Nor are references to debt only for purpose of identifying collateral. References to a debt in correspondence about exchange of the collateral on the debt pursuant to a corporate reorganization did not constitute an acknowledgment of the debt, where the reference was made to the debt only for the purpose of identifying the collateral. Van Diest v. Towle, 116 Colo. 204, 179 P.2d 984 (1947).

Alleged promise to pay a debt is not evidence of a new or continuing contract sufficient to bar application of the statute of limitations unless it is in writing. An oral acknowledgment of an existing debt and forbearance to bring suit alone are insufficient to invoke equitable estoppel. Equitable estoppel requires evidence that the defendant's actions adversely affected filing the plaintiff's claim. Samples-Ehrlich v. Simon, 876 P.2d 108 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Berthoud Nat. Bank v. Dunn, 762 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1988); Mountainwood Condo. v. Cal-Colorado, 765 P.2d 1066 (Colo. App. 1988).

13-80-114. Promise by one of parties in joint interest. No joint debtor, obligor, or his personal representative or successor shall lose the benefit of the provisions of this article so as to be chargeable by reason only of any acknowledgment, promise, or payment made by any other of them.

ANNOTATION

Payments of one indorser of a promissory note operate only to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations as to himself not as to a joint maker. Coulter v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 18 Colo. App. 444, 72 P. 602 (1903); Torbit v. Heath, 11 Colo. App. 492, 53 P. 615 (1898) (decided under former § 13-80-124).

13-80-115. Endorsement by payee - effect. Nothing in this article shall alter, take away, or lessen the effect of a payment of any principal or interest made by any person; but no endorsement or memorandum of any such payment, written or made upon any promissory note, bill of exchange, or other writing, by or on behalf of the party to whom such payment is made, or purports to be made, shall be deemed sufficient proof of the payment so as to take the case out of operation of the provisions of this article.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-123 as it existed prior to 1986.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-115 is similar to former § 13-80-123 as it existed prior to the 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

This section establishes a rule of evidence and not a rule of pleading. Meyer v. Binkleman, 5 Colo. 262 (1880); MacGinnis v. Pickett, 109 Colo. 169, 123 P.2d 410 (1942).

It was not intended to lessen the effect of a payment, but to require proof that a payment was in fact made, whenever it shall be relied upon to revive an action otherwise barred. Without such a requirement there would practically be no bar to an action upon a promissory note, for the simple indorsement of a credit without payment in fact, would always operate to revive the cause of action. Under this section, however, the plaintiff must not only state a subsisting cause of action, but he must prove such a cause. Meyer v. Binkleman, 5 Colo. 262 (1880); MacGinnis v. Pickett, 109 Colo. 169, 123 P.2d 410 (1942).

A voluntary payment by the defendant who owes the principal debt, or is bound for it, will stop the running of the statute. Nat'l State Bank v. Rowland, 1 Colo. App. 468, 29 P. 465 (1892); Adams v. Tucker, 6 Colo. App. 393, 40 P. 783 (1895); Dodger v. East, 100 Colo. 36, 64 P.2d 1270 (1937).

Since it amounts to acknowledgment from which new promise is implied. The principle upon which a part payment by a debtor will prevent his availing himself of the bar of the statute is that such a payment amounts to an acknowledgment of the debt, and from an absolute acknowledgment the law implies a new promise founded upon the old consideration. Sears v. Hicklin, 3 Colo. App. 331, 33 P. 137 (1893).

To pay subsisting debt then due. The authorities generally declare that the new promise implied by a part payment is a promise to pay a subsisting debt then due; not a debt which might thereafter become due under the terms of the contract. Buckingham v. Orr, 6 Colo. 587 (1883).

The mere indorsement of a partial payment upon a note will not in and of itself toll the running of the statute of limitations. Christensen v. Hugh M. Woods Mercantile Co., 104 Colo. 403, 91 P.2d 999 (1934); MacGinnis v. Pickett, 109 Colo. 169, 123 P.2d 410 (1942).

There must be payment and clear acknowledgment of additional debt. In order to avert the bar of the statute of limitations a payment of a portion of an admitted debt must be made and accepted by the creditor and accompanied by circumstances amounting to an unqualified acknowledgment of more being due from which a promise must be inferred to pay the remainder. Holmquist v. Gilbert, 41 Colo. 113, 92 P. 232 (1907); Ferris v. Curtis, 53 Colo. 340, 127 P. 236 (1912).

13-80-116. Action against joint debtors or obligors. If, in an action against joint debtors or obligors, the plaintiff is barred by the provisions of this article as to one or more of the debtors or obligors, but is entitled to recover against any other of them by virtue of a new acknowledgment, promise, or payment, the plaintiff shall be entitled to proceed as against that defendant.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-121 as it existed prior to 1986.

13-80-117. No dismissal for nonjoinder. In an action on contract, it shall not be a defense that the plaintiff failed to join a person against whom claim is barred by this article.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-80-122 as it existed prior to 1986.

13-80-118. Absence or concealment of a party subject to suit. If, when a cause of action accrues against a person, the person is out of this state and not subject to service of process or has concealed himself, the period limited for the commencement of the action by any statute of limitations shall not begin to run until he comes into this state or while he is so concealed. If, after the cause of action accrues, he departs from this state and is not subject to service of process or conceals himself, the time of his absence while not subject to service of process or the time of his concealment while not subject to service of process shall not be computed as a part of the period within which the action must be brought.

Payment must be voluntary and by the debtor to the creditor. Sears v. Hicklin, 3 Colo. App. 331, 33 P. 137 (1893).

For payment of interest being sufficient acknowledgment of debt, see Purdy v. Deprez, 39 Colo. 68, 88 P. 972 (1906).

Indorsement on note of amount standing to maker's credit on books of bank is ineffective. The indorsement on the promissory note of a debtor to a banking corporation, without the assent of the maker, of a balance to the maker's credit standing on the books of the corporation, does not constitute a voluntary payment on the note, and is not effective to stop the running of the statute of limitations as to the note. Nat'l State Bank v. Rowland, 1 Colo. App. 468, 29 P. 465 (1892).

Indorsement of partial payment on note is insufficient. "Generally speaking, the rule is well established that the mere indorsement of a partial payment upon a note will not in and of itself toll the running of the statute of limitations." MacGinnis v. Pickett, 109 Colo. 169, 123 P.2d 410 (1942).

Burden of proof is upon plaintiff. In an action on a promissory note the burden of proving part payment so as to remove the bar of the statute of limitations is upon the plaintiff. Manby v. Sweet Inv. Co., 78 Colo. 371, 242 P. 51 (1925); MacGinnis v. Pickett, 109 Colo. 169, 123 P.2d 410 (1942).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-80-118 is similar to former § 13-80-126 as it existed prior to this 1986 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section.

This section tolls statute of limitations until defendant enters Colorado. A suit on a foreign judgment based upon a cause of action accruing more than six years prior to the filing of an action thereon in Colorado, and more than three months after the entry thereof, would be barred by the provisions of § 13-80-121, except for the provisions of this section, which tolled the running of the statute until defendant came into the state of Colorado. Blackmon v. Klein, 144 Colo. 461, 357 P.2d 91 (1960).

Plaintiff must show statute has been tolled. The statute of limitations having been pleaded in bar and prima facie appearing to be a bar from the note set out in the complaint, the burden shifted to plaintiff to establish that the statute had been tolled. Smith v. Kent Oil Co., 128 Colo. 80, 261 P.2d 149 (1953); Norton v. Dartmouth Skis, Inc., 147 Colo. 436, 364 P.2d 866 (1961).

This section is limited in its provisions to causes of action in personam, and is wholly inapplicable to actions in rem or actions quasi in rem. Fastenau v. Asher, 124 Colo. 161, 235 P.2d 587 (1951).

This section specifically fixes time when period of limitation begins to run. Jones v. O'Connell, 87 Colo. 103, 285 P. 762 (1930).

This section is clearly a statute of limitations. Jones v. O'Connell, 87 Colo. 103, 285 P. 762 (1930).

Mere fact that person moved to another state did not constitute an effort to conceal himself or herself in an effort to avoid service. McGee v. Hardina, 140 P.3d 165 (Colo. App. 2005).

It applies only to absence from state of Colorado. This section applies to absence from the state of Colorado, not to absence from another state or from a territory or foreign country. If the section were intended to cover the latter situation, it would have said "out of the state, territory, or foreign country where the cause of action accrued", and "depart from such state, territory, or foreign country". Simon v. Wilnes, 97 Colo. 78, 47 P.2d 406 (1935)(concurring opinion).

Amendment to former § 13-80-126 not retroactive. Because this section is a tolling statute and is remedial in nature, it should not be given retroactive application; thus, in any suit where the cause of action accrued prior to the effective date of the amendment of the former section, the action should be controlled by this section as it read prior to the amendment. United Bank of Denver Nat'l Ass'n v. Wright, 660 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section does not toll limitation period for wrongful death action. The Colorado wrongful death act is not a "statute of limitations but a statute of creation." Thus this action will not toll the two-year period in which one has to commence a wrongful death action. Nelson v. Hall, 573 F. Supp. 1097 (D. Colo. 1983).

(2) (a) The court shall dismiss the action for damages and award attorney fees and costs to the person against whom the action was brought if the person bringing the action, on whose behalf an action has been brought, or in the case of a wrongful death action, the decedent, has been convicted of the felony or has been adjudicated a delinquent as a result of the commission of the act, unless the damage was caused by the willful and deliberate act of another person; except that such exception shall not apply if the person who caused the injuries acted:

(I) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent injury to himself or herself or to others, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(II) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent the commission of a felony, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(III) As a peace officer, as such person is described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., acting within the scope of the officer's employment and acting pursuant to section 18-1-707, C.R.S.

(a.5) The court shall dismiss the action for damages and award attorney fees and costs to the person against whom the action was brought if the person against whom the action was brought is found not guilty of criminal charges for causing the injuries sustained by the person who committed the felony or act that is defined as a felony, or in the case of a wrongful death action for causing the decedent's death, as a result of the commission of the act, unless the damage was caused by the willful and deliberate act of another person; except that such exception shall not apply if the person who caused the injuries acted:

(I) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent injury to himself or herself or to others, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(II) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent the commission of a felony, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(III) As a peace officer, as such person is described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., acting within the scope of the officer's employment and acting pursuant to section 18-1-707, C.R.S.

(a.6) For purposes of paragraph (a.5) of this subsection (2), a finding of not guilty of criminal charges does not include a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity or a finding of not guilty by reason of impaired mental condition.

(b) If paragraph (a.5) of this subsection (2) does not apply and if the person bringing the action for damages or on whose behalf an action has been brought is not convicted of a felony or adjudicated a delinquent as a result of the commission of the act or in the case of a wrongful death action, the court shall submit to the jury hearing the damages claim the issue of whether or not, by a preponderance of the evidence, the person committed an act that is defined by any law of this state or the United States to be a felony. The court shall dismiss the action and award attorney fees and costs to the person against whom the action was brought if the court or jury determines that the damage was sustained during the commission of or during immediate flight from an act that is defined by any law of this state or the United States to be a felony, unless the damage was caused by the willful and deliberate act of another person; except that such exception shall not apply if the person who caused the injury acted:

(I) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent injury to himself or herself or to others, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(II) Under a reasonable belief that physical force was reasonable and appropriate to prevent the commission of a felony, using a degree of force that he or she reasonably believed necessary for that purpose; or

(III) As a peace officer, as such person is described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., acting within the scope of the officer's employment and acting pursuant to section 18-1-707, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

The legislative intent underlying the statute here at issue is to allow a citizen to prevent the commission of a felony, or flight by the felon, by the use of physical force, so long as the citizen reasonably believes that such use is reasonable and appropriate and the degree of force used is reasonable without incurring liability from any injury sustained by the other party.

Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

It is irrelevant whether the injury is sustained as the result of the deliberate application of reasonable force or by the negligent use of physical force that is otherwise reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances. Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

The issue of reasonableness of defendant's actions under the statute was one for resolution by the jury. Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

It is unreasonable and contrary to legislative intent to interpret the statute to mean protection for the citizen ceased at the very moment that his actions were successful in causing the cessation of the unlawful actions by the other party. Until the incident is brought to a close, it cannot be said, at least as a matter of law, that the citizen is not still in the act of preventing injury to himself or others or of preventing the commission of a felony. Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court did not abuse its discretion in granting attorney fees to the defendant since the requirements of this section were satisfied. Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989).

Dismissal of state common-law claims and award of attorney fees based on this section inappropriate where no finding was made that person acted in reasonable belief that actions were required to prevent the commission of a felony. Crouse v. City of Colo. Springs, 766 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1988) (decided under former § 13-80-129).

(2) A legal representative may:

(a) Elect, on behalf of a plaintiff in a civil action, a form of funding of a judgment for periodic payments, as described in section 13-64-207;

(b) Elect to receive the immediate payment to the plaintiff of the present value of the future damage award in a lump-sum amount, in lieu of periodic payments;

13-81-103. Statute begins to run - when. (1) When in any of the statutes of the state of Colorado a limitation is fixed upon the time within which a right of action, right of redemption, or any other right may be asserted either affirmatively or by way of defense or an action, suit, or proceeding based thereon may be brought, commenced, maintained, or prosecuted and the true owner of said right is a person under disability at the time such right accrues, then:

(a) If such person under disability is represented by a legal representative at the time the right accrues, or if a legal representative is appointed for such person under disability at any time after the right accrues and prior to the termination of such disability, the applicable statute of limitations shall run against such person under disability in the same manner, for the same period, and with the same effect as it runs against persons not under disability. Such legal representative, or his successor in trust, in any event shall be allowed not less than two years after his appointment within which to take action on behalf of such person under disability, even though the two-year period expires after the expiration of the period fixed by the applicable statute of limitations.

(b) If the person under disability dies before the termination of his disability and before the expiration of the period of limitation in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) and the right is one which survives to the executor or administrator of a decedent, such executor or administrator shall take action within one year after the death of such person under disability;

(c) If the disability of any person is terminated before the expiration of the period of limitation in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) and no legal representative has been appointed for him, such person shall be allowed to take action within the period fixed by the applicable statute of limitations or within two years after the removal of the disability, whichever period expires later.

(2) After the expiration of the period fixed in paragraph (a), (b), or (c) of subsection (1) of this section, neither the person under disability, nor his legal representative, nor anyone for him shall be permitted or allowed to take action based on any such right.

This section specifically applies to all limitations of time contained in any of the statutes of the state of Colorado. Ball v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 583, 503 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Section does not affect jurisdiction. The provisions of subsection (1)(c) are not intended to affect the jurisdiction of a court to act, but rather are intended as a statutory toll to statutes of limitations. In re Estate of Daigle, 634 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1981).

Statute does not run without legal representative. If a person under a disability is without a "legal representative", statutes of limitation do not run against him. Price v. Sommermeyer, 41 Colo. App. 147, 584 P.2d 1220 (1978), aff'd, 198 Colo. 548, 603 P.2d 135 (1979); Barnhill v. Pub. Serv. Co., 649 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 690 P.2d 1248 (Colo. 1984).

Definition of "legal representative" includes a guardian appointed by a court having jurisdiction of any person under disability, but does not include a natural parent not so appointed. Tenney v. Flaxer, 727 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1986).

Once a defendant raises the statute of limitations as an affirmative defense, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to show that the statute has been tolled by proving that no legal representative had been appointed for him. Goldsmith v. Learjet, Inc., 90 F.3d 1490 (10th Cir. 1996).

The time limitation of § 8-53-119 is tolled by this section. Ball v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 583, 503 P.2d 1040 (1972).

The time limitation of § 13-21-204 is tolled by this statute. The statute of limitations for wrongful death actions is not a "nonclaim statute" which prohibits filing of a lawsuit after a specific period of time, and, therefore, it is subject to the tolling provision of this section for persons under a disability. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Barnhill, 690 P.2d 1248 (Colo. 1984).

Tolling provisions of this section apply to both the limitation and repose periods applicable to former § 13-80-105 (now § 13-80-102) medical malpractice claims. Southard v. Miles, 714 P.2d 891 (Colo. 1986).

Minors are "persons under disability" for purposes of section. McClanahan v. Am. Gilsonite Co., 494 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1980); Tenney v. Flaxer, 727 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1986); Estate of Stevenson v. Hollywood Bar, 832 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1992).

If workmen's compensation claimant was under disability at time his right to compensation occurred, and continued to be under disability at time he filed petition to reopen claim, the statute of limitations could not run against employee for whom a legal representative had not been appointed. Jaimes v. Brookhart Lumber Co., 727 P.2d 1119 (Colo. App. 1986).

Industrial commission was not proper forum in which to raise or decide the issue of whether workmen's compensation claimant was under a disability for purposes of tolling workmen's compensation statute of limitations. An interested person must petition the court for a specific finding as to the existence of a legal disability. James v. Brookhart Lumber Co., 727 P.2d 1119 (Colo. App. 1986).

For claim of mental incompetent for injuries sustained as result of medical malpractice the medical negligence statute of limitations is tolled until mental incompetency is removed or until legal representative is appointed, in which event action must be filed within two years. Tenney v. Flaxer, 727 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1986).

For excluding § 13-80-101 et seq. from the operation of this section, see Johnson v. Dodrill, 265 F. Supp. 243 (D. Colo. 1967).

This statute, which tolls statute of limitations for persons under disability, does not apply to the notice of claim provisions of the Governmental Immunity Act. McMahon v. Denver Water Bd., 780 P.2d 28 (Colo. App. 1989);

Brown v. Teitelbaum, 830 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1991); Hergenreter v. Morgan County Sch. Dist., 888 P.2d 346 (Colo. App. 1994).

Substantial compliance with the 180-day notice provision is a condition precedent to any "action" brought under the Governmental Immunity Act, therefore, the time for filing minors' notice is not extended pursuant to the tolling provisions of this section until two years after the minors' legal representative is appointed. Brown v. Teitelbaum, 830 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1991).

This statute was applicable to claims for negligence and outrageous conduct arising from alleged sexual assault on minors. Plaintiffs' admissions of emotional upset at time of assaults and knowledge that defendant's actions were improper and illegal indicated that plaintiffs were on adequate notice of the essential elements of the tort when plaintiffs reached the age of majority. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

There is no conflict between the provisions of this section and § 13-22-101 (1)(c). This section addresses how the statute of limitations applies to a suit while the other section addresses how a suit may be brought. Elgin v. Bartlett, 994 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1999).

A genuine issue of material fact as to whether the statute of limitations was tolled because husband was "under disability" existed, and thus summary judgment on husband's claim against the sheriff was improper. Terry v. Sullivan, 58 P.3d 1098 (Colo. App. 2002).

Derivative claims are subject to the same defenses available to the underlying claim; nevertheless, derivative claims are distinct causes of action separate from the claims of the injured person, and statute of limitations is not tolled for a derivative claim based on the tolling of the underlying claim. Terry v. Sullivan, 58 P.3d 1098 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-81-104. Right of trustee. If by virtue of any agreement, trust indenture, will, or other instrument in writing a trustee or other representative is or has been designated and appointed for any such person under disability and by the terms of such agreement, trust indenture, will, or other instrument in writing said trustee or other representative is vested with the right and power to take action, then the right to take action for any right which a person under disability may have arising in any way from said trust or agency shall vest in the trustee or other representative, and the applicable statute of limitations shall run against such person under disability and against such trustee or other representative as to all rights to take such action in the same manner, for the same period, and with the same effect as it runs against persons not under disability. After the expiration of the period fixed by such applicable statute of limitations, neither the person under disability, nor his trustee or other representative, nor anyone for him shall be permitted or allowed to take action based on any such right.

13-81-105. Failure of trustee to take action. When a legal representative, or trustee, or other representative appointed under any agreement, trust indenture, will, or other instrument in writing has been duly appointed for any person under disability and such legal representative, or trustee, or other representative does not promptly, after demand therefor by the person under disability or anyone for him, take action, then such person under disability by next friend may take action before the expiration of the periods fixed in this article for the taking of such action by any person under disability, or his legal representative, or trustee, or other representative, but not thereafter.

13-81-106. Removal of disability - effect. If before the expiration of the period fixed by the applicable statute of limitations the disability of any person under disability is removed, the fact of such removal shall not in any way affect or stop the running of the applicable statute of limitations, except as provided in section 13-81-103 (1) (c).

13-81-107. Action prosecuted to final decision. If any action or proceeding is begun within the period fixed by the applicable statute of limitations or the periods provided for in this article, then such action or proceeding may be prosecuted to final decision notwithstanding the fact that the period of limitation shall expire after the commencement and during the prosecution of such action or proceeding.

ANNOTATION

Neither § 13-80-110 nor the Uniform Conflict of Laws - Limitations Act (UCL-LA) is more specific than the other. Because each statute uses different factors to assign a limitations period, the court is prevented from directly comparing them in order to read one as an exception to the other. Jenkins v. Pan. Canal Ry. Co., 208 P.3d 238 (Colo. 2009).

Because it was enacted more recently,

§ 13-80-110 and not the UCL-LA, controls. Based on the general assembly's prescribed rules of statutory construction, because the conflicts between the statutes cannot be resolved on specificity and the borrowing statute is the more recent enactment, the borrowing statute applies to the plaintiffs' claims. Jenkins v. Pan. Canal Ry. Co., 208 P.3d 238 (Colo. 2009).

13-82-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Claim" means a right of action that may be asserted in a civil action or proceeding and includes a right of action created by statute.

(2) "State" means a state, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, a foreign country, or a political subdivision of any of them.

13-82-104. Conflict of laws - limitation periods. (1) Except as provided in section 13-82-106, if a claim is substantively based:

(a) Upon the law of one other state, the limitation period of that state applies; or

(b) Upon the law of more than one state, the limitation period of one of those states chosen by the law of conflict of laws of this state applies.

(2) The limitation period of this state applies to all other claims.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Brown v. Globe Union, Div. of Johnson Controls, 661 F. Supp. 1188 (D. Colo. 1987).

13-82-105. Rules applicable to computation of limitation period. If the statute of limitations of another state applies to the assertion of a claim in this state, the other state's relevant statutes and other rules of law governing tolling and accrual apply in computing the limitation period, but its statutes and other rules of law governing conflict of laws do not apply.

13-82-106. Unfairness. If the court determines that the limitation period of another state applicable under sections 13-82-104 and 13-82-105 is substantially different from the limitation period of this state and has not afforded a fair opportunity to sue upon or imposes an unfair burden in defending against the claim, the limitation period of this state applies.

ANNOTATION

Where length of foreign government's statute of limitations was not so fundamentally unfair or unjust as to be repugnant to Colorado's public policy, section does not provide a basis for non-recognition of a final, conclusive foreign judgment. Milhoux v. Linder, 902 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1995).

The plain language of this section limits its applicability to cases in which a court determines under the Uniform Conflict of Laws-Limitations Act (and not § 13-80-110) that a claim is barred by the limitations period of another state. Jenkins v. Haymore, 208 P.3d 265 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 208 P.3d 238 (Colo. 2009).

13-82-107. Existing and future claims. (1) This article applies to claims:

- (a) Accruing after July 1, 1984; or
- (b) Asserted in a civil action or proceeding more than one year after July 1, 1984, but it does not revive a claim barred before July 1, 1984.

Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby determines, finds, and declares that traffic congestion and other transportation difficulties in the Denver metropolitan area seriously threaten the public health and welfare. In an effort to reduce air pollution and stimulate the economic development of the Denver metropolitan area, the general assembly has directed the regional transportation district to proceed with the planning, construction, and operation of a fixed guideway mass transit system. Since the success of the mass transit system depends on its prompt construction and commencement of operation, the general assembly finds that it is necessary to avoid any possible delays in such construction and operation. To that end, the general assembly further finds that the trial of lawsuits arising out of the planning, development, financing, or construction of these projects should be given priority in the district and appellate courts of this state.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

13-90-101. Who may testify - interest. All persons, without exception, other than those specified in sections 13-90-102 to 13-90-108 may be witnesses. Neither parties nor other persons who have an interest in the event of an action or proceeding shall be excluded; nor those who have been convicted of crime; nor persons on account of their opinions on matters of religious belief. In every case the credibility of the witness may be drawn in question, as now provided by law, but the conviction of any person for any felony may be shown for the purpose of affecting the credibility of such witness. The fact of such conviction may be proved like any other fact, not of record, either by the witness himself, who shall be compelled to testify thereto, or by any other person cognizant of such conviction as impeaching testimony or by any other competent testimony. Evidence of a previous conviction of a felony where the witness testifying was convicted five years prior to the time when the witness testifies shall not be admissible in evidence in any civil action.

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 13-90-101 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1883, p. 289, § 1, have also been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is constitutional. People v. Honey, 198 Colo. 64, 596 P.2d 751 (1979).

Section does not violate § 21 of art. VI, Colo. Const., as an intrusion into matters exclusively judicial. Legislative policymaking and judicial rulemaking powers may overlap to some extent as long as there is no substantial conflict between statute and rule. People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978); People v. Diaz, 985 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1999).

For constitutionality of this section, see Trackman v. People, 22 Colo. 83, 43 P. 662 (1896).

The right to testify in the courts of the state is not a privilege or immunity protected by the fourteenth amendment, and the state general assembly has the power to declare who shall be competent to testify, and to regulate the production of evidence in the state courts. Estate of Freeman v. Young, 172 Colo. 322, 473 P.2d 704 (1970).

This section does not endow party witnesses in a civil action with a fundamental right to testify. Rather, it simply renders a party competent to testify and the testimony of all witnesses remains subject to the applicable rules of evidence. Williams v. Chrysler Ins. Co., 928 P.2d 1375 (Colo. App. 1996).

The general assembly has the right to control the general competency of witnesses and the subjects of their testimony; but a court cannot be empowered to make a party a competent witness contrary to the general law. Estate of Freeman v. Young, 172 Colo. 322, 473 P.2d 704 (1970).

Language of this section is mandatory and not discretionary. Havens v. Hardesty, 43 Colo. App. 162, 600 P.2d 116 (1979).

It removes the disqualification of witnesses on the ground of interest, or the conviction of crime, except as set forth in the following sections. Palmer v. Hanna, 6 Colo. 55 (1881); Estate of Freeman v. Young, 172 Colo. 322, 473 P.2d 704 (1970).

There is a presumption that a witness is competent to testify. People v. Piro, 671 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule excluding parties interested in outcome of suit abolished. General common-law rule, that the testimony of all parties to a lawsuit and of all persons who stood to gain or lose by the outcome of the case was excluded as incompetent has been abolished in Colorado. Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

The parties to an action are competent witnesses in their own behalf, and they are thus placed on an equality. Whitsett v. Kershow, 4 Colo. 419 (1878); Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

Defendant testifying on own behalf is witness. When a defendant takes the stand in his own defense, he becomes a witness within the meaning of this section. People v. Evans, 630 P.2d 94 (Colo. App. 1981).

It was the intention of the general assembly, by this section, to entirely remove the disqualification theretofore resting upon husband and wife on account of the marriage relation, or, as stated by Chancellor Kent, on account of public policy. Butler v. Phillips, 38 Colo. 378, 88 P. 480 (1906).

Husband may testify in suit involving wife's property. Under this and the following section the husband may be permitted to testify in a cause wherein the separate property of the wife is concerned. Hanna v. Barker, 6 Colo. 303 (1882).

There still are certain exceptions. At common law, a party to a suit could not testify at all in his own behalf, and while this statute has changed this rule of the common law, certain exceptions are still provided for. Cliff v. Cliff, 23 Colo. App. 183, 128 P. 860 (1912).

Objection to competency of witnesses must be made in trial court. An objection to the admission or exclusion of evidence on the ground of the competency of a witness must be made in the trial court. Otherwise, it will not be considered on review. Holm v. People, 72 Colo. 257, 210 P. 698 (1922).

This section has no application to proceedings inquiring into a party's mental health. In the special statutory proceeding to inquire into the mental health of a party, the provisions of this section have no application to such proceedings being neither civil nor criminal, and in no sense adversary, a wife may testify as to the mental condition of her husband as illustrated by his acts. Sabon v. People, 142 Colo. 323, 350 P.2d 576 (1960).

Prosecuting attorney as witness. In Colorado, a prosecuting attorney is competent to be a witness for the state, but ordinarily he should withdraw from active participation in a case when he learns he will be a witness. People v.

Hauschel, 37 Colo. App. 114, 550 P.2d 876 (1976).

Where the district attorney's participation in the trial was limited, and pursuant to court order, after he testified he took no further part in the trial, nor was the nature of the district attorney's testimony here as significant or damning as that in People v. Spencer (182 Colo. 189, 512 P.2d 260 (1973)), the district attorney's indiscretion did not rise to the seriousness of constituting a denial of a fair trial, and thus the refusal to grant a mistrial after his testimony was not reversible error. People v. Hauschel, 37 Colo. App. 114, 550 P.2d 876 (1976).

Testimony properly allowed despite witness's hearing deficiency. Although defendant's mother was incapacitated by reason of a hearing loss, her testimony was properly allowed where the record reveals that although the witness had a hearing deficiency and several questions had to be repeated her answers were responsive to the questions asked, which clearly indicates that she perceived the meaning of the questions. People v. Forbes, 185 Colo. 410, 524 P.2d 1377 (1974).

Impeachment of defendant may not be accomplished by attacking witness's general character. While evidence of prior misconduct, including misdemeanor convictions, may be admitted to attack the veracity of specific testimony by a defendant, impeachment of a defendant may not be accomplished by attacking the general character of the witness. People v. Sasson, 628 P.2d 120 (Colo. App. 1980).

Witness is presumed to be competent, and whether or not a witness is competent is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and its ruling may be disturbed only upon a finding of clear abuse of discretion. People v. Woertman, 786 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1989).

Cross-examination regarding prior misdemeanor conviction was proper in trial for violation of custody where prior conviction was for violation of custody and was directly relevant to defendant's state of mind and tended to refute defendant's own testimony that he had no prior arrest record. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Grand jury proceedings constitute judicial proceedings which entitle witnesses to absolute immunity from subsequent civil liability for his or her testimony. Wagner v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 933 P.2d 1311 (Colo. 1997).

For history of section, see People v. Yeager, 182 Colo. 397, 513 P.2d 1057 (1973).

II. PRIOR FELONY CONVICTION.

Section is constitutional. Section which specifically allows previous felony conviction to be shown for the purpose of affecting the credibility of a witness is constitutional. Velarde v. People, 179 Colo. 207, 500 P.2d 125 (1972); People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Griffith, 197 Colo. 544, 595 P.2d 231 (1979).

Section does not deprive defendant of due process of law under amendment XIV, U.S. Const., and § 25 of art. II, Colo. Const., in that it precludes the exercise of any judicial discretion in admitting prior felony convictions for purposes of impeachment. People v. Meyers, 617 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1980).

Distinction in handling defendant's evidence not violative of equal protection guarantees. Distinction between admitting evidence of prior felony convictions when a defendant chooses to testify, and excluding such evidence when the defendant has chosen not to take the witness stand does not violate equal protection guarantees. People v. Layton, 200 Colo. 59, 612 P.2d 83 (1980); People v. Diaz, 985 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section does treat those defendants who choose to testify on their behalf differently than those defendants who do not take the witness stand, but these two classes of defendants are not similarly situated. People v. Layton, 200 Colo. 59, 612 P.2d 83 (1980).

This section is not violative of defendant's right to due process and does not impermissibly chill the exercise of his right to testify on his own behalf. People v. Henry, 195 Colo. 309, 578 P.2d 1041, appeal dismissed, 439 U.S. 961, 99 S. Ct. 445, 58 L. Ed.2d 419 (1978); People v. Diaz, 985 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1999).

It is within the province of the Colorado general assembly to make provision for use of prior convictions in the event a defendant-witness testifies. The Colorado statutory procedure does not impermissibly affect a defendant's due process rights and right to testify in his own behalf, and thus impeachment of a defendant-witness by showing prior convictions is not unconstitutional. Hubbard v. Wilson, 401 F. Supp. 495 (D. Colo. 1975).

Fact that this does not apply to criminal actions does not violate equal protection. The argument that this section should also be applied to criminal actions, and that if the limitation does not apply to criminal prosecutions then there has been a violation of his constitutional right to equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Colorado and United States Constitutions is without merit. Nunez v. People, 173 Colo. 236, 477 P.2d 366 (1970); Garcia v. People, 174 Colo. 372, 483 P.2d 1347 (1971).

Criminal defendant was not denied equal protection of the laws because his testimony was impeached by a felony conviction committed more than five years prior to his court testimony, even though this statute does not provide for impeachment by felony convictions over five years old in civil cases. People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

Statute which permits impeachment in a criminal case by felony conviction over five years old, while such is not permissible in a civil proceeding, does not deny equal protection of the law. People v. Davis, 183 Colo. 228, 516 P.2d 120 (1973); People v. Velarde, 196 Colo. 254, 586 P.2d 6 (1978).

Fact that this statute limits, for purpose of impeachment in civil actions, evidence of a conviction of a witness to those felonies occurring within five years of the time of his testifying, whereas, in criminal cases there is no time limitation, does not deny equal protection of the law to criminal defendants. People v. Yeager, 182 Colo. 397, 513 P.2d 1057 (1973).

Distinction has a reasonable basis. It cannot be said that the general assembly's distinction between impeachment tools permitted in civil and criminal actions is without a reasonable basis, considering the grave consequences of criminal proceedings where both the personal freedom of the accused and the interests of society as a whole are weighed in a delicate balance. Lee v. People, 170 Colo. 268, 460 P.2d 796 (1969).

Evidence of prior criminal convictions admissible for impeachment purposes. Notwithstanding its inherent prejudiciality, evidence of prior criminal convictions may properly be admitted to impeach the credibility of a defendant's testimony. People v. Chavez, 621 P.2d 1362 (Colo. 1981), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L. Ed.2d 398 (1981); People v. McGhee, 677 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Hardy, 677 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1983); Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Ziglar, 45 P.3d 1266 (Colo. 2002).

While this section does not permit the use of a witness's prior misdemeanor conviction for impeachment purposes, it was never intended to prohibit testimony tending to show motive, bias, prejudice or interest of a witness in the outcome of a trial. People v. Jones, 635 P.2d 904 (Colo. App. 1981).

To warrant suppression of a prior conviction, the accused must make a prima facie showing of a constitutional violation, and the mere showing of uncertainty as to whether a violation has occurred is insufficient. People v. Lemons, 824 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1991).

A balancing test is not required prior to admitting evidence of felony convictions for purposes of impeachment of an accused, given that this state has not adopted a rule of evidence similar to Fed. R. Evid. 609. People v. Diaz, 985 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1999).

Evidence of defendant's prior misdemeanor convictions not admissible. People v. Sasson, 628 P.2d 120 (Colo. App. 1980).

Evidence of prior misdemeanor convictions involving false statements to police held admissible for impeachment purposes where focus was on the specific instances of lying, not on the convictions themselves, and jury was instructed to consider the evidence only for the limited purpose of evaluating defendant's credibility. People v. Gillis, 883 P.2d 554 (Colo. App. 1994).

Military conviction admissible for impeachment. A military conviction for an offense that would be punishable as a felony under the law of Colorado is admissible for impeachment under this section. People v. Apodaca, 668 P.2d 941 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

A court does not err in allowing the people to attack the defendant's credibility by questioning him about a prior Air Force court martial conviction for assault with intent to commit rape. People v. Ortega, 672 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1983).

Whether a military conviction qualifies as a felony conviction under Colorado's impeachment statute should be resolved on the basis of the following two-part test: (1) Whether the maximum penalty applicable to the military offense is substantially equivalent to the punishment reserved for a felony offense in Colorado; and (2) whether the same criminal conduct if committed in Colorado, would be classified as a felony under Colorado law. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Defendant's conviction of rape under Article 120 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice qualifies as a felony conviction within the intentment of this section since the maximum sentence, life imprisonment, is a penalty applicable for the most serious felonies in Colorado and the offense of rape, if committed in Colorado, would constitute either the class 2 or class 3 felony of sexual assault in the first degree, or the class 4 felony of sexual assault in the second degree. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Defendant's prior military conviction is admissible to impeach the defendant only if the court has ruled that the conviction was obtained in a constitutionally valid manner. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Prior felony conviction which had been expunged after three years of probation was not a "prior felony conviction" within the meaning of this section. People v. Wright, 678 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1984).

A juvenile adjudication may not be used for impeachment purposes, as a juvenile adjudication is not a criminal proceeding. People v. Apodaca, 668 P.2d 941 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985); People v. Armand, 873 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court committed reversible error in allowing the impeachment of defendant's credibility with a New York youthful offender adjudication that is defined as not being a judgment of conviction for a crime or any other offense. People v. D'Apice, 735 P.2d 882 (Colo. App. 1986).

This section limits inquiry concerning any felony conviction to a proceeding five years in civil actions. Nunez v. People, 173 Colo. 236, 477 P.2d 366 (1970); Taylor v. People, 176 Colo. 316, 490 P.2d 292 (1971).

This is exclusionary in character. Pasternak v. Pan Am. Petroleum Corp., 417 F.2d 1292 (10th Cir. 1969).

This section is not applicable to federal courts. The fact that certain evidence might be inadmissible under a state exclusionary rule or a state statute is not controlling in the federal courts. While state rules of admissibility are controlling in the federal courts, state exclusionary rules are not, and evidence of a conviction five and one-half years prior to the date of testifying must be received even though the state courts would hold otherwise. Pasternak v. Pan Am. Petroleum Corp., 417 F.2d 1292 (10th Cir. 1969).

A "conviction" based on a plea of nolo contendere is within the meaning of that word as it is used in this section. Lacey v. People, 166 Colo. 152, 442 P.2d 402 (1968); Reynolds v. People, 172 Colo. 137, 471 P.2d 417 (1970).

A "conviction" based on a guilty plea is also admissible. People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

So is a conviction in a sister state or in a federal court for the purpose of affecting the credibility of a witness, unless the statute authorizing the use of such evidence precludes a so-called foreign conviction. The Colorado statute contains no such limiting language. Lacey v. People, 166 Colo. 152, 442 P.2d 402 (1968).

This section permits use of only final convictions, for purpose of impeachment. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 57, 530 P.2d 512 (1974).

Policy behind requirement that judgment of conviction be final before it is utilized for impeachment purposes is to guarantee that an accused will be subject to impeachment only after the trial judge has passed upon a motion for a new trial and has imposed sentence. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 57, 530 P.2d 512 (1974).

Conviction for impeachment purposes does not require imposition of sentence. Since it is immaterial whether guilt is established by a verdict of guilty, supported by a denial of a motion for new trial, or be a plea of guilty, that a conviction for impeachment purposes does not require the imposition of sentence is as applicable to convictions arising from the acceptance of a guilty plea as it is to convictions following a guilty verdict. People v. Baca, 44 Colo. App. 167, 610 P.2d 1083 (1980).

Conviction may be used for impeachment purposes at a later proceeding even if the appeal of the conviction is pending. People v. McNeely, 68 P.3d 540 (Colo. App. 2002).

Use of untested, unsentenced jury verdict prohibited. A jury verdict which has not been tested by a motion for a new trial and has not been then supported by the imposition of sentence cannot be used for the purpose of impeachment. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 57, 530 P.2d 512 (1974).

Portion of rule in People v. Goff does not stand alone. That portion of the rule in People v. Goff, supra, requiring sentencing as a condition precedent to subsequent use of a conviction for impeachment purposes, does not stand alone and does not go to the heart of the "truth-finding function" or raise "serious questions about the accuracy of guilty verdicts". People v. Johnson, 192 Colo. 483, 560 P.2d 465 (1977).

The essential function of the rule articulated in People v. Goff, supra, i.e., that a jury verdict which has not been tested by motion for new trial "and has not been supported by the imposition of sentence" cannot be used for impeachment purposes, was to ensure that impeachment would not be based upon a conviction which had not withstood the test of judicial scrutiny and the review provided by a motion for a new trial. People v. Johnson, 192 Colo. 483, 560 P.2d 465 (1977).

A felony conviction, after denial of a motion for a new trial but prior to sentencing, may be used for impeachment purposes. People v. Johnson, 192 Colo. 483, 560 P.2d 465 (1977).

Credibility of "remote" conviction jury question. A previous felony conviction of a witness, whatever its age, may be shown to affect credibility, and the effect on credibility of a "remote" conviction must be left to the judgment of the jury. People v. Yeager, 182 Colo. 397, 513 P.2d 1057 (1973).

Use of prior felony convictions for impeachment of witnesses is not discretionary with trial judge. People v. Yeager, 182 Colo. 397, 513 P.2d 1057 (1973); People v. Wright, 678 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1984); Molnar v. Law, 776 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

The decisions of Colorado supreme court interpreting this section have not granted the trial judge discretion to foreclose the use of prior felony convictions to impeach a defendant's testimony. People v. Hubbard, 184 Colo. 225, 519 P.2d 951 (1974); People v. Medina, 40 Colo. App. 490, 583 P.2d 293 (1978); People v. Velarde, 196 Colo. 254, 586 P.2d 6 (1978); People v. Renstrom, 657 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

The nature of the conviction can be established by a brief recital of the circumstances. Only the extent of the examination into those circumstances is within the trial court's discretion. People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

Felony conviction obtained by a guilty plea is admissible to the same extent as one obtained by a jury verdict. People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section makes no exception for guilty pleas by an alleged accomplice that are based on the same incident leading to the charges against the defendant. People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

Where witness plead guilty to a felony drug offense after being found by the court to be a person in need of treatment and after having the proceedings suspended without an imposition of a sentence, court had no discretion to prohibit the use of the felony conviction to impeach the witness' testimony, despite the fact that the felony conviction might be set aside after successful completion of the rehabilitation program. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

Where, before the defendant testified in his defense, he moved that the court prohibit the prosecution from showing on cross-examination that he had been previously convicted of a felony, the court correctly denied the motion to suppress as it was without discretion to prohibit such evidence. People v. Bueno, 183 Colo. 304, 516 P.2d 434 (1973).

Judge may determine whether questioning is in good faith. Questions posed to a defendant who has taken the stand in his own behalf about prior felonies must be asked by the prosecuting attorney in good faith; and it is within the judge's discretion to determine whether good faith is present. People v. Thompson, 182 Colo. 198, 511 P.2d 909 (1973).

One convicted of a felony is a competent witness in a criminal case as well as in a civil action, whose credibility is a matter for the jury to determine. Trackman v. People, 22 Colo. 83, 43 P. 662 (1896).

Right to testify deemed subject to impeachment. While the possibility of impeachment by prior conviction may present a defendant with a difficult strategic decision on whether to testify, the constitutional right to testify does not include a right to foreclose impeachment by evidence of a prior conviction. People v. Montez, 197 Colo. 126, 589 P.2d 1368 (1979).

A prosecutor may utilize a defendant's prior felony convictions for impeachment purposes if the defendant elects to testify in his own behalf. People v. Griffith, 197 Colo. 544, 595 P.2d 231 (1979).

Ruling on defendant's motion to suppress prior conviction evidence. A timely judicial ruling on a defendant's motion to suppress prior conviction evidence for the purpose of impeachment serves the vital function of providing the defendant with the meaningful opportunity to make the type of informed decision contemplated by the fundamental nature of the right to testify in one's own defense. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

The trial court's refusal to rule on the defendant's motion to prohibit prosecutorial use of defendant's 1976 military conviction until such time as the prosecution actually sought to impeach the defendant constituted an impermissible burden on the defendant's constitutional right to testify in his own defense. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Evidentiary hearing required on admissibility of prior conviction evidence. Trial court must hold evidentiary hearing on defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim regarding prior conviction evidence offered for the purpose of defendant's impeachment. Bales v. People, 713 P.2d 1280 (Colo. 1986).

Weaknesses and misdeeds which may not be used for impeachment purposes. Even though conviction of a felony may be made the subject of cross-examination for impeachment purposes, supposed weaknesses or misdeeds attributed to the witness which fall short of criminal conviction and which attempt to discredit or impeach a witness by impugning the witness' character may not be utilized for this purpose. People v. Roberts, 37 Colo. App. 490, 553 P.2d 93 (1976).

In this state, it is improper to ask questions pertaining to a witness's purported drug addiction merely for purposes of attacking the credibility of the witness. People v. Roberts, 37 Colo. App. 490, 553 P.2d 93 (1976).

It is permissible to prove a former conviction of crime as bearing upon the credibility of a witness, but the showing must be limited to evidence of conviction. Questions as to indictment, arrest, commission of offenses, or immoral acts are not permitted. Dennison v. People, 65 Colo. 15, 174 P. 595 (1918); Tarling v. People, 69 Colo. 477, 194 P. 939 (1921); Hoffman v. People, 72 Colo. 552, 212 P. 848 (1923); Hendricks v. People, 78 Colo. 264, 241 P. 734 (1925).

This section permits the showing of prior felony convictions for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of any witness, including a defendant. People v. Huguley, 39 Colo. App. 481, 568 P.2d 1177 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 195 Colo. 259, 577 P.2d 746 (1978).

Whether the nature of the crime was elicited from defendant or codefendant is immaterial if the fact of the conviction is otherwise admissible. Hampton v. People, 146 Colo. 570, 362 P.2d 864 (1961).

A wide latitude is allowed in the cross-examination of witnesses upon matters which bear upon their credibility. Tarling v. People, 69 Colo. 477, 194 P. 939 (1921); Davis v. People, 77 Colo. 546, 238 P. 25 (1925).

A witness may be asked on cross-examina- tion if he has been convicted of a crime. Dively v. People, 74 Colo. 268, 220 P. 991 (1923).

Scope of questioning as to prior conviction limited. The court has discretion to limit cross-examination as to prior felony convictions to exclude detailed cross-questioning concerning the facts involved in the appellant's prior conviction. People v. Medina, 40 Colo. App. 490, 583 P.2d 293 (1978); People v. Renstrom, 657 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Gallegos, 950 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1997).

Cross-examination held proper. Where the record discloses that the cross-examination was directed at another, permissible purpose, i.e., attempting to prove that the witnesses were under the influence of the narcotic substance at the time of the occurrence as to which they were testifying, or at the time of testifying at trial, matters which might affect the witnesses' ability to perceive, remember, or testify as to a particular event, then the cross-examination was properly related to a material matter, and did not constitute impermissible impeachment of credibility. People v. Roberts, 37 Colo. App. 490, 553 P.2d 93 (1976).

In impeaching a witness, the inquiry ought to be directed to the witness' credibility rather than to his moral character. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

The nature and name of the crime may be brought out. The inquiry is not confined to the mere fact of conviction of some crime, but the nature or name of the particular crime of which the witness was convicted may be brought out. Davis v. People, 77 Colo. 546, 238 P. 25 (1925); Hendricks v. People, 78 Colo. 264, 241 P. 734 (1925); Hampton v. People, 146 Colo. 570, 362 P.2d 864 (1961).

Where the district attorney asked only if defendant had pled guilty to the charge of possession of burglar tools in a prior unrelated case, the inquiry was not beyond the proper scope concerning a prior felony conviction where evidence of the nature of the offense is permissible. People v. Bueno, 183 Colo. 304, 516 P.2d 434 (1973).

This section does not prohibit showing the number and place of convictions. Questions, such as are complained of, have generally been held proper. It was not error to allow them in the instant case. Dively v. People, 74 Colo. 268, 220 P. 991 (1923).

Counsel may offer proof if prior conviction denied. The only way that counsel can establish good faith in asking questions about prior felonies if the defendant denies prior felony convictions is to make an offer of proof to the court. People v. Thompson, 182 Colo. 198, 511 P.2d 909 (1973).

Question as to prior conviction when it is known there was none is reversible error. Asking defendant, who had taken the stand in his own defense, whether he had ever been arrested for a felony when the district attorney knew that there was no prior felony conviction was reversible error. People v. Robles, 183 Colo. 4, 514 P.2d 630 (1973).

The general rule is that evidence of arrests and of pending charges against a witness before conviction is not admissible as bearing upon the witness' credibility for the reason that want of credibility may not logically be inferred from naked accusations of which the law presumes a person innocent until convicted, but the rule was never intended to prohibit testimony tending to show motive, bias, prejudice, or interest of a witness in the outcome of the trial. People v. King, 179 Colo. 94, 498 P.2d 1142 (1972).

A witness in a criminal trial may only be impeached by showing a prior felony conviction, and it is immaterial what the grounds for arrest or the original charges were. People v. Robles, 183 Colo. 4, 514 P.2d 630 (1973).

Absent special circumstances, a defendant may be impeached with felony convictions that occurred after the offense for which he or she is being tried. People v. Bradley, 25 P.3d 1271 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where evidence is offered to show the motive of a paid informant witness and that he is interested in the outcome of the case by reason of pending criminal charges against him, the prosecution of which may or may not be pursued by reason of the testimony he has given on behalf of the people, such evidence is competent and to deny its admissibility would erode defendant's right of confrontation. People v. King, 179 Colo. 94, 498 P.2d 1142 (1972).

Or when he may be testifying in hope of leniency for him. A trial court should allow broad cross-examination of a prosecution witness with respect to the witness' motive for testifying, especially where such witness is charged with or threatened with criminal prosecution for other alleged offenses not connected with the case in which he testifies, and where his testimony against the defendant might be influenced by a promise of, or hope or expectation of, immunity or leniency with respect to the pending charges against him, as a consideration for testifying against the defendant. People v. King, 179 Colo. 94, 498 P.2d 1142 (1972).

When a defendant offers himself as a witness in his own behalf, he is subject to the general rules of examination applicable to other witnesses, including examination as to matters which tend to show him unworthy of belief. Tarling v. People, 69 Colo. 477, 194 P. 939 (1921); Routa v. People, 117 Colo. 564, 192 P.2d 436 (1948); Mitchell v. People, 137 Colo. 5, 320 P.2d 342 (1958); Hampton v. People, 146 Colo. 570, 362 P.2d 864 (1961); Candelaria v. People, 177 Colo. 136, 493 P.2d 355 (1972); People v. Medina, 40 Colo. App. 490, 583 P.2d 293 (1978); People v. Renstrom, 657 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1982).

Evidence of defendant's prior conviction may be considered only regarding his credibility. The defendant voluntarily testified during the trial and his credibility thereupon became an issue in the case. On cross-examination the defendant admitted that he had been convicted of a felony. Such evidence was for the purpose of affecting the credibility of the defendant so limited by the court's instructions to the jury, was clearly within the ambit of this section. Diaz v. People, 161 Colo. 172, 420 P.2d 824 (1966); Taylor v. People, 176 Colo. 71, 490 P.2d 292 (1971).

A defendant who elects to be a witness in his own behalf in a criminal case subjects his credibility to question, like any other witness, and he may therefore be examined on the matter of previous felony convictions. People v. Thompson, 182 Colo. 198, 511 P.2d 909 (1973).

Evidence cannot be used in an attempt to show common scheme. The district attorney in bringing out defendant's prior felony assault conviction in a forgery trial was not attempting to show common scheme, device, or plan, but was doing so in an effort to attack his credibility as a witness in the case, as is permitted by this section. Lacey v. People, 166 Colo. 152, 442 P.2d 402 (1968).

A criminal contempt is such a crime as may be shown on cross-examination under our statute, to impeach the credibility of a defendant who takes the stand in his own behalf. Dockerty v. People, 96 Colo. 338, 44 P. 2d 1013 (1935).

Colorado law determines what is a "felony". The sections now limits evidence of this nature to felony convictions. There is no such thing as a felony in New Jersey; crimes in that state are classified as either misdemeanors, or high misdemeanors. This "labeling" or "classifying" of crimes by New Jersey is not controlling. In interpreting a Colorado statute, reference should be made to § 4 of art. XVIII, Colo. Const., which defines the term "felony". The word "felony" as used in our statute includes any crime in a sister state which carries with it as a possible penalty, incarceration in the state penitentiary. Lacey v. People, 166 Colo. 152, 442 P.2d 402 (1968).

Classification of crimes based on classification at time offense committed. For purposes of the impeachment statute, the classification of a felony hinges on its classification at the time of the commission of the offense. People v. Anders, 38 Colo. App. 185, 559 P.2d 239 (1976).

A subsequent reclassification of defendant's prior offense from a felony to a misdemeanor does not change the fact that the defendant did, at the time, commit a felony. People v. Anders, 38 Colo. App. 185, 559 P.2d 239 (1976).

For waiver of protection of this section when no objection is made to evidence of convictions more than five years prior, see Yarber v. City & County of Denver, 116 Colo. 540, 182 P.2d 897 (1947).

A felony conviction which has been set aside under the Federal Youth Correction Act, 18 USC §§ 5005-5026, is no longer a viable conviction and cannot be used for purposes of impeachment. People v. Jones, 743 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1987).

Conviction arising from same set of facts as civil action may be used for impeachment. Clark v. Buhring, 761 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1988).

The advisement by the trial court of the defendant's right to testify was inadequate when the court failed to inform defendant that the decision to testify was personal to the defendant and failed to advise defendant as to the limited evidentiary use of any admission by the defendant. People v. Chavez, 832 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 853 P.2d 1149 (Colo. 1993).

Applied in Cheney v. Hailey, 686 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1984).

13-90-102. Testimony concerning oral statements made by person incapable of testifying - when allowed. (1) Subject to the law of evidence, in any civil action by or against a person incapable of testifying, each party and person in interest with a party shall be allowed to testify regarding an oral statement made by the person incapable of testifying if:

(a) The statement was made under oath at a time when such person was competent to testify;

(b) The statement is corroborated by material evidence of an independent and trustworthy nature; or

(c) The opposing party introduces evidence of related communications.

(2) Questions of admissibility that arise under this section shall be determined by the court as a matter of law.

(3) For purposes of this section:

(a) "Person incapable of testifying" means any decedent or any person who is otherwise not competent to testify.

(b) "Person in interest with a party" means a person having an interest in the outcome of the civil action or any other interest that makes the person's testimony, standing alone, untrustworthy. "Person in interest with a party" does not include a person whose only interest is an expectation of receiving just compensation for the value of services rendered as a witness.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under prior versions of this section.

Constitutionality. The constitutionality of dead man's statute has been upheld as not violative of constitutionally protected rights to due process, equal protection, and is not a legislative usurpation of judicial function of determining a witness's competency and credibility. Music City, Inc. v. Estate of Duncan, 185 Colo. 245, 523 P.2d 983 (1974).

The dead man's statute involves neither a suspect classification nor an infringement of a fundamental right. Lopata v. Metzel, 641 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1982).

This section is commonly known as the dead man's statute. Estate of Thomas v. Davis, 144 Colo. 358, 356 P.2d 963 (1960); Estate of Freeman v. Young, 172 Colo. 322, 473 P.2d 704 (1970).

It contains several exceptions to § 13-90-101. Palmer v. Hanna, 6 Colo. 55 (1881).

And is a limitation on that section. This section is a limitation on § 13-90-101, which permits, with certain exceptions, all persons who have an interest in the event of an action to be witnesses. Patterson v. Pitoniak, 173 Colo. 454, 480 P.2d 579 (1971); First Nat'l Bank of Colo. Springs v. Morris, 721 P.2d 1192 (Colo. App. 1985).

This section is clear, specific, and incapable of misconstruction. Fetta v. Vandevier, 3 Colo. App. 419, 34 P. 168 (1893); Brantner v. Papish, 109 Colo. 437, 126 P.2d 1032 (1942).

And free from all possible doubt as to its purpose. Its terms are plain, clear, and direct. It evidently means just what it says and says just what it means, and needs no construction. Cree v. Becker, 49 Colo. 268, 112 P. 783 (1910).

Purpose is to protect estates from claims of strangers. The purpose of this section in preventing a party to an action, suit, or proceeding, or person directly interested in the result thereof, from testifying in his own behalf, is to protect the undisputed heirs of an intestate from claims against the estate, or for any part thereof, by persons who do not claim as undisputed heirs or distributees, but as strangers to the estate, or to that part of it, which they claim. Cliff v. Cliff, 23 Colo. App. 183, 128 P. 860 (1912); Nat'l State Bank v. Brayman, 30 Colo. App. 554, 497 P.2d 710 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 180 Colo. 304, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

The policy underlying this section is to guard against perjury by prohibiting living interested witnesses from testifying when the deceased cannot refute the testimony and thus to protect the decedent's estate against unjust claims. DeLeon v. Tompkins, 40 Colo. App. 241, 576 P.2d 563 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 197 Colo. 569, 595 P.2d 242 (1979); Coon v. Berger, 41 Colo. App. 358, 588 P.2d 386 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 133, 606 P.2d 68 (1980); First Nat. Bank of Colo. Springs v. Morris, 721 P.2d 1192 (Colo. App. 1985); In re Estate of Crenshaw, 100 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided prior to 2002 repeal and reenactment).

The purpose of this section is to protect decedents' estates and mental incompetents from false claims as these parties are in need of protection because they are at a disadvantage in a lawsuit due to their inability to answer the allegations of their opponents. Lopata v. Metzel, 641 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1982).

By excluding their testimony when the adverse party is an executor or administrator. The true object and purpose of this section, as ascertained from the language used and from the decision of the courts upon similar statutes, seem to be to absolutely exclude the testimony of a party to an action, when the adverse party is an executor or administrator, except as such party may be made competent to testify by the action of such executor or administrator. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

Purpose of dead man's statute is to attempt to maintain equality between parties at trial through limitations upon admissibility of evidence, thereby promoting justice. Berger v. Coon, 199 Colo. 133, 606 P.2d 68 (1980).

This section's purpose is to promote equal justice between the parties at trial by excluding evidence which might otherwise be relevant, in other words, it is intended to place parties on an equal footing. Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

Case law has held the purpose of the statute to be to protect decedent's estates and mental incompetents from false claims. In re Estate of Hill, 713 P.2d 928 (Colo. App. 1985).

It performs traditional function of guarding against perjury by protecting the mentally incompetent and the estates of decedents from unjust claims. Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

Section cannot apply where proceeding cannot increase or decrease estate size. Where the result of a proceeding can neither increase nor diminish the estate, the dead man's statute cannot be said to apply. Nat'l State Bank v. Brayman, 30 Colo. App. 554, 497 P.2d 710 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 180 Colo. 304, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

Section does apply when a witness stands to share in the estate to the detriment of other heirs. When the purpose of a witness as the purported common law spouse of the decedent is to gain a share of the estate, witness should not be allowed to testify regarding the marriage with decedent, the validity of which would diminish the interest of some heirs. In re Estate of Crenshaw, 100 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided prior to 2002 repeal and reenactment).

Person may not claim section in part and waive in part. He for whose protection the statute was enacted may not juggle with it. He may not claim it in part and waive it in part as suits his convenience. Otherwise this act, passed for the purpose of preventing fraud, might become the instrument of fraud. Hillman v. Bray Lines, 41 Colo. App. 493, 591 P.2d 1332 (1978), aff'd sub nom. Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

Dead man's statute does not preclude a claimant's testimony as to transactions occurring outside the presence of the mental incompetent concerning which the mental incompetent could not testify of her own knowledge had she been competent. In re Estate of Hill, 713 P.2d 928 (Colo. App. 1985).

This section should be liberally construed. The spirit of this section is to exclude the testimony of a party when the opposite party is deceased, and cannot give his testimony upon the matters in controversy, and the statute should receive a liberal construction, and the spirit, rather than the technical letter, should govern in its application. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

In order to place the parties on an equality. The object and spirit of the provision of this section, which excludes a living party from testifying in his own behalf when the adverse party is an executor or administrator, is to place the parties on an equality. This object can be attained by giving to the language used in this section such meaning as will make it harmonize with other statutes and with the usual and well understood practice of courts in the introduction of evidence. Whitsett v. Kershow, 4 Colo. 419 (1878); Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

This section must be judiciously applied. Beneficent as the statutory rule is, which precludes parties and persons interested in an action from testifying therein when the opposite party sues or defends as an administrator, the rule must be judiciously applied, or it may work great wrong and injury. Prewitt v. Lambert, 19 Colo. 7, 34 P. 684 (1893); Brantner v. Papish, 109 Colo. 437, 126 P.2d 1032 (1942).

Section should not be so restricted as to fail in its intention. Although this section may, in some instances, work a hardship and prevent parties from establishing honest defenses, it is a salutary one and necessary for the protection of estates, widows, and minor heirs, who, without some rule of evidence of this kind, would find themselves at the mercy of any unprincipled debtor, and while the rule need not be unnecessarily extended, it should not be so restricted as to fail in its intention. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 363, 36 P. 644 (1894).

This section applies in equity and at law. The statutory prohibition against a party to an action or directly interested therein testifying of his own motion or in his own behalf, when the adverse party sues or defends as the executor or administrator of a deceased person, is the same in equity as at law. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 368, 36 P. 646 (1894).

This section does not properly apply unless it unquestionably appears that the party is suing or defending as executor or administrator. Prewitt v. Lambert, 19 Colo. 7, 34 P. 684 (1893).

Which fact must be established by positive averment and proof. When a person sued individually for the conversion of property undertakes to defend as administrator, he must establish by positive averment and proof his status as administrator and that he is possessed of, or entitled to, such property, and chargeable therewith in such capacity, by some appropriate preliminary trial, before the opposite party, or other interested parties, can properly be excluded as witnesses upon the merits of the case. Prewitt v. Lambert, 19 Colo. 7, 34 P. 684 (1893).

Disqualifying interest determined at time of testimony. The disqualifying interest within the meaning of the dead man's statute is determined as of the time the testimony sought to be excluded is offered. Gaddis v. McDonald, 633 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1981); David v. Powder Mt. Ranch, 656 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982).

Interest must be shown. The interest of a witness must be shown before the bar of the statute may be invoked. David v. Powder Mt. Ranch, 656 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982).

This section does not apply to an executrix defending in her individual right. One who, being sued both in her individual capacity and as executrix, defends solely in her individual right, cannot exclude the testimony of plaintiff under this section. Gabrin v. Brister, 65 Colo. 407, 177 P. 134 (1918); Lamborn v. Kirkpatrick, 97 Colo. 421, 50 P.2d 542 (1935).

This section does not permit an executor to join an uninterested person as a party defendant and thereby deny him the right to testify. Klein v. Munz, 87 Colo. 223, 286 P. 112 (1930).

The combined effect of this and the preceding section is to enlarge common-law competency so as to embrace all persons, except those within this section and as to those to leave competency as at common law. "Competency as witnesses of persons not parties to the record is presumed until the contrary appears, and the onus is upon the objector to show the incompetency." Jones v. Henshall, 3 Colo. App. 448, 34 P. 254 (1893); King Shoe Co. v. Chittenden, 16 Colo. App. 441, 66 P. 173 (1901).

In some cases an administrator is not an adverse party. In a suit to impress a trust upon a decedent's estate as a result of a contract to execute reciprocal wills, the administrator being under no obligation to defend the issues raised is not, under a proper interpretation of this section an adverse party, and is without right to interpose an objection to evidence offered by the plaintiff as a witness in her own behalf. Risbry v. Swan, 124 Colo. 567, 239 P.2d 600 (1951).

State not "adverse party." In a suit in which it is sought to impress a trust upon a decedent's estate, the state of Colorado has presently no enforceable claim against the estate, and strictly construed, may well be said at the present time not to fall even within the classification of "adverse party" since it becomes entitled to no right of enforcement until the court in whose hands the estate is being administered shall enter a proper decree directing the personal representative to pay the money over to the state treasurer pursuant to the escheat statute. Risbry v. Swan, 124 Colo. 567, 239 P.2d 600 (1951).

Objection may be waived. The exception engrafted upon the general competency of all parties, that where one is dead and is represented in the suit, then the living party shall not be permitted to testify, is only a regulation to secure mutuality in the action itself. The admission of such testimony affects no one but the parties, and none but the parties are interested in the exercise of the power given to exclude this testimony. Faden v. Midcap's Estate, 112 Colo. 573, 152 P.2d 682 (1944); Risbry v. Swan, 124 Colo. 567, 239 P.2d 600 (1951).

Even though minors are interested in estate. Representative may waive objection to incompetency although minors may be interested in the estate. Faden v. Midcap's Estate, 112 Colo. 573, 152 P.2d 682 (1944).

Admitting evidence of a conversation with a party since deceased is not reversible error where it did not affect the issue on trial. Tourtelotte v. Brown, 18 Colo. App. 335, 71 P. 638 (1903).

Grand jury testimony was not released merely to circumvent the evidencing problems encountered by operation of the Dead Man's Statute. In re Lynde, 922 F.2d 1448 (10th Cir. 1991).

Applied in In re Estate of Abbott, 39 Colo. App. 536, 571 P.2d 311 (1977); Taylor v. Barnes, 41 Colo. App. 246, 586 P.2d 238 (1978); Tompkins v. DeLeon, 197 Colo. 569, 595 P.2d 242 (1979); Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998); Glover v. Innis, 252 P.3d 1204 (Colo. App. 2011).

II. DISQUALIFIED WITNESSES.

A. Certain Plaintiffs and Defendants.

The competency or incompetency of a plaintiff's proffered testimony in his own behalf is determined by this section. Miller v. Hepner, 136 Colo. 48, 314 P.2d 604 (1957).

The protection of this section extends only to adverse parties within the designated class, and not to their co-parties not within such class. Nesbitt v. Swallow, 63 Colo. 194, 164 P. 1163 (1917); Gabrin v. Brister, 65 Colo. 407, 177 P. 134 (1918); Watson v. Woodley, 71 Colo. 391, 207 P. 335 (1922); Steward v. Burt, 73 Colo. 468, 216 P. 258 (1923); Sauer v. First Nat'l Bank, 75 Colo. 119, 224 P. 227 (1924); Haffner v. Van Blarcom, 84 Colo. 565, 272 P. 621 (1928).

An "adverse party" is any person whose personal or property or other rights may be adversely affected by the operation of the judgment. In re Stepp's Estate, 101 Colo. 506, 75 P.2d 146 (1937).

A party to an action is incompetent to testify of his own motion, or in his own behalf, when the adverse party sues as executor or administrator. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 363, 36 P. 644 (1894); Rogers v. McMillen, 6 Colo. App. 14, 39 P. 891 (1895); Cree v. Becker, 49 Colo. 268, 112 P. 783 (1910).

Or when any person appears and sues or defends as heir. Whitsett v. Kershow, 4 Colo. 419 (1878); Gilham v. French, 6 Colo. 196 (1882); Fetta v. Vandevier, 3 Colo. App. 419, 34 P. 168 (1893); Lancaster v. Coale, 27 Colo. App. 495, 150 P. 821 (1915).

Unless he comes within some of the exceptions expressed in this section. Fetta v. Vandevier, 3 Colo. App. 419, 34 P. 168 (1893); Carpenter v. Ware, 4 Colo. App. 458, 36 P. 298 (1894).

This does not affect the rights of executors to become parties. The fact that, by making the executors of a vendor parties to an action, defendants were rendered incompetent to testify as witnesses in their own behalf, does not affect the right of the executors to become parties. Butler v. Rockwell, 14 Colo. 125, 23 P. 462 (1890).

Witness may be incompetent against executor, but competent against other defendants. In an action where one is defending as an heir or legal representative, a witness who is incompetent against the heir or representative, under the statute, may be competent to testify against other defendants in the action, who are not representatives or heirs. Nesbitt v. Swallow, 63 Colo. 194, 164 P. 1163 (1917); Gabrin v. Brister, 65 Colo. 407, 177 P. 134 (1918); Watson v. Woodley, 71 Colo. 391, 207 P. 335 (1922).

The dead man's statute is not applicable where a party is not suing or defending as an heir. Askins v. Easterling, 141 Colo. 83, 347 P.2d 126 (1959).

Such as a grantor and grantee. The dead man's statute has no application where parties are suing or defending as grantor and grantee and not as heirs. Askins v. Easterling, 141 Colo. 83, 347 P.2d 126 (1959); Linker v. Linker, 28 Colo. App. 136, 470 P.2d 882 (1970).

Or as a corporate stockholder. This section does not apply where the objecting party is suing, not as an heir but as a stockholder in a corporation; and whether she inherited or purchased the stock is unimportant. Allen v. Fleming, 97 Colo. 204, 48 P.2d 810 (1935).

This section is not altered, when a general objection is made before the witness is sworn, whether the testimony elicited was upon the direct or cross-examination. Whitsett v. Kershaw, 4 Colo. 419 (1878).

If a party is incompetent the character of his testimony and the subject matter about which he testifies are totally unimportant. If the evidence which he gives is relevant to any issue made in the case, it is error to permit him to give it at his own instance, and if the objection be properly interposed in apt time, it must be sustained. Jones v. Henshall, 3 Colo. App. 448, 34 P. 254 (1893); Brown v. First Nat'l Bank, 49 Colo. 393, 113 P. 483 (1911).

Examination of one witness who is incompetent under section operates as waiver of incompetency as to other adverse witnesses where the testimony of the adverse witness is offered after the examination of the first witness and relates to matters testified to by the first witness. Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

This section prohibits the surviving party's testifying in a suit by the executor of the deceased party's estate. Oswald v. Dawn, 143 Colo. 487, 354 P.2d 505 (1960).

Also plaintiff in suit for services to a decedent. In an action for the value of care and services rendered a deceased defendant, it is error under this section, to permit a plaintiff to testify in his own behalf over the objection of defendant, defending the action as administratrix. Temple v. Magruder, 36 Colo. 390, 85 P. 832 (1906); Young v. Burke, 139 Colo. 305, 338 P.2d 284 (1959).

And a claimant, as injured passenger in automobile collision, who brought suit against operator of another motor vehicle was precluded by this section from testifying as to anything that occurred prior to date of decedent's death. Gushurst v. Benham, 160 Colo. 428, 417 P.2d 777 (1966); Nat'l State Bank v. Brayman, 30 Colo. App. 554, 497 P.2d 710 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 180 Colo. 304, 505 P.2d 11 (1973).

Also, a plaintiff in a new trial on issue of damages. Where the supreme court had ruled in previous opinion that unless the plaintiff consented to reduction of the award for exemplary damages within 10 days after the issuance of the remittitur, the judgment would be reversed as to issue of damages, and a new trial ordered on that issue alone, and nothing transpired for approximately three and one-half years or until shortly after the defendant's death when the plaintiff applied to set damages issue for trial, under the circumstances the trial court did not err in ruling that the plaintiff was precluded from testifying under the provisions of this section, the "dead man's statute". Bennett v. Kresse, 174 Colo. 200, 483 P.2d 384 (1971).

In addition, no self-serving statement by disqualified claimant is competent evidence. In a proceeding upon the allowance of a claim against the estate of a decedent, a deposition taken by the administrator was introduced and read by claimant. Attached to the deposition as an exhibit was a letter written by the claimant to the deponent after the death of the decedent, in which was set forth in detail the amount and character of the services rendered upon which the claim against the estate was based, and such letter was allowed in evidence over the objection of the administrator. Held, that the claimant being disqualified as a witness under this section no self-serving statement made by him in the form of a letter could be competent evidence. Butler v. Phillips, 38 Colo. 378, 88 P. 480 (1906).

The administratrix of the estate of a deceased person is incompetent to testify, in a hearing to set aside the allowance of a claim against the estate, regarding matters which occurred prior to the death of claimant. Lego v. Olson, 110 Colo. 508, 136 P.2d 277 (1943).

Beneficiaries under a will are incompetent to testify in contested proceedings to have admitted to probate over the objection of heirs of the testator. In re Shapter's Estate, 35 Colo. 578, 85 P. 688 (1906); In re Eder's Estate, 94 Colo. 173, 29 P.2d 631 (1934); In re Livingston's Estate, 102 Colo. 148, 77 P.2d 649 (1938); Cole v. Christopher, 121 Colo. 461, 217 P.2d 620 (1950).

Widow claiming interest in estate is incompetent. In an action by a widow against the administrator of her deceased husband, the plaintiff proposed to testify, of her own motion, that certain property sold in the lifetime of her husband belonged to her; that she consented to the sale, and permitted the husband to take the money, with the understanding that he was to reinvest it in another homestead, which was to belong to her, but which was never done. Under this section such testimony is specifically prohibited. Palmer v. Hanna, 6 Colo. 55 (1881); Carpenter v. Ware, 4 Colo. App. 458, 36 P. 298 (1894); Stratton v. Rice, 66 Colo. 407, 181 P. 529 (1919); Walker v. Walker, 131 Colo. 328, 281 P.2d 1010 (1955).

As is child seeking statutory allowance from father's estate. A minor child, unless within some of the exceptions enumerated in this section is incompetent to testify in proceedings wherein he is seeking a statutory allowance from the estate of his deceased father. Lyons v. Egan, 110 Colo. 227, 132 P.2d 794 (1942).

The executor of a will is a party to a will contest, and, therefore, not a competent witness, under this section. In re Shapter's Estate, 35 Colo. 578, 85 P. 688 (1906).

Plaintiff in action on promissory note is incompetent. In an action against the administrator of an estate on a promissory note of the deceased, the plaintiff cannot testify on his own motion or in his own behalf. Reiter v. Pollard, 75 Colo. 203, 225 P. 222 (1924).

As is surviving partner proving partnership. In an action against two persons alleged to be co-partners for the collection of a claim against the firm, wherein service of summons is made on one only, who answers denying the partnership and his own liability as well, but dies before trial of the issues, and his administratrix is substituted as defendant, the alleged surviving partner is not a competent witness for the plaintiffs under the statute to prove the partnership. No acknowledgment by a surviving partner, made after the death of his co-partner, will revive a debt against the estate of the deceased partner. Cooper v. Wood, 1 Colo. App. 101, 27 P. 884 (1891); Hottel v. Mason, 16 Colo. 43, 26 P. 335 (1891).

A disqualified person is not to be censured for failing to offer to testify. Irvine v. Minshull, 60 Colo. 112, 152 P. 1150 (1915).

B. Interested Parties.

This section has no application to witnesses who have no interest in the result of the litigation. Kitts v. Hill, 89 Colo. 186, 300 P. 610 (1931); Lamborn v. Kirkpatrick, 97 Colo. 421, 50 P.2d 542 (1935); In re Stepp's Estate, 101 Colo. 506, 75 P.2d 146 (1937).

Nor to a witness whose testimony cannot be prejudicial. It is unnecessary to determine whether or not a witness is disqualified by virtue of the provisions of this section where his testimony is of a character that cannot possibly be prejudicial to the interests of the executrix or the estate which she represents. Cone v. Eldridge, 51 Colo. 564, 119 P. 616 (1911).

Such witnesses are competent to testify under the preceding section. Further, being competent under the common law to testify, and common-law competency not being abridged by our statute, his deposition should have been received. The deposition went to material matters. Prejudicial error was committed in its rejection. King Shoe Co. v. Chittenden, 16 Colo. App. 441, 66 P. 173 (1901).

The interest of a defendant or witness must be shown before the bar of the statute may be invoked. Klein v. Munz, 87 Colo. 223, 286 P. 112 (1930).

The test of the interest of a witness is whether he will gain or lose by the direct legal operation of the judgment. Popejoy v. Bahr, 67 Colo. 385, 176 P. 947 (1919); Norris v. Bradshaw, 92 Colo. 34, 18 P.2d 467 (1932); In re Eder's Estate, 94 Colo. 173, 29 P.2d 631 (1934); Denver Nat'l Bank v. McLagan, 133 Colo. 487, 298 P.2d 386 (1956); Sussman v. Barash, 157 Colo. 124, 401 P.2d 608 (1965); David v. Powder Mt. Ranch, 656 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982).

Test of interest is made at time testimony is offered. The decisive test is when, in point of time, the interest is to be determined. The competency of a witness, insofar as his interest is concerned, generally depends on the facts as they exist at the time when his testimony is offered, rather than at the time of the filing of the petition. Miller v. Hepner, 136 Colo. 48, 314 P.2d 604 (1957); Zietz v. Estate of Turner, 168 Colo. 499, 452 P.2d 1 (1969); In re Estate of Granberry, 30 Colo. App. 590, 498 P.2d 960 (1972).

The interest of a witness in the result of litigation is made to appear by a consideration of the rights created or extinguished by its issue. Cordingly v. Kennedy, 239 F. 645 (8th Cir. 1917).

Consent will not remove the disability of interest. The disability, under this peculiar statute, so far as interest is concerned, is not one which is removable by the consent of the party offering it as in the case of interest at the common law. Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 368, 36 P. 646 (1894).

Testimony will not be barred when interest is merely an expectancy. This section does not bar testimony of claimant regarding a conversation that claimant had with deceased to the effect that deceased was holding land in trust for claimant's mother when at the time the action was begun the claimant's mother was living and claimant's interest in the property was only an expectancy. In re Estate of Granberry, 30 Colo. App. 590, 498 P.2d 960 (1972).

Wife of defendant is not directly interested. The fact that a witness is the wife of the defendant would not, of itself, make her directly interested in the event of the suit, within the meaning of the statute, so as to exclude her testimony. Butler v. Phillips, 38 Colo. 378, 88 P. 480 (1906); White v. Christopherson, 46 Colo. 46, 102 P. 747 (1909); Norris v. Bradshaw, 92 Colo. 34, 18 P.2d 467 (1932).

Husband need not have direct interest. Where husband of claimant had no "direct interest" in the outcome of the litigation, his testimony did not offend this section. Gushurst v. Benham, 160 Colo. 428, 417 P.2d 777 (1966).

Mere fact that witness is mother of party does not render her incompetent. There was no testimony to suggest that the mother was directly interested in the outcome of the lawsuit, brought by her son, other than the normal interest a parent has for the welfare of a child. At the time of the trial, she was 70 years of age, and had never received support from the plaintiff, and was competent to testify in support of the agreement benefitting her son. Zietz v. Estate of Turner, 168 Colo. 449, 452 P.2d 1 (1969).

Agent is not necessarily interested. So far as the evidence discloses, deponent had no direct interest in the event of the action. King Shoe Co. v. Chittenden, 16 Colo. App. 441, 66 P. 173 (1901).

Under this section a stockholder in a corporation is not a competent witness to establish a claim of such corporation against a decedent's estate. Brown v. First Nat'l Bank, 49 Colo. 393, 113 P. 483 (1911); Gilmour v. Hawley Merchandise Co., 21 Colo. App. 307, 121 P. 765 (1912).

A stockholder of a claimant corporation is an interested party within the meaning of the dead man's statute, and therefore incompetent to testify. Music City, Inc. v. Estate of Duncan, 185 Colo. 245, 523 P.2d 983 (1974).

The mere fact that witnesses to a will were employees of a corporation in which the testatrix had an interest, and as such employees might be eligible to receive a bonus from the company if and when any such should be paid, did not render them incompetent to testify as to the execution of the will, their interest, if any, being too remote and too indirect to disqualify them. Estate of Ainsworth, 102 Colo. 392, 79 P.2d 1045 (1938).

Attorneys are competent to testify. The statutory provision that no person directly interested in the event of a civil action may testify therein when the adverse party sues or defends as an executor, does not apply to the attorney of a party because of the ordinary and usual fee he would receive for acting as such attorney. Estate of Leibold, 102 Colo. 408, 79 P.2d 1049 (1938).

Decedent's attorney was not incompetent to testify in proceeding to establish lost will because, as attorney for the estate, he had a financial interest in the estate. In re Estate of Enz, 33 Colo. App. 24, 515 P.2d 1133 (1973).

Attorney for proponents of will may testify. An attorney for proponents of a will is not disqualified as a witness to testify in court relative thereto merely because of fees he may be entitled to receive because of his employment as counsel. In re Eder's Estate, 94 Colo. 173, 29 P.2d 631 (1934); Denver Nat'l Bank v. McLagan, 133 Colo. 487, 298 P.2d 386 (1956).

As to father of defendant in ejectment action. Defendant in ejectment claimed under a conveyance from the wife of plaintiff, the validity of which was contested. The father of the defendant claiming other lands, under a different conveyance contested upon the same grounds asserted in the present action, was held competent. Allen v. Shires, 47 Colo. 433, 107 P. 1070 (1910).

And wife of a legatee. The wife of a legatee is a competent attesting witness under this section when examined for and with his consent. White v. Bower, 56 Colo. 575, 136 P. 1053 (1913).

Also, brothers and sisters of a devisee are competent witnesses to sustain a will. Butler v. Phillips, 38 Colo. 378, 88 P. 480 (1906); White v. Christopherson, 46 Colo. 46, 102 P. 747 (1909); In re Hatfield's Will, 21 Colo. App. 443, 122 P. 63 (1912); Burnham v. Grant, 24 Colo. App. 131, 134 P. 254 (1913).

Generally, one entering into a contract for the benefit of a third person may testify as to it in an action by the beneficiary, against the estate of the other party. Sussman v. Barash, 157 Colo. 124, 401 P.2d 608 (1965).

As may a witness concerned in another suit. A witness is not excluded under this section, where he has no interest in the suit in which his testimony is offered, even though he is concerned in a different suit, involving the validity of a contract, upon which depends the suit in which he is offered. Love v. Cotten, 65 Colo. 593, 179 P. 806 (1919).

So may part owner of chattel in replevin proceedings. One not a party to an action of replevin by an administrator is not disqualified, under this section, as a witness for the defendant, by reason of the fact that he is the owner of some of the chattel. Popejoy v. Bahr, 67 Colo. 385, 176 P. 947 (1919).

Interested person incompetent to lay foundation for admission of book accounts. An interested person, within the meaning of this section, is not a competent witness for laying a foundation for admission of book accounts into evidence under § 13-90-103. Music City, Inc. v. Estate of Duncan, 185 Colo. 245, 523 P.2d 983 (1974).

Witness relieved of liability by judgment against executor. One who is not a party to an action against an executor is not disqualified as a witness for the plaintiff by the mere fact the he may be, himself, relieved of liability by a judgment against the executor. He is not "directly interested", within the meaning of the statute. Selkregg v. Thomas, 27 Colo. App. 259, 149 P. 273 (1915).

III. EXCEPTIONS.

A. In General.

Competency attends where voluntary testimony is given without objection. A claimant, if called by the representative of the estate for that purpose, is competent to testify of and concerning his claim, and competency also attends where, proceeding without objection, claimant voluntarily testifies in that behalf. The latter consideration is emphasized when the representative of the estate has conducted an exhaustive cross-examination of claimant on the merits of his claim. Faden v. Midcap's Estate, 112 Colo. 573, 152 P.2d 682 (1944).

The provisions of this section relating to the manner in which incompetency can be removed are not uncertain or ambiguous as to what must be done to render such incompetent witness competent, to the extent therein provided. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

There is no reason for judicial interpretation of the legislative intent. The general assembly having said that the living party may testify, under certain circumstances, when the adverse party is an executor or administrator, it must be held to have expressed its full intention in that regard, and there is no call for a judicial interpretation of the legislative intention when such intention is clearly expressed. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

No judicial exceptions may be created. The circumstance that the action is upon a bond in which one still living but not joined was surety, affords no ground to make an exception to the rule prescribed by this section. Cree v. Becker, 49 Colo. 268, 112 P. 783 (1910).

It is only under one of the exceptions that testimony may be admissible where witness is a party to the action or directly interested. This section prohibits a party to the action, or any person directly interested in the event thereof, from giving testimony of his own motion or in his own behalf, when the adverse party sues or defends as the administrator of a deceased person, unless the testimony is admissible under one of the exceptions enumerated in this section. Brown v. First Nat'l Bank, 49 Colo. 393, 113 P. 483 (1911).

Whether witness is within exceptions should appear before he is admitted to testify. Under this section when a party is offered as a witness, and before he is admitted to testify, it should be made to appear from his status in the case whether he is brought within any of the enumerated exceptions to the disqualifying section of the statute. Whitsett v. Kershow, 4 Colo. 419 (1878).

Proponent of will may testify to contradict testimony of drawing attorney. In a will contest, testimony of the proponent concerning the preparation of the will by an attorney, such testimony being in direct conflict with that of the attorney respecting the circumstances surrounding the drawing and execution of the will, was not barred by the "dead man's" statute. Ofstad v. Sarconi, 131 Colo. 541, 285 P.2d 828 (1955).

Dead man's statute was not a bar to testimony concerning conversations party had with attorney when record clearly indicates conversations occurred outside presence of decedent. Difede v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel., 763 P. 2d 298 (Colo. App. 1988), rev'd on other grounds, 780 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1989).

Use by defendant of deposition statements made by plaintiff regarding conversations she had with decedent constitutes waiver of right to bar testimony regarding same conversations. Crandell v. Resley, 804 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1990).

B. Witnesses Called by Adverse Party.

Disqualified witness called by adverse party is thereby rendered competent for all purposes. When a disqualified witness is called by the adverse party and examined by him as a witness upon certain matters pertinent to some of the issues in the case, such witness is thereby rendered competent for all purposes. Warren v. Adams, 19 Colo. 515, 36 P. 604 (1894); Jerome v. Bohn, 21 Colo. 322, 40 P. 570 (1895); Allen v. Shires, 47 Colo. 433, 107 P. 1070 (1910); Zackheim v. Zackheim, 75 Colo. 161, 225 P. 268 (1924); Stender v. Cunningham, 123 Colo. 5, 225 P.2d 52 (1950); Estate of Thomas v. Davis, 144 Colo. 358, 356 P.2d 963 (1960).

Objection to competency is not waived where witness is not called by adverse party but is cross-examined to show interest. Where a witness was not called by the adverse party under § 13-90-116, but was cross-examined only to such extent as would fully disclose that he was a party directly interested in the result of the controversy, which was made clearly to appear, this does not waive objection to competency. Cordingly v. Kennedy, 239 F. 645 (8th Cir. 1917).

Waiver of defense where incompetent testifies. The examination of one witness who is incompetent under this section operates as a waiver of incompetency as to other adverse witnesses, at least where the testimony of the adverse witness relates to subjects covered by the first witness. Hillman v. Bray Lines, 41 Colo. App. 493, 591 P.2d 1332 (1978), aff'd sub nom., Wise v. Hillman, 625 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1981).

C. Facts Occurring After Death of Decedent.

It is not error to receive testimony of plaintiffs to facts occurring subsequent to the death of the defendants' ancestor. Fillmore v. Wells, 10 Colo. 228, 15 P. 343 (1887).

Or testimony as to facts occurring after death of testator. In a proceeding contesting the admission of a will to probate, witnesses are competent to testify to facts occurring after the death of the testator regardless of their interest in the outcome of the proceeding. In re Eder's Estate, 94 Colo. 173, 29 P.2d 631 (1934).

Such as conversation between witness and administrator. In an action against an administrator, a conversation between the administrator and a party to the suit who has since died, which did not relate to matters transpiring prior to the death of the administrator's decedent, is not prohibited from admission in evidence by this section. Tourtelotte v. Brown, 18 Colo. App. 335, 71 P. 638 (1903).

Heirs cannot testify as to statements of testator made before his decease. Testimony of a daughter and her husband concerning statements of the father made before his decease as to the disposition of his property held, under the disclosed facts, to be inadmissible; further held, that the witnesses were incompetent to testify as to such statements, and the admission of the evidence was reversible error. Norris v. Bradshaw, 92 Colo. 34, 18 P.2d 467 (1932).

D. Conversations or Transactions with Decedent.

The exception as to conversations and transactions with the deceased does not extend to deposit slips, and checks, in the handwriting of the deceased, dated at times when, according to the assertions of the claimant, he was in another state. Stratton v. Rice, 66 Colo. 407, 181 P. 529 (1919).

E. Deposition of Deceased Entered in Evidence.

Use of decedent's prior recorded testimony. Either party may offer decedent's prior recorded testimony into evidence, and thereafter claimant, by virtue of such offer, may become a competent witness on his own behalf. Coon v. Berger, 41 Colo. App. 358, 588 P.2d 386 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 133, 606 P.2d 68 (1980).

Deposition of deceased may be read by either party. When one party sues or defends as an executor or administrator of a deceased person, by excluding the testimony of the adverse party the parties are placed on an equality; but, if the deposition of the deceased party has been taken, "it may be read in any stage of the same action or proceeding by either party and shall then be deemed evidence of the party reading it". Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

If read by the representative of deceased, the living party may testify in his own behalf. If the testimony of a deceased party, given on a former trial, is offered in evidence by the administrator of such deceased party, the reason for the exclusion of the testimony of the living party is taken away; and to place the parties on an equality, as is the intention of the statute, the living party must be allowed to testify in his own behalf as to the matters testified to by the deceased party on the former trial. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

Otherwise he is incompetent to testify. By the plain provisions of this subdivision, appellee could not be made a witness in his own behalf, unless the deposition of the deceased defendant be read in evidence. He was rendered incompetent to testify in the case by the death of the adverse party, and must remain incompetent until his incompetency was removed in the manner provided by the statute. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

If offered by the living party it is regarded as the testimony of his own witness. The testimony of the deceased, given at a former trial, may be offered in evidence by the living party, and then it is to be regarded as the testimony of his own witness, and subject to all the rules applicable to the testimony of any other witness in his behalf; but the introduction of such testimony by the living party will not make such party a competent witness in his own behalf. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

The testimony of the living party is to be in rebuttal of the deposition. The fair implication arising from the restriction of this subdivision is that the testimony of the living party is to be in rebuttal of the deposition of the deceased party; that it is optional with the executor or administrator to introduce the deposition in evidence, or to withhold it from introduction. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

The mere existence of a deposition is not sufficient to entitle living party to testify. To hold that the requirement of this subdivision is complied with by showing the existence of a deposition of a deceased party that can be read in evidence would be judicial legislation. Levy v. Dwight, 12 Colo. 101, 20 P. 12 (1888).

Rebuttable by testimony limited to matters relevant to decedent's statement. In a retrial of a malpractice action against an attorney who has since died, the clients are not prevented from testifying if the decedent's prior court testimony is first admitted into evidence and their testimony is limited to relevant and competent matters encompassed within the decedent's prior testimony. Berger v. Coon, 199 Colo. 133, 606 P.2d 68 (1980).

This provision is limited to depositions of deceased persons and does not expressly include lunatics or distracted persons. Fleming v. Miller, 84 Colo. 27, 267 P. 1064 (1928).

F. Conversations in Presence of Certain People.

Testimony of conversation made in presence of decedent's wife admissible. Under this section, testimony offered by a plaintiff of conversations and agreements with a deceased in the presence of his wife who is a beneficiary of his estate and who is present at the trial is competent and admissible. Miller v. Hepner, 136 Colo. 48, 314 P.2d 604 (1957).

Heirs may testify to deceased's conversations after their sixteenth birthday. Any conversation or admission, or as to all matters and things connected with the subject matter of will contest may be testified to by the heirs of deceased where such conversations or admissions occurred after the heirs became "over the age of sixteen years". Brantner v. Papish, 109 Colo. 437, 126 P.2d 1032 (1942).

Person before whom deceased spoke must be present at the trial. The purpose of the exclusionary provision in the sixth subdivision is to prevent the despoiling of estates by testimony relating to transactions with persons who, by death, have been rendered unable to contradict such testimony. Where, however, an heir of the deceased was present at the transaction and was also present at the trial, it was considered that the heir would have a sufficient interest in preserving the assets of the estate to check any attempt to establish a fictitious claim against the estate or to its assets. Norris v. Bradshaw, 92 Colo. 34, 18 P.2d 467 (1932).

The words "member of the family" of the deceased, in the sense here used, include only such persons living with the deceased, as would inherit from him by the laws of descent. Others, such as heirs, legatees, and devisees, who do not live with deceased so as to constitute members of his family, are specially mentioned in the statute. Fagan v. Troutman, 25 Colo. App. 251, 138 P. 442 (1914).

G. Previous Testimony in Probate Proceedings.

Under paragraph (g), brothers of the testator were held properly admitted to deny statements made by the testator touching alleged troubles and controversies with them, the statements having been made in the presence of the proponent of the will, and the principal beneficiary thereunder. James v. James, 64 Colo. 133, 170 P. 285 (1918).

Under paragraph (g), the testimony of a widow in the county court, when cited and examined under § 15-10-106, was admissible in her behalf. Lane v. Lane, 57 Colo. 419, 140 P. 804 (1914).

Executor may also testify. This subsection is a further exception to the dead man's statute which specifically permits the executor named in a will to testify in a will contest. Estate of Freeman v. Young, 172 Colo. 322, 473 P.2d 704 (1970).

13-90-104. Conversation of deceased partner. In any action, suit, or proceeding by or against any surviving partner or joint contractor, no adverse party or person adversely interested in the event thereof is a competent witness to testify, by virtue of section 13-90-101, to any admission or conversation by any deceased partner or joint contractor, unless one or more of the surviving partners or joint contractors were also present at the time of such admission or conversation.

ANNOTATION

Purpose is to protect surviving copartner. The purpose of this section is wise and wholesome, to the end that a surviving copartner may be protected from injury and wrong, which otherwise might easily be perpetrated. Watkins v. Adams, 53 Colo. 290, 125 P. 122 (1912).

In an action against the survivors of a partnership the plaintiff is not a competent witness to testify to a contract made, or conversation had with the deceased partner, not in the presence of any of the survivors. Watkins v. Adams, 53 Colo. 290, 125 P. 122 (1912).

Unless one of the surviving partners was present. This section clearly indicates, that where the suit is brought against any surviving partner or joint contractor, that the testimony relative to any admission or conversation by the deceased person or joint contractor shall not be admitted unless some one or more of the surviving partners or joint contractors were present at the time of the admission or conversation.

Savard v. Herbert, 1 Colo. App. 445, 29 P. 461 (1892).

13-90-105. Incompetent not restored by release. In any civil action, suit, or proceeding, no person who would, if a party thereto, be incompetent to testify therein under the provisions of section 13-90-102 shall become competent by reason of any assignment or release of his claim made for the purpose of allowing such person to testify.

ANNOTATION

Effect of this section is to bar party in interest from disclaiming interest in the lawsuit in order to establish competency as a witness. In re Estate of Gardner, 31 Colo. App. 361, 505 P.2d 50 (1972).

This heir, despite disclaimer of interest, may not testify as to mental incompetency of deceased. Caveator and heir, who would take if attack on will was successful, could not, in view of dead man's statute objection, testify as to the alleged mental incompetence of testator at time will is executed, notwithstanding caveator's disclaimer of any interest in the estate. In re Estate of Gardner, 31 Colo. App. 361, 505 P.2d 50 (1972).

13-90-106. Who may not testify. (1) The following persons shall not be witnesses:

(a) Persons who are of unsound mind at the time of their production for examination;
 (b) (I) Children under ten years of age who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which they are examined or of relating them truly.

(II) This proscription does not apply to a child under ten years of age, in any civil or criminal proceeding for child abuse, sexual abuse, a sexual offense pursuant to part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., or incest, when the child is able to describe or relate in language appropriate for a child of that age the events or facts respecting which the child is examined.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Mental Incompetency.
- III. Incompetency of a Child.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Applied in People v. Norwood, 37 Colo. App. 157, 547 P.2d 273 (1975); People v. Trujillo, 40 Colo. App. 220, 577 P.2d 297 (1977).

II. MENTAL INCOMPETENCY.

Every person of unsound mind is not incompetent to testify as a witness. Howard v. Hester, 139 Colo. 255, 338 P.2d 106 (1959).

Fact that a child is under care of a psychologist is merely one factor for the court to consider and does not necessarily affect the child's competency to testify. People v. Piro, 671 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1983).

In determining whether a compelling reason exists for a psychological examination of a witness, the trial court must balance the possible emotional trauma and embarrassment to, or intimidation of, the witness against the likelihood of the examination producing relevant, as distinguished from speculative, evidence. People v. Piro, 671 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1983).

Decision to order involuntary psychiatric examination of a witness for purpose of determining competency to testify is within the sound discretion of the trial court and should only be granted where a compelling reason for it exists. Where defendant's only grounds for challenging competence of witness because of mental state pertained to credibility rather than competence, court did not err in denying motion. People v. McGhee, 677 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1983).

An adjudication of insanity only raises a rebuttable presumption of incompetency. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

An adjudication of insanity is sufficient to create a prima facie showing of incompetency, shifting the burden of proof of competency to the proponent of the testimony. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

There need not be a formal adjudication of sanity prior to testifying. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

The mere fact that an individual has been adjudicated as a feeble-minded person does not disqualify him as a witness. Howard v. Hester, 139 Colo. 255, 338 P.2d 106 (1959).

Adjudication of insanity does not conclusively render a witness incompetent. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

The matter of permitting an aged person to testify rests largely in a trial court's discretion, and its determination will not be disturbed in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion. Howard v. Hester, 139 Colo. 255, 338 P.2d 106 (1959); Garrison v. People, 158 Colo. 348, 408 P.2d 60 (1965).

A witness's intoxication, alone, is not sufficient to determine that the witness is incompetent to testify. There is nothing in the record that indicated the witness lacked the capacity to observe, recollect, communicate, and understand the oath to tell the truth. The witness was thoroughly cross-examined by defense counsel and the court informed the jury of the witness's intoxication status. There was no error in allowing the witness's testimony. People v. Alley, 232 P.3d 272 (Colo. App. 2010).

Further, a witness's intoxication, alone, does not require the court to conduct a competency hearing. The court has wide latitude to determine whether to admit an intoxicated witness's testimony, and it is the jury's role to determine the witness's credibility. People v. Alley, 232 P.3d 272 (Colo. App. 2010).

If a witness has the capacity to observe, recollect, and communicate he is competent, and his mental deficiency is considered only insofar as it affects the weight to be given his testimony. Howard v. Hester, 139 Colo. 255, 338 P.2d 106 (1959).

A person adjudged incompetent may testify so long as the trial court determines through appropriate voir dire examination and proper testimony in camera that, regardless of sanity, the witness appreciates and understands the nature and obligation of the oath and is capable of accurate recollection and narration. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

When no question is raised as to competency, weight of testimony is for jury. The plaintiffs did not examine the witness on voir dire, nor did they object to her testimony on the grounds that she was of unsound mind. Testimony that the witness was a retarded individual and frequently told untrue stories was for impeachment purposes. No question was raised as to the admissibility. Under this state of the record the weight of the witness's testimony was for the jury alone. Kirk v. Himes, 170 Colo. 378, 461 P.2d 444 (1969).

Abuse of discretion. Where the court concluded that the witness, who had previously been adjudicated insane, was competent, without making any inquiries of the witness to determine present competency, the ruling constituted an abuse of discretion. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

Sufficiency of verdict and medical report in release hearing. The difference between release and insanity proceedings militates against viewing the jury verdict and medical report in the release hearing as sufficient in themselves to support a finding of competency to testify. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

The court of appeals will not attempt to ascertain from the transcript alone whether the witness was competent at trial. People v. Coca, 39 Colo. App. 264, 564 P.2d 431 (1977).

For determination of "unsound mind" by review of transcripts, see People v. District Court, 647 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1982).

III. INCOMPETENCY OF A CHILD.

Law reviews. For article, "Children as Witnesses: Competency and Rules Favoring Their Testimony", see 12 Colo. Law. 1982 (1983). For article "The Child Witness", see 22 Colo. Law. 1201 (1993). For article, "Children as Witnesses", see 31 Colo. Law. 15 (October 2002).

There is no per se rule against conducting a child competency hearing in front of the jury, but the better practice is to excuse the jury. The defendant was not prejudiced by holding the hearing in front of the jury. People v. Wittrein, 221 P.3d 1076 (Colo. 2009).

The provision of this section does not apply to all children under 10 years of age, but only to those under that age who "appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly". Victor v. Smilanich, 54 Colo. 479, 131 P. 392 (1913).

Child six and one-half years has been permitted to testify. Where it appeared that a boy of six and a half years understood that he was required to tell the truth, and could be punished if he did not, that he had a fair understanding of the obligation of an oath, and of the facts which he detailed, held, that no abuse of discretion was committed in receiving his testimony. Victor v. Smilanich, 54 Colo. 479, 131 P. 392 (1913).

The trial court committed no error in permitting a boy seven and one-half years of age to testify where, after extensive examination, the court determined that the boy was competent and was capable of receiving just impressions of fact and truthfully relating the same. Berger v. People, 122 Colo. 367, 224 P.2d 228 (1950).

Some eight-year-olds may testify. Where the record shows lengthy cross-examinations of the eight-year-old witness, both during the initial voir dire and during her testimony in open court, and her testimony was clear and not obviously coached or rehearsed, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the witness was competent to testify in an indecent liberties action. Jordan v. People, 161 Colo. 54, 419 P.2d 656 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 992, 87 S. Ct. 1308, 18 L. Ed.2d 338 (1967).

If a witness has the ability to observe and relate facts accurately and understand the moral obligation to tell the truth, then he will be held competent to testify regardless of the fact that he may not know or be able to give an adequate technical, legal definition of the term "oath". Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971).

Competency of such children is addressed to court's discretion. This language clearly implies that the competency of a child as a witness under the prescribed age, is a question addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court to determine. Victor v. Smilanich, 54 Colo. 479, 131 P. 392 (1913); Pillod v. People, 119 Colo. 116, 200 P.2d 919 (1948); Wesner v. People, 126 Colo. 400, 250 P.2d 124 (1952); Hood v. People, 130 Colo. 531, 277 P.2d 223 (1954); Harris v. People, 174 Colo. 483, 484 P.2d 1223 (1971); People v. Lancaster, 43 Colo. App. 328, 605 P.2d 67 (1979), aff'd, 200 Colo. 448, 615 P.2d 720 (1980); People v. Hise, 738 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. District Court, 791 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1990); People v. Vialpando, 804 P.2d 219 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Seacrist, 874 P.2d 438 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court's determination will not be disturbed unless abused. When, therefore, the trial court has determined this question, it will not be disturbed on review, unless it appears from the examination of the child on the voir dire, or from his testimony, that the trial court clearly abused its discretion. Victor v. Smilanich, 54 Colo. 479, 131 P. 392 (1913); Holm v. People, 72 Colo. 257, 210 P. 698 (1922); Brasher v. People, 81 Colo. 113, 253 P. 827 (1927); Marn v. People, 175 Colo. 242, 486 P.2d 424 (1971).

Each case turns on its own facts. The competency of a witness in any case turns upon the facts in the particular inquiry. Hood v. People, 130 Colo. 531, 277 P.2d 223 (1954).

An objection to the admission or exclusion of evidence on the ground of the competency of a witness must be made in the trial court. Otherwise, it will not be considered on review. Holm v. People, 72 Colo. 257, 210 P. 698 (1922); Pillod v. People, 119 Colo. 116, 200 P.2d 920 (1948); Harris v. People, 174 Colo. 483, 484 P.2d 1223 (1971).

Limited voir dire examination not prejudicial. If, on a limited examination of a child witness by the court, the child was permitted to testify and its testimony discloses that on the whole she was capable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which she was examined, and that she related them truthfully, and it is further disclosed that she had an idea of the obligation of an oath in connection therewith, then it is at once apparent that the quick judgment of the trial court was correct and no prejudice to the defendant occurred by the brief voir dire examination. Wesner v. People, 126 Colo. 400, 250 P.2d 124 (1952).

Declarant's testimonial incapacity due to age does not vitiate admission of declarant's assertion under the res gestae exception to the hearsay rule. Lancaster v. People, 200 Colo. 448, 615 P.2d 720 (1980).

Statements admitted under excited utterance exception to hearsay rule. Even if a child's age makes him incompetent to testify, this incapacity does not vitiate the admission of his statements under the excited utterance exception to the hearsay rule. People v. Ortega, 672 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1983).

Inconsistencies in testimony go to weight of evidence, not victim's competency to testify. People v. Galloway, 726 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1986).

Child under ten years of age is competent to testify as witness if the child is able to describe or relate in language appropriate for a child that age the events or facts about which the child is being examined. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990); People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996).

Child presumed competent. As with other witnesses, defendant has the burden of establishing that a child witness is incompetent. People v. Gillispie, 767 P.2d 778 (Colo. App. 1988).

Finding that child is incompetent to testify pursuant to this section does not automatically preclude admission of child's hearsay statements if such statements fall within exception to hearsay rule; however such finding is significant where the hearsay exception requires the child to have the ability to understand the purpose of questioning and to relate accurate information. Oldsen v. People, 732 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1986).

Finding child incompetent to testify due to child's reluctance to answer questions in courtroom setting does not automatically impair the guarantees of reliability of child's hearsay statement and render such statement inadmissible. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

A child is not competent to testify in a sexual assault proceeding if he or she is unable to describe or relate in language appropriate for a child of that age the events or facts respecting which the child is examined. People v. District Court, 776 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1989); People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

This section does not require that all of the child's testimony be in language that is appropriate to the child's age. Where most of the child's testimony was in age-appropriate language, the court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the child to testify even though she used the phrase "sex abuser", which was not appropriate to her age. People v. Seacrist, 874 P.2d 438 (Colo. App. 1993).

Purpose of adoption of subsection (1)(b)(II) was to allow juries to assess the weight and credibility of the testimony of victims of child abuse. People v. District Court, 791 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1990).

The lesser standard established in subsection (1)(b)(II) does not apply only to the sexual assault victim, but may be used to allow any child to testify in a sexual assault case if the child's testimony satisfies the statutory requirements. People v. Seacrist, 874 P.2d 438 (Colo. App. 1993).

A child need not be able to understand what it means to take an oath to tell the truth and need not be able to explain what it means to tell the truth in order to be judged competent to testify under subsection (1)(b)(II). People v. District Court, 791 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1990).

Questioning a child-witness about the actual events of the charged offense is not required before a determination of his or her competency can be made. People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996).

The manner and scope of examination at competency hearings should be left to the sound discretion of the trial court. People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in limiting defendant's cross-examination of child-witness at the competency hearing about the alleged acts of sexual assault or in finding her competent to testify at trial where the victim was able to relate the events or facts upon which she was examined. People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996).

13-90-107. Who may not testify without consent. (1) There are particular relations in which it is the policy of the law to encourage confidence and to preserve it inviolate; therefore, a person shall not be examined as a witness in the following cases:

(a) (I) Except as otherwise provided in section 14-13-310 (4), C.R.S., a husband shall not be examined for or against his wife without her consent nor a wife for or against her husband without his consent; nor during the marriage or afterward shall either be examined without the consent of the other as to any communications made by one to the other during the marriage; but this exception does not apply to a civil action or proceeding by one against the other, a criminal action or proceeding for a crime committed by one against the other, or a criminal action or proceeding against one or both spouses when the alleged offense occurred prior to the date of the parties' marriage. However, this exception shall not attach if the otherwise privileged information is communicated after the marriage.

(II) The privilege described in this paragraph (a) does not apply to class 1, 2, or 3 felonies as described in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (IV) and (1) (a) (V), C.R.S. In this instance, during the marriage or afterward, a husband shall not be examined for or against his wife as to any communications intended to be made in confidence and made by one to the other during the marriage without his consent, and a wife shall not be examined for or against her husband as to any communications intended to be made in confidence and made by one to the other without her consent.

(III) Communications between a husband and wife are not privileged pursuant to this paragraph (a) if such communications are made for the purpose of aiding the commission of a future crime or of a present continuing crime.

(IV) The burden of proving the existence of a marriage for the purposes of this paragraph (a) shall be on the party asserting the claim.

(V) Notice of the assertion of the marital privilege shall be given as soon as practicable but not less than ten days prior to assertion at any hearing.

(b) An attorney shall not be examined without the consent of his client as to any communication made by the client to him or his advice given thereon in the course of professional employment; nor shall an attorney's secretary, paralegal, legal assistant, stenographer, or clerk be examined without the consent of his employer concerning any fact, the knowledge of which he has acquired in such capacity.

(c) A clergy member, minister, priest, or rabbi shall not be examined without both his or her consent and also the consent of the person making the confidential communication as to any confidential communication made to him or her in his or her professional capacity in the course of discipline expected by the religious body to which he or she belongs.

(d) A physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse duly authorized to practice his or her profession pursuant to the laws of this state or any other state shall not be examined without the consent of his or her patient as to any information acquired in attending the patient that was necessary to enable him or her to prescribe or act for the patient, but this paragraph (d) shall not apply to:

(I) A physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse who is sued by or on behalf of a patient or by or on behalf of the heirs, executors, or administrators of a patient on any cause of action arising out of or connected with the physician's or nurse's care or treatment of such patient;

(II) A physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse who was in consultation with a physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse being sued as provided in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) on the case out of which said suit arises;

(III) A review of a physician's or registered professional nurse's services by any of the following:

(A) The governing board of a hospital licensed pursuant to part 1 of article 3 of title 25, C.R.S., where said physician or registered professional nurse practices or the medical staff of such hospital if the medical staff operates pursuant to written bylaws approved by the governing board of such hospital;

(B) An organization authorized by federal or state law or contract to review physicians' or registered professional nurses' services or an organization which reviews the cost or quality of physicians' or registered professional nurses' services under a contract with the sponsor of a nongovernment group health care program;

(C) The Colorado medical board, the state board of nursing, or a person or group authorized by such board to make an investigation in its behalf;

(D) A peer review committee of a society or association of physicians or registered professional nurses whose membership includes not less than one-third of the medical doctors or doctors of osteopathy or registered professional nurses licensed to practice in this state and only if the physician or registered professional nurse whose services are the subject of review is a member of such society or association and said physician or registered professional nurse has signed a release authorizing such review;

(E) A committee, board, agency, government official, or court to which appeal may be taken from any of the organizations or groups listed in this subparagraph (III);

(IV) A physician or any health care provider who was in consultation with the physician who may have acquired any information or records relating to the services performed by the physician specified in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (d);

(V) A registered professional nurse who is subject to any claim or the nurse's employer subject to any claim therein based on a nurse's actions, which claims are required to be defended and indemnified by any insurance company or trust obligated by contract;

(VI) A physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse who is being examined as a witness as a result of his consultation for medical care or genetic counseling or screening pursuant to section 13-64-502 in connection with a civil action to which section 13-64-502 applies.

(e) A public officer shall not be examined as to communications made to him in official confidence, when the public interests, in the judgment of the court, would suffer by the disclosure.

(f) (I) A certified public accountant shall not be examined without the consent of his or her client as to any communication made by the client to him or her in person or through the media of books of account and financial records or his or her advice, reports, or working papers given or made thereon in the course of professional employment; nor shall a secretary, stenographer, clerk, or assistant of a certified public accountant be examined without the consent of the client concerned concerning any fact, the knowledge of which he or she has acquired in such capacity.

(II) No certified public accountant in the employ of the state auditor's office shall be examined as to any communication made in the course of professional service to the legislative audit committee either in person or through the media of books of account and financial records or advice, reports, or working papers given or made thereon; nor shall a secretary, clerk, or assistant of a certified public accountant who is in the employ of the state auditor's office be examined concerning any fact, the knowledge of which such secretary, clerk, or assistant acquired in such capacity, unless such information has been made open to public inspection by a majority vote of the members of the legislative audit committee.

(III) (A) Subpoena powers for public entity audit and reviews. Subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f) shall not apply to the Colorado state board of accountancy, nor to a person or group authorized by the board to make an investigation on the board's behalf, concerning an accountant's reports, working papers, or advice to a public entity that relate to audit or review accounting activities of the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm being investigated.

(B) For the purposes of this subparagraph (III), a "public entity" shall include a governmental agency or entity; quasi-governmental entity; nonprofit entity; or public company that is considered an "issuer", as defined in section 2 of the federal "Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002", 15 U.S.C. sec. 7201.

(IV) (A) Subpoena powers for private entity audit and reviews. Subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f) shall not apply to the Colorado state board of accountancy, nor to a person or group authorized by the board to make an investigation on the board's behalf, concerning an accountant's reports or working papers of a private entity that is not publicly traded and relate to audit or review attest activities of the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm being investigated. This subparagraph (IV) shall not be construed to authorize the Colorado state board of accountancy or its agent to subpoena or examine income tax returns.

(B) At the request of either the client of the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm or the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm subject to the subpoena pursuant to this subparagraph (IV), a second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant with no interest in the matter may review the report or working papers for compliance with the provisions of article 2 of title 12, C.R.S. The second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant conducting the review must be approved by the board prior to beginning its review. The approval of the second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant shall be in good faith. The written report issued by a second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant shall be in lieu of a review by the board. Such report shall be limited to matters directly related to the work performed by the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm being investigated and should exclude specific references to client financial information. The party requesting that a second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant review the reports and working papers shall pay any additional expenses related to retaining the second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant by the party who made the request. The written report of the second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant shall be submitted to the board. The board may use the findings of the second certified public accounting firm or certified public accountant as grounds for discipline pursuant to article 2 of title 12, C.R.S.

(V) Disclosure of information under subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f) shall not waive or otherwise limit the confidentiality and privilege of such information nor relieve any certified public accountant, any certified public accounting firm, the Colorado state board of accountancy, or a person or group authorized by such board of the obligation of confidentiality. Disclosure which is not in good faith of such information shall subject the board, a member thereof, or its agent to civil liability pursuant to section 12-2-103 (6), C.R.S.

(VI) Any certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm that receives a subpoena for reports or accountant's working papers related to the audit or review attest activities of the accountant or accounting firm pursuant to subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f) shall notify his or her client of the subpoena within three business days after the date of service of the subpoena.

(VII) Subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f) shall not operate as a waiver, on behalf of any third party or the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm, of due process remedies available under the "State Administrative Procedure Act", article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., the open records laws, article 72 of title 24, C.R.S., or any other provision of law.

(VIII) Prior to the disclosure of information pursuant to subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f), the certified public accountant, certified public accounting firm, or client thereof shall have the opportunity to designate reports or working papers related to the attest function under subpoena as privileged and confidential pursuant to this paragraph (f) or the open records laws, article 72 of title 24, C.R.S., in order to assure that the report or working papers shall not be disseminated or otherwise republished and shall only be reviewed pursuant to limited authority granted to the board under subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f).

(IX) No later than thirty days after the board of accountancy completes the investigation for which records or working papers are subpoenaed pursuant to subparagraph (III) or (IV) of this paragraph (f), the board shall return all original records, working papers, or copies thereof to the certified public accountant or certified public accounting firm.

(X) Nothing in subparagraphs (III) and (IV) of this paragraph (f) shall cause the accountant-client privilege to be waived as to customer financial and account information of depository institutions or to the regulatory examinations and other regulatory information relating to depository institutions.

(XI) For the purposes of subparagraphs (III) to (X) of this paragraph (f), "entity" shall have the same meaning as in section 7-90-102 (20), C.R.S.

(g) A licensed psychologist, professional counselor, marriage and family therapist, social worker, or addiction counselor, a registered psychotherapist, or a certified addiction counselor shall not be examined without the consent of the licensee's, certificate holder's, or registrant's client as to any communication made by the client to the licensee, certificate holder, or registrant or the licensee's, certificate holder's, or registrant's advice given in the course of professional employment; nor shall any secretary, stenographer, or clerk employed by a licensed psychologist, professional counselor, marriage and family therapist, social worker, or addiction counselor, a registered psychotherapist, or a certified addiction counselor be examined without the consent of the employer of the secretary, stenographer, or clerk concerning any fact, the knowledge of which the employee has acquired in such capacity; nor shall any person who has participated in any psychotherapy, conducted under the supervision of a person authorized by law to conduct such therapy, including group therapy sessions, be examined concerning any knowledge gained during the course of such therapy without the consent of the person to whom the testimony sought relates.

(h) A qualified interpreter, pursuant to section 13-90-202, who is called upon to testify concerning the communications he interpreted between a hearing-impaired person and another person, one of whom holds a privilege pursuant to this subsection (1), shall not be examined without the written consent of the person who holds the privilege.

(i) A confidential intermediary, as defined in section 19-1-103 (26), C.R.S., shall not be examined as to communications made to him or her in official confidence when the public interests, in the judgment of the court, would suffer by the disclosure of such communications.

(j) (I) (A) If any person or entity performs a voluntary self-evaluation, the person, any officer or employee of the entity or person involved with the voluntary self-evaluation, if a specific responsibility of such employee was the performance of or participation in the voluntary self-evaluation or the preparation of the environmental audit report, or any consultant who is hired for the purpose of performing the voluntary self-evaluation for the person or entity may not be examined as to the voluntary self-evaluation or environmental audit report without the consent of the person or entity or unless ordered to do so by any court of record, or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., by an administrative law judge. For the purposes of this paragraph (j), "voluntary self-evaluation" and "environmental audit report" have the meanings provided for the terms in section 13-25-126.5 (2).

(B) This paragraph (j) does not apply if the voluntary self-evaluation is subject to an exception allowing admission into evidence or discovery pursuant to the provisions of section 13-25-126.5 (3) or (4).

(II) This paragraph (j) applies to voluntary self-evaluations that are performed on or after June 1, 1994.

(k) (I) A victim's advocate shall not be examined as to any communication made to such victim's advocate by a victim of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S., or a victim of sexual assault, as described in sections 18-3-401 to 18-3-405.5, 18-6-301, and 18-6-302, C.R.S., in person or through the media of written records or reports without the consent of the victim.

(II) For purposes of this paragraph (k), a "victim's advocate" means a person at a battered women's shelter or rape crisis organization or a comparable community-based advocacy program for victims of domestic violence or sexual assault and does not include an advocate employed by any law enforcement agency:

(A) Whose primary function is to render advice, counsel, or assist victims of domestic or family violence or sexual assault; and

(B) Who has undergone not less than fifteen hours of training as a victim's advocate or, with respect to an advocate who assists victims of sexual assault, not less than thirty hours of training as a sexual assault victim's advocate; and

(C) Who supervises employees of the program, administers the program, or works under the direction of a supervisor of the program.

(l) (I) A parent may not be examined as to any communication made in confidence by the parent's minor child to the parent when the minor child and the parent were in the presence of an attorney representing the minor child, or in the presence of a physician who has a confidential relationship with the minor child pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (1), or in the presence of a mental health professional who has a confidential relationship with the minor child pursuant to paragraph (g) of this subsection (1), or in the presence of a clergy member, minister, priest, or rabbi who has a confidential relationship with the minor child pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1). The exception may be waived by express consent to disclosure by the minor child who made the communication or by failure of the minor child to object when the contents of the communication are demanded. This exception does not relieve any physician, mental health professional, or clergy member, minister, priest, or rabbi from any statutory reporting requirements.

(II) This exception does not apply to:

(A) Any civil action or proceeding by one parent against the other or by a parent or minor child against the other;

(B) Any proceeding to commit either the minor child or parent, pursuant to title 27, C.R.S., to whom the communication was made;

(C) Any guardianship or conservatorship action to place the person or property or both under the control of another because of an alleged mental or physical condition of the minor child or the minor child's parent;

(D) Any criminal action or proceeding in which a minor's parent is charged with a crime committed against the communicating minor child, the parent's spouse, or a minor child of either the parent or the parent's spouse;

(E) Any action or proceeding for termination of the parent-child legal relationship;

(F) Any action or proceeding for voluntary relinquishment of the parent-child legal relationship; or

(G) Any action or proceeding on a petition alleging child abuse, dependency or neglect, abandonment, or non-support by a parent.

(III) For purposes of this paragraph (l):

(A) "Minor child" means any person under the age of eighteen years.

(B) "Parent" includes the legal guardian or legal custodian of a minor child as well as adoptive parents.

(m) (I) A law enforcement or firefighter peer support team member shall not be examined without the consent of the person to whom peer support services have been provided as to any communication made by the person to the peer support team member under the circumstances described in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (m); nor shall a recipient of individual peer support services be examined as to any such communication without the recipient's consent.

(II) For purposes of this paragraph (m):

(A) "Communication" means an oral statement, written statement, note, record, report, or document, made during, or arising out of, a meeting with a peer support team member.

(B) "Law enforcement or firefighter peer support team member" means a peace officer, civilian employee, or volunteer member of a law enforcement agency or a regular or volunteer member of a fire department or other person who has been trained in peer support skills and who is officially designated by a police chief, the chief of the Colorado state patrol, a sheriff, or a fire chief as a member of a law enforcement agency's peer support team or a fire department's peer support team.

(III) The provisions of this paragraph (m) shall apply only to communications made during individual interactions conducted by a peer support team member:

(A) Acting in the person's official capacity as a law enforcement or firefighter peer support team member; and

(B) Functioning within the written peer support guidelines that are in effect for the person's respective law enforcement agency or fire department.

(IV) This paragraph (m) shall not apply in cases in which:

(A) A law enforcement or firefighter peer support team member was a witness or a party to an incident which prompted the delivery of peer support services;

(B) Information received by a peer support team member is indicative of actual or suspected child abuse, as described in section 18-6-401, C.R.S., or actual or suspected child neglect, as described in section 19-3-102, C.R.S.;

(C) Due to alcohol or other substance intoxication or abuse, as described in sections 27-81-111 and 27-82-107, C.R.S., the person receiving peer support is a clear and immediate danger to the person's self or others;

(D) There is reasonable cause to believe that the person receiving peer support has a mental illness and, due to the mental illness, is an imminent threat to himself or herself or others or is gravely disabled as defined in section 27-65-102, C.R.S.; or

(E) There is information indicative of any criminal conduct.

(2) The medical records produced for use in the review provided for in subparagraphs (III), (IV), and (V) of paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of this section shall not become public records by virtue of such use. The identity of any patient whose records are so reviewed shall not be disclosed to any person not directly involved in such review process, and procedures shall be adopted by the Colorado medical board or state board of nursing to ensure that the identity of the patient shall be concealed during the review process itself.

(3) The provisions of paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to physicians required to make reports in accordance with section 12-36-135, C.R.S. In addition, the provisions of paragraphs (d) and (g) of subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to physicians or psychologists eligible to testify concerning a criminal defendant's mental condition pursuant to section 16-8-103.6, C.R.S. Physicians and psychologists testifying concerning a criminal defendant's mental condition pursuant to section 16-8-103.6, C.R.S., do not fall under the attorney-client privilege in paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section.

Separate classifications of persons are included under the terms of this section and in each classification it is provided that such persons "shall not be examined" as a witness. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

The privilege is inviolable. The privilege created by this section for the benefit of the persons who may seek their protection, is equally inviolable whether created by statute or constitutional provision. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

Testimonial exclusionary rules and privileges contravene fundamental principle that the public has a right to every man's evidence. Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L.Ed.2d 186 (1980).

Thus, testimonial exclusionary rules must be strictly construed and accepted only to the very limited extent that permitting a refusal to testify or excluding relevant evidence has a public good transcending the normally predominant principle of utilizing all rational means for ascertaining truth. Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L.Ed.2d 186 (1980).

Privileges are strictly construed and the burden of proving that a communication is protected by a privilege is upon the person asserting the privilege. People v. Agado, 964 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applicable in criminal cases. There is nothing in the language of this section which provides or even suggests that the privilege it affords does not apply in criminal cases. People v. Reynolds, 195 Colo. 386, 578 P.2d 647 (1978).

No privilege for financial reports made to department of revenue. There is no testimonial privilege protecting against the disclosure of financial reports made to the department of revenue comparable to the privileges for other certain confidential communications made under this section. Losavio v. Robb, 195 Colo. 533, 579 P.2d 1152 (1978).

No privilege for a statement defendant made to parents following murder. Court declines to adopt parent-child privilege. People v. Agado, 964 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1998).

Pleading held implied waiver of privilege. When the privilege holder pleads a physical or mental condition as the basis of a claim or as an affirmative defense, the only reasonable conclusion is that he thereby impliedly waives any claim of confidentiality respecting that same condition. The privilege holder under these circumstances has utilized his physical or mental condition as the predicate for some form of judicial relief, and his legal position as to that condition is irreconcilable with a claim of confidentiality. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983); Rohda v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 689 F. Supp 1034 (D. Colo. 1988).

Extent of waiver. Although plaintiff had waived the patient-physician privilege in a civil action against the defendant, she was not a party in the criminal action involving said defendant and did not expressly waive her privilege or impliedly waive her privilege by injecting her mental or physical condition into that case. Rohda v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 689 F. Supp. 1034 (D. Colo. 1988).

Choice of law. Where it is asserted that the law of another state should govern a claim of privilege, Restatement (Second) Conflict of Laws § 139(2) provides an appropriate framework for analysis. People v. Thompson, 950 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

No "special" reason exists for applying the law of another state merely because such other state had the most significant relationship with the communication, regardless of the interests of the forum state. People v. Thompson, 950 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

II. SPOUSE.

A. In General.

Section perpetuates the common-law doctrine. Although in federal criminal prosecutions, the witness-spouse alone may invoke the marital privilege, this section perpetuates the common-law doctrine of witness disqualification in the case of non-consensual spousal testimony regardless of its content. People v. Lucero, 707 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 747 P.2d 660 (Colo. 1987).

Spousal privilege is not based on a constitutional right. Therefore, subsection (1)(a)(II), which alters the nature of the privilege in certain cases, is constitutional. People v. Thompson, 950 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

It was not intended to be declaratory of the common law merely. Dill v. People, 19 Colo. 469, 36 P. 229, 41 Am. St. R. 254 (1894); Vasquez v. Esquibel, 141 Colo. 5, 346 P.2d 293 (1959).

In federal prosecutions, witness's spouse alone has privilege to refuse to testify adversely; the witness may be neither compelled to testify nor foreclosed from testifying. Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L.Ed.2d 186 (1980).

The purpose of this provision is primarily the protection of the home. To permit the prohibition to work a gross injustice to an injured wife by allowing its aid to be invoked by an outsider who has intermeddled in family affairs when the husband, as here, does not raise the question, would be to use the statute to defeat the very purpose of its enactment. McAllister v. McAllister, 72 Colo. 28, 209 P. 788 (1922).

And the sanctity and tranquility of the marital relationship. The reason for the rule at common law disqualifying the wife is to protect the sanctity and tranquility of the marital relationship. Archina v. People, 135 Colo. 8, 307 P.2d 1083 (1957); Petro-Lewis Corp. v. District Court, 727 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1986).

Thus, ostensible wives are competent to testify. Archina v. People, 135 Colo. 8, 307 P.2d 1083 (1957).

For living together, whatever their intentions for the future, is not enough; in order to invoke this section, there must be a valid contract of marriage in existence at the time the testimony is offered. Archina v. People, 135 Colo. 8, 307 P.2d 1083 (1957); Lewis v. People, 174 Colo. 334, 483 P.2d 949 (1971).

Where witness' uncontradicted testimony showed witness' and defendant's mutual consent to be married and their open assumption of the marital relationship, such evidence establishes the existence of a common-law marriage. As such, the marital privilege could be asserted and the trial court erred by admitting testimony which should have been excluded on the basis of the defendant's assertion of the privilege. People v. Lucero, 707 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1985).

A decree granting dissolution of a marriage is final when entered and dissolves the marital status of the parties even if the order is not treated as final for the purpose of appellate review. People v. Inman, 950 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1997).

And this section applies only to matters occurring during the time the parties were married. There is no privilege for statements made by an intended spouse before the marriage, nor for statements made by a former spouse after dissolution of the marriage. Therefore, defendant could not object to testimony by his ex-wife concerning his words and deeds before they were married or after the entry of the decree dissolving their marriage, notwithstanding that final orders were not issued immediately. People v. Inman, 950 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section contemplates the existence of a valid marriage. Where both parties to a purported common-law marriage admit prior marriages which to their knowledge remain undissolved, such evidence is competent to support the trial court's finding that no marriage exists for the purpose of invoking the privilege. People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 426, 609 P.2d 1105 (1979).

This section contains the only limitation on the ground of public policy. This section providing that the wife shall not be examined for or against her husband without his consent and vice versa, contains the only limitation on the ground of public policy, and is controlling on the subject, and not the common law. White v. Bower, 56 Colo. 575, 136 P. 1053 (1913).

It prohibits merely the examination of either husband or wife as to any communication made by one to the other during the marriage. To extend this prohibition to the exclusion of communications themselves, is to give it a liberal construction, and thus prevent the ascertainment of the truth as to a material issue in the case. Keeler v. Russum, 68 Colo. 196, 189 P. 255 (1920).

This section should be so construed as to work no injustice, if susceptible of such construction. Keeler v. Russum, 68 Colo. 196, 189 P. 255 (1920).

The marital communications privilege is personal to the spouses and may not be invoked by a third party. W. Fire Truck, Inc. v. Emergency One, Inc., 134 P.3d 570 (Colo. App. 2006).

The authorities are to the effect that this section should be strictly construed, because the tendency of the privilege is to prevent the full disclosure of the truth. Keeler v. Russum, 68 Colo. 196, 189 P. 255 (1920); Petro-Lewis Corp. v. District Court, 727 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1986).

It is error to compel both husband and wife to testify, against their objection, in a cause seeking to impeach a conveyance by one to the other, as fraudulent against creditors. Jasper v. Bicknell, 68 Colo. 308, 191 P. 115 (1920).

Once husband testifies, wife is subject to questioning. In an action against husband and wife for the possession of real estate, the husband by answer, disclaimed any interest in the property. On the trial the court refused plaintiff permission to cross-examine the wife under the statute, without the consent of her husband, because of this section. This was error. Horn v. Hurwitz, 76 Colo. 389, 231 P. 1116 (1925).

Unauthorized disclosure by the husband does not waive the wife's privilege. Objecting to a copy of the letter is not a waiver of the wife's privilege. Dalton v. People, 68 Colo. 44, 189 P. 37 (1920).

Defendant's remarks to wife in courtroom held privileged. A municipal judge had no authority, without the consent of the defendant or his wife, to order him to reveal what he had told her. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Where, although others were in the courtroom, there was no evidence that anyone else overheard the content of the defendant's comment to his wife, absent such evidence, which might have shown waiver of the privilege, the circumstances justified a reasonable expectation of privacy in this husband-wife communication. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Marital privilege extends to in-court testimony, as well as depositions, interrogatories, requests for admissions, and other forms of testimonial discovery. Petro-Lewis Corp. v. District Court, 727 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1986).

Discovery relating to party's liability held not privileged despite consequent unfavorable disclosure of facts relating to spouse's liability. Where discovery requests do not relate solely to a spouse's liability, a party may be compelled to comply with all such proper requests for discovery which pertain to that party's liability, even though some responses may be adverse to the party's spouse. Petro-Lewis Corp. v. District Court, 727 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1986).

Discovery must be determined on an ad hoc basis. Where the marital privilege is in issue, discovery must be determined on an ad hoc basis. Petro-Lewis Corp. v. District Court, 727 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1986).

Marital privilege does not extend to communications made in the presence of a third party. South Carolina Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 698 P.2d 1369 (Colo. App. 1984).

Spousal privilege does not extend to communications made for the purpose of aiding the commission of a future crime or continuing a present continuing crime. Statements made during an ongoing pattern of criminal activity are not subject to spousal privilege. People v. James, 40 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2001).

It seems clear that this section is not applicable to a mental health proceeding, and it cannot be said that the wife was testifying against the husband as prohibited by that section. An action in the county court to inquire into the mental health of a party can best be described as a special statutory proceeding, and is neither a criminal case nor a civil action. Sabon v. People, 142 Colo. 323, 350 P.2d 576 (1960).

A husband may testify without the consent of the wife in a civil action by one against the other. Boyd v. McElroy, 105 Colo. 527, 100 P.2d 624 (1940).

State agent's testimony on interspousal conversation not violative of section. Testimony given by an agent of the state who lawfully monitored a conversation between husband and wife in the visiting room of a jail does not violate this section. People v. Blehm, 44 Colo. App. 472, 623 P.2d 411 (1980).

For history of marital communications privilege and rule of spousal disqualification as a witness, see Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L.Ed.2d 186 (1980).

Mother's invocation of privilege prohibited non-custodial father from calling mother's current spouse as a witness during a custody modification hearing in regard to the mother's care and treatment of her child. In re Bozarth, 779 P.2d 1346 (Colo. 1989).

Permitting commentary on a defendant's invocation of the privilege is no less damaging to the privilege than allowing remarks alluding to an accused's invocation of the fifth amendment. People v. Harris, 729 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 762 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 985, 109 S. Ct. 541, 103 L.Ed.2d 804 (1988).

The marital privilege may be waived by the acts or omissions of trial counsel. By accusing the defendant's wife of the murders in his opening statement, defense counsel invited a response which necessarily could come only from wife. Cummings v. People, 785 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1990).

Scope of privilege is not limited to confidential communications. Cummings v. People, 785 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1990).

Where the witness-spouse has failed to claim a marital privilege and make a timely objection to his or her testimony, the witness-spouse has waived the privilege, and on appeal, the defendant spouse may not successfully contest the issue pursuant to subsection (1)(a)(II). People v. Wickham, 53 P.3d 691 (Colo. App. 2001).

Counsel for the witness-spouse waived the privilege for her by accepting immunity and allowing her to testify where the defendant was charged with a class one felony and only the witness-spouse was entitled to raise the marital privilege. People v. Wickham, 53 P.3d 691 (Colo. App. 2001).

Spousal disqualification and spousal testimonial privileges were waived by a husband in a personal injury action where the husband called the wife as a witness to testify as to the husband's medical condition and the legitimacy and severity of the husband's injuries. As a result, the wife could be cross-examined about the fraudulent nature of the husband's personal injury claim against his employer. Burlington Northern R.R. Co. v. Hood, 802 P.2d 458 (Colo. 1990).

Failure by a husband to assert claim of a spousal testimonial privilege during the deposition of the husband's wife in a personal injury case clearly indicates a waiver of confidentiality and the spouse may be questioned at trial about the fraudulent nature of the husband's personal injury claim. Burlington Northern R.R. Co. v. Hood, 802 P.2d 458 (Colo. 1990).

However, where the crime at issue is a class 3 or more serious felony, under subsection (1)(a)(II) it is the witness-spouse who holds the privilege, not the defendant-spouse. People v. Delgado, 890 P.2d 141 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Thompson, 950 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

Portions of written communications between the defendant and his wife were for the purpose of aiding the crime of witness tampering and were held to be admissible and not confidential. People v. Fox, 862 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1993).

B. Crime by One Spouse Against the Other.

This paragraph does not limit the right of the husband or wife to testify to criminal prosecutions for crimes involving personal violence, either actual or constructive; the language is unqualified that the husband or wife may testify against the other "in a criminal action or proceeding for a crime committed by one against the other". This language is broad enough to include any crime, whether of violence to the person, or other crime committed by the husband or wife directly affecting the other. Dill v. People, 19 Colo. 469, 36 P. 229 (1894).

"Crime" includes private wrong in public crime. The word crime in that clause of this section which permits the husband or wife to testify against the other in a "criminal action or proceeding for a crime committed by one against the other", means the private wrong or injury included in such public crime. The word must have such meaning, or the statute is meaningless. Dill v. People, 19 Colo. 469, 36 P. 229 (1894); Wilkinson v. People, 86 Colo. 406, 282 P. 257 (1929).

Exception applies for crime committed against spouse and companion. Where the defendant is prosecuted for crimes committed in one criminal episode against his wife and a companion, the statutory exception to the spousal exclusionary rule applies, whether the charges are tried separately or in one proceeding. People v. McGregor, 635 P.2d 912 (Colo. App. 1981).

Spouse may testify as to personal injury inflicted by the other spouse. The rule as to privileged communications does not preclude evidence by one spouse as to a personal injury or violence inflicted on him or her by the other, or as to ill-treatment to which he or she was subjected by the other spouse. Sabon v. People, 142 Colo. 323, 350 P.2d 576 (1960).

Perjury in divorce proceeding is a crime against spouse. Where a husband is indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury in making a false affidavit in a suit for divorce against his wife, the wife is a competent witness for the state on the trial of such indictment. Dill v. People, 19 Colo. 469, 36 P. 229 (1894).

As is bigamy. The wife is a competent witness against the husband in a prosecution for bigamy. The offense is a crime against the wife within the meaning of this section. Schell v. People, 65 Colo. 116, 173 P. 1141 (1918).

And rape. The innocent wife is not precluded by this section from testifying against her husband who stands charged with the crime of rape. She is a competent witness with or without his consent, and her evidence is not within the prohibition of the statute. Wilkinson v. People, 86 Colo. 406, 282 P. 257 (1929).

The murder by one spouse of the other's child is a crime committed by one spouse against the other and the reason for the rule and protection of this section is annihilated. O'Loughlin v. People, 90 Colo. 368, 10 P.2d 543 (1932); Archina v. People, 135 Colo. 8, 307 P.2d 1083 (1957); Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965).

As is the rape of a stepchild. The supreme court has held the spouse to be a competent witness in prosecutions for murder of a stepchild, rape of a stepchild. A prosecution for taking indecent liberties is no less a crime against the wife and the wife was a competent witness to testify against her husband. Jordan v. People, 161 Colo. 54, 419 P.2d 656 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 992, 87 S. Ct. 1308, 18 L.Ed.2d 338 (1967).

As is child abuse. The marital privilege cannot be invoked to exclude a spouse's testimony in a case involving child abuse. People v. Corbett, 656 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1983).

Applied in People v. Unrein, 677 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1983).

III. ATTORNEY.

A. In General.

Attorney-client privilege originated in common law, and it is now codified in most jurisdictions. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

The purpose of this paragraph is to protect the client against publicity as to admissions or statements made by him to his attorney while the relation of client and attorney exists between them, and is undoubtedly for the benefit of the client. In re Shapter's Estate, 35 Colo. 578, 85 P. 688 (1906); Sholine v. Harris, 22 Colo. App. 63, 123 P. 330 (1912).

Client protected by not permitting his communications to be disclosed without his consent. The object of this section is to extend to the client the privilege that his communication shall not be disclosed without his consent. Fearnley v. Fearnley, 44 Colo. 417, 98 P. 819 (1908).

This paragraph protects client and not attorney. Paragraph (b) is intended for the benefit of the client, not the attorney. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894); Mauro v. Tracy, 152 Colo. 106, 380 P.2d 570 (1963).

The legislative intent behind paragraph (b) was to protect the client and not the attorney. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L.Ed.2d 167 (1976).

Ensures candid and open attorney-client discussion. The purpose of the attorney-client privilege is to secure the orderly administration of justice by insuring candid and open discussion by the client to the attorney without fear of disclosure. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

The purpose of the privilege is to encourage full and frank communications between attorneys and their clients which promote the administration of justice and preserve the dignity of the individual. People v. Swearingen, 649 P.2d 1102 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney-client privilege is personal with client. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

The attorney-client privilege exists for the personal benefit and protection of the client. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 96 S. Ct. 3187, 50 L.Ed.2d 751 (1977); Lanari v. People, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Hence, the privilege may be waived only by the client. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975); Lanari v. People, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

The attorney-client privilege may be expressly or implicitly waived, but only by the client. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 96 S. Ct. 3187, 50 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1977).

Attorney-client relationship must exist for privilege to apply. Documents made for an insurance company acting as the agent of an attorney are also covered by the privilege, but the attorney-client relationship between the insurance company and its lawyer must exist at the time the documents are created for the privilege to apply. Kay Labs., Inc. v. District Court, 653 P.2d 721 (Colo. 1982).

Privilege is available to corporations. The privilege exists "without regard to the noncorporate or corporate character of the client", and, therefore, the attorney-client privilege is available to corporations. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 96 S. Ct. 3187, 50 L.Ed.2d 751 (1977).

Rule of protection ceases if client testifies as to admissions. When the client sees fit to voluntarily appear in a court of justice and testify under oath as to statements or admissions, there is no longer any reason for the application of the rule, and we believe it is the universal practice, when such a situation exists, to permit the attorney to be examined fully in relation thereto. Sholine v. Harris, 22 Colo. App. 63, 123 P. 330 (1912).

This is because this section gives a personal privilege, and if the client makes the disclosure himself, it ceases to be a secret. The defendant testified to what transpired between her husband, the attorney, and herself. By so doing she made it public, and thereby waived her right to object to the attorney giving his own account of the matter. Fearnley v. Fearnley, 44 Colo. 417, 98 P. 819 (1908); Mauro v. Tracy, 152 Colo. 106, 380 P.2d 570 (1963).

The attorney may thereafter be examined in regard thereto. Fearnley v. Fearnley, 44 Colo. 417, 98 P. 819 (1908).

As defendant put in issue what advice he did or did not receive from counsel, he waived the attorney-client privilege with respect to his discussions with counsel on these topics. People v. Sickich, 935 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1996).

The seal of silence is not removed by breach of professional relations. The general rule undoubtedly is that a breach of professional relations between attorney and client, whatever may be the cause, does not of itself remove the seal of silence from the lips of the attorney in respect to matters received by him in confidence from his client. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894).

The attorney-client privilege and the work-product exemption are distinct but related theories, arising out of similar policy interests. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 96 S. Ct. 3187, 50 L.Ed.2d 751 (1977).

Generally, the attorney-client privilege protects communications between the attorney and the client, and the promotion of such confidences is said to exist for the benefit of the client. On the other hand, the work-product exemption generally applies to "documents and tangible things . . . prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial", and its goal is to ensure the privacy of the attorney from opposing parties and counsel. A v. District Court, 191 Colo. 10, 550 P.2d 315 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1040, 96 S. Ct. 3187, 50 L.Ed.2d 751 (1977); Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney-client privilege not absolute. Neither the attorney-client privilege nor the work-product exemption is absolute. The social policies underlying each doctrine may sometimes conflict with other prevailing public policies and, in such circumstances, the attorney-client privilege and the work-product doctrine must give way. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982); People v. Salazar, 835 P.2d 592 (Colo. App. 1992).

Neither the attorney-client privilege nor the work-product doctrine creates an absolute immunity for statements made to attorneys or to their agents. Kay Labs., Inc. v. District Court, 653 P.2d 721 (Colo. 1982).

There are recognized exceptions to the privilege, and the privilege may be waived in certain circumstances. The exceptions, however, are simply exceptions. To drive the privilege away, there must be something to give color to the charge; there must be prima facie evidence that it has some foundation in fact. The rule is that attorney-client communications are privileged and protected from discovery by opposing parties. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Courts have found implied waiver of the attorney-client privilege when a defendant places the allegedly privileged communication at issue in the litigation, because any other rule would enable the client to use as a sword the protection that is awarded him or her as a shield. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Implied waiver may occur when the defendant raises a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel as to any communications relevant to that claim. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Implied waiver in these circumstances is comparable to a situation where the trial court gives the holder of the privilege a choice: If you want to litigate this claim, then you must waive your privilege to the extent necessary to give your opponent a fair opportunity to defend against it. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

The trial court must enter appropriate orders clearly delineating the contours of the limited waiver before the privilege holder discloses communications that would be privileged attorney-client communications but for the privilege holder's assertion of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

The court must impose a waiver no broader than needed to ensure the fairness of the proceedings before it. Rather than endorsing a blanket waiver, courts have adopted a three-pronged test for implied waiver of the attorney-client privilege that asks whether: (1) Assertion of the privilege was a result of some affirmative act, such as filing suit, by the asserting party; (2) through this affirmative act, the asserting party put the protected information at issue by making it relevant to the case; and (3) application of the privilege would have denied the opposing party access to information vital to his or her defense. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Different types of ineffective assistance of counsel claims would raise very different implied waivers of the attorney-client privilege, and the documents that would be relevant to the claims would be very different as well. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

In camera review is appropriate when a party opposing assertion of the attorney-client privilege makes some showing that an exception to the attorney-client privilege applies or that the privilege has been waived either explicitly or impliedly. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Before engaging in an in camera review of an attorney's file, the judge should require a showing of a factual basis adequate to support a good faith belief by a reasonable person that in camera review of the materials may reveal evidence to establish the claim that the attorney-client privilege does not protect all of the documents in the file. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

A trial court must focus on the facts and circumstances of each case to determine the scope of the implied waiver. Before granting a request for in camera inspection of an attorney's case file, the trial court must determine (1) as precisely as possible, the information sought to be discovered, (2) whether the information is relevant to a matter at issue, (3) whether the information could be obtained by any other means, (4) whether the information is privileged, (5) if it is privileged, whether the privilege has been waived, and (6) if it is privileged, but has been waived, either explicitly or impliedly, the scope of the waiver. By using this analytical framework, a trial court can determine whether the moving party has shown a reasonable good faith belief that in camera inspection will reveal that the documents sought fall within an exception to the attorney-client privilege or that the defendant waived the privilege. People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

By entering a plea agreement, defendant does not waive his or her attorney-client privilege. People v. Trujillo, 144 P.3d 539 (Colo. 2006).

Agreeing to provide truthful testimony does not effect a waiver of attorney-client privilege. People v. Trujillo, 144 P.3d 539 (Colo. 2006).

Informational memo to insurer's general counsel prepared by outside counsel acting as a claims investigator not exempt from discovery under attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. Nat. Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. v. District Court, 718 P.2d 1044 (Colo. 1986).

Where a lawyer is acting in an investigative capacity and not as a legal counselor with reference to whether an insurance claim should be paid, then neither the privilege created in this section nor the work product privilege protects communications from a lawyer to an insurance carrier. Munoz v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 968 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1998).

Client waives privilege when she orders production of letters to attorney. When plaintiff took the witness stand and asked that her letters to her alleged attorney be produced in order that she might refresh her memory from them, she impliedly gave her consent to their introduction and waived the privilege, if any there were. Hill v. Hill, 106 Colo. 492, 107 P.2d 597 (1940).

Trial court properly admitted a letter containing defendant's inculpatory statements. In authorizing his attorney to deliver the letter to the victim's family, the defendant waived attorney-client privilege and the letter was properly admitted as evidence. People v. Medina, 72 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2003).

Disclosing privileged communications to a third party. Statements made to opposing counsel regarding the underlying crime charged should not be construed as a waiver of attorney-client privilege, merely because the subject matter of the statements may also have been discussed in the privileged communications. People v. Trujillo, 144 P.3d 539 (Colo. 2006).

Judge may warn client that his testimony may waive privilege. Where the record reflects that the trial judge granted the defendant an opportunity to consider that his testimony as to his attorney's incompetence would waive the attorney-client privilege, and defendant elected to remain silent after advice of his present lawyer, the trial judge correctly pinpointed the issue without coercing a decision, because had the appellant testified as to the alleged incompetence of his counsel, it would have been proper for his counsel to testify as to his version of the event or transaction that led to that all-too-frequent charge of incompetence. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Determination of whether an alleged inadvertent disclosure is considered a waiver of the privilege, during the course of judicial discovery, relies on several factors: (1) The extent to which reasonable precautions were taken to prevent the disclosure of privileged information; (2) the number of inadvertent disclosures made in relation to the total number of documents produced; (3) the extent to which the disclosure, albeit inadvertent, has, nevertheless, caused such a lack of confidentiality that no meaningful confidentiality can be restored; (4) the extent to which the disclosing party has sought remedial measures in a timely fashion; and (5) considerations of fairness to both parties under the circumstances. Floyd v. Coors Brewing Co., 952 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1997); In re Amich, 192 P.3d 422 (Colo. App. 2007).

Attorney may defend his ethics and conduct. It would be a strange rule which would prevent an attorney whose ethics and professional conduct are questioned from filing an affidavit in which his position in the matter is set forth. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954).

Where both client and law firm are defendants in same action, trial court is within its discretion to protect client's privileged information by bifurcating trial. The trial court, after finding that crime-fraud exception did not apply, may order a bifurcated trial so as not to allow the plaintiff to use privileged information proffered by the law firm in its own defense against the client. Colo. Coffee Bean v. Peaberry Coffee, 251 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2010).

By testifying to alleged incompetence of his trial counsel, defendant waives attorney-client privilege. Further, if the defendant testifies as to the incompetence of his trial counsel, it would be proper for the trial counsel to testify as to his version of the events and transactions which led to the charge of incompetence. People v. Mullins, 188 Colo. 29, 532 P.2d 736 (1975).

This paragraph should be fairly construed and applied. When a party invokes the protection of paragraph (b), it should not be unduly extended or restricted, but should be fairly construed and applied according to the plain import of its terms so as to effectuate its intent and purpose. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894).

Privileged communications made between defendant and his attorneys remain privileged after defendant's death. Knowing that communications will remain confidential even after death encourages the client to communicate fully and frankly with counsel. Clients may be concerned about reputation, civil liability, or possible harm to friends or family. Posthumous disclosure of such communications may be as feared as disclosure during the client's lifetime. Wesp v. Everson, 33 P.3d 191 (Colo. 2001).

It does not apply after client's death. While a client is living an attorney could not testify as to privileged communication without his consent, the rule is otherwise after his death in regard to matters in dispute arising in probate between devisees and heirs. In re Shapter's Estate, 35 Colo. 578, 85 P. 688 (1906).

Testamentary exception allowing attorney who drafted the will of a deceased client to disclose attorney-client communications concerning the will and transactions leading to its execution in a suit between the testator's heirs, devisees, or other parties who claim by succession from the testator does not apply in tort case brought against testator by his heir. Wesp v. Everson, 33 P.3d 191 (Colo. 2001).

Communications made to an attorney for the purpose of being conveyed by him to others are stripped of the idea of a confidential disclosure, and, therefore, are not privileged. Hill v. Hill, 106 Colo. 492, 107 P.2d 597 (1940); South Carolina Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 698 P.2d 1369 (Colo. App. 1984).

An attorney is a competent witness in behalf of his client in the very cause which he prosecutes or defends. Sholine v. Harris, 22 Colo. App. 63, 123 P. 330 (1912).

In a lunacy inquisition an attorney who has had charge of defendant's legal business may testify as to his inability to properly manage his affairs. Such testimony does not violate this section. Hawkyard v. People, 115 Colo. 35, 169 P.2d 178 (1946).

Client's perjury not grounds for attorney's breach of confidences. An attorney may not breach his duty of maintaining his client's confidences even when he knows his client has previously perjured himself. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Court may not compel attorney's disclosure. The trial court may explore the adequacy of trial counsel's representations regarding his grounds for withdrawal, but in the course of this inquiry, the court may not compel the attorney to disclose any confidential communications. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

In determining whether or not an attorney should be required or permitted to testify to a conversation between himself and another person without the consent of the latter, the test is: Had such person at the time of the conversation employed the attorney in his professional capacity in respect to the subject matter of the conversation? If yes, the testimony would not be admissible; otherwise, it would be. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894).

Privilege is established by client seeking professional advice from lawyer. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

Employment is established if consultation is had by person seeking professional advice. If a person, in respect to his business affairs or troubles of any kind, consults with an attorney in his professional capacity with the view to obtaining professional advice or assistance, and the attorney voluntarily permits or acquiesces in such consultation, then the professional employment must be regarded as established; and the communication made by the client or advice given by the attorney under such circumstances is privileged. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894).

Even if it is the person's preliminary statement of his case. An attorney is employed — that is, he is engaged in his professional capacity as a lawyer or counselor — when he is listening to his client's preliminary statement of his case, or when he is giving advice thereon, just as truly as when he is drawing his client's pleadings, or advocating his client's cause in open court. It is the consultation between attorney and client which is privileged, and which must ever remain so, even though the attorney, after hearing the preliminary statement, should decline to be retained further in the cause, or the client, after hearing the attorney's advice, should decline to further employ him. Denver Tramway Co. v. Owens, 20 Colo. 107, 36 P. 848 (1894).

A communication said to be within the privilege must relate to subject matter of the employment. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

Communications which pertain only to attorney's employment probably would not be privileged. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

Privilege extends only to confidential matters communicated by or to client in the course of gaining counsel, advice, or direction with respect to the client's rights or obligations. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533

P.2d 32 (1975); People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

Where attorney testified as to existence of a written stipulation the contents of which were known by third parties, the attorney did not testify as to confidential communications. People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

The privilege applies only to statements made in circumstances giving rise to a reasonable expectation that the statements will be treated as confidential. Lanari v. People, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992); People in Interest of E.H., 837 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where the evidence to be obtained from prior counsel was not of a confidential nature, the attorney-client privilege did not protect its disclosure. People v. Williamson, 839 P.2d 519 (Colo. App. 1992).

Just because report is made upon advice of counsel does not make it privileged. The practice of making a hospital incident report may have resulted from the advice of counsel, but it is plain that these incident reports were not prepared for the attorney. They were prepared for certain administrative officials of the hospital and they were available to the hospital's attorney. To entitle the party to the protection accorded to privileged communications, the communications must have been made to the attorney acting in the character of legal advisor, and made by the client for the purpose of professional advice or aid upon the subject of his rights and liabilities. Bernardi v. Cmty. Hosp. Ass'n, 166 Colo. 280, 443 P.2d 708 (1968).

Applicability of privilege to physical evidence. Protection for confidential communications does not apply to physical evidence unless the evidence is created in the course of the lawyer-client consultation. People v. Swearingen, 649 P.2d 1102 (Colo. 1982).

Privilege before grand jury decided by trial court. An attorney-witness must, except in the most exceptional of circumstances, honor a properly issued subpoena by appearing before the grand jury. It is then for the trial court to determine whether a specific interrogatory posed by the grand jury or the district attorney calls for an answer which falls within or without the privilege; or, whether the information sought to be elicited is so inextricably intertwined with confidential communications that, if untangled, that which is not within the privilege would be meaningless without that which is privileged. In the latter event the privilege should also be respected. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

Sunshine act impact. The sunshine act cannot and does not repeal by implication the statute concerning the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. Thus the provision concerning executive sessions involving "attorney-client communications" in the laws of the regents is upheld. Associated Students of Univ. of Colo. v. Regents of Univ. of Colo., 189 Colo. 482, 543 P.2d 59 (1975).

Applicability to attorney's employees. Paragraph (b) can only be reasonably interpreted as extending privilege to an attorney's employees if the attorney is also so privileged. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L.Ed.2d 167 (1976); Sequa v. Lititech, Inc., 807 F. Supp. 653 (D. Colo. 1992).

The last clause in paragraph (b) concerning employees refers to cases where the lawyer himself is unable to testify because of the attorney-client privilege. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L.Ed.2d 167 (1976).

Once an attorney can no longer claim privilege, he likewise can no longer prevent his employees from testifying. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L.Ed.2d 167 (1976).

Determination of whether an attorney-client privilege exists between a governmental entity's legal counsel and the governmental entity's independent contractor is based on a four-part test. (1) The information-giver must be an employee, agent, or independent contractor with a significant relationship not only to the governmental entity but also to the transaction that is the subject of the governmental entity's need for legal services. If the first requirement is satisfied, the party seeking to exercise the privilege must also show: (2) The communication was made for the purpose of seeking or providing legal assistance; (3) the subject matter of the communication was within the scope of the duties provided to the entity by its employee, agent, or independent contractor; and, (4) the communication was treated as confidential and disseminated only to those persons with a specific need to know its contents. Alliance Constr. Solutions, Inc. v. Dept. of Corr., 54 P.3d 861 (Colo. 2002).

Privilege does not encompass handwriting expert's testimony since it was based on his observations derived from sources other than the client's confidential communications. People v. Perez, 701 P.2d 104 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 745 P.2d 650 (Colo. 1987).

Attorney-client privilege relates to communications made by insured to his insurance company where the insurance company is bound by the terms of the insurance contract to represent him. Bellmann v. District Court, 187 Colo. 350, 531 P.2d 632 (1975).

Colorado recognizes the "co-defendant" or "joint clients" application of the attorney-client privilege. Matters learned of during a meeting with a co-defendant and a joint attorney concerning an issue of common interest or joint defense are subject to the attorney-client privilege. Gordon v. Boyles, 9 P.3d 1106 (Colo. 2000).

Burden of establishing a waiver of the attorney-client privilege is on the party seeking to overcome the privilege. Miller v. District Court, 737 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1987); Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. DiFede, 780 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1989); People v. Sickich, 935 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Madera, 112 P.3d 688 (Colo. 2005).

Evaluation of mother's relationship with her children not privileged under attorney-client privilege since mother requested court to appoint the psychologist and since the psychologist was appointed and hired under circumstances which prevented the creation of any attorney-client privilege. People in Interest of O.J.S., 844 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1992).

Burden of proving that a communication is protected by the attorney-client privilege is upon the person asserting the privilege. People v. Salazar, 835 P.2d 592 (Colo. App. 1992).

By placing in issue a confidential communication going directly to the claim or defense, a party impliedly waives the attorney-client privilege with respect to that communication. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. DiFede, 780 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1989).

The defendant impliedly waived the attorney-client privilege with respect to information obtained by the prosecution during an interview with a psychiatrist because defendant listed the psychiatrist as a potential witness. Lanari v. People, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Defendant's assertion of a mental status defense does not indicate an implied waiver of the attorney-client privilege. Miller v. District Court, 737 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1987).

Statements made initially in confidence to an attorney lose the shield of the attorney-client privilege if the statements are subsequently disclosed to third parties. Lanari v. People, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Communications made at joint meetings with defendant, his wife, and counsel, were not privileged, however, suicide letters which disclose communications made at joint meetings do not waive all other communications which would have been privileged absent the suicide letters and the statements made therein; absent proof of another basis to pierce the protection of the attorney-client privilege, all other communications between defendant and his counsel remain privileged. Wesp v. Everson, 33 P.3d 191 (Colo. 2001).

Testimony by attorney concerning amounts received from client is not within privilege where the nature of the representation is known to all parties and payment of fees does not necessarily reflect the subject matter of a previously undisclosed, protected communication. In re Schneider, 831 P.2d 919 (Colo. App. 1992).

Once the privilege has been waived in one proceeding, it cannot be reasserted with respect to the same communications in a different proceeding. People in Interest of E.H., 837 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1992).

An attorney's consent to the interview of his former legal secretary is required only when privileged information is sought. Sequa v. Lititech, Inc., 807 F. Supp. 653 (D. Colo. 1992).

A plain reading of this section and § 16-8-103.6 is that the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges do not apply to communications made to physicians or psychologists who are eligible to testify concerning a defendant's mental condition once the defendant enters a mental condition plea or defense. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

A defendant who places his or her mental condition at issue waives the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges. The prosecution may use the testimony of a physician retained by the defense even though the defense does not intend to use the physician at trial. In addition, the prosecution may use pre-offense or post-offense information concerning the defendant's mental condition. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

There is no piercing of attorney-client privilege when the application of the privilege results in manifest injustice. Wesp v. Everson, 33 P.3d 191 (Colo. 2001).

Guardian ad litem (GAL) may testify without the consent of the child regarding the child's communications to the GAL. The GAL does not have an attorney-client relationship with a child who is the subject of a dependency and neglect proceeding, and the evidentiary privilege in subsection (1)(b) does not preclude the GAL's testimony in a criminal action against stepfather. The GAL is statutorily tasked with assessing and making recommendations to the court concerning the best interests of the child, and neither the statutes requiring the appointment of a GAL nor chief justice directive 04-06 creates an attorney-client relationship. People v. Gabriesheski, 262 P.3d 653 (Colo. 2011).

B. "Crime-Fraud" Exception.

"Crime-fraud" exception to privilege. The "crime-fraud" or "criminal purposes" exception has developed as a limitation on the applicability of the attorney-client privilege and the work-product exemption. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

The crime-fraud exception provides that communications between a client and his attorney are not privileged if they are made for the purpose of aiding the commission of a future crime or of a present continuing crime. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

"Future crimes" exception to the attorney-client privilege extends to communications between attorney and client for the purpose of aiding and continuing or future civil wrong. Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

This exception is also applicable to advice or aid secured in the perpetration of a fraud. Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

Client must know of unlawfulness of conduct. In order for the crime or fraud exception to the attorney-client privilege to apply, the client must know or reasonably should know of the unlawfulness of his conduct. Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

Prima facie showing required to invoke exception. A prima facie showing — one which gives a foundation in fact for the assertion of ongoing or future criminal conduct — is sufficient to invoke the applicability of the crime-fraud exception. Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982).

There must be a prima facie showing that the "crime-fraud" exception applies before the communication is stripped of its privilege. People v. Board, 656 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1982).

Applicability of exception is within trial court's discretion. Whether the prosecution has established a proper foundation in fact for the application of the crime-fraud exception is best left for determination by the trial court, whose exercise of discretion will not be overturned unless the record shows an abuse of that discretion. People v. Board, 656 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1982).

For procedure for determining whether civil fraud exception is applicable, see Caldwell v. District Court, 644 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1982).

Client's communication to attorney of proposed infraction of law does not come within privilege. Losavio v. District Court, 188 Colo. 127, 533 P.2d 32 (1975).

IV. CLERGY.

The purpose of subsection (1)(c) is to protect an accused from the indirect violation of his state constitutional right against self-incrimination. Ferrell v. Vogt, 161 Colo. 549, 423 P.2d 844 (1967).

Statements made to clergyman merely as a gentleman are not privileged. Statements made to a clergyman, not in his professional character, nor in the course of any clerical discipline enjoined by the church, but voluntarily, as if made to any other gentleman, are not privileged under this section. Milburn v. Haworth, 47 Colo. 593, 108 P. 155 (1910); People v. Police, 651 P.2d 430 (Colo. App. 1982).

V. PHYSICIAN.

This section is in derogation of the common law and was adopted to achieve the purpose of placing a patient in a position in which he or she would be more inclined to make a full disclosure to the doctor and to prevent the patient from being humiliated and embarrassed by disclosure of information about the patient by his or her doctor. Cnty. Hosp. Ass'n v. District Court, 194 Colo. 98, 570 P.2d 243 (1977).

Policy of the law is to preserve information procured from a patient by a physician for the purpose of treating him as a secret between them and inviolate except with the consent of the patient. Riss & Co. v. Galloway, 108 Colo. 93, 114 P.2d 550 (1941).

This relationship involves private matters. The relationship between a physician and his patient and any information acquired from that relationship are extremely private matters warranting a high degree of protection. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

The provisions of this paragraph are clear, intelligible and easily understood, cannot be said to be in any sense unreasonable or absurd, are subversive of no legal private rights, and are not inconsistent with themselves or with any other law. Under such circumstances, however fully we might agree with counsel that they should be extended and broadened, the courts are without power in that regard. The remedy is with the general assembly alone. Head Camp, Pac. Jurisdiction, Woodmen of the World v. Loeher, 17 Colo. App. 247, 68 P. 136 (1902).

The privilege is personal to the patient. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Or to his estate. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

It does not matter how the information may be acquired. Whether it comes to the surgeon in the shape of oral statements, or by reason of his examination, he cannot be interrogated respecting it. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Cummings, 8 Colo. App. 541, 46 P. 875 (1896).

The information must be necessary for physician to act for patient. Where the accused refused to permit the physician who attended him for the wound in question to remove the bullet, and refused to tell him how he received the wound, allowing the testimony of the physician as to this matter was no violation of this section. Cook v. People, 60 Colo. 263, 153 P. 214 (1915); Cont'l Inv. Co. v. Garcher, 83 Colo. 239, 264 P. 723 (1928).

Statutory privilege did not apply to statements that were not necessary to enable nurse to prescribe or act for defendant. People v. Garrison, 109 P.3d 1009 (Colo. App. 2004).

Observations that a physician assistant was required to make in order to prescribe or act for the patient would have been privileged, however, § 12-36-135, which requires physicians to report and testify in episodes of domestic violence or gunshot wounds, abrogated the privilege. Physician assistant could testify over the objection of the patient about photographs of the patient's wounds taken by physician assistant for an investigating officer at the time of the patient's initial treatment in emergency room. People v. Covington, 19 P.3d 15 (Colo. 2001).

Statements made by one to a doctor are not ipso facto privileged, but are privileged only if they meet all of the several requirements contained in this section. Nelson v. Grissom, 152 Colo. 502, 382 P.2d 991 (1963).

Information given in connection with application for admission to hospital. Any information given by a party to a doctor who attended him as his physician and gave him treatment, in connection with his application for admission to a hospital for a nervous disorder, was a privileged communication. Gerick v. Brock, 120 Colo. 394, 210 P.2d 214 (1949).

Privilege exists even if doctor is employed by patient's employer. Defendant and another company, employing many workmen, established a hospital for the use of both in the care and treatment of their employees. It was supported, in whole or in part, by deductions from the monthly wages of the employees of both companies for a "hospital fund", which was devoted to the maintenance of the building, hire of physicians, etc. The plaintiff was an employee of the defendant, and, after sustaining an injury, put himself under the charge of the doctor employed by the company. The relation of physician and patient existed between them, and the physician could not, without the plaintiff's consent, be examined concerning the nature and character of the injuries, the knowledge of which he acquired while the plaintiff was under his treatment. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Cummings, 8 Colo. App. 541, 46 P. 875 (1896).

Results of alcohol blood test are not privileged. In an action for damages for personal injuries, the testimony of a physician at the hospital where defendant was taken in an unconscious condition, to the effect that a blood sample taken from one of the veins in defendant's arm at the request of a public officer showed sufficient blood alcohol to cause a state of drunkenness in the average person, was properly admitted, it appearing that the physician was not acting for defendant personally, or that the information obtained was necessary to enable him to prescribe or act for the patient. Hanlon v. Woodhouse, 113 Colo. 504, 160 P.2d 998 (1945).

Even when patient lacks ability to consent. Where the defendant was charged with causing injury while driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, the trial court denied the motion to suppress the blood sample where the defendant was in a semiconscious condition and was unable to consent or to refuse to give his consent. People v. Fidler, 175 Colo. 90, 485 P.2d 725 (1971).

For admissibility of urine sample, see People v. Kokesh, 175 Colo. 206, 486 P.2d 429 (1971).

This paragraph (V) does not extend to names, addresses, and telephone numbers. Wolf v. People, 117 Colo. 279, 187 P.2d 926 (1947); People v. Perez, 129 P.3d 1090 (Colo. App. 2005).

If the disclosure reveals the ailments but not the patient's identity, then such disclosure would appear not to violate the privilege. Cnty. Hosp. Ass'n v. District Court, 194 Colo. 98, 570 P.2d 243 (1977).

Neither is the privilege violated when the disclosure reveals the patient's identity but not the ailment. In re Search Warrant for 2045 Franklin, Denver, 709 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1985).

Communications made to physician pursuant to § 14-10-127 not privileged. Since the information was necessary to make an evaluation concerning custody and not for treatment, the physician-patient privilege is inapplicable. Anderson v. Glismann, 577 F. Supp. 1506 (D. Colo. 1984).

Communication made to physician to procure controlled substance for illegitimate purpose is not privileged under § 18-18-415 (1)(b); thus, no waiver is required to introduce the communication at trial. People v. Harte, 131 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2005).

The Colorado medicaid fraud control unit is an "organization authorized by federal or state law or contract to review physicians' ... services" as contemplated by subsection (1)(d)(III)(B) and therefore the privilege does not apply. In re Search Warrant for 2045 Franklin, Denver, 709 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1985).

The public policy of maintaining and ensuring an efficiently operating medicaid program outweighs the privacy interests inherent in the physician-patient relationship insofar as utilization of the medicaid program is concerned. In re Search Warrant for 2045 Franklin, Denver, 709 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1985).

A recipient of medical services who has chosen to participate in the medicaid program waives the privilege to the extent necessary for the state to verify the services billed by the provider. In re Search Warrant for 2045 Franklin, Denver, 709 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1985).

Disclosure by a physician should be prevented unless waived. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Trial court to determine whether exception applies. Even if the physician-patient privilege is applicable, the trial court should determine whether one of the prescribed statutory exceptions applies. Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

In camera hearing as to nature of information sought from physician. Before ruling on a claim of physician-patient privilege, the trial court should determine whether the particular information sought from the doctor was in fact necessary for treatment of the patient, and an in camera hearing is normally appropriate to allow consideration of this preliminary fact question outside the presence of the jury. People v. Reynolds, 195 Colo. 386, 578 P.2d 647 (1978).

Improper admission is reversible error. Where there is improper testimony precluded by this statute which could have influenced the verdict in an action, the admission of such evidence is reversible error. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971); People v. Covington, 988 P.2d 657 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 15 (Colo. 2001).

The law will provide protection at the time disclosure is attempted, rather than merely providing a remedy after violation. Stauffer v. Karabin, 30 Colo. App. 357, 492 P.2d 862 (1971).

Patient may expressly or impliedly waive privilege. In order to protect the confidential relationship existing between physician and patient, and to encourage full disclosure between the two, our statute provides that a patient may invoke a claim of privilege and prohibit a physician from testifying. Such a rule is not an absolute one. In certain instances a patient may expressly or impliedly waive such a claim of privilege. Kelley v. Holmes, 28 Colo. App. 79, 470 P.2d 590 (1970).

Where defendant's abusive language, loud demeanor and offensive behavior could be readily observed and heard by anyone present in the emergency room, such conduct constitutes an implied waiver of any physician-patient privilege with respect to the doctor's observation of the defendant's behavior. People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984).

A defendant waives the physician-patient privilege with regard to a particular subject matter when his own testimony directly raises that factual issue. People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984).

Physician-patient privilege is not implicitly waived when medical records, statutorily required to be supplied, are filed with an insurance company. Devenyns v. Hartig, 983 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1998).

This paragraph does not apply when patient fails to object to disclosure. This paragraph does not apply when patient is before the court, is cognizant of the proceeding, and makes no objection to the disclosure. Wolf v. People, 117 Colo. 279, 187 P.2d 926 (1947).

Patient held not to have waived privilege by mere failure to ask whether all aspects of her examination were in furtherance of med- ical treatment, including photographs taken by a physician's assistant on behalf of an investigating officer. It is the burden of the party seeking to overcome the privilege to establish a valid waiver of the privilege, and because the record was not clear that the patient understood why pictures were being taken of her injuries, the burden was not established. People v. Covington, 988 P.2d 657 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 15 (Colo. 2001).

Once the issue of injury is raised by a party he is deemed to have waived his claim of privilege. Kelley v. Holmes, 28 Colo. App. 79, 470 P.2d 590 (1970).

Where a plaintiff testifies as to the details of the service and treatment rendered to him by physicians, and of the charges made therefor, he waives the protection of this section as to the matters testified to by him; it was not error to admit the testimony of the physicians concerned in rebuttal of such evidence. Mauro v. Tracy, 152 Colo. 106, 380 P.2d 570 (1963).

If privilege was not already waived, admission of physician's testimony was harmless error where physician testified that a cut on the defendant's hand could have been caused either by a knife, as asserted by the prosecution, or by a piece of broken glass, as asserted by the defense, and this testimony concerned the same subject matter as defendant's disclosure to his wife in his confession. People v. Thompson, 950 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

Waiver as to all doctors consulted about the injuries. The nature and extent of plaintiff's injuries was in issue. Plaintiff produced evidence as to the seriousness of his injuries. Once plaintiff had raised this issue, he has waived the physician-patient privilege, not only to the doctors he has called, but as to all physicians consulted concerning these injuries. Kelley v. Holmes, 28 Colo. App. 79, 470 P.2d 590 (1970).

Plaintiff in personal injury action impliedly waives physician-patient privilege only for matters that are relevant in determining the cause and extent of injuries which form the basis of the complaint. Samms v. District Court, Fourth Jud. Dist., 908 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1995); Devenyns v. Hartig, 983 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1998); Alcon v. Spicer, 113 P.3d 735 (Colo. 2005); Cardenas v. Jerath, 180 P.3d 415 (Colo. 2008).

Defense attorney must provide plaintiff with reasonable notice of an informal discussion with plaintiff's physician, and plaintiff's physician may decline to participate in such informal discussion. Samms v. District Court, Fourth Jud. Dist., 908 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1995).

When a patient institutes a lawsuit against a physician and the suit arises out of the physician's professional care, the physician-patient privilege does not apply and thus the patient's entire electronic medical file is not subject to the privilege. A review of the patient's complete medical record is relevant to the physician's ability to prepare a defense. Ortega v. Colo. Permanente Med. Group, P.C., 265 P.3d 444 (Colo. 2011).

Exception to the physician-patient privilege in subsection (1)(d)(II) for a medical provider who was in consultation with a defendant applies to a medical provider engaged in a unified course of treatment with a defendant. Holding in Samms v. Dist. Ct. requiring notice of informal discussions with non-party medical providers does not apply when the medical providers are engaged in a unified course of treatment that forms the basis of the malpractice action. Reutter v. Weber, 179 P.3d 977 (Colo. 2007).

Privilege does not shield guardian/conservator husband from being deposed in medical malpractice case concerning incapacitated wife's family medical history. Hartmann v. Nordin, 147 P.3d 43 (Colo. 2006).

Privilege does shield guardian/conservator husband from being deposed about his health and ability to care for incapacitated wife because husband's health and ability to care for wife are not relevant to wife's medical malpractice claims. Hartmann v. Nordin, 147 P.3d 43 (Colo. 2006).

This paragraph does not include a nurse or medical technician. Block v. People, 125 Colo. 36, 240 P.2d 512 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 978, 72 S. Ct. 1076, 96 L.Ed. 1370, reh'g denied, 344 U.S. 848, 73 S. Ct. 6, 97 L.Ed. 659 (1952).

Hospital and medical records fall within the scope of physician-patient privilege. Devenyns v. Hartig, 983 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1998).

Hospital records held either confidential records or hearsay, and in either event were inadmissible for impeachment or any other purpose. Young v. McLaughlin, 126 Colo. 188, 247 P.2d 813 (1952).

Privilege prohibits pretrial discovery of confidential information. The physician-patient and psychologist-patient privileges, once they attach, prohibit not only testimonial disclosures in court but also pretrial discovery of information within the scope of the privilege. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

Hospital records subject to physician-patient privilege prohibits pretrial discovery and testimony disclosures of information within the scope of the privilege, and where there is neither an express nor an implied waiver and there is no showing of a particularized need the privilege is absolute. People v. Overton, 759 P.2d 772 (Colo. App. 1988).

Privilege applies only to a physician, surgeon, or registered professional nurse duly authorized to practice and does not apply to medical technicians. Belle Bonfils Memorial Blood Ctr. v. District Court, 763 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1988).

A plain reading of this section and § 16-8-103.6 is that the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges do not apply to communications made to physicians or psychologists who are eligible to testify concerning a defendant's mental condition once the defendant enters a mental condition plea or defense. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

A defendant who places his or her mental condition at issue waives the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges. The prosecution may use the testimony of a physician retained by the defense even though the defense does not intend to use the physician at trial. In addition, the prosecution may use pre-offense or post-offense information concerning the defendant's mental condition. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

Attorney-client privilege did not attach to expert evaluation conducted by expert appointed under § 19-3-607 (1) at request of mother in action for termination of parental rights. D.A.S. v. People, 863 P.2d 291 (Colo. 1993).

Personal injury plaintiff with generic claims for mental suffering has not placed her mental condition at issue where the mental suffering alleged is incident to the plaintiff's physical injuries and does not exceed the suffering and loss an ordinary person would likely experience. Therefore, the trial court may not find an implied waiver of the plaintiff's physician-patient or psychotherapist-client privileges based on a claim for mental suffering damages and trial court erred in ordering that records related to plaintiff's psychiatric and marriage counseling be disclosed. Johnson v. Trujillo, 977 P.2d 152 (Colo. 1999); Hoffman v. Brookfield Republic, Inc., 87 P.3d 858 (Colo. 2004).

Bare allegations of mental anguish, emotional distress, pain and suffering, and loss of enjoyment of life asserted in a complaint do not rise to the level of injecting plaintiff's prior mental and physical conditions into the case such that he or she completely waived the physician-patient privilege. Weil v. Dillon Cos., Inc., 109 P.3d 127 (Colo. 2005).

While plaintiff impliedly made a limited release of his or her medical records by filing the lawsuit, his or her generic claims for pain and suffering and loss of quality of life incident to the injuries he or she sustained do not amount to a complete release of his or her prior medical records. Therefore, the trial court erred when it required plaintiff to make a complete disclosure of his or her medical records so that defendant would know his or her quality of life prior to the injury. Weil v. Dillon Cos., Inc., 109 P.3d 127 (Colo. 2005).

VI. PUBLIC OFFICER.

Conversations among the district attorney, his deputies and his assistants taking place prior to the impaneling of the grand jury and concerning the upcoming grand jury investigation are made in "official confidence" within the meaning of subsection (1)(e). People v. District Court, 193 Colo. 528, 568 P.2d 445 (1977).

This paragraph is not applicable to an employee of the district court, who, though designated as an "officer", is not in fact a "public officer" within the meaning and intent of the statute. The purpose of the statute was to protect matters relating to "affairs of state" and "state secrets" within the different branches of the government. Saucerman v. Saucerman, 170 Colo. 318, 461 P.2d 18 (1969).

Confidential communications made to a probation officer in the performance of investigatory duties enjoined upon him by court order may be privileged in the event the public interest demands that the confidence thereof be preserved. Saucerman v. Saucerman, 170 Colo. 318, 461 P.2d 18 (1969).

This paragraph makes the trial court the sole judge as to when the public interests would suffer by the disclosure. When a public officer is called upon on the witness stand to disclose such communications, his opinion that such disclosure is improper, and the reasons therefor, are matters to be presented to the court and are for the determination of the court — not the witness. Lindsey v. People ex rel. Rush, 66 Colo. 343, 181 P. 531 (1919).

If there are exceptions to this paragraph they are only such as fall within those stated by Stephens' Evidence, art. 112, p. 163: "The executive of the nation, or of a state, and cabinet officers (and perhaps others falling in the same general class) are entitled, in the exercise of their discretion, to determine how far in a judicial inquiry they will produce papers or answer questions as to public affairs." Lindsey v. People ex rel. Rush, 181 P. 531 (1919).

VII. ACCOUNTANT.

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado's Accountant-Client Privilege", see 24 Colo. Law. 283 (1995).

General assembly clearly intended the accountant-client privilege to apply without exception to all communications between client and the certified public accountant and the accountant's employees specified in the statute. There is no legislative expression which would indicate that the general assembly intended to qualify the privilege. Colo. State Bd. of Accountancy v. Raisch, 931 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 960 P.2d 102 (Colo. 1998).

The privilege created by this section is not the privilege of the accountant but that of the client. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

All certified and uncertified work is privileged. The general assembly's purpose was to preserve the confidential relations set out in the statute. This purpose would not be served by holding that only certified work remains privileged. Pattie Lea, Inc. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 493, 423 P.2d 27 (1967).

The accountant-client privilege under this section does apply to an accountant's work papers, reports, and financial statements, and to communications between accountants and their client and between each of them and third persons, which result in financial statements and an audit report thereon to bar their disclosure to shareholders of the corporation in an action by the shareholders against former officers and directors of the corporation and against the accountants, which action is based upon negligence, gross negligence, fraud, and conspiracy in the preparation and audit of the corporation's financial statements. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

Certified public accountants hired by a corporation are hired for the benefit of all of its stockholders and such employment forbids concealment from the stockholders of information given the accountant by the corporation. Pattie Lea, Inc. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 493, 423 P.2d 27 (1967).

Privilege is invalid in a stockholder derivative suit. The respondent is a stockholder in three of the corporations who are defendants in the original suit in the trial court. The certified public accountant-client privilege does not protect a corporation from being required to disclose to its own stockholders in a derivative suit brought in good faith against the corporation, communications made by the corporation to its certified public accountant. A corporate entity acts only for its stockholders and no greater liberality will be applied to facts which determine privilege in the case of a corporation than would be applied in the case of a natural person or association of persons. Pattie Lea, Inc. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 493, 423 P.2d 27 (1967).

Where accountant-client privilege should not apply. Where the question involved is whether the corporation was governed properly or inimically to shareholder interests is a central issue of the case, shareholders should be allowed disclosure, and the accountant-client privilege should not apply. Neusteter v. District Court, 675 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1984).

Information certified public accountant received as corporate director is subject to disclosure. Insofar as a certified public accountant may be in possession of any information which he received as a director, he is subject to the same evidentiary rules as any other corporate director. If faced with the problem, the trial court will correctly distinguish the privileged from the nonprivileged information. The witness is subject to questioning as to nonprivileged information to the same extent as any other witness. Pattie Lea, Inc. v. District Court, 161 Colo. 493, 423 P.2d 27 (1967).

However, a certified public accountant's subsequent employment by a corporation does not waive privilege. A witness does not waive his right to claim a privilege by accepting employment by a corporation several years prior to the commencement of an action in which an attempt is made to compel him to testify notwithstanding the privilege created by this paragraph. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

Where an accountant was appointed by the court to audit the books of a corporation half-owned by the defendant and defendant neither ordered, controlled, nor paid for the accountant's services, defendant could not invoke accountant-client privilege. People v. Zimelman, 194 Colo. 384, 572 P.2d 830 (1977).

This paragraph concerning testimony of accountants held to have no application to a criminal case in which it appeared that the accountant testifying was not employed by, and was not a client of, defendant. Hopkins v. People, 89 Colo. 296, 1 P.2d 937 (1931).

VIII. PSYCHIATRIST.

Law reviews. For article, "New Definitions of Therapist Confidentiality", see 18 Colo. Law. 251 (1989).

It is error to deny one the opportunity to show that hospital records and the testimony of a psychiatrist were not privileged, and were otherwise competent. Nelson v. Grissom, 152 Colo. 502, 382 P.2d 991 (1963).

Respondent-patient entitled to assert privilege where she sought voluntary treatment. Where respondent sought voluntary treatment and her psychiatrist petitioned alleging that she would not remain in a voluntary treatment program, the respondent was entitled to assert her statutory physician-patient privilege if her psychiatrist was called upon as a witness to testify about any information he acquired in attending the respondent which was necessary for him to prescribe or act for her during the period of her voluntary treatment. People v. Taylor, 618 P.2d 1127 (Colo. 1980).

Psychiatrist-patient privilege did not apply to statements made to a police detective. Williams v. People, 687 P.2d 950 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where a psychiatrist was retained by defense counsel to evaluate the defendant's condition, the defendant's confidential communications to the psychiatrist were privileged under this section. Miller v. District Court, 737 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant's statement to psychiatrist that was provided to the prosecution under Crim. P. 16 loses its confidential nature and cross-examination of the defendant concerning such statements as prior inconsistent statements is proper impeachment, even if the psychiatrist did not testify at the defendant's trial. Use of such statements do not violate the attorney-client privilege or the right to effective assistance of counsel. People v. Lanari, 811 P.2d 399 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Where an immunity agreement has been drafted by the government, basic considerations of fairness dictate that any ambiguity as to the scope of the governmental promise be resolved in favor of the defendant. Given reasonable alternative interpretations as to the scope of the governmental promise, the court will choose the interpretation favoring the defendant so long as that interpretation has a reasonable foundation in the document itself and in the circumstances surrounding its execution. People v. Romero, 745 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 990, 108 S. Ct. 1296, 99 L.Ed.2d 506 (1988).

"Use immunity" distinguished. "Use immunity" results in prohibiting the state from making use of any statements made by the defendant during the time covered by the agreement, and also bars state use of any evidence derived directly or indirectly from those statements. People v. Romero, 745 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 990, 108 S. Ct. 1296, 99 L.Ed.2d 506 (1988).

A plain reading of this section and § 16-8-103.6 is that the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges do not apply to communications made to physicians or psychologists who are eligible to testify concerning a defendant's mental condition once the defendant enters a mental condition plea or defense. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

A defendant who places his or her mental condition at issue waives the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges. The prosecution may use the testimony of a physician retained by the defense even though the defense does not intend to use the physician at trial. In addition, the prosecution may use pre-offense or post-offense information concerning the defendant's mental condition. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

When a patient alleges a physical or mental condition as a basis for a claim of damages and thereby injects the issue into the case, the patient waives his or her physician-patient privilege with respect to the medical condition. Samms v. District Court, 908 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1995); Middleton v. Beckett, 960 P.2d 1213 (Colo. App. 1998).

IX. PSYCHOLOGIST.

The purpose of the statutory psychologist-patient privilege is to aid in the effective diagnosis and treatment of mental illness by encouraging the patient to fully disclose information to the psychologist without fear of embarrassment or humiliation caused by disclosure of such confidential information. People v. District Court, 719 P.2d 722 (Colo. 1986); People v. Tauer, 847 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Dill, 904 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996); Berg v. Shapiro, 948 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1997).

The psychologist-patient privilege provides that a licensed psychologist may not be examined without the consent of the client as to any communications made by the client to the psychologist or the psychologist's advice to the client. In order to compel discovery of the psychologist's records, there must be a waiver. The waiver may be implied if the privilege holder places their mental condition at issue. The privilege holder did not waive the privilege. People v. Hogan, 114 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2004).

Psychologist-patient privilege did not apply to statements made to a police detective. Williams v. People, 687 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1984).

Psychologist-patient privilege did not apply to preclude discovery of data underlying a psychological consultant firm's report regarding the general relationship between the medical staff and the administration of a hospital. Berg v. Shapiro, 948 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1997).

Psychologist-patient privilege did not apply to mandatory production of relevant confidential documents and other information used by a governing board in determining the propriety of a psychologist's actions. Colo. Bd. of Psychologist Exam'rs v. I.W., 140 P.3d 186 (Colo. App. 2006).

Probate court did not err in ruling exception to privilege was applicable to preclude respondent's assertion of the psychologist-client privilege in a proceeding for long-term treatment certification. People v. Hynes, 917 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1996).

A session with a psychologist "to find out if there was truth to the allegations" is a psychologist session that falls within the ambit of the psychologist-patient privilege. People v. Marsh, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

A corporation cannot be a client of a psychologist and thus cannot assert the psychologist-patient privilege. Berg v. Shapiro, 948 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1997).

Focus of 1993 amendments to subsection (1)(g) was to extend the applicability of the privilege to other types of health care providers, not to alter the scope of the privilege. People v. Hynes, 917 P.2d 328 (Colo. App. 1996).

Privilege prohibits pretrial discovery of confidential information. The physician-patient and psychologist-patient privileges, once they attach, prohibit not only testimonial disclosures in court but also pretrial discovery of information within the scope of the privilege. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

The court of appeals erred in conducting an in camera review of the victim's mental health records since the victim did not waive her psychologist-patient privilege. Without a waiver, the records are not subject to review. People v. Wittrein, 221 P.3d 1076 (Colo. 2009).

Psychologist-patient privilege applies to the records of a therapist who is an unlicensed psychologist when such therapy is conducted under the supervision of a person authorized by law to conduct such therapy. People v. District Court, 719 P.2d 722 (Colo. 1986).

When physician-patient and psychologist-patient privileges are not waived, applicability of the privileges is not conditional on a judicial balancing of interests once privileges attach. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983).

Mere filing of a pleading by a person protected by psychologist-patient privilege does not operate as a waiver. The appropriate inquiry under such circumstances should be whether the privilege holder has injected his physical or mental condition into the case as the basis of a claim or an affirmative defense. People v. District Court, 719 P.2d 722 (Colo. 1986); Hoffman v. Brookfield Republic, Inc., 87 P.3d 858 (Colo. 2004).

When privilege holder does not place his or her physical or mental condition at issue and does not assert his or her physical or mental condition as an affirmative defense, privilege holder's answer cannot be fairly construed as a manifestation of his or her intent to forego confidentiality attaching to his or her communications to a treating psychologist or psychiatrist and is not inconsistent with a claim of privilege with respect to these communications. Clark v. District Court, 668 P.2d 3 (Colo. 1983); Hoffman v. Brookfield Republic, Inc., 87 P.3d 858 (Colo. 2004).

Court must balance the competing interests of protecting the confidentiality of plaintiffs' communications with their treating therapists against defendant's interest in obtaining sufficient evidence to contest damage claims for mental suffering and emotional distress and should consider the flexible array of protective orders suggested by C.R.C.P. 26(c) to accommodate the needs of the party seeking discovery while protecting the legitimate interests of the parties opposing discovery. Bond v. Denver Dist. Ct., 682 P.2d 33 (Colo. App. 1984).

Defendant's constitutional right to confront adverse witnesses does not supersede a victim's rights under this section. The vague assertion that the victim may have made statements to her therapist that might possibly differ from the victim's anticipated trial testimony does not provide a sufficient basis to justify ignoring the victim's right to rely upon her statutory privilege. People v. District Court, 719 P.2d 722 (Colo. 1986); People v. Tauer, 847 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1993).

By taking advantage of opportunity to have an expert appointed by the court pursuant to § 19-3-607, an individual submits to the disclosure of the evaluation to all parties and waives any psychologist-patient privilege which may have attached. People in Interest of T.S.B., 757 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd, 785 P.2d 132 (Colo. 1990).

Testimony of victim in criminal case as to emotional effects of alleged assault did not operate as waiver of psychologist-patient privilege. People v. Silva, 782 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1989).

Psychologist-client privilege created in this section does not apply to information obtained and records prepared in evaluating a person who has been involuntarily detained pending judicial review of a psychologist's certification. People v. District Court, 797 P.2d 1259 (Colo. 1990).

Prior to 1989 amendment of § 19-3-311, plain language of said section did not abolish psychologist-patient privilege for communications between social worker and client concerning child abuse or neglect. People v. Bowman, 812 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1991).

In order to harmonize potential statutory conflict between § 19-3-304 concerning required reporting of child abuse and this section prior to 1989 amendment to § 19-3-311, § 19-3-304 required psychologists to report suspected child abuse to the appropriate authorities while subsection (1)(g) prohibited psychologists from testifying against their clients without consent. People v. Bowman, 812 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1991).

Improper admission of privileged communications between social worker and defendant constituted harmless error due to other overwhelming evidence against defendant offered at trial. People v. Bowman, 812 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court's admission of child abuse reports by psychologist based upon privileged communications between psychologist and defendant did not constitute error because allowing privilege to prevent use of child abuse reports would defeat one of purposes of reports to aid in the investigation and prosecution of child abusers. People v. Bowman, 812 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1991).

Tainted-fruit rationale applied to unauthorized disclosure. Where defendant sought records of alleged victim's psychologist based on information provided by the psychologist to a police officer in violation of the psychologist-patient privilege and included by the officer in his report, the records remained privileged notwithstanding the defendant's assertion that the psychologist was an "essential witness" to his defense. "The holder of the privilege should not suffer the consequences of either an accidental or intentional revelation of privileged matters by the treating professional." People v. Tauer, 847 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1993).

A plain reading of this section and § 16-8-103.6 is that the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges do not apply to communications made to physicians or psychologists who are eligible to testify concerning a defendant's mental condition once the defendant enters a mental condition plea or defense. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

A defendant who places his or her mental condition at issue waives the attorney-client and the physician-patient privileges. The prosecution may use the testimony of a physician retained by the defense even though the defense does not intend to use the physician at trial. In addition, the prosecution may use pre-offense or post-offense information concerning the defendant's mental condition. Gray v. District Court, 884 P.2d 286 (Colo. 1994).

Section 19-3-311 abrogates the psychologist-patient privilege, but only for communication that is the basis for a report of alleged child abuse to the county department of social services or local law enforcement. Dill v. People, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

Testimony of psychologist concerning report of alleged child abuse filed with law enforcement was not a waiver of the psychologist-patient privilege because § 19-3-311 abrogates that privilege. Dill v. People, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

Trial court properly refused defendant in sexual abuse proceeding access to psychologist's notes and reports from ongoing counseling sessions because they were protected under the psychologist-patient privilege. People v. Dill, 904 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

Personal injury plaintiff with generic claims for mental suffering has not placed her mental condition at issue where the mental suffering alleged is incident to the plaintiff's physical injuries and does not exceed the suffering and loss an ordinary person would likely experience. Therefore, the trial court may not find an implied waiver of the plaintiff's physician-patient or psychotherapist-client privileges based on a claim for mental suffering damages and trial court erred in ordering that records related to plaintiff's psychiatric and marriage counseling be disclosed. Johnson v. Trujillo, 977 P.2d 152 (Colo. 1999).

Absent a clear waiver of psychologist-patient privilege, a trial court may not review even in camera documents related to a patient's treatment. People v. Sisneros, 55 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2002).

A conflict between the interests of a parent and his or her child may preclude the parent from waiving the child's psychologist-patient privilege. Since the child's mother was in the middle of a conflict between her child and her father and she was antagonistic toward the prosecution, she lacked the authority to waive the privilege. The decision of whether to waive the privilege was properly given to the child's guardian ad litem. People v. Marsh, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

X. VICTIM'S ADVOCATE.

Law reviews. For article, "The Use of Victim Advocates and Expert Witnesses in Battered Women Cases", see 30 Colo. Law. 43 (December 2001).

The victim advocate privilege in subsection (1)(k)(I) extends to records of service or assistance provided by the victim's advocate, because the records are a part of "any communication" made to the advocate by the domestic violence victim. People v. Turner, 109 P.3d 639 (Colo. 2005).

A defendant may not obtain records of any assistance, advice, or other communication provided by a victim's advocate to a victim unless the defendant demonstrates that the victim has waived the privilege. People v. Turner, 109 P.3d 639 (Colo. 2005).

The mere endorsement of a domestic violence expert by the prosecution cannot operate to waive the privilege. People v. Turner, 109 P.3d 639 (Colo. 2005).

13-90-108. Offer taken as consent. The offer of a person of himself as a witness shall be deemed a consent to the examination. The offer of a wife, husband, attorney, clergyman, physician, surgeon, certified public accountant, or certified psychologist as a witness shall be deemed a consent to the examination, within the meaning of section 13-90-107 (1) (a) to (1) (d), (1) (f), and (1) (g).

Express directions concerning the manner in which the protection of § 13-90-107 shall be waived are contained in this section. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

An effective waiver requires voluntary action based upon knowledge of consequences. Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

Stockholders may not waive corporation's privilege. It does not lie within the power of a stockholder, or a minority of stockholders, or a majority of the stockholders to function in such manner as to bring about this statutory waiver. The discretion to waive the protection afforded by the statute can only be exercised by the governing officials of the corporation, namely, the officers or the board of directors Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

Subsequent employment with corporation does not waive privilege. A witness does not waive his right to claim a privilege by accepting employment by a corporation several years prior to the commencement of an action in which an attempt is made to compel him to testify notwithstanding the privilege created by § 13-90-107(1)(f). Weck v. District Court, 158 Colo. 521, 408 P.2d 987 (1965).

13-90-109. Estates of deceased persons, infants, and mentally incompetent persons. Nothing in this article shall in any manner affect the laws now existing relating to the settlement of estates of deceased persons, infants, or mentally incompetent persons or to the acknowledgment or proof of deeds and other conveyances relating to real estate, in order to entitle the same to be recorded, or to the attestation of the execution of the last wills and testaments or of any other instrument required by law to be attested.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Contracts", see 34 Dicta 85 (1957).

Competency of attesting witnesses to a will is based on general competency to be a witness in court. It was argued that by virtue of this section, common-law disability is still in force in Colorado, but the court did not agree with this contention, holding competency of attesting witnesses to wills must be tested by the general law relating to competency of witnesses as provided by the statute, and not by the common law. The test is, whether under the statute, she would have been a competent witness in court, at the time of attesting the will, to testify to the facts of its execution. White v. Bower, 56 Colo. 575, 136 P. 1053 (1913).

13-90-110. Religious opinions of witness. No person shall be deemed incompetent to testify as a witness on account of his opinion in relation to the Supreme Being or a future state of rewards and punishments; nor shall any witness be questioned in regard to his religious opinions.

When evidence of religious beliefs admissible. This section was not violated in felony child abuse case where defendant raised religious healing as an affirmative defense and was cross-examined as to his religious beliefs. The examination was probative of something other than the veracity of such witness and the court properly instructed the jury to consider testimony only for limited purposes. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

This section and C.R.E. 610 do not apply to statements made by a prosecutor in closing

ANNOTATION

Section gives Colorado courts control over discovery by foreign litigants. This section and § 13-90-111, while providing a means for ensuring the testimony of potential Colorado deponents by parties to a suit outside Colorado, also ensure a degree of supervision and control over discovery by the courts in Colorado by requiring a commission or dedimus potestatem from the foreign court which has jurisdiction over the underlying suit. Such a requirement thus serves not only as a check on unfettered and unwarranted discovery in Colorado by foreign litigants, but also protects the interests of the parties to the litigation against whom the discovered material is sought to be used. Falzon v. Home Ins. Co., 661 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1982).

13-90-113. Interpreters - compensation. Except as provided in section 13-90-210, when the judge of any court of record in this state has occasion to appoint an interpreter for his court, it is his duty to fix the compensation to be paid such interpreter for each day his services are required.

- II. The Examination.
  - A. In General.
  - B. Scope.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Cross Examination Under the Statute", see 9 Dicta 198 (1932). For article, "Depositions of Parties on Oral Interrogatories, Within the State of Colorado", see 10 Dicta 256 (1933).

This section is remedial. It grants a right not given under the common law, but does not abridge any right granted thereunder. Purse v. Purcell, 43 Colo. 50, 95 P. 291 (1908); Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933).

It gives adverse party a statutory right. The right given by this section is a statutory right of far greater value to the adversary than the right to examine a party as his own witness. Reiter v. Pollard, 75 Colo. 203, 225 P. 222 (1924).

It does not take from either party any legal right they had before to use the admissions of parties in interest made in opposition to principles for which they were then contending. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. v. Taylor, 24 Colo. App. 106, 131 P. 783 (1913).

It does not limit the right of a party to cross-examine his adversary who offers himself as a witness in his own behalf. Purse v. Purcell, 43 Colo. 50, 95 P. 291 (1908).

It does not provide for such cross-examination other than upon a trial, and must be so limited. Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933).

The word "trial" as used in this section is to be construed as it is commonly understood as applied to a civil action or proceeding, for the reason that the statute confines it to this. Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933).

"Trial" is defined as the examination before a competent tribunal, according to the laws of the land, of the facts put in issue in a cause, for the purpose of determining such issue. Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933); Jones v. Cutting, 92 Colo. 123, 18 P.2d 454 (1933).

This section does not contain any reference whatsoever to the taking of a deposition before a notary. Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933); Jones v. Cutting, 92 Colo. 123, 18 P.2d 454 (1933).

It therefore does not authorize a cross examination before a notary public. Taylor v. Briggs Land Inv. Co., 92 Colo. 119, 18 P.2d 452 (1933).

It is inapplicable if witness proves not to be adverse. If a party called as an adverse witness appears to the trial court not to be adverse, he should not be held to come within this section and the matter should be left largely to the discretion of the court. W. Inv. & Land Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 64 Colo. 37, 172 P. 6 (1918).

"Managing agent" is not limited to one general manager. Certainly the president of a corporation which was the general underwriting agent for an insurance company, and as such had charge of that branch of the company's business in four states, would be a "managing agent", within the meaning of this section. Otherwise, the term must be limited to one general manager and we think it clear that the general assembly never intended any such limitation. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Officer, 78 Colo. 441, 242 P. 989 (1925).

Error in calling local agent is cured by the subsequent calling of such agent by other party. Where the local agent of a defendant corporation was called as a witness under this section, authorizing the calling of a managing agent of a party corporation and examining him as on cross-examination, such error, if any, in calling such agent, is cured where he is afterwards called by the corporation and the same facts brought out on cross-examination. Diamond Rubber Co. v. Harryman, 41 Colo. 415, 92 P. 922 (1907).

Where witness is not in any of the listed categories, this section does not apply. Where a witness is neither a director, officer, superintendent, or managing agent of Safeway Stores, Inc., as those words are used in C.R.C.P. 43 or this section, nor is there any showing that the witness is an "unwilling or hostile witness" to the end that under C.R.C.P. 43 he could be interrogated by leading questions, there is no error in refusing to permit plaintiff's to cross-examine the witness as a part of their case in chief. Dale v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 152 Colo. 581, 383 P.2d 795 (1963).

II. THE EXAMINATION.

A. In General.

Under this section the competency established at one trial obtains at subsequent trials of the same cause. Finch v. McCrimmon, 100 Colo. 315, 67 P.2d 623 (1937).

If a disqualified witness is called, the disqualification is waived. One who calls a disqualified witness, even for cross-examination, under this section waives the disqualification and makes him a witness for all purposes. Allen v. Shires, 47 Colo. 433, 107 P. 1070 (1910).

The purpose for which he is called makes no difference in the application of the principle. Allen v. Shires, 47 Colo. 433, 107 P. 1070 (1910).

If witness has already been examined by adverse party it is not error to refuse to permit him called again. The refusal of the trial court to permit plaintiff to call as a witness the engineer of defendant company, as the company's representative for the purpose of cross-examining him, even if proper to do so under this section, was not prejudicial error where he was actually called as a witness for both parties and subjected to a most rigid and prolonged examination, and cross-examination by counsel for plaintiff. Hottel v. Poudre Valley Reservoir Co., 41 Colo. 370, 92 P. 918 (1907).

The party called for such examination shall not be concluded thereby, but may rebut it by counter testimony. Cordingly v. Kennedy, 239 F. 645 (8th Cir. 1917).

There is no error in the refusal of the trial court to bring in new parties so that they may be cross-examined under this section, when it appears that such parties have no interest in the issues between the major parties. Tolland Co. v. First State Bank, 95 Colo. 321, 35 P.2d 867 (1934).

A defendant who has suffered a default, may, under this section, be called and examined by plaintiff. W. Inv. & Land Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 64 Colo. 37, 172 P. 6 (1918).

B. Scope.

Witness' own counsel cannot examine beyond scope of examination by adversary. While this section does not permit defendant's examination by his own counsel to proceed beyond the scope of his examination as conducted by his adversary, nor permit leading questions to be propounded to him by his counsel, it does not by its terms, nor by a proper construction, deny his right to at once give further testimony within the limit indicated. Merritt v. Hummer, 21 Colo. App. 568, 122 P. 816 (1912).

It is error to refuse examination within proper limits. Where plaintiff's counsel called the defendant as a witness and examined him under this section and at the conclusion of defendant's examination by plaintiff's counsel, his own counsel asked and was denied the privilege of examining him at that time, the trial court holding that this section gave the defendant no right to testify further until plaintiff had closed his case, and he, the defendant, had been regularly called to the stand in his own defense, this was error. Buckhorn Plaster Co. v. Consolidated Plaster Co., 47 Colo. 516, 108 P. 27 (1910); Merritt v. Hummer, 21 Colo. App. 568, 122 P. 816 (1912).

A party is bound by the adverse testimony of his own witness, and favorable evidence elicited by leading questions or distinctly cross-examining methods should be stricken on motion. In the case under consideration the evidence was fully developed by the adverse party's examination of the same witness, hence should stand. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Officer, 78 Colo. 441, 242 P. 989 (1925).

Plaintiff bound by testimony of witnesses not called for cross-examination. In an action against a corporation, some of the witnesses for plaintiff — officials and employees of defendant — not being called for cross-examination under this section, plaintiff was bound by their testimony. Rio Grande Fuel Co. v. Colo. Cent. Power Co., 99 Colo. 395, 63 P.2d 470 (1936).

A witness called under this section is competent "for all purposes" within meaning of § 13-90-102. A witness called by an administrator under the provisions of this section which permits the interrogation of an adverse party as on cross-examination, removes the bar of § 13-90-102 and makes the witness a competent witness "for all purposes". Warren v. Adams, 19 Colo. 515, 36 P. 604 (1894); Zackheim v. Zackheim, 75 Colo. 161, 225 P. 268 (1924);

Finch v. McCrimmon, 100 Colo. 315, 67 P.2d 623 (1937).

A party to the record may be examined by his adversary as if under cross-examination, and the fact that a defendant called the plaintiff as his own witness did not cure the error committed in denying him the right to call him for cross-examination. Reiter v. Pollard, 75 Colo. 203, 225 P. 222 (1924).

An intervener need not be given right to examine as to wholly irrelevant matter. There was no error in refusing an intervener an opportunity to cross-examine the president of plaintiff corporation under this section, where such cross-examination would have been directed to matters wholly irrelevant to the issues. Howry v. Sigel-Campion Livestock Comm'n Co., 80 Colo. 143, 249 P. 658 (1926).

Refusal to permit defendant to cross-examine complainant about his homosexual relationship with witness was not reversible error, inasmuch as testimony elicited during such cross examination would only have discredited and impeached complainant by impugning his moral character. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

13-90-117. Affirmation - form - perjury. (1) A witness who desires it, at his option, instead of taking an oath may make his solemn affirmation or declaration by assenting when addressed in the following form:

"You do solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give in this issue (or matter), pending between ..... and ..... shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

(2) Assent to this affirmation shall be made by answer: "I do."

(3) A false affirmation or declaration is perjury in the first degree.

13-90-117.5. Oath or affirmation taken by a child. In lieu of an oath or affirmation, any child who testifies in any proceeding pursuant to section 13-90-106 (1) (b) (II) shall be asked the following: "Do you promise to tell the truth?". The court, in its discretion, may accept any indication of assent to this question by the child.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 985, § 4, effective April 24.

13-90-118. Witness immunity. (1) Whenever a witness refuses, on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide other information in a proceeding before or ancillary to a court or grand jury of the state of Colorado involving any laws of the state and the person presiding over the proceeding communicates to the witness an order as specified in subsection (2) of this section, the witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination; except that no testimony or other information compelled under the order, or any information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information, may be used against the witness in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or false statement or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

(2) In the case of any individual who has been or may be called to testify or provide other information at any proceeding before or ancillary to a court or grand jury of the state of Colorado, the district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding is or may be held, or the county court in which a misdemeanor proceeding is or may be held, may issue, upon request of any district attorney, attorney general, or special prosecutor of the state of Colorado, an order requiring such individual to give testimony or provide other information which he or she refuses to give or provide on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination, such order to become effective as provided in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) A district attorney, attorney general, or special prosecutor of the state of Colorado may request an order as specified in subsection (2) of this section when in his or her judgment the testimony or other information from such individual may be necessary to the public interest and such individual has refused or is likely to refuse to testify or provide other information on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article "Witness Immunity Under Colorado Law", see 27 Colo. Law. 37 (December 1998).

Supreme court may review immunity proceedings. Where the Colorado supreme court retained jurisdiction to review the rulings of the trial court in "immunity proceedings", it was not intended that the court grant carte blanche interlocutory review of every procedural ruling of the trial court in the conduct of those proceedings, but review is properly limited to matters bearing upon the substantive determination of the grant of immunity relied upon by petitioner in avoidance of prosecution. Wheeler v. District Court, 180 Colo. 275, 504 P.2d 1094 (1973).

Immunity granted under this section is necessarily transactional. Wheeler v. District Court, 184 Colo. 193, 519 P.2d 327 (1974); People v. Lucero, 196 Colo. 276, 584 P.2d 1208 (1978); Steinberger v. District Court, 198 Colo. 59, 596 P.2d 755 (1979).

"Transaction immunity" defined. Transaction immunity may be simply described as that which precludes prosecution for any transaction or affair about which a witness testifies. Use immunity, by contrast, is a grant with limitations. Rather than barring a subsequent related prosecution, it acts only to suppress, in any such prosecution, the witness' testimony and evidence derived directly or indirectly from that testimony. Steinberger v. District Court, 198 Colo. 59, 596 P.2d 755 (1979).

Immunity granted by this statute is no longer transactional. Since the statute protects the witness from use of the compelled testimony in subsequent criminal proceedings, a defendant who, subsequent to conviction but prior to sentencing, was granted immunity and compelled to testify against his codefendant was not deprived of his privilege against self-incrimination. People v. Lederer, 717 P.2d 1017 (Colo. App. 1986).

In order to constitute proper request for witness immunity, defense counsel must explicitly request that the court grant a witness "immunity" at the time the witness is being questioned, and after the witness has claimed his fifth amendment privilege. People v. Macias, 44 Colo. App. 203, 616 P.2d 150 (1980).

Decision to grant immunity rests within discretion of prosecution. People v. Macias, 44 Colo. App. 203, 616 P.2d 150 (1980); People v. Russom, 107 P.3d 986 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section vests the office of the prosecutor with sole discretionary authority to apply its provisions to any witness. People v. Harding, 671 P.2d 975 (Colo. App. 1983).

Courts possess no inherent power to grant immunity described in this section and may not grant it except upon request of prosecuting attorney. People v. Merrill, 816 P.2d 958 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Raibon, 843 P.2d 46 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Eggert, 923 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1995).

No error in grant of immunity when the prosecution believed that witness' testimony was necessary in the interest of justice and the record clearly showed that the testimony is essential to the prosecution's case. People v. Russom, 107 P.3d 986 (Colo. App. 2004).

Police officer possesses the necessary apparent authority to make promises of immunity which bind his principal, the government. People v. Manning, 672 P.2d 499 (Colo. 1983).

To assess whether a person accused of criminal conduct may enforce an offer of immunity by an official not listed in this section, three inquiries must be made: (1) Whether the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination is implicated; (2) whether the defendant reasonably and detrimentally relied upon the government official's promise by performing his or her side of the bargain; and (3) whether a remedy short of actual enforcement of the promise would approximate fundamental fairness. Hopp & Flesch v. Backstreet, 123 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2005).

Defendant who was compelled by court order to provide incriminating testimony in a civil case after having been convicted and sentenced was not entitled to postconviction relief of his criminal sentence based on transactional immunity but was only entitled to use immunity, and since the testimony had not affected the judge's sentencing decision, trial court was correct in denying motion for postconviction relief. People v. Singer, 688 P.2d 248 (Colo. App. 1984).

Witness compelled to testify after conviction but before sentencing gains immunity. Since a recital of the sentence is an essential part of a judgment of conviction, a court which compels a witness to testify after her own conviction but before sentencing, by operation of this immunity statute, has aborted the prosecution and precluded itself from imposing a sentence or entering a final judgment of conviction. Steinberger v. District Court, 198 Colo. 59, 596 P.2d 755 (1979).

Defendant, who was granted immunity but still refused to testify, was not protected from prosecution under this section. People v. Castango, 674 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1983).

Certain language from former federal statute. Language in section beginning with "but no such witness may be prosecuted" is almost a verbatim copy of the former federal immunity statute, 18 U.S.C. § 2514. Wheeler v. District Court, 184 Colo. 193, 519 P.2d 327 (1974).

Grand jury witness's right to suppress intercepted communications. A grant jury witness has a statutory right to seek the suppression of intercepted communications as well as evidence derived therefrom, and this right is not impaired by the court's grant of transactional immunity since, while such immunity adequately safeguards the witness's privilege against self-incrimination, it does not protect the witness's privacy interest in the contents of the intercepted communications. In re P.R. v. District Court, 637 P.2d 346 (Colo. 1981).

Immunized grand jury testimony cannot be used in an affidavit supporting a search warrant against the person giving the immunized testimony. Such use falls directly within the provision protecting the defendant from penalty on account of the testimony given. People v. Henson, 705 P.2d 996 (Colo. App. 1985).

Extent of immunity. When the extent of a grant of immunity is ambiguous and the actions or degree of participation covered by the grant of immunity are not ascertainable, the grant of immunity must extend to the defendant's participation in the entire transaction. People v. Romero, 712 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd, 745 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1987), cert. denied, 108 U.S. 1759, 108 S. Ct. 1296, 99 L.Ed.2d 506 (1988).

Loss of immunity. When a defendant has acted with reasonable and detrimental reliance on a governmental promise involving a grant of immunity, the government must be stopped from going back on its promise. People v. Romero, 712 P.2d 1081 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd, 745 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1987), cert. denied, 108 U.S. 1759, 108 S. Ct. 1296, 99 L.Ed.2d 506 (1988).

Once a criminal defendant demonstrates that he has been compelled to testify under a grant of use immunity, the prosecution is prohibited from using the compelled testi- mony in any respect and the prosecution has the duty to prove that evidence it proposes to use is derived from an independent source. People v. Real, 895 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where prosecutors were exposed to defendant's immunized testimony but defendant had previously made a detailed statement concerning her part in the crime and defendant's counsel provided additional information to the prosecutors that was not referred to in the detailed statement, possible prosecutorial use of information from the immunized testimony was not a structural defect in the trial and a harmless error analysis was appropriate. In conducting such analysis court was entitled to consider the fact that defendant's participation in the crime was not seriously contested at trial. People v. Real, 895 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Real, 950 P.2d 645 (Colo. App. 1997).

Mere fact that witness observed the defendant at a hearing in which the defendant gave immunized testimony does not constitute a use of that testimony. Defendant could have been compelled to appear before the witness and to speak even in the absence of the grant of immunity since the right against self-incrimination does not extend to non-testimonial actions. People v. Real, 895 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1994).

Refusal to testify after receiving immunity deemed contempt. A witness who, despite receiving immunity, persists before a trial court judge in refusing on fifth amendment grounds to supply grand jury testimony, commits contempt and may be punished summarily. People v. Lucero, 196 Colo. 276, 584 P.2d 1208 (1978).

A witness who refused to testify after being granted immunity was guilty of contempt. People v. Mulberry, 919 P.2d 835 (Colo. App. 1995).

Immunity granted a defendant under this section was universal and therefore all jurisdictions were precluded from using defendant's testimony in subsequent prosecution against him. People v. Mulberry, 919 P.2d 835 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applied in Westerberg v. District Court, 181 Colo. 10, 506 P.2d 746 (1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1162, 94 S. Ct. 925, 39 L.Ed.2d 115 (1974); People v. Marquez, 644 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1981).

13-90-119. Privilege for newperson. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Mass medium" means any publisher of a newspaper or periodical; wire service; radio or television station or network; news or feature syndicate; or cable television system.

(b) "News information" means any knowledge, observation, notes, documents, photographs, films, recordings, videotapes, audiotapes, and reports, and the contents and sources thereof, obtained by a newperson while engaged as such, regardless of whether such items have been provided to or obtained by such newperson in confidence.

(c) "Newperson" means any member of the mass media and any employee or independent contractor of a member of the mass media who is engaged to gather, receive, observe, process, prepare, write, or edit news information for dissemination to the public through the mass media.

(d) "Press conference" means any meeting or event called for the purpose of issuing a public statement to members of the mass media, and to which members of the mass media are invited in advance.

(e) "Proceeding" means any civil or criminal investigation, discovery procedure, hearing, trial, or other process for obtaining information conducted by, before, or under the authority of any judicial body of the state of Colorado. Such term shall not include any investigation, hearing, or other process for obtaining information conducted by, before, or under the authority of the general assembly.

(f) "Source" means any person from whom or any means by or through which news information is received or procured by a newsperson, while engaged as such, regardless of whether such newsperson was requested to hold confidential the identity of such person or means.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary and except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, no newsperson shall, without such newsperson's express consent, be compelled to disclose, be examined concerning refusal to disclose, be subjected to any legal presumption of any kind, or be cited, held in contempt, punished, or subjected to any sanction in any judicial proceedings for refusal to disclose any news information received, observed, procured, processed, prepared, written, or edited by a newsperson, while acting in the capacity of a newsperson; except that the privilege of nondisclosure shall not apply to the following:

(a) News information received at a press conference;

(b) News information which has actually been published or broadcast through a medium of mass communication;

(c) News information based on a newsperson's personal observation of the commission of a crime if substantially similar news information cannot reasonably be obtained by any other means;

(d) News information based on a newsperson's personal observation of the commission of a class 1, 2, or 3 felony.

(3) Notwithstanding the privilege of nondisclosure granted in subsection (2) of this section, any party to a proceeding who is otherwise authorized by law to issue or obtain subpoenas may subpoena a newsperson in order to obtain news information by establishing by a preponderance of the evidence, in opposition to a newsperson's motion to quash such subpoena:

(a) That the news information is directly relevant to a substantial issue involved in the proceeding;

(b) That the news information cannot be obtained by any other reasonable means; and

(c) That a strong interest of the party seeking to subpoena the newsperson outweighs the interests under the first amendment to the United States constitution of such newsperson in not responding to a subpoena and of the general public in receiving news information.

(4) The privilege of nondisclosure established by subsection (2) of this section may be waived only by the voluntary testimony or disclosure of a newsperson that directly addresses the news information or identifies the source of such news information sought. A publication or broadcast of a news report through the mass media concerning the subject area of the news information sought, but which does not directly address the specific news information sought, shall not be deemed a waiver of the privilege of nondisclosure as to such specific news information.

(5) In any trial to a jury in an action in which a newsperson is a party as a result of such person's activities as a newsperson and in which the newsperson has invoked the privilege created by subsection (2) of this section, the jury shall be neither informed nor allowed to learn that such newsperson invoked such privilege or has thereby declined to disclose any news information.

(6) Nothing in this section shall preclude the issuance of a search warrant in compliance with the federal "Privacy Protection Act of 1980", 42 U.S.C. sec. 2000aa.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "New Shield Law Prohibits Most Subpoenas to Reporters", see 20 Colo. Law. 891 (1991).

The anti-defamation league, which publishes numerous periodicals, books, and pamphlets and regularly engages in news gathering activities, is a "newsperson" pursuant to this section. Quigley v. Rosenthal, 43 F. Supp.2d 1163 (D. Colo. 1999).

Anti-defamation league defendants entitled to invoke the privilege for a newperson with regard to the record of anti-Semitic complaints filed with their office. The information sought is not relevant to a substantial issue in the case, as required by subsection (3). Quigley v. Rosenthal, 43 F. Supp.2d 1163 (D. Colo. 1999).

Section applies when newperson assists law enforcement officers. Where police officers rode in news helicopter and pilot overflew a building suspected of containing marijuana plants, all at the officers' request, trial court did not err in quashing subpoena whereby defendant sought pilot's testimony as to helicopter's altitude and flight path at the time marijuana plants were observed. People v. Henderson, 847 P.2d 239 (Colo. App. 1993).

Reporter who piloted helicopter that flew police over private residence where marijuana plants were growing was protected under newperson's privilege where reporter was full-time employee of a television station whose reports were regularly featured on news broadcasts and station assigned reporter to observe and gather information on police attempts to uncover illegal drug activity. Henderson v. People, 879 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1994).

The newperson's privilege is a qualified privilege and may be overcome by establishing the three factors in subsection (3)(a) through (c). In addition, if the newperson is a defendant in the action where the disclosure is sought, as a part of the subsection (3)(c) analysis, there must be a satisfactory showing of the probable falsity of defendant's statements. Gordon v. Boyles, 9 P.3d 1106 (Colo. 2000).

APPOINTMENT OF INTERPRETERS FOR PERSONS WHO ARE DEAF OR HARD OF HEARING

Editor's note: This part 2 was numbered as article 3 of chapter 16, C.R.S. 1963. For amendments to this part 2 prior to 1987, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editors' notes following those sections that were relocated.

(a) When a person who is deaf or hard of hearing is present and participating as the principal party of interest or a witness at any civil or criminal proceeding, including but not limited to any criminal or civil court proceeding in the state court system; a court-ordered or court-provided alternative dispute resolution, mediation, arbitration, or treatment; an administrative, commission, or agency hearing; or a hearing of a licensing authority of the state;

(b) When a person who is deaf or hard of hearing is involved in any stage of grand jury or jury proceedings as a potential or selected juror;

(c) When a juvenile whose parent or parents are deaf or hard of hearing is brought before a court for any reason;

(d) When a person who is deaf or hard of hearing is arrested and taken into custody for an alleged violation of a criminal law of the state or any of its political subdivisions. Such appointment shall be made prior to any attempt to notify the arrestee of his or her constitutional rights and prior to any attempt to interrogate or to take a statement from such person; except that a person who is deaf or hard of hearing and who is otherwise eligible for release shall not be held pending the arrival of a qualified interpreter.

(e) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2006, p. 1088, § 4, effective May 25, 2006.)

(f) When effective communication cannot be established without an auxiliary service and when an alleged victim or witness is a person who is deaf or hard of hearing, who uses sign language for effective communication, and who is questioned or otherwise interviewed by a person having a law enforcement or prosecutorial function in any criminal investigation, except where the length, importance, or complexity of the communication does not warrant provision of an auxiliary service. Assessment of whether the length, importance, or complexity of the communication warrants provision of an auxiliary service shall be made in accordance with United States department of justice regulations effectuating Title II of the federal "Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990", as from time to time may be amended, Pub.L. 101-336, codified at 42 U.S.C. sec. 12101, et seq., including regulations, analysis, and technical assistance.

(g) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 2026, § 29, effective June 1, 2007.)

(1.5) Nothing in this part 2 shall be construed to provide less than is required by Title II of the federal "Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990", as from time to time may be amended, Pub.L. 101-336, codified at 42 U.S.C. sec. 12101 et seq., and its implementing regulations.

(2) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to preclude the use of services of an interpreter in civil proceedings.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-90-201 as it existed prior to 1987.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-90-204 is similar to § 13-91-201 as it existed prior to the 1987 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Effect of violation of statute. Assuming that accuracy is the central purpose of the statute, if a qualified interpreter who was not appointed by a court was translating, the failure to appoint an interpreter should not result in suppression; but if the interpreter was not able to accurately communicate with the defendant, the defendant's statements must be suppressed. People v. Harper, 726 P.2d 1129 (Colo. 1986).

Definition of arrest. Whether a person is in custody turns on an objective assessment of whether a reasonable person in the defendant's circumstances would have believed that he was free to leave the officer's presence, not on the officer's subjective state of mind. People v. Harper, 726 P.2d 1129 (Colo. 1986).

Only one interpreter required by statute, and defendant's assertion that second interpreter was necessary to assist communications between the defendant and his counsel because appointed interpreter was occupied with interpreting ongoing proceedings was without merit. People v. Hammons, 771 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1988), cert. denied, 785 P.2d 611 (Colo. 1990).

Police officer's request for blood or breath testing for alcohol is not interrogation because any person operating a motor vehicle must comply with breath and blood testing. Therefore, defendant is not entitled to a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service when a police officer requests a blood or breath sample as part of an investigation of driving under the influence. Shiplet v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 266 P.3d 408 (Colo. App. 2011).

13-90-205. Coordination of interpreter and auxiliary services requests. (1) The commission, in collaboration with the judicial department, shall establish, monitor, coordinate, and publish a list of available resources regarding communication accessibility for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing, including but not limited to qualified interpreters and auxiliary services, for use by an appointing authority pursuant to section 13-90-204. Such list shall contain, but not be limited to, the names of private community programs and agencies that secure qualified interpreters and auxiliary services for assignment.

(2) Whenever a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service is required pursuant to section 13-90-204, the appointing authority shall secure such interpreter or auxiliary service through the list of available resources made available and coordinated by the commission.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

13-90-206. Use of an intermediary interpreter. If the qualified interpreter makes a determination that he or she is unable to render a satisfactory interpretation without the aid of an intermediary interpreter, the appointing authority may appoint an intermediary interpreter to assist the qualified interpreter.

13-90-207. Requirements to be met prior to commencing proceedings. (1) Prior to commencing any proceedings pursuant to section 13-90-204 requiring a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service, the following conditions shall be met:

(a) A qualified interpreter shall take an oath that he or she shall make a true interpretation in an understandable manner to the best of his or her skills, but such oath shall only be required if the entity presiding over the proceeding has been given, by statute, the authority to administer such an oath.

(b) The qualified interpreter or auxiliary service shall be in full view and spatially situated to assure effective communication with the person or persons who are deaf or hard of hearing.

(c) The appointing authority shall make a reasonable attempt to provide a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service that is effective to the person who is deaf or hard of hearing.

Source: L. 87: Entire part R&RE, p. 572, § 1, effective April 23. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 1089, § 7, effective May 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-90-203 as it existed prior to 1987.

13-90-208. Waiver. The right of a person who is deaf or hard of hearing to a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service may not be waived except in writing by the person who is deaf or hard of hearing. Prior to executing such a waiver, a person who is deaf or hard of hearing may have access to counsel for advice and shall have actual, full knowledge of the right to effective communication. Such waiver is subject to the approval of counsel, if any, to the person who is deaf or hard of hearing and is also subject to the approval of the appointing authority. In no event is the failure of the person who is deaf or hard of hearing to request a qualified interpreter or auxiliary service deemed a waiver of this right.

Compensation. Subject to the appropriations available to the commission, a qualified interpreter or computer-aided realtime translation reporter provided pursuant to section 13-90-204 shall be entitled to compensation for his or her services, including waiting time and necessary travel and subsistence expenses. The amount of compensation shall be based on a fee schedule for qualified interpreters and auxiliary services established by the commission.

PREFATORY NOTE

1. History of Uniform Acts

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws has twice promulgated acts dealing with interstate discovery procedures.

In 1920, the Uniform Foreign Depositions Act was adopted by NCCUSL. The pertinent section of that act provides:

Whenever any mandate, writ or commission is issued from any court of record in any foreign jurisdiction, or whenever upon notice or agreement it is required to take the testimony of a witness in this state, the witness may be compelled to appear and testify in the same manner and by the same process as employed for taking testimony in matters pending in the courts of this state.

The UFDA was originally adopted in 13 states. The states and territories which currently have the act include Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Nevada, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia, Wyoming, and the Virgin Islands.

In 1962, the Uniform Interstate and International Procedure Act was adopted by NCCUSL. The act was designed to supercede any previous interstate jurisdiction acts, including the UFDA, and was more extensive than the UFDA, having provisions on personal jurisdiction, service methods, deposition methods, and other topics. Section 3.02(a) of the act provides:

[A court][The _____ court] of this state may order a person who is do-

miciled or is found within this state to give his testimony or statement or to produce documents or other things for use in a proceeding in a tribunal outside this state. The order may be made upon the application of any interested person or in response to a letter rogatory and may prescribe the practice and procedure, which may be wholly or in part the practice and procedure of the tribunal outside this state, for taking the testimony or statement or producing the documents or other things. To the extent that the order does not prescribe otherwise, the practice and procedure shall be in accordance with that of the court of this state issuing the order. The order may direct that the testimony or statement be given, or document or other thing produced, before a person appointed by the court. The person appointed shall have power to administer any necessary oath.

The UIIPA was originally adopted by 6 states. The states, districts, and territories which currently have the act include Arkansas, District of Columbia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and the Virgin Islands.

In 1977 the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws withdrew the UIIPA from recommendation "due to its being obsolete." Until now, no other uniform act for interstate depositions has been proposed.

2. Common issues

While every state has a rule governing foreign depositions, those rules are hardly uniform.

These differences are extensively detailed in Interstate Deposition Statutes: Survey and Analysis, 11 U. Balt. L. Rev 1, 1981. Some of the more important differences among the various states are the following:

a. In what kind of proceeding may depositions be taken?

Many states restrict depositions to those that will be used in the "courts" or "judicial proceedings" of the other state. Some states allow depositions for any "proceeding." The UFDA and UIIPA take a similar approach.

b. Who may seek depositions?

A few states limit discovery to only the parties in the action or proceeding. Other states simply use the term "party" without any further qualifier, which may be interpreted broadly to include any interested party. Still other states expressly allow any person who would have the power to take a deposition in the trial state to take a deposition in the discovery state. The UIIPA allows any "interested party" to seek discovery. The UFDA does not state who may seek discovery.

c. What matters can be covered in a subpoena?

The UFDA expressly applies only to the "testimony" of witnesses. The UIIPA expressly applies to "testimony or documents or other things." Several states follow the UIIPA approach, while others seem to limit production to documents but not physical things, and still others are silent on the subject, although some of those states recognize that the power to produce documents is implicit. Rule 45 of the FRCP is more explicit, and provides that a subpoena may be issued to a witness "to attend and give testimony or to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, documents or tangible things in the possession, custody or control of that person, or to permit inspection of premises..."

d. What is the procedure for obtaining a deposition subpoena?

Under the UFDA, a party must file the same notice of deposition that would be used in the trial state and then serve the witness with a subpoena under the law of the trial state. If a motion to compel is necessary, it must be filed in the discovery state (the deponent's home court). Other states require that a notice of deposition be shown to a clerk or judge in the discovery state, after which a subpoena will automatically issue. Still other states require a letter rogatory requesting the trial state to issue a subpoena. Under the UIIPA, either an application or letter rogatory is required. About 20 states require an attorney in the discovery state to file a miscellaneous action to establish jurisdiction over the witness so that the witness can then be subpoenaed.

e. What is the procedure for serving a deposition subpoena?

The UFDA provides that the witness "may be compelled to appear and testify in the same manner and by the same process and proceeding as may be employed for the purpose of taking testimony in proceedings pending in this state." The UIIPA provides that methods of service includes service "in the manner prescribed by the law of the place in which the service is made for service in that place in an action in any of its courts of general jurisdiction." State rules usually follow the procedure of the UFDA and UIIPA.

f. Which jurisdiction has power to enforce or quash a subpoena?

Most states give the discovery state power to issue, refuse to issue, or quash a subpoena.

g. Where can the deponent be deposed?

Some states limit the place where a deposition can be taken to the discovery state, and some limit it to the deponent's home county. The UFDA and UIIPA are silent on this issue.

h. What witness fees are required?

A few states require the payment of witness fees. While most states are silent on the issue, it is probably assumed that the witness fee rules generally existing in the discovery state apply. These usually include fees and mileage, and are usually required to be paid at the time the witness testifies.

i. Which jurisdiction's discovery procedure applies?

A significant issue is whether the trial state's or discovery state's discovery procedure controls, and on what issues. The general Restatement rule is that the forum state's (the discovery state's) procedure applies. The UIIPA, as well as many states, provides that the discovery state can use the procedure of either the trial or discovery state, with a presumption for the procedure of the discovery state. Some states reverse this presumption, while others are unclear, and still others are silent on the issue.

Another significant issue is whether the trial state's or discovery state's courts can issue protective orders. Both states have interests: the trial state's courts have an interest in protecting witnesses and litigants from improper practices, and the discovery state's courts have an obvious interest in protecting its residents from unreasonable and overly burdensome discovery requests. Most states expressly or implicitly allow the discovery state's courts to issue protective orders.

j. Which jurisdiction's evidence law applies?

Evidentiary disputes usually center on relevance and privilege issues. Most states indicate that the discovery state should rule on all relevance issues. Other states indicate that relevance issues should be resolved before a subpoena issues, which would necessarily mean that such issues be decided by the trial state. If the discovery state makes such determinations, it is unclear which state's evidence law should apply (if there is a difference).

Perhaps the most difficult issues are whether the trial state or discovery state should determine issues of privilege, and which state's privilege law will apply. Here both jurisdictions have important interests: the trial state has an interest in obtaining all information relevant to the lawsuit consistent with its laws, while the discovery state has an interest in protecting its residents from intrusive foreign laws. The Restatement (Second) Conflict of Laws provides that the state which has the "most significant relationship" to the communication at issue applies its laws. The issue is further compounded by the general rule that once the privilege is waived, it is generally waived. If the deponent does not object at the deposition and testifies about privileged communications, the privilege will usually be waived.

3. This act

A uniform act needs to set forth a procedure that can be easily and efficiently followed, that has a minimum of judicial oversight and intervention, that is cost-effective for the litigants, and is fair to the deponents. And it should be patterned after Rule 45 of the FRCP, which appears to be universally admired by civil litigators for its simplicity and efficiency.

The Drafting Committee believes that the proposed uniform act meets these requirements, should be supported by the various constituencies that have an interest in how interstate discovery is conducted in state courts, and should be adopted by most of the states. The act is simple and efficient: it establishes a simple clerical procedure under which a trial state subpoena can be used to issue a discovery state subpoena. The act has minimal judicial oversight: it eliminates the need for obtaining a commission, letters rogatory, filing a miscellaneous action, or other preliminary steps before obtaining a subpoena in the discovery state. The act is cost effective: it eliminates the need to obtain local counsel in the discovery state to obtain an enforceable subpoena. And the act is fair to deponents: it provides that motions brought to enforce, quash, or modify a subpoena, or for protective orders, shall be brought in the discovery state and will be governed by the discovery state's laws.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This Act is limited to discovery in state courts, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, and the territories of the United States. The committee decided not to extend this Act to include foreign countries including the Canadian provinces. The committee felt that international litigation is sufficiently different and is governed by different principles, so that discovery issues in that arena should be governed by a separate act.

The term "Subpoena" includes a subpoena duces tecum. The description of a subpoena in the Act is based on the language of Rule 45 of the FRCP.

13-90.5-103. Issuance of subpoena. (1) To request issuance of a subpoena under this section, a party must submit a foreign subpoena to the district court for the county in which discovery is sought to be conducted in this state. A request for the issuance of a subpoena under this section does not constitute an appearance in the courts of this state.

(2) When a party submits a foreign subpoena to a clerk of court in this state, the clerk, in accordance with that court's procedure, shall promptly issue a subpoena for service upon the person to which the foreign subpoena is directed.

(3) A subpoena under subsection (2) of this section must:

(a) Incorporate the terms used in the foreign subpoena; and

(b) Contain or be accompanied by the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all counsel of record in the proceeding to which the subpoena relates and of any party not represented by counsel.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The term "Court of Record" was chosen to exclude non-court of record proceedings from the ambit of the Act. The committee concluded that extending the Act to such proceedings as arbitrations would be a significant expansion that might generate resistance to the Act. A "Court of Record" includes anyone who is authorized to issue a subpoena under the laws of that state, which usually includes an attorney of record for a party in the proceeding.

The term "Presented" to a clerk of court includes delivering to or filing. Presenting a subpoena to the clerk of court in the discovery state, so that a subpoena is then issued in the name of the discovery state, is the necessary act that invokes the jurisdiction of the discovery state, which in turn makes the newly issued subpoena both enforceable and challengeable in the discovery state.

The committee envisions the standard procedure under this section will become as follows, using as an example a case filed in Kansas (the trial state) where the witness to be deposed lives in Florida (the discovery state): A lawyer of record for a party in the action pending in Kansas will issue a subpoena in Kansas (the same way lawyers in Kansas routinely issue subpoenas in pending actions). That lawyer will then check with the clerk's office, in the Florida county or district in which the witness to be deposed lives, to obtain a copy of its subpoena form (the clerk's office will usually have a Web page explaining its forms and procedures). The lawyer will then prepare a Florida subpoena so that it has the same terms as the Kansas subpoena. The lawyer will then hire a process server (or local counsel) in Florida, who will take the completed and executed Kansas subpoena and the completed but not yet executed Florida subpoena to the clerk's office in Florida. In addition, the lawyer might prepare a short transmittal letter to accompany the Kansas subpoena, advising the clerk that the Florida subpoena is being sought pursuant to Florida statute ____ (citing the appropriate statute or rule and quoting Sec. 3). The clerk of court, upon being given the Kansas subpoena, will then issue the identical Florida subpoena ("issue" includes signing, stamping, and assigning a case or docket number). The process server (or other agent of the party) will pay any necessary filing fees, and then serve the Florida subpoena on the deponent in accordance with Florida law (which includes any applicable local rules).

The term "Subpoena" does not include a subpoena for the inspection of a person (subsection (3)(C) is limited to inspection of premises). Medical examinations in a personal injury case, for example, are separately controlled by state discovery rules (the corresponding federal rule is Rule 35 of the FRCP). Since the plaintiff is already subject to the jurisdiction of the trial state, a subpoena is never necessary.

The advantages of this process are readily apparent. The act of the clerk of court is ministerial, yet is sufficient to invoke the jurisdiction of the discovery state over the deponent. The only documents that need to be presented to the clerk of court in the discovery state are the subpoena issued in the trial state and the draft subpoena of the discovery state. There is no need to hire local counsel to have the subpoena issued in the discovery state, and there is no need to present the matter to a judge in the discovery state before the subpoena can be issued. In effect, the clerk of court in the discovery state simply reissues the subpoena of the trial state, and the new subpoena is then served on the deponent in accordance with the laws of the discovery state. The process is simple and efficient, costs are kept to a minimum, and local counsel and judicial participation are unnecessary to have the subpoena issued and served in the discovery state.

This Act will not change or repeal the law in those states that still require a commission or letters rogatory to take a deposition in a foreign jurisdiction. The Act does, however, repeal the law in those discovery states that still require a commission or letter rogatory from a trial state before a deposition can be taken in those states. It is the hope of the Conference that this Act will encourage states that still require the use of commissions or letters rogatory to repeal those laws.

The Act requires that, when the subpoena is served, it contain or be accompanied by the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all counsel of record and of any party not represented by counsel. The committee believes that this requirement imposes no significant burden on the lawyer issuing the subpoena, given that the lawyer already has the obligation to send a notice of deposition to every counsel of record and any unrepresented parties. The benefits in the discovery state, by contrast, are significant. This requirement makes it easy for the deponent (or, as will frequently be the case, the deponent's lawyer) to learn the names of and contact the other lawyers in the case. This requirement can easily be met, since the subpoena will contain or be accompanied by the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all counsel of record and of any party not represented by counsel (which is the same information that will ordinarily be contained on a notice of deposition and proof of service).

13-90.5-104. Service of subpoena. A subpoena issued by a clerk of court under section 13-90.5-103 must be served in compliance with section 13-90-115, rule 45 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, and any other applicable statutes or rules of this state.

13-90.5-105. Deposition, production, and inspection. Section 13-90-112, rule 37 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, and any other applicable statutes or rules of this state apply to subpoenas issued under section 13-90.5-103.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The Act requires that the discovery permitted by this section must comply with the laws of the discovery state. The discovery state has a significant interest in these cases in protecting its residents who become non-party witnesses in an action pending in a foreign jurisdiction from any unreasonable or unduly burdensome discovery request. Therefore, the committee believes that the discovery procedure must be the same as it would be if the case had originally been filed in the discovery state.

The committee believes that the fee, if any, for issuing a subpoena should be sufficient to cover only the actual transaction costs, or should be the same as the fee for local deposition subpoenas.

13-90.5-106. Application to court. An application to the court for a protective order or to enforce, quash, or modify a subpoena issued by a clerk of court under section 13-90.5-103 must comply with the rules or statutes of this state and be submitted to the district court for the county in which discovery is to be conducted.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 197, § 1, effective August 5.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The act requires that any application to the court for a protective order, or to enforce, quash, or modify a subpoena, or for any other dispute relating to discovery under this Act, must comply with the law of the discovery state. Those laws include the discovery state's procedural, evidentiary, and conflict of laws rules. Again, the discovery state has a significant interest in protecting its residents who become non-party witnesses in an action pending in a foreign jurisdiction from any unreasonable or unduly burdensome discovery requests, and this is easily accomplished by requiring that any discovery motions must be decided under the laws of the discovery state. This protects the deponent by requiring that all applications to the court that directly affect the deponent must be made in the discovery state.

The term “modify” a subpoena means to alter the terms of a subpoena, such as the date, time, or location of a deposition.

Evidentiary issues that may arise, such as objections based on grounds such as relevance or privilege, are best decided in the discovery state under the laws of the discovery state (including its conflict of laws principles).

Nothing in this act limits any party from applying for appropriate relief in the trial state.

Applications to the court that affect only the parties to the action can be made in the trial state. For example, any party can apply for an order in the trial state to bar the deposition of the out-of-state deponent on grounds of relevance, and that motion would be made and ruled on before the deposition subpoena is ever presented to the clerk of court in the discovery state.

If a party makes or responds to an application to enforce, quash, or modify a subpoena in the discovery state, the lawyer making or responding to the application must comply with the discovery state’s rules governing lawyers appearing in its courts. This act does not change existing state rules governing out-of-state lawyers appearing in its courts. (See Model Rule 5.5 and state rules governing the unauthorized practice of law.)

13-90.5-107. Uniformity of application and construction. In applying and construing this uniform act, consideration must be given to the need to promote uniformity of the law with respect to its subject matter among states that enact it.

13-91-102. Legislative declaration. (1) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that the legal representation of and non-legal advocacy on behalf of children is a critical element in giving children a voice in the Colorado court system. The general assembly further finds that the representation of children is unique in that children often have no resources with which to retain the services of an attorney or advocate, they are unable to efficiently provide or communicate to such an attorney or advocate the information needed to effectively serve the best interests or desires of that child, and they lack the ability and understanding to effectively evaluate and, if necessary, complain about the quality of representation they receive. Accordingly, the general assembly finds that the representation of children necessitates significant expertise as well as a substantial investment in time and fiscal resources. The general assembly finds that, to date, the state has been sporadic, at best, in the provision of qualified services and financial resources to this disadvantaged and voiceless population.

(b) Accordingly, the general assembly hereby determines and declares that it is in the best interests of the children of the state of Colorado, in order to reduce needless expenditures, establish enhanced funding resources, and improve the quality of representation and advocacy provided to children in the Colorado court system, that an office of the child's representative be established in the state judicial department.

(2) It is the intent of the general assembly that an office of the child's representative shall be established pursuant to this article and operational over the course of a two-year period. It is further the intent of the general assembly that a board and a director of the office shall be appointed as specified in section 13-91-104 and that the operational structure of the office shall be established during fiscal year 2000-01. The costs associated with the establishment of the office, including the associated FTE, shall be paid for by a transfer from the state judicial, trial courts, mandated costs line item. In addition, it is the intent of the general assembly that, for fiscal year 2001-02 and fiscal years thereafter, an appropriation shall be made to the office of the child's representative in the state judicial department for the purpose of payment of all financial obligations previously covered by the judicial department, trial courts, mandated costs line item relating to the provision of those legal services to children that are addressed in this article.

13-91-104. Office of the child's representative - board - qualifications of director.

(1) The office of the child's representative is hereby created and established as an agency of the judicial department of state government. It shall be the responsibility of the office of the child's representative to work cooperatively with local judicial districts, attorneys, and any contract entity in order to form a partnership between those entities and persons and the state for the purpose of ensuring the provision of uniform, high-quality legal representation and non-legal advocacy to children involved in judicial proceedings in Colorado.

(2) (a) The Colorado supreme court shall appoint a nine-member child's representative board, referred to in this article as the "board". No more than five members of the board shall be from the same political party. The members of the board shall be representative of each of the congressional districts in the state. Three members of the board shall be attorneys admitted to practice law in this state who have experience in representing children as guardians ad litem or as legal representatives of children. Three members of the board shall be citizens of Colorado not admitted to practice law in this state, who shall have experience at advocating for children in the court system. Three members of the board shall be citizens of the state who are not attorneys and who have not served as CASA volunteers or child and family investigators.

(b) Members of the board shall serve for terms of four years; except that, of the members first appointed, five shall serve for terms of two years. Vacancies on the board shall be filled by the supreme court for the remainder of any unexpired term. In making appointments to the board, the supreme court shall consider place of residence, gender, race, and ethnic background. The supreme court shall establish procedures for the operation of the board.

(c) Members of the board shall serve without compensation but shall be reimbursed for actual and reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

(d) Any expenses incurred for the board shall be paid from the general operating budget of the office of the child's representative.

(3) The board shall have the following responsibilities:

(a) (I) To appoint, and discharge for cause, a person to serve as the director of the office of the child's representative, referred to in this section as the "director".

(II) The director shall have been licensed to practice law in this state for at least five years prior to appointment and shall be familiar with the unique demands of representing a child in the court system. The director shall devote his or her full time to the performance of his or her duties and shall not engage in the private practice of law.

(III) The compensation of the director shall be fixed by the general assembly and may not be reduced during the term of the director's appointment.

(b) To fill any vacancy in the directorship for the remainder of the unexpired term;

(c) To work cooperatively with the director to provide governance to the office of the child's representative, to provide fiscal oversight of the general operating budget of the office of the child's representative, to participate in funding decisions relating to the provision of GAL, CASA, and representative of the child services throughout the state, and to assist with the duties of the office of the child's representative concerning GAL and CASA training, as needed.

ARTICLE 1

Adoption of Adults

14-1-101. Adoption of adults.

14-1-101. Adoption of adults. (1) Any person desiring to adopt an adult as heir at law shall file his petition therefor in the juvenile court of the county of his residence or the county of the residence of the person sought to be adopted, and thereupon summons shall issue the same as provided in the Colorado rules of civil procedure and be served on the person sought to be adopted. Such person shall file in the court a written answer to the petition within the time required by the summons and shall either consent to such adoption or deny or disclaim all desire to be adopted by such person.

(2) Upon the filing, by the person sought to be adopted, of a disclaimer of all desire to become the heir at law of the petitioner, the petition shall be dismissed by the court, but upon the filing of a consent to such adoption, whether by the person sought to be adopted or by a legally qualified conservator or other representative if such person is non compos mentis at the time, the prayer of the petition shall be granted, and a decree of adoption shall be rendered and entered by the court declaring such person the heir at law of the petitioner and entitled to inherit from the petitioner any property in all respects as if such adopted person had been the petitioner's child born in lawful wedlock, and such decree may or may not change the name of such adopted person, as the court rendering the decree may deem advisable; and such decree or a certified copy thereof may be used as primary evidence in any court establishing the status of the person so adopted.

(3) Any action for adoption pursuant to this section shall follow the same procedure insofar as practicable as provided in part 2 of article 5 of title 19, C.R.S., concerning the adoption of children.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "The Right of Inheritance of Adopted Children in Colorado", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 191 (1950). For note, "Adoption and Intestacy in Colorado", see 26 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 65 (1953). For article, "The Adoption of Children in Colorado", see 37 Dicta 100 (1960).

Annotator's note. Since § 14-1-101 is similar to repealed § 4-1-13, CRS 53, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

The primary purpose of this section is expressed in the first sentence: "Any person desiring to adopt a person over 21 years of age as heir-at-law ....". Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

The name of the person adopted under this section need not be changed. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

No obligation whatsoever is placed upon the person adopted with respect to the adoptive parent, and he is granted no rights whatever, other than the acquisition of an heir-at-law, who may or may not even bear his name. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

This section is merely a means of giving effect to a personal transaction mutually agreeable between two adults. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

No rights of the natural parents of the person adopted are taken from them, or even mentioned, where the purpose of the adoption is, to acquire an adult "heir-at-law". Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

Certainly the rights of the natural parents of such person so adopted may not be lost in a proceeding of which they receive no notice, and there is no requirement of service of notice upon them. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

The effect of an adult adoption and a child adoption are different. A person adopts an adult to make such person his or her intestate heir. Matter of Trust created by Belgard, 829 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1991).

This section requires the trial court to grant an adult adoption when there is valid service and the adoptee consents to such adoption. There is no additional requirement that there be a minimum age differential between the adoptor and the adoptee nor is adoption precluded based upon the prior relationship of the parties. In re P.A.L. von R., 5 P.3d 390 (Colo. App. 2000).

It does not violate public policy of state to permit a person to adopt his or her own adult sibling. In re P.A.L. von R., 5 P.3d 390 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where one over the age of 21 years is adopted as an heir-at-law by another person, such adoptive parent is without legal status to maintain action under the wrongful death statute for the death of such adopted person. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

Considering the circumstances at the time the trust was executed and the settlor's reasonable expectations, the phrase "persons legally adopted" was held to include adopted children only, not adults. The court held that the respondent was using the adult adoption statute to entitle his wife to a remainder of the trust estate, contrary to the settlor's intent as set forth in the instrument. Matter of Trust created by Belgard, 829 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1991).

The general assembly's desire to place adopted and natural children on par with one another does not extend to permit adult adoptions for the purpose of giving them an interest in property already specifically designated. Such an adoption decree did not have the power to affect the disposition of such interests, it only granted the right to inherit through intestacy. Matter of Trust created by Belgard, 829 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1991).

Adult adoption proceedings in juvenile court are confidential. In re W.D.A. v. City & County of Denver, 632 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1981).

Section 19-4-104 (1) (now § 19-5-215), relating to confidentiality of records, applies to adult adoption proceedings under this section. In re W.D.A. v. City & County of Denver, 632 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1981).

14-2-108. Judicial approval. (1) The juvenile court, as defined in section 19-1-103 (17), C.R.S., after a reasonable effort has been made to notify the parents or guardian of each underage party, may order the county clerk and recorder to issue a marriage license and a marriage certificate form:

(a) To a party aged sixteen or seventeen years who has no parent or guardian, or who has no parent capable of consenting to his marriage, or whose parent or guardian has not consented to his marriage; or

(b) To a party under the age of sixteen years who has the consent to his or her marriage of both parents, if capable of giving consent, or his or her guardian or, if the parents are not living together, the parent who has legal custody or decision-making responsibility concerning such matters or with whom the child is living.

(2) A license shall be ordered to be issued under subsection (1) of this section only if the court finds that the underage party is capable of assuming the responsibilities of marriage and the marriage would serve his best interests. Pregnancy alone does not establish that the best interests of the party would be served.

(3) The district court or the juvenile court, as the case may be, shall authorize performance of a marriage by proxy upon the showing required by the provisions on solemnization, being section 14-2-109.

14-2-109. Solemnization and registration. (1) A marriage may be solemnized by a judge of a court, by a court magistrate, by a retired judge of a court, by a public official whose powers include solemnization of marriages, by the parties to the marriage, or in accordance with any mode of solemnization recognized by any religious denomination or Indian nation or tribe. Either the person solemnizing the marriage or, if no individual acting alone solemnized the marriage, a party to the marriage shall complete the marriage certificate form and forward it to the county clerk and recorder within sixty-three days after the solemnization. Any person who fails to forward the marriage certificate to the county clerk and recorder as required by this section shall be required to pay a late fee in an amount of not less than twenty dollars. An additional five-dollar late fee may be assessed for each additional day of failure to comply with the forwarding requirements of this subsection (1) up to a maximum of fifty dollars. For purposes of determining whether a late fee shall be assessed pursuant to this subsection (1), the date of forwarding shall be deemed to be the date of postmark.

(2) If a party to a marriage is unable to be present at the solemnization, such party may authorize in writing a third person to act as such party's proxy. If the person solemnizing the marriage is satisfied that the absent party is unable to be present and has consented to the marriage, such person may solemnize the marriage by proxy. If such person is not satisfied, the parties may petition the district court for an order permitting the marriage to be solemnized by proxy.

(3) Upon receipt of the marriage certificate, the county clerk and recorder shall register the marriage.

- (a) Each party is eighteen years of age or older; and
  - (b) The marriage is not prohibited, as provided in section 14-2-110.
- (2) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 14-2-112, a common law marriage

Putative spouse entitled to legal spouse's right to workmen's compensation. While it is true that a marriage entered into prior to dissolution of a previous marriage is prohibited in Colorado, an innocent party to such a marriage is not deprived of the rights conferred upon a legal spouse. As a putative spouse, upon the other person's death, she acquires the legal spouse's right to workmen's compensation. Williams v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 670 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1983).

A common law marriage cannot be found where decedent knew that plaintiff was legally married to someone not the decedent at the time the decedent died despite anything decedent may have said regarding an intention to marry plaintiff and plaintiff's acquisition of a retroactive divorce after decedent died. 14-2-111. Putative spouse. Any person who has cohabited with another to whom he is not legally married in the good faith belief that he was married to that person is a putative spouse until knowledge of the fact that he is not legally married terminates his status and prevents acquisition of further rights. Children born of putative spouses are legitimate. A putative spouse acquires the rights conferred upon a legal spouse, including the right to maintenance following termination of his status, whether or not the marriage is prohibited under section 14-2-110, declared invalid, or otherwise terminated by court action. If there is a legal spouse or other putative spouses, rights acquired by a putative spouse do not supersede the rights of the legal spouse or those acquired by other putative spouses, but the court shall apportion property, maintenance, and support rights among the claimants as appropriate in the circumstances and in the interests of justice.

Whatever property belonged to her while single, or came to her while covert, passed absolutely to her husband, or fell under his domain. Daniels v. Benedict, 97 F. 367 (8th Cir. 1899).

Moreover, she could possess nothing to her separate use, she could alienate nothing during her life, she could bequeath nothing at her death, she could make no contract, and she could bring no suit. Daniels v. Benedict, 97 F. 367 (8th Cir. 1899).

III. STATUTORY RIGHTS OF MARRIED WOMEN.

A. In General.

By sundry legislative acts, dating from an early period, the disabilities of coverture have been gradually removed. Williams v. Williams, 20 Colo. 51, 37 P. 614 (1894).

The wife in Colorado was emancipated from the condition of thralldom in which she was placed at common law. Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487 (1877).

The wife in Colorado is the wife under this act, and not the wife at common law, and by this act must her rights be determined, the common law affecting her rights having been swept away. Schuler v. Henry, 42 Colo. 367, 94 P. 360 (1908).

This act removed every disability which coverture had formerly imposed upon married women, so far as their separate property and earnings are concerned. Tuttle v. Shutts, 43 Colo. 534, 96 P. 260 (1908); Hedlund v. Hedlund, 87 Colo. 607, 290 P. 285 (1930).

This act places the married woman upon precisely the same footing with a femme sole, as to all matters relating to her separate property and earnings, and she may make contracts, perform labor and services on her own account, sue and be sued with reference to her separate property, business, and earnings, as if she were sole. Tuttle v. Shutts, 43 Colo. 534, 96 P. 260 (1908); Hedlund v. Hedlund, 87 Colo. 607, 290 P. 285 (1930).

Furthermore, an attempt to apply both the common law and the statutory law must end in failure. Stramann v. Scheeren, 7 Colo. App. 1, 42 P. 191 (1883).

Also, under this section when considered with the other sections of this part of article 2 of title 14, it has been uniformly held that contracts and conveyances between husband and wife are presumptively valid and effectual, without proof aliunde of their equity or justice. Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487 (1877); Coon v. Rigden, 4 Colo. 275 (1878); O'Connell v. Taney, 16 Colo. 353, 27 P. 888 (1891); Kellogg v. Kellogg, 21 Colo. 181, 40 P. 358 (1895); Daniels v. Benedict, 97 F. 367 (8th Cir. 1899).

Courts can only carefully scrutinize transactions between husband and wife to see that they are not collusive, and in fraud of the rights of others, and then apply to them the same rules and legal principles that control in dealing with others. Stramann v. Scheeren, 7 Colo. App. 1, 42 P. 191 (1895).

Husbands and wives are equal under the law in respect to the conjugal affection and society which each owes to the other. Williams v. Williams, 20 Colo. 51, 37 P. 614 (1894).

Gifts made by the husband, while sick, to the wife, were set aside at the suit of the executors of the husband's estate after his death, because of the undue influence exercised by the latter over the former in procuring the same. Meldrum v. Meldrum, 15 Colo. 478, 24 P. 1083 (1890).

It was held that a deed procured by the fraud of the wife to be made to a third party for her benefit would be set aside in equity Meldrum v. Meldrum, 15 Colo. 478, 24 P. 1083 (1890).

B. Under This Section.

Under this section the wife holds an absolute legal estate as free from the common-law rights of her husband as if she were unmarried. Palmer v. Hanna, 6 Colo. 55 (1881).

For the wife's separate estate when she has no husband, see Palmer v. Hanna, 6 Colo. 55 (1881).

14-2-202. Married woman may sue and be sued. Any woman, while married, may sue and be sued, in all matters having relation to her property, person, or reputation, in the same manner as if she were sole.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Damages Recoverable for Injuries to A Spouse in Colorado", see 28 Dicta 291 (1951).

Until 1874 married women were under disability and could not sue or be sued except in matters relating to their separate estates. Schuler v. Henry, 42 Colo. 367, 94 P. 360, (1908).

Since this section confers upon the wife capacity to take and dispose of real property free from any restraint, the reason of the common-law rule has ceased to exist. Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487 (1877); Whyman v. Johnston, 62 Colo. 461, 163 P. 76 (1917).

This section provides that any gift of money from the husband shall be the sole and separate property of the wife, and not subject to the disposal of the husband or his creditors. Woodruff v. Clarke, 128 Colo. 387, 262 P.2d 737 (1953).

Where the husband owned city lots and the wife had money which she desired to invest, and under mutual agreement the lots were improved with her money, it was held that she had an equitable interest in the property which could be asserted against her husband. Stramann v. Scheeren, 7 Colo. App. 1, 42 P. 191 (1895).

Where the husband acquires and pays for real property, and causes his wife's name to be inserted in the deed as one of the grantees therein, there is a presumption that he intended it as a gift or advancement, and the burden of showing otherwise is upon him who asserts it. Woodruff v. Clarke, 128 Colo. 387, 262 P.2d 737 (1953).

There can be no doubt of the power of a husband to dispose absolutely of his property during his life, independently of the concurrence, and exonerated from the claim of his wife, provided the transaction is not merely colorable, and is unattended with circumstances indicative of fraud upon the rights of the wife. Goldberg v. Musim, 162 Colo. 461, 427 P.2d 698 (1967).

If the disposition of the husband be bona fide, and no right is reserved to him, though made to defeat the right of the wife, it will be good against her. Goldberg v. Musim, 162 Colo. 461, 427 P.2d 698 (1967).

The statute up to that time also provided that when judgment was rendered against the husband and wife for the tort of the wife, execution should first be levied on the lands of the wife, if she had any. Schuler v. Henry, 42 Colo. 367, 94 P. 360 (1908).

This section contains the provision which emancipates married women from many of the disabilities imposed by the common law, and the decisions of the courts lay emphasis on the wife's independence of her husband in that she is guaranteed a remedy against ill persons, including her husband, for every personal injury she may sustain. Giggey v. Gallagher Transp. Co., 101 Colo. 258, 72 P.2d 1100 (1937).

There is no exception as to the person the wife may sue. Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 24, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

In view of the broad, liberal provisions of the constitution and statutes of this state, and the liberal construction thereof adopted by the courts of this state, the supreme court of Colorado was unwilling to follow the decisions of courts that held that a wife had no right to sue her husband for a personal injury caused by him. Rains v. Rains, 97 Colo. 19, 46 P.2d 740 (1935).

This section admits a married woman to the courts upon the same terms as if she were sole, and for this reason, if for no other, she cannot claim indulgence on the ground of coverture. Mills v. Angela, 1 Colo. 334 (1871).

The married woman is not like an infant who is incapable of acting for himself, and is compelled to rely upon a guardian ad litem, who may be careless or unfaithful. Mills v. Angela, 1 Colo. 334 (1871).

The law clothes her with power to manage her own affairs, and she ought to accept the responsibility which attends upon free agency. Mills v. Angela, 1 Colo. 334 (1871).

She is under no disability in respect to the time or manner of putting in her defense to an action brought against her. Mills v. Angela, 1 Colo. 334 (1871).

To enable a wife to join with her husband in an action upon an undertaking, the engagement must have been with her distinctly and unquestionably. Allen v. Eldridge, 1 Colo. 287 (1871).

The wife may maintain an action for damages against one who wrongfully induces and procures her husband to abandon her or send her away. Williams v. Williams, 20 Colo. 51, 37 P. 614 (1894).

A husband has a right to maintain an action against his wife to recover property belonging to him. Hedlund v. Hedlund, 87 Colo. 607, 290 P. 285 (1930).

So diverse are the rights and interests, the duties, obligations, and disabilities of husband and wife now, that it would be most unreasonable to hold him still liable for the torts committed by her without his presence and without his consent or approbation. Schuler v. Henry, 42 Colo. 367, 94 P. 360 (1908).

The Uniform Marriage Act neither expressly nor impliedly creates a private cause of action. Weizmann v. Kirkland and Ellis, 732 F. Supp. 1540 (D. Colo. 1990).

14-2-203. Rights in her separate business. Any married woman may carry on any trade or business and perform any labor or services on her sole and separate account, and the earnings of any married woman from her trade, business, labor, or services shall be her sole and separate property and may be used and invested by her in her own name. Her property acquired by trade, business, and services and the proceeds thereof may be taken on any execution against her.

ANNOTATION

Modern legal theory and statute have placed women on an equal footing with men regarding their rights to hold and manage property. Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971).

The wife is still to perform the usual and ordinary household duties. Denver & R. G. R. v. Young, 30 Colo. 349, 70 P. 688 (1902).

For such household services, she is not entitled to any monetary compensation from her husband. Denver & R. G. R. v. Young, 30 Colo. 349, 70 P. 688 (1902).

In an action by a married woman, living at the time with her husband, for damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by the negligence of defendant, she is not entitled to recover damages to compensate her for her inability to perform ordinary household duties. Denver & R. G. R. v. Young, 30 Colo. 349, 70 P. 688 (1902).

A contract between the husband and wife, by which the wife reserves to herself the earnings of her labor performed for her husband, in matters apart from the domestic duties of the wife pertaining strictly to the household and the family, may be entered into by the wife as if she were sole, and for this reason such contract cannot be held to be against public policy. Tuttle v. Shutts, 43 Colo. 534, 96 P. 260 (1908).

Contracts between a husband and his wife are not presumptively void. Daniels v. Benedict, 97 F. 367 (8th Cir. 1899).

Since some contracts between parties in fiduciary relations to each other are valid, and some are voidable or void, and some contracts between strangers are valid, and some are void, no definite conclusion can be drawn as to the validity or invalidity of a contract from the fact that the parties to it occupied a fiduciary relation to each other. Daniels v. Benedict, 97 F. 367 (8th Cir. 1899).

A promissory note given by a married woman and her husband, for property purchased by her as a sole trader, is valid in law, and the amount of such note may be recovered against the husband and wife in an action of assumpsit. Barnes v. De France, 2 Colo. 294 (1874).

Since under this section the rights of the wife to manage and control her individual property are well established, the relation of debtor and creditor may exist between husband and wife as fully as if both were sole, and the wife may deal with the husband as with a stranger, and in case of the insolvency of the husband, he may pay the wife to the exclusion of other creditors, but the existence of the individual property and the bona fides of the debt must, in other cases, be fully established. Knapp v. Day, 4 Colo. App. 21, 34 P. 1008 (1893).

Under this section a husband is deprived of all interest in the labor of his wife rendered to third persons, and a married woman may maintain an action in her own name to recover her earnings. Allen v. Eldridge, 1 Colo. 287 (1871).

It may be contended that the words "on her sole and separate account", in the first clause of this section restrict the woman's right to cases in which she declares her intention to appropriate the proceeds of her labor to her own use. But there is little room for such construction, because it must be presumed that every one who labors for hire is seeking his own personal emolument, for men do not sow that others may reap, and the highest claim to the fruits of labor is vested in him who performs it, and none other need be asserted. Allen v. Eldridge, 1 Colo. 287 (1871).

ANNOTATION

At common law, a married woman could convey her estate only by fine and recovery. Keller v. Klopfer, 3 Colo. 132 (1876).

Under the early law, it was provided that to convey her lands a married woman should unite with her husband in making the conveyance, that she should acknowledge the same, separate and apart from her husband, that the officer hearing the acknowledgment should certify that the same was made upon examination separate, apart from, and out of the presence of her husband, and that the contents, meaning, and effect of such deed were by the officer fully explained to the wife. Keller v. Klopfer, 3 Colo.

132 (1876); Nippel v. Hammond, 4 Colo. 211 (1878); Knight v. Lawrence, 19 Colo. 425, 36 P. 242 (1894).

Under present law, the married woman is in law deemed capable of managing her own affairs, and she has the power as well as the right to convey her real estate without let or hindrance from any one, and she requires no protection, and she suffers no restraints, in such matters. Knight v. Lawrence, 19 Colo. 425, 36 P. 242 (1894); Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487 (1877); Colo. Cent. R. R. v. Allen, 13 Colo. 229, 22 P. 605 (1889).

It was the intention to clothe her with all the rights of a femme sole. Scott v. Mills, 7 Colo. App. 155, 42 P. 1021 (1895).

The wife may make conveyance directly to her husband and the removal in respect to the wife of a disability that is mutual, and springing from the same source, removes it also as to the husband, and the husband may, acting in his own right, convey directly to the wife. Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487 (1877); O'Connell v. Taney, 16 Colo. 353, 27 P. 888 (1891); Rose v. Otis, 18 Colo. 59, 31 P. 493 (1892); Kellogg v. Kellogg, 21 Colo. 181, 40 P. 358 (1895); Scott v. Mills, 7 Colo. App. 155, 42 P. 1021 (1895); Stramann v. Scheeren, 7 Colo. App. 1, 42 P. 191 (1895); Tuttle v. Shutts, 43 Colo. 534, 96 P. 260 (1908).

In the nature of things and in the legislative mind, the husband and wife both possess the character of a householder and head of a family, at least to the extent to enable either of them owning the home they occupy to designate it as a homestead. McPhee v. O'Rourke, 10 Colo. 301, 15 P. 420 (1887).

14-2-208. Wife may contract. Any woman, while married, may contract debts in her own name and upon her own credit, and may execute promissory notes, bonds, bills of exchange, and other instruments in writing, and may enter into any contract the same as if she were sole; and, in all cases where any suit or other legal proceedings are instituted against her and any judgment, decree, or order therein is rendered or pronounced against her, the same may be enforced by execution or other process against her the same as if she were sole.

ANNOTATION

At common law a married woman, though living apart from her husband, could not make a binding contract except for necessities or for the benefit of her separate estate. Ferrand v. Beshoar, 9 Colo. 291, 12 P. 196 (1886).

In equity, before the statutes of 1872 and 1874, the written contract of a married woman, for the benefit of other persons, was not a charge upon her separate estate unless it contained an express provision to that effect. Ferrand v. Beshoar, 9 Colo. 291, 12 P. 196 (1886).

By the act of 1861, to protest the rights of married women, a wife could make contracts respecting her separate business and estate, but beyond these limits her contracts were governed by the common law and were therefore void, and she could not warrant her husband's title to realty, or covenant for his act or default in any respect whatever. Holladay v. Dailey, 1 Colo. 460 (1872).

In an action on contract against a married woman, a plea of coverture, without more, is not sufficient in law as a defense. Rose v. Otis, 18 Colo. 59, 31 P. 493 (1892).

Where the husband was joined as a codefendant with his wife in the district court, he not being a party to the contract sued upon, and no relief having been demanded against him in the complaint, it was held that upon default judgment should have been entered against the wife alone. Wilbur v. Maynard, 6 Colo. 483 (1883).

14-2-209. Loss of consortium. In all actions for a tort by a married woman, she shall have the same right to recover for loss of consortium of her husband as is afforded husbands in like actions.

Source: L. 61: p. 560, § 1. CRS 53: § 90-2-11. C.R.S. 1963: § 90-2-11.

ANNOTATION

While it was true that because of the married women's acts, married women could successfully maintain actions for interference with their rights to consortium which arose from intentional, malicious, or direct action by an outsider, nevertheless, the prevailing opinion and great weight of authority denied such an action to a married woman for indirect, remote, or consequential loss, and thus, a married woman had no right to recover for the loss of consortium alone occasioned by the negligent acts of third persons. Giggey v. Gallagher Transp. Co., 101 Colo. 258, 72 P.2d 1100 (1937) (decided prior to earliest source of this section, L. 61, p. 560, § 1); Franzen v. Zimmerman, 127 Colo. 381, 256 P.2d 897 (1953).

With the enactment of this section the rule denying a wife the right to sue for loss of consortium resulting from injuries inflicted upon her husband changed. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

At the time of the enactment of this statute, the right of a husband to recover for loss of consortium due to injuries inflicted upon his wife had not been denied or restricted by any later or higher authority. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

The general assembly intended to confer such right upon the wife, and to confer it upon her as a separate right similar to that held by married men. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

There may in such situations have been but one wrong, but from it sprang two separate and distinct rights of action, one in the husband and the other in the wife. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

Their actions are wholly distinct and separate from each other, and since there is no privity between them in the connection involved, and adjudication in one could not properly be res judicata in the other. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

Since the claim of the wife is her own right and is a right which is separate from the claims of her husband, it could have been and was validly separated from the pretrial settlement of the husband's claim for his personal injuries. Crouch v. West, 29 Colo. App. 72, 477 P.2d 805 (1970).

Recovery for loss between tort and time of death. Plaintiff bringing an action individually, as widow of the decedent, may recover for "loss of consortium" between the time the tort occurred and the date of decedent's death. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Loss not within former limits of wrongful death statute. Loss of consortium is an independent category, not to be included in those damages formerly limited under the wrongful death statute. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

14-2-210. Domicile - sex or marriage not a ban. The right of any person to become a resident domiciled in the state of Colorado shall not be denied or abridged because of sex or marital status, and the common law rule that the domicile of a married woman is that of her husband shall no longer be in effect in this state.

14-2-301. Short title. This part 3 shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Marital Agreement Act".

14-2-302. Definitions. As used in this part 3, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Marital agreement" means an agreement either between prospective spouses made in contemplation of marriage or between present spouses, but only if signed by both parties prior to the filing of an action for dissolution of marriage or for legal separation.

(2) "Party" means any person who has entered into a marital agreement.

(3) "Property" means an interest, present or future, legal or equitable, vested or contingent, in real or personal property, including income and earnings.

ANNOTATION

The requirement of subsection (1) that present spouses sign a marital agreement prior to the filing of a dissolution action is based on public policy considerations that seek to safeguard the interests of a spouse involved in the emotionally stressful circumstances of a dissolution action. In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

Agreement entered into between parties eight days prior to commencement of an action for dissolution in Sweden constitutes a marital agreement. Matter of C.G.G., 946 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1997).

Where agreement was entered into two days prior to mailing Mexican divorce papers and two months before the filing of a Colorado petition for dissolution of marriage, but executed in contemplation of a dissolution of marriage, it must be considered a separation agreement. In re Bisque, 31 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2001).

Post-nuptial agreement not enforceable under the plain language of the act because it was signed by husband and wife during the pendency of the prior dissolution action. In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

Giving effect to a nunc pro tunc dismissal of a dissolution of marriage action would be contrary to the public policy of the Colorado Marital Agreement Act where not only did the parties sign a post-nuptial agreement while a dissolution action was pending, but counsel had admonished the parties not to sign the agreement until that action had actually been dismissed. By the time counsel signed the stipulation for dismissal, the parties' attempted reconciliation had failed. In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

14-2-303. Formalities. A marital agreement shall be in writing and signed by both parties and is enforceable without consideration.

14-2-304. Content. (1) Parties may contract with respect to:

(a) The rights and obligations of each of the parties in any of the property of either or both of them whenever and wherever acquired or located;

(b) The acquisition, disposition, management, and control of any property;

(c) The disposition of property upon separation of the parties, dissolution of the marriage, death of either party, or the occurrence or nonoccurrence of any other event;

(d) The determination, modification, or elimination of spousal maintenance;

(e) The making of a will, trust, or other arrangement to carry out the provisions of the marital agreement;

(f) The ownership rights in and disposition of the death benefit from a life insurance policy;

(g) The rights and obligations in benefits available or to be available under an employee benefit or retirement plan, except to the extent federal law prevents a binding agreement with respect to such rights and obligations;

(h) The choice of law governing the construction of the agreement; and

(i) Any other matter, including the personal rights or obligations of either party, not in violation of public policy or any statute imposing a criminal penalty.

(2) Unless the marital agreement provides to the contrary, a waiver of "all rights upon death" (or equivalent language) in the property or estate of a present or prospective spouse is:

(a) A waiver of all rights to the elective share, exempt property, family allowance, and homestead exemption of the waiving party in the property of the other;

(b) A waiver of the statutory priority of the waiving party to serve as personal representative, executor, or administrator of the estate of the other; and

(c) A renunciation and disclaimer by the waiving party of all benefits that would otherwise pass to him or her from the other by intestate succession or by virtue of the provisions of any will executed before the marital agreement. Provisions of a will executed before the marital agreement are given effect as if the waiving party:

(I) Disclaimed all interests passing to him or her under the will; and

(II) Became disqualified to serve as personal representative, executor, administrator, or trustee.

(2.3) Unless the marital agreement provides to the contrary, a revocation of "all benefits passing upon death to the relatives of my spouse" (or equivalent language) is a revocation of all benefits that would otherwise pass upon death to the relatives of the spouse from the revoking party by virtue of the provisions of any will executed before the writing. Provisions of a will executed before the writing are given effect as if the relatives:

(a) Disclaimed all interests passing to them under the will; and

(b) Became disqualified to serve as personal representative, executor, administrator, or trustee.

(2.5) For purposes of this section, "relative" of an individual's spouse means a person who is related to the spouse by blood, adoption, or affinity and who, if the individual and the individual's spouse were divorced, would not be related to the individual by blood, adoption, or affinity.

(3) A marital agreement may not adversely affect the right of a child to child support.

Source: L. 86: Entire part added, p. 713, § 1, effective July 1. L. 96: (2) amended and (2.3) and (2.5) added, p. 653, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

General assembly did not intend to preclude courts from reviewing waivers of attorney fees in marital agreements for unconscionability at the time of enforcement. Trial court may review a waiver of attorney fees in a marital agreement for unconscionability at the time of dissolution, because an unconscionable waiver violates the public policy interest behind protecting spouses and thus is not a valid contract term under this section. In re Ikeler, 161 P.3d 663 (Colo. 2007).

Trial court was required to enforce and, if necessary, interpret the child support provision of a foreign marital agreement entered into in Sweden and identifying Sweden under a choice of law provision of such agreement, even though the agreement had not been incorporated into a Swedish order. Matter of C.G.G., 946 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1997).

14-2-305. Effective date of agreement. A marital agreement becomes effective upon marriage, if signed by both parties prior to marriage, or upon the signatures of both parties, if signed after marriage.

14-2-306. Amendment - revocation. After a marital agreement becomes effective, it may be amended or revoked only by a written agreement signed by both parties. The amended agreement or revocation is enforceable without consideration.

14-2-307. Enforcement. (1) A marital agreement or amendment thereto or revocation thereof is not enforceable if the party against whom enforcement is sought proves that:

(a) Such party did not execute the agreement, amendment, or revocation voluntarily; or

(b) Before execution of the agreement, amendment, or revocation, such party was not provided a fair and reasonable disclosure of the property or financial obligations of the other party.

(2) A marital agreement or amendment thereto or revocation thereof that is otherwise enforceable after applying the provisions of subsection (1) of this section is nevertheless unenforceable insofar, but only insofar, as the provisions of such agreement, amendment, or revocation relate to the determination, modification, or elimination of spousal maintenance and such provisions are unconscionable at the time of enforcement of such provisions. The issue of unconscionability shall be decided by the court as a matter of law.

(3) A marital agreement or amendment thereto or revocation thereof that is otherwise enforceable shall not be unenforceable because by the terms of such agreement, amendment, or revocation the rights or obligations, or both, of one or both parties change or expire because of the passage of time or the occurrence or nonoccurrence of any other event.

Annotator's note. For cases dealing with the validity of marital agreements prior to the enactment of this part 3, see the annotations to §§ 14-10-112 and 14-10-113.

A trial court must find that the maintenance provisions of an otherwise valid antenuptial agreement are unconscionable at the time a divorce decree is entered in order to award maintenance to a party. In re Dechant, 867 P.2d 193 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to amendment effective July 1, 1986).

In determining unconscionability, the terms "appropriate employment" and "reasonable needs" are not to be interpreted so narrowly as to require a spouse to establish that he or she lacks the minimum resources to sustain life. In re Dechant, 867 P.2d 193 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to amendment effective July 1, 1986).

Trial court may review a waiver of attorney fees in a marital agreement for unconscionability at the time of dissolution, because an unconscionable waiver violates the public policy interest behind protecting spouses and thus is not a valid contract term under § 14-2-304. In re Ikeler, 161 P.3d 663 (Colo. 2007).

Standards for determining unconscionability. Generally, an agreement under this section is unconscionable if it is not fair, reasonable, and just. In re Christen, 899 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1995).

Speculation about possible future events, such as unemployment, disability, and remarriage, do not indicate that the agreement is at present unconscionable. In re Christen, 899 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1995).

When the parties enter into an agreement that provides for maintenance to be paid year-to-year in an amount calculated in accordance with a formula agreed upon by the parties and accepted as not unconscionable by the court, the trial court acts within its discretion in not setting forth an exact amount of maintenance in its decree of dissolution and permanent orders. In re Christen, 899 P.2d 339 (Colo. App. 1995).

In order for agreement for binding Rabbinical arbitration to be enforceable, it must be conscionable and must be entered into by the parties voluntarily after full disclosure. In re Popack, 998 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 2000).

Waiver of attorney fee provision in an antenuptial agreement is voidable on the grounds of unconscionability. In re Dechant, 867 P.2d 193 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to amendment effective July 1, 1986).

Marital agreement need not be approved by the court nor a complete agreement as to the disposition of all of the parties' property to be enforceable. In re Goldin, 923 P.2d 376 (Colo. App. 1996).

But marital agreement must contain a fair and reasonable disclosure of property and financial obligations of the party seeking to enforce it, and prenuptial agreement that was blank at the time wife signed it was unenforceable by husband. In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

Agreement entered into just prior to marriage and a subsequent agreement entered into just prior to filing petition for dissolution were correctly considered not to be enforceable agreements under the Colorado Marital Agreement Act. Trial court correctly determined that the premarital agreement was not an enforceable premarital agreement because the parties were not contemplating marriage when they entered into it. Similarly, the later agreement was not an enforceable marital agreement because it was signed after wife petitioned for dissolution of marriage and because the parties were not on an equal emotional or economic footing. In re Green, 169 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2007).

14-2-308. Invalid marriage. If the marriage of the parties is declared to be invalid, the marital agreement is enforceable only to the extent necessary to avoid an inequitable result.

14-2-309. Limitations of actions. Any statute of limitations applicable to an action asserting a claim for relief under a marital agreement is tolled during the marriage of the parties. However, equitable defenses limiting the time for enforcement, including laches or estoppel, are available to either party.

14-2-310. Effective date - applicability. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, this part 3 shall take effect July 1, 1986, and shall apply only to marital agreements that become effective on or after said date. All such marital agreements entered into prior to July 1, 1986, shall be governed by the laws then in effect.

(2) The provisions of the amendments to section 14-2-304 (2), as contained in House Bill 96-1342, shall take effect July 1, 1996, and shall apply only to marital agreements which become effective on or after July 1, 1996.

Pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, the state court administrator is authorized to make grants from the fund directly to qualifying organizations providing civil legal services to indigent residents of the state of Colorado.

(a) The provision of direct legal representation to victims of family violence in resolving their civil legal matters and removing impediments to the elimination of family violence. Such representation may include, but need not be limited to, representation in any protection order proceeding, action for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity of marriage, paternity action, child custody action, proceeding to establish or enforce child support, administrative hearings, or any other judicial actions in which family violence is an issue or in which legal representation is necessary to protect the interests of a victim of family violence.

(b) The provision of clinics designed to educate and assist indigent victims of family violence in the proceedings set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2);

(c) The provision of legal information and advice to victims of family violence, referrals to appropriate persons or agencies, and the provision of emergency assistance in appropriate cases by telephone, electronic communication, or other appropriate means.

(3) A qualifying organization seeking to receive a grant from the fund shall submit an application each year to the state court administrator on a form provided by such administrator. The application form shall request any information which the administrator may need in determining the qualifications of the organization for receipt of a grant. Commencing July 1, 1999, and quarterly thereafter, the state court administrator shall distribute grants from the fund, subject to available appropriations, to a qualifying organization for each county or city and county based upon the following formula:

(a) The total moneys shall be disbursed in proportion to the number of persons living below the poverty line in each county or city and county as determined by the most recent census published by the bureau of the census of the United States department of commerce.

(b) If there is more than one qualifying organization within a county or city and county, the proportionate share of the fund for such county or city and county disbursed to each such qualifying organization shall be allocated in proportion to the number of indigent family violence clients served by each qualifying organization or its predecessor in the preceding year.

(4) (a) In addition to any appropriation from the general fund, the state court administrator is authorized to accept on behalf of the state any funds, grants, gifts, or donations from any private or public source for the purpose of implementing this section. All private and public funds received through grants, gifts, or donations shall be transmitted to the state treasurer who shall credit the same to the family violence justice fund.

(b) The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly for the direct and indirect costs associated with the administration of this section. The state court administrator of the judicial department, subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly, is authorized to expend moneys appropriated to the department from the fund to qualifying organizations for the purposes described in this section; except that the amount expended for indirect costs associated with the administration of this section shall not exceed three percent of the moneys appropriated to the fund in any fiscal year. All investment earnings derived from the deposit and investment of the moneys in the fund shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys not appropriated shall remain in the fund and shall not be transferred or revert to the general fund of the state at the end of any fiscal year.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Editor's note: (1) This article was repealed and reenacted in 1993, and this part 1 was subsequently amended with relocations in 2003, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this part 1 prior to 2003, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor's note following the article heading. Former C.R.S. section numbers prior to 2003 are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

(2) In 1961, this article was enacted as the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. It was replaced by the Revised Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act in 1971, which repealed and reenacted the act and was in effect until 1993 when it was repealed and reenacted into the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act as it existed until 2003 when the article was amended. For the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act, see article 2 of chapter 43, C.R.S. 1963 (L. 61, p. 356). For the Revised Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act, see article 2 of chapter 43, C.R.S. 1963 or article 5 of title 14, C.R.S. 1973 (L. 71, p. 515).

Editor's note: In 2003, this section was formerly numbered as § 14-5-101, and the former § 14-5-102 was relocated to § 14-5-103.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note: Since § 14-5-102 is similar to § 14-5-101 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to part 2 of article 5 of title 14, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Editor's note: In 2003, this section was formerly numbered as § 14-5-102, and the former § 14-5-103 was relocated to § 14-5-104.

14-5-104. Remedies cumulative. (a) Remedies provided by this article are cumulative and do not affect the availability of remedies under other law, including the recognition of a support order of a foreign country or political subdivision on the basis of comity.

(b) This article does not:

(1) Provide the exclusive method of establishing or enforcing a support order under the laws of this state; or

(2) Grant a tribunal of this state jurisdiction to render judgment or issue an order relating to child custody or visitation in a proceeding under this article.

Source: L. 2003: Entire part amended with relocations, p. 1243, § 2, effective July 1, 2004.

Editor's note: In 2003, this section was formerly numbered as § 14-5-103.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 14-5-104 is similar to § 14-5-103 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to part 2 of article 5 of title 14, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, to § 14-5-104 as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, and to repealed 43-2-3, C.R.S. 1963, and 43-2-3, CRS 53, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Since the enactment of the uniform act in Colorado, there are now two distinct courses of action which a demanding state may take with respect to one who does not carry out his obligations of support to his family, namely: (1) Extradition on a criminal charge of nonsupport, and (2) the initiation of civil proceedings under the uniform act. Conrad v. McClearn, 166 Colo. 568, 445 P.2d 222 (1968).

Either or both courses may be pursued, and the election lies wholly within the demanding state and the obligee. Conrad v. McClearn, 166 Colo. 568, 445 P.2d 222 (1968).

The time to raise a defense is when there is an attempt to punish under both the criminal and the civil proceedings. Conrad v. McClearn, 166 Colo. 568, 445 P.2d 222 (1968).

If a trial court in its discretion believes that proper support can be assured without applying the statute, it is free to do so. Jackson v. Jackson, 157 Colo. 564, 404 P.2d 281 (1965).

The jurisdiction of the district court of Adams county, which arose from the filing and disposition of the divorce action did not preclude the district court of the city and county of Denver from proceeding pursuant to the uniform act when the mother and children had moved to Nevada. The question of support of minor children is a question which can be litigated separate and apart from divorce proceedings. Scheer v. District Court, 147 Colo. 265, 363 P.2d 1059 (1961).

Equitable doctrine of unclean hands will not relieve father of his duty to support his child under this article. Kansas State Dept. of Soc. & Rehabilitation Servs. v. Henderson, 620 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1980).

Rights and duties under marriage dissolution decree unaffected by court's support order. A support order by a Colorado court, as the responding court in a proceeding under this article, does not affect the parties' rights and duties under a dissolution of marriage decree. Kansas State Dept. of Soc. & Rehabilitation Servs. v. Henderson, 620 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1980); In re Enewold, 709 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1985).

In a proceeding for the dissolution of marriage in which no personal service in the state of Colorado had been made upon the husband, the trial court could not issue an award of child support and order that it should supersede any award for child support which the wife had obtained through this article. Offerman v. Alexander, 185 Colo. 383, 524 P.2d 1082 (1974).

Fact that post-dissolution matter was filed under the Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act did not give the court a proper basis for exercising jurisdiction as to child support where wife's only contact with Colorado was her granting of consent for the child to reside in this state with his father. In re Zinke, 967 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1998).

Mother is free to pursue remedies for child support collection available pursuant to §§ 19-6-101 and 26-13-105. Father's argument that support must be established pursuant to this act because the mother and children are nonresidents of Colorado is invalid. People ex rel. A.K., 72 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in County of Clearwater v. Petrash, 198 Colo. 231, 598 P.2d 138 (1979); Rohrer v. Kane, 198 Colo. App. 231, 609 P.2d 1121 (1980).

JURISDICTION

14-5-201. Bases for jurisdiction over nonresident. (a) In a proceeding to establish or enforce a support order or to determine parentage, a tribunal of this state may exercise personal jurisdiction over a nonresident individual or the individual's guardian or conservator if:

- (1) The individual is personally served with a summons within this state;
- (2) The individual submits to the jurisdiction of this state by consent, by entering a general appearance, or by filing a responsive document having the effect of waiving any contest to personal jurisdiction;
- (3) The individual resided with the child in this state;
- (4) The individual resided in this state and provided prenatal expenses or support for the child;
- (5) The child resides in this state as a result of the acts or directives of the individual;
- (6) The individual engaged in sexual intercourse in this state and the child may have been conceived by that act of intercourse; or
- (7) There is any other basis consistent with the constitutions of this state and the United States for the exercise of personal jurisdiction.

(b) The bases of personal jurisdiction set forth in subsection (a) of this section or in any other law of this state may not be used to acquire personal jurisdiction for a tribunal of the state to modify a child support order of another state unless the requirements of section 14-5-611 or 14-5-615 are met.

ANNOTATION

This section was adopted to extend long-arm jurisdiction as far as constitutionally permissible, but without establishing “child-state jurisdiction” under which the support duty and child’s location, alone, would provide the jurisdictional nexus for a support order. In re Malwitz, 81 P.3d 1076 (Colo. App. 2003), rev’d on other grounds, 99 P.3d 56 (Colo. 2004).

Nonresident father’s out-of-state abuse and harassment satisfies subsection (5). Father’s domestic abuse against mother in Texas and awareness that mother’s family ties were in Colorado and mother might move to Colorado with child to escape the abuse were sufficient to constitute “acts or directives” within the meaning of subsection (5). In re Malwitz, 99 P.3d 56 (Colo. 2004).

Trial court’s exercise of personal jurisdiction over nonresident father whose abuse and harassment of mother in Texas caused mother and child to flee to Colorado and seek public assistance was consistent with due process. In re Malwitz, 99 P.3d 56 (Colo. 2004).

Applied in In re Haddad, 93 P.3d 617 (Colo. App. 2004).

14-5-202. Duration of personal jurisdiction. Personal jurisdiction acquired by a tribunal of this state in a proceeding under this article or other law of this state relating to a support order continues as long as a tribunal of this state has continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify its order or continuing jurisdiction to enforce its order as provided by sections 14-5-205, 14-5-206, and 14-5-211.

14-5-203. Initiating and responding tribunals of this state. Under this article, a tribunal of this state may serve as an initiating tribunal to forward proceedings to another state and as a responding tribunal for proceedings initiated in another state.

14-5-204. Simultaneous proceedings in another state. (a) A tribunal of this state may exercise jurisdiction to establish a support order if the petition or comparable pleading is filed after a petition or comparable pleading is filed in another state only if:

(1) The petition or comparable pleading in this state is filed before the expiration of the time allowed in the other state for filing a responsive pleading challenging the exercise of jurisdiction by the other state;

(2) The contesting party timely challenges the exercise of jurisdiction in the other state; and

(3) If relevant, this state is the home state of the child.

(b) A tribunal of this state may not exercise jurisdiction to establish a support order if the petition or comparable pleading is filed before a petition or comparable pleading is filed in another state if:

(1) The petition or comparable pleading in the other state is filed before the expiration of the time allowed in this state for filing a responsive pleading challenging the exercise of jurisdiction by this state;

(2) The contesting party timely challenges the exercise of jurisdiction in this state; and

(3) If relevant, the other state is the home state of the child.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 1585, § 1, effective January 1, 1995.

14-5-205. Continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify child support order. (a) A tribunal of this state that has issued a child support order consistent with the law of this state has and shall exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify its child support order if the order is the controlling order and:

(1) At the time of the filing of a request for modification, this state is the residence of the obligor, the individual obligee, or the child for whose benefit the support order is issued; or

(2) Even if this state is not the residence of the obligor, the individual obligee, or the child for whose benefit the support order is issued, the parties consent in a record or in open court that the tribunal of this state may continue to exercise jurisdiction to modify its order.

(b) A tribunal of this state that has issued a child support order consistent with the law of this state may not exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify the order if:

(1) All of the parties who are individuals file consent in a record with the tribunal of this state that a tribunal of another state that has jurisdiction over at least one of the parties who is an individual or that is located in the state of residence of the child may modify the order and assume continuing, exclusive jurisdiction; or

(2) Its order is not the controlling order.

(c) If a tribunal of another state has issued a child support order pursuant to the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act", or a law substantially similar to that act, which modifies a child support order of a tribunal of this state, tribunals of this state shall recognize the continuing, exclusive jurisdiction of the tribunal of the other state.

(d) A tribunal of this state that lacks continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify a child support order may serve as an initiating tribunal to request a tribunal of another state to modify a support order issued in that state.

(e) A temporary support order issued ex parte or pending resolution of a jurisdictional conflict does not create continuing, exclusive jurisdiction in the issuing tribunal.

14-5-206. Continuing jurisdiction to enforce child support order. (a) A tribunal of this state that has issued a child support order consistent with the law of this state may serve as an initiating tribunal to request a tribunal of another state to enforce:

(1) The order if the order is the controlling order and has not been modified by a tribunal of another state that assumed jurisdiction pursuant to the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act"; or

(2) A money judgment for arrears of support and interest on the order accrued before a determination that an order of another state is the controlling order.

(b) A tribunal of this state having continuing jurisdiction over a support order may act as a responding tribunal to enforce the order.

14-5-207. Determination of controlling child support order. (a) If a proceeding is brought under this article and only one tribunal has issued a child support order, the order of that tribunal controls and must be so recognized.

(b) If a proceeding is brought under this article, and two or more child support orders have been issued by tribunals of this state or another state with regard to the same obligor and same child, a tribunal of this state having personal jurisdiction over both the obligor and individual obligee shall apply the following rules and by order shall determine which order controls:

(1) If only one of the tribunals would have continuing, exclusive jurisdiction under this article, the order of that tribunal controls and must be so recognized.

(2) If more than one of the tribunals would have continuing, exclusive jurisdiction under this article:

(A) An order issued by a tribunal in the current home state of the child controls; but

(B) If an order has not been issued in the current home state of the child, the order most recently issued controls.

(3) If none of the tribunals would have continuing, exclusive jurisdiction under this article, the tribunal of this state shall issue a child support order which controls.

(c) If two or more child support orders have been issued for the same obligor and same child, upon request of a party who is an individual or a support enforcement agency, a tribunal of this state having personal jurisdiction over both the obligor and the obligee who is an individual shall determine which order controls under subsection (b) of this section. The request may be filed with a registration for enforcement or registration for modification pursuant to part 6 of this article, or may be filed as a separate proceeding.

(d) A request to determine which is the controlling order shall be accompanied by a copy of every child support order in effect and the applicable record of payments. The requesting party shall give notice of the request to each party whose rights may be affected by the determination.

(e) The tribunal that issued the controlling order under subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this section has continuing jurisdiction to the extent provided in section 14-5-205 or 14-5-206.

(f) A tribunal of this state that determines by order which is the controlling order under subsection (b) (1), (b) (2), or (c) of this section, or that issues a new controlling order under subsection (b) (3) of this section, shall state in that order:

(1) The basis upon which the tribunal made its determination;

(2) The amount of prospective support, if any; and

(3) The total amount of consolidated arrears and accrued interest, if any, under all of the orders after all payments made are credited as provided by section 14-5-209.

(g) Within thirty days after issuance of an order determining which is the controlling order, the party obtaining the order shall file a certified copy of it in each tribunal that issued or registered an earlier order of child support. A party or support enforcement agency obtaining the order that fails to file a certified copy is subject to appropriate sanctions by a tribunal in which the issue of failure to file arises. The failure to file does not affect the validity or enforceability of the controlling order.

(h) An order that has been determined to be the controlling order, or a judgment for consolidated arrears of support and interest, if any, made pursuant to this section shall be recognized in proceedings under this article.

Child support orders for two or more obligees. In responding to registrations or petitions for enforcement of two or more child support orders in effect at the same time with regard to the same obligor and different individual obligees, at least one of which was issued by a tribunal of another state, a tribunal of this state shall enforce those orders in the same manner as if the orders had been issued by a tribunal of this state.

In all other respects, parts 3 to 7 of this article do not apply and the tribunal shall apply the procedural and substantive law of this state.

(2) Order an obligor to comply with a support order, specifying the amount and the manner of compliance;

(3) Order income withholding;

ANNOTATION

Reference to the Uniform Parentage Act in the Colorado Uniform Interstate Family Support Act simply establishes a method to determine parentage. Therefore the trial court erred in concluding that it had jurisdiction to enter orders granting parenting time. In Interest of R.L.H., 942 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1997).

An order requiring one party to repay or reimburse the other party for overpaid child support qualifies as a "reimbursement", thus district court had subject matter jurisdiction to issue an order regarding overpayments. In re Haddad, 93 P.3d 617 (Colo. App. 2004).

14-5-306. Inappropriate tribunal. If a petition or comparable pleading is received by an inappropriate tribunal of this state, the tribunal shall forward the pleading and accompanying documents to an appropriate tribunal in this state or another state and notify the petitioner where and when the pleading was sent.

14-5-307. Duties of support enforcement agency. (a) A support enforcement agency of this state, upon request, shall provide services to a petitioner in a proceeding under this article.

(b) A support enforcement agency of this state that is providing services to the petitioner shall:

(1) Take all steps necessary to enable an appropriate tribunal in this state or another state to obtain jurisdiction over the respondent;

(2) Request an appropriate tribunal to set a date, time, and place for a hearing;

(3) Make a reasonable effort to obtain all relevant information, including information as to income and property of the parties;

(4) Within two days, exclusive of Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays, after receipt of a written notice in a record from an initiating, responding, or registering tribunal, send a copy of the notice to the petitioner;

(5) Within two days, exclusive of Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays, after receipt of a written communication in a record from the respondent or the respondent's attorney, send a copy of the communication to the petitioner; and

(6) Notify the petitioner if jurisdiction over the respondent cannot be obtained.

(c) A support enforcement agency of this state that requests registration of a child support order in this state for enforcement or for modification shall make reasonable efforts:

(1) To ensure that the order to be registered is the controlling order; or

(2) If two or more child support orders exist and the identity of the controlling order has not been determined, to ensure that a request for such a determination is made in a tribunal having jurisdiction to do so.

(d) A support enforcement agency of this state that requests registration and enforcement of a support order, arrears, or judgment stated in a foreign currency shall convert the amounts stated in the foreign currency into the equivalent amounts in dollars under the applicable official or market exchange rate as publicly reported.

(e) A support enforcement agency of this state shall issue or request a tribunal of this state to issue a child support order and an income-withholding order that redirect payment of current support, arrears, and interest if requested to do so by a support enforcement agency of another state pursuant to section 14-5-319 of the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act".

14-5-308. Duty of attorney general. (a) If the attorney general determines that the support enforcement agency is neglecting or refusing to provide services to an individual, the attorney general may order the agency to perform its duties under this article or may provide those services directly to the individual.

(b) The attorney general may determine that a foreign country or political subdivision has established a reciprocal arrangement for child support with this state and take appropriate action for notification of the determination.

(b) The state information agency shall:

(1) Compile and maintain a current list, including addresses, of the tribunals in this state which have jurisdiction under this article and any support enforcement agencies in this state and transmit a copy to the state information agency of every other state;

(2) Maintain a register of names and addresses of tribunals and support enforcement agencies received from other states;

(3) Forward to the appropriate tribunal in the county in this state in which the obligee who is an individual or the obligor resides, or in which the obligor's property is believed to be located, all documents concerning a proceeding under this article received from an initiating tribunal or the state information agency of the initiating state; and

(4) Obtain information concerning the location of the obligor and the obligor's property within this state not exempt from execution, by such means as postal verification and federal or state locator services, examination of telephone directories, requests for the obligor's address from employers, and examination of governmental records, including, to the extent not prohibited by other law, those relating to real property, vital statistics, law enforcement, taxation, motor vehicles, driver's licenses, and social security.

14-5-311. Pleadings and accompanying documents. (a) In a proceeding under this article, a petitioner seeking to establish a support order, to determine parentage, or to register and modify a support order of another state must file a petition. Unless otherwise ordered under section 14-5-312, the petition or accompanying documents must provide, so far as known, the name, residential address, and social security numbers of the obligor and the obligee or the parent and alleged parent, and the name, sex, residential address, social security number, and date of birth of each child for whose benefit support is sought or whose parentage is to be determined. Unless filed at the time of registration, the petition must be accompanied by a copy of any support order known to have been issued by another tribunal. The petition may include any other information that may assist in locating or identifying the respondent.

(b) The petition must specify the relief sought. The petition and accompanying documents must conform substantially with the requirements imposed by the forms mandated by federal law for use in cases filed by a support enforcement agency.

14-5-312. Nondisclosure of information in exceptional circumstances. If a party alleges in an affidavit or a pleading under oath that the health, safety, or liberty of a party or child would be jeopardized by disclosure of specific identifying information, that information shall be sealed and may not be disclosed to the other party or the public. After a hearing in which a tribunal takes into consideration the health, safety, or liberty of the party or child, the tribunal may order disclosure of information that the tribunal determines to be in the interest of justice.

(b) If an obligee prevails, a responding tribunal may assess against an obligor filing fees, reasonable attorney's fees, other costs, and necessary travel and other reasonable expenses incurred by the obligee and the obligee's witnesses. The tribunal may not assess fees, costs, or expenses against the obligee or the support enforcement agency of either the initiating or the responding state, except as provided by other law. Attorney's fees may be taxed as costs, and may be ordered paid directly to the attorney, who may enforce the order in the attorney's own name. Payment of support owed to the obligee has priority over fees, costs, and expenses.

(c) The tribunal shall order the payment of costs and reasonable attorney's fees if it determines that a hearing was requested primarily for delay. In a proceeding under part 6 of this article, a hearing is presumed to have been requested primarily for delay if a registered support order is confirmed or enforced without change.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 14-5-116 as it existed prior to 1993.

14-5-314. Limited immunity of petitioner. (a) Participation by a petitioner in a proceeding under this article before a responding tribunal, whether in person, by private attorney, or through services provided by the support enforcement agency, does not confer personal jurisdiction over the petitioner in another proceeding.

(b) A petitioner is not amenable to service of civil process while physically present in this state to participate in a proceeding under this article.

(c) The immunity granted by this section does not extend to civil litigation based on acts unrelated to a proceeding under this article committed by a party while physically present in this state to participate in the proceeding.

ANNOTATION

While a petition for relief under UIFSA limits the jurisdiction of the tribunal to the boundaries of the support proceeding, a claim of overpayment of child support is still within the boundaries of the proceeding. In re Haddad, 93 P.3d 617 (Colo. App. 2004).

Section 14-5-607 (b) conferred personal jurisdiction over another state's child support enforcement agency that continued to collect withholdings from plaintiff's wages under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA), contrary to a previous Colorado court order vacating the other state's judgment upon which the wage assignment was based. Vogan v. County of San Diego, 193 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2008).

While this section protects a petitioner participating in a UIFSA proceeding before a responding tribunal from being subject to personal jurisdiction in another proceeding, the statute does not prevent the Colorado court from the continued exercise of subject matter and personal jurisdiction to enforce its prior order. There are no due process concerns where another state availed itself of the provisions of UIFSA to reach plaintiff's earnings in Colorado. Section 14-5-607 (b) allows a court to enter "other appropriate orders", including orders related to plaintiff's claims for injunctive relief and restitution based upon defendant's continued collection of child support under the voided order. Vogan v. County of San Diego, 193 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2008).

Although this section does not confer personal jurisdiction over plaintiff's civil theft claim with respect to defendant's collection of child support despite the voided wage assignment, the Colorado long-arm statute confers jurisdiction where plaintiff was harmed by defendant's tortious acts within this state and where the exercise of personal jurisdiction comports with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Vogan v. County of San Diego, 193 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2008).

14-5-315. Nonparentage as defense. A party whose parentage of a child has been previously determined by or pursuant to law may not plead nonparentage as a defense to a proceeding under this article.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 14-5-128 as it existed prior to 1993.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note: Since § 14-5-315 is similar to § 14-5-128 as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Determination of paternity in divorce or annulment action. The parentage of a child is not an issue necessarily decided in a divorce or annulment action. However, where, as a part of a divorce action, the court hears evidence, makes a child support order, and by necessary implication has determined the paternity of the child, this determination is res judicata at least between the spouses. McNeece v. McNeece, 39 Colo. App. 160, 562 P.2d 767 (1977).

Applicability of doctrine of res judicata. Failure to raise the defense of nonpaternity during dissolution proceedings bars a presumed father from collaterally attacking the determination of paternity implicitly supporting award of child support incident to such dissolution proceedings brought under URESA. State ex. rel. Daniels v. Daniels, 817 P.2d 632 (Colo. App. 1991).

14-5-316. Special rules of evidence and procedure. (a) The physical presence of a nonresident party who is an individual in a tribunal of this state is not required for the establishment, enforcement, or modification of a support order or the rendition of a judgment determining parentage.

(b) An affidavit, a document substantially complying with federally mandated forms, or a document incorporated by reference in any of them, which would not be excluded under the hearsay rule if given in person, is admissible in evidence if given under penalty of perjury by a party or witness residing in another state.

(c) A copy of the record of child support payments certified as a true copy of the original by the custodian of the record may be forwarded to a responding tribunal. The copy is evidence of facts asserted in it, and is admissible to show whether payments were made.

(d) Copies of bills for testing for parentage, and for prenatal and postnatal health care of the mother and child, furnished to the adverse party at least ten days before trial, are admissible in evidence to prove the amount of the charges billed and that the charges were reasonable, necessary, and customary.

(e) Documentary evidence transmitted from another state to a tribunal of this state by telephone, telecopier, or other means that do not provide an original record may not be excluded from evidence on an objection based on the means of transmission.

(f) In a proceeding under this article, a tribunal of this state shall permit a party or witness residing in another state to be deposed or to testify by telephone, audiovisual means, or other electronic means at a designated tribunal or other location in that state. A tribunal of this state shall cooperate with tribunals of other states in designating an appropriate location for the deposition or testimony.

(g) If a party called to testify at a civil hearing refuses to answer on the ground that the testimony may be self-incriminating, the trier of fact may draw an adverse inference from the refusal.

(h) A privilege against disclosure of communications between spouses does not apply in a proceeding under this article.

(i) The defense of immunity based on the relationship of husband and wife or parent and child does not apply in a proceeding under this article.

(j) A voluntary acknowledgment of paternity, certified as a true copy, is admissible to establish parentage of the child.

It may be a defense if the trial court chooses not to enter an order under the action brought pursuant to the uniform act. Jackson v. Jackson, 157 Colo. 564, 404 P.2d 281 (1965).

Where denial of continuance not prejudicial. Where the trial court has before it the affidavits filed in the initiating state, as well as the deposition of the absent obligee, and the obligor has declined the court's offer to provide a subpoena duces tecum in conjunction with letters rogatory so the obligor could obtain financial documents from the obligee, there is no prejudice resulting from the trial court's denial of the obligor's request for a continuance. Child's right to support is unaffected by misconduct of his parents, and when a court conditions the disbursement of child support payments upon the custodial parent's complying with visitation orders, the court errs as a matter of law. A tribunal of this state may furnish similar information by similar means to a tribunal of another state or foreign country or political subdivision.

14-5-318. Assistance with discovery. A tribunal of this state may:

The agency or tribunal shall furnish to a requesting party or tribunal of another state a certified statement by the custodian of the record of the amounts and dates of all payments received.

(b) If neither the obligor, nor the obligee who is an individual, nor the child resides in this state, upon request from the support enforcement agency of this state or another state, the support enforcement agency of this state or a tribunal of this state shall:

- (1) Direct that the support payment be made to the support enforcement agency in the state in which the obligee is receiving services; and

(2) Issue and send to the obligor's employer a conforming income-withholding order or an administrative notice of change of payee, reflecting the redirected payments.

(c) The support enforcement agency of this state receiving redirected payments from another state pursuant to a law similar to subsection (b) of this section shall furnish to a requesting party or tribunal of the other state a certified statement by the custodian of the record of the amount and dates of all payments received.

PART 4

ESTABLISHMENT OF SUPPORT ORDER

14-5-401. Petition to establish support order. (a) If a support order entitled to recognition under this article has not been issued, a responding tribunal of this state may issue a support order if:

- (1) The individual seeking the order resides in another state; or
- (2) The support enforcement agency seeking the order is located in another state.
- (b) The tribunal may issue a temporary child support order if the tribunal determines that such an order is appropriate and the individual ordered to pay is:
  - (1) A presumed father of the child;
  - (2) Petitioning to have his paternity adjudicated;
  - (3) Identified as the father of the child through genetic testing;
  - (4) An alleged father who has declined to submit to genetic testing;
  - (5) Shown by clear and convincing evidence to be the father of the child;
  - (6) An acknowledged father as provided by section 19-4-105 (1) (e), C.R.S.;
  - (7) The mother of the child; or
  - (8) An individual who has been ordered to pay child support in a previous proceeding and the order has not been reversed or vacated.

(c) Upon finding, after notice and opportunity to be heard, that an obligor owes a duty of support, the tribunal shall issue a support order directed to the obligor and may issue other orders pursuant to section 14-5-305.

- (1) A letter of transmittal to the tribunal requesting registration and enforcement;
  - (2) Two copies, including one certified copy, of the order to be registered, including any modification of the order;

  - (3) Specify the amount of consolidated arrears, if any.
- (e) A request for a determination of which is the controlling order may be filed separately or with a request for registration and enforcement or for registration and modification. The person requesting registration shall give notice of the request to each party whose rights may be affected by the determination.

Procedures and defenses available. When a complaining party registers a foreign support order in the responding state, the procedures and defenses available thereafter are those applicable to an action to enforce a foreign money judgment. In re McMahan, 660 P.2d 515 (Colo. App. 1983).

Applied in Malmgren v. Malmgren, 628 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1981).

14-5-604. Choice of law. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, the law of the issuing state governs:

(1) The nature, extent, amount, and duration of current payments under a registered support order;

(2) The computation and payment of arrearages and accrual of interest on the arrearages under the support order; and

(3) The existence and satisfaction of other obligations under the support order.

(b) In a proceeding for arrearages under a registered support order, the statute of limitation of this state or of the issuing state, whichever is longer, applies.

(c) A responding tribunal of this state shall apply the procedures and remedies of this state to enforce current support and to collect arrearages and interest due on a support order of another state registered in this state.

(d) After a tribunal of this or another state determines which is the controlling order and issues an order consolidating arrearages, if any, a tribunal of this state shall prospectively apply the law of the state issuing the controlling order, including its law on interest on arrearages, on current and future support, and on consolidated arrearages.

The duty of support under this article is that imposed under the laws of the state where the obligor parent is or was present for the period during which support is sought. Ross v. Thomas, 753 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1987).

The validity of orders to furnish support and reimbursement are predicated upon a duty to support. Aguilar v. Holcomb, 155 Colo. 530, 395 P.2d 998 (1964).

An order by the California court that the defendant owes a duty of support to the children residing in California was not enforceable in Colorado. The question as to whether defendant had a duty to support the children, whom it was alleged were his, a fact put in issue upon which there was no proof, must have been determined according to the laws of the state of Colorado. Aguilar v. Holcomb, 155 Colo. 530, 395 P.2d 998 (1964).

The trial court could not find a duty of support on the defendant because it does not have any jurisdiction to determine paternity as a part of the proceedings under the uniform act. Aguilar v. Holcomb, 155 Colo. 530, 395 P.2d 998 (1964).

Termination of support liability for Colorado resident. Where the obligor resides in Colorado, he is bound by Colorado law on the issue of when liability for support terminates. McDonald v. McDonald, 634 P.2d 1031 (Colo. App. 1981); Napolitano v. Napolitano, 732 P.2d 245 (Colo. App. 1987).

Application of changed circumstances standard proper. Court properly applied Colorado changed circumstances standard in § 14-10-122 to Colorado resident in action pursuant to Colorado support order rather than conducting new hearing for separate support order. People in Interest of Whittington v. Low, 761 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided under law in effect prior to enactment of § 14-10-115 (17)).

No independent duty of support. This article does not create an independent duty of support but only a means of enforcing a duty arising out of either a foreign support order or the law of the state where the obligor resides. Com. of Pennsylvania v. Barta, 790 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1990).

PART B. CONTEST OF VALIDITY OR ENFORCEMENT

14-5-605. Notice of registration of order. (a) When a support order or income-withholding order issued in another state is registered, the registering tribunal shall notify the nonregistering party. The notice must be accompanied by a copy of the registered order and the documents and relevant information accompanying the order.

(b) A notice must inform the nonregistering party:

(1) That a registered order is enforceable as of the date of registration in the same manner as an order issued by a tribunal of this state;

(2) That a hearing to contest the validity or enforcement of the registered order must be requested within twenty days after notice;

(3) That failure to contest the validity or enforcement of the registered order in a timely manner will result in confirmation of the order and enforcement of the order and the alleged arrearages; and

(4) Of the amount of any alleged arrearages.

(c) If the registering party asserts that two or more orders are in effect, a notice must also:

(1) Identify the two or more orders and the order alleged by the registering person to be the controlling order and the consolidated arrearages, if any;

(2) Notify the nonregistering party of the right to a determination of which is the controlling order;

(3) State that the procedures provided in subsection (b) of this section apply to the determination of which is the controlling order; and

(4) State that failure to contest the validity or enforcement of the order alleged to be the controlling order in a timely manner may result in confirmation that the order is the controlling order.

(d) Upon registration of an income-withholding order for enforcement, the registering tribunal shall notify the obligor's employer pursuant to the income-withholding law of this state.

14-5-606. Procedure to contest validity or enforcement of registered order. (a) A nonregistering party seeking to contest the validity or enforcement of a registered order in this state shall request a hearing within twenty days after notice of the registration. The nonregistering party may seek to vacate the registration, to assert any defense to an allegation of noncompliance with the registered order, or to contest the remedies being sought or the amount of any alleged arrearages pursuant to section 14-5-607.

(b) If the nonregistering party fails to contest the validity or enforcement of the registered order in a timely manner, the order is confirmed by operation of law.

(c) If a nonregistering party requests a hearing to contest the validity or enforcement of the registered order, the registering tribunal shall schedule the matter for hearing and give notice to the parties of the date, time, and place of the hearing.

14-5-607. Contest of registration or enforcement. (a) A party contesting the validity or enforcement of a registered order or seeking to vacate the registration has the burden of proving one or more of the following defenses:

- (1) The issuing tribunal lacked personal jurisdiction over the contesting party;
- (2) The order was obtained by fraud;
- (3) The order has been vacated, suspended, or modified by a later order;
- (4) The issuing tribunal has stayed the order pending appeal;
- (5) There is a defense under the law of this state to the remedy sought;
- (6) Full or partial payment has been made;
- (7) The statute of limitation under section 14-5-604 precludes enforcement of some or all of the alleged arrearages; or
- (8) The alleged controlling order is not the controlling order.

(b) If a party presents evidence establishing a full or partial defense under subsection (a) of this section, a tribunal may stay enforcement of the registered order, continue the proceeding to permit production of additional relevant evidence, and issue other appropriate orders. An uncontested portion of the registered order may be enforced by all remedies available under the law of this state.

(c) If the contesting party does not establish a defense under subsection (a) of this section to the validity or enforcement of the order, the registering tribunal shall issue an order confirming the order.

ment agency that continued to collect withholdings from plaintiff's wages under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, contrary to a previous Colorado court order vacating the other state's judgment upon which the wage assignment was based. 14-5-608. Confirmed order. Confirmation of a registered order, whether by operation of law or after notice and hearing, precludes further contest of the order with respect to any matter that could have been asserted at the time of registration.

PART C. REGISTRATION AND MODIFICATION OF CHILD SUPPORT ORDER

14-5-609. Procedure to register child support order of another state for modification. A party or support enforcement agency seeking to modify, or to modify and enforce, a child support order issued in another state shall register that order in this state in the same manner provided in part A of this part 6 if the order has not been registered. A petition for modification may be filed at the same time as a request for registration, or later. The pleading must specify the grounds for modification.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 1599, § 1, effective January 1, 1995. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1260, § 38, effective July 1, 2004.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 14-5-110 as it existed prior to 1993.

Annotator's note: Since § 14-5-609 is similar to § 14-5-110 as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Full faith and credit must be given to another state's final order for arrearages entered under RURESA, § 14-5-101 et seq. In re Sabala, 802 P.2d 1163 (Colo. App. 1990).

The doctrine of equitable estoppel may properly be applied to afford relief from accrued arrearages in child support if the party asserting the claim demonstrates reasonable reliance, to the party's detriment, upon the acts or representations of the other person, and lack of knowledge or convenient means of knowing the facts. In re Dennin and Lohf, 811 P.2d 449 (Colo. App. 1991).

14-5-610. Effect of registration for modification. A tribunal of this state may enforce a child support order of another state registered for purposes of modification, in the same manner as if the order had been issued by a tribunal of this state, but the registered order may be modified only if the requirements of section 14-5-611, 14-5-613, or 14-5-615 have been met.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 1599, § 1, effective January 1, 1995. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1260, § 39, effective July 1, 2004.

14-5-611. Modification of child support order of another state. (a) If section 14-5-613 does not apply, except as otherwise provided in section 14-5-615, upon petition a tribunal of this state may modify a child support order issued in another state which order is registered in this state if, after notice and hearing, the tribunal finds that:

(1) The following requirements are met:

(A) Neither the child, nor the obligee who is an individual, nor the obligor resides in the issuing state;

(B) A petitioner who is a nonresident of this state seeks modification; and

(C) The respondent is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the tribunal of this state; or

(2) This state is the state of residence of the child or a party who is an individual is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the tribunal of this state, and all of the parties who are individuals have filed consents in a record in the issuing tribunal for a tribunal of this state to modify the support order and assume continuing, exclusive jurisdiction.

(b) Modification of a registered child support order is subject to the same requirements, procedures, and defenses that apply to the modification of an order issued by a tribunal of this state and the order may be enforced and satisfied in the same manner.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in section 14-5-615, a tribunal of this state may not modify any aspect of a child support order that may not be modified under the law of the issuing state, including the duration of the obligation of support. If two or more tribunals have issued child support orders for the same obligor and same child, the order that controls and must be so recognized under section 14-5-207 establishes the aspects of the support order which are nonmodifiable.

(d) In a proceeding to modify a child support order, the law of the state that is determined to have issued the initial controlling order governs the duration of the obligation of support. The obligor's fulfillment of the duty of support established by that order precludes imposition of a further obligation of support by a tribunal of this state.

(e) On issuance of an order by a tribunal of this state modifying a child support order issued in another state, the tribunal of this state becomes the tribunal having continuing, exclusive jurisdiction.

ANNOTATION

Court is authorized to modify a child support order that was issued in another state and is registered in this state if: (1) The child, individual obligee, and the obligor do not reside in the issuing state; (2) the petitioning party seeking modification is a nonresident of this state; and (3) the respondent is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the tribunal of this state. In re Zinke, 967 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1998).

14-5-612. Recognition of order modified in another state. If a child support order issued by a tribunal of this state is modified by a tribunal of another state which assumed jurisdiction pursuant to the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act", a tribunal of this state:

(1) May enforce its order that was modified only as to arrears and interest accruing before the modification;

(2) May provide appropriate relief for violations of its order which occurred before the effective date of the modification; and

(3) Shall recognize the modifying order of the other state, upon registration, for the purpose of enforcement.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note: Since § 14-5-612 is similar to § 14-5-110 as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

14-5-613. Jurisdiction to modify child support order of another state when individual parties reside in this state. (a) If all of the parties who are individuals reside in this state and the child does not reside in the issuing state, a tribunal of this state has jurisdiction to enforce and to modify the issuing state's child support order in a proceeding to register that order.

(b) A tribunal of this state exercising jurisdiction under this section shall apply the provisions of parts 1 and 2 of this article, this part 6, and the procedural and substantive law of this state to the proceeding for enforcement or modification. Parts 3, 4, 5, 7, and 8 of this article do not apply.

14-5-614. Notice to issuing tribunal of modification. Within thirty days after issuance of a modified child support order, the party obtaining the modification shall file a certified copy of the order with the issuing tribunal that had continuing, exclusive jurisdiction over the earlier order, and in each tribunal in which the party knows the earlier order has been registered. A party who obtains the order and fails to file a certified copy is subject to appropriate sanctions by a tribunal in which the issue of failure to file arises. The failure to file does not affect the validity or enforceability of the modified order of the new tribunal having continuing, exclusive jurisdiction.

INTERSTATE RENDITION

Cross references: For extradition procedures generally, see article 19 of title 16.

14-5-801. Grounds for rendition. (a) For purposes of this part 8, "governor" includes an individual performing the functions of governor or the executive authority of a state covered by this article.

(b) The governor of this state may:

(1) Demand that the governor of another state surrender an individual found in the other state who is charged criminally in this state with having failed to provide for the support of an obligee; or

(2) On the demand of the governor of another state, surrender an individual found in this state who is charged criminally in the other state with having failed to provide for the support of an obligee.

(c) A provision for extradition of individuals not inconsistent with this article applies to the demand even if the individual whose surrender is demanded was not in the demanding state when the crime was allegedly committed and has not fled therefrom.

14-5-802. Conditions of rendition. (a) Before making a demand that the governor of another state surrender an individual charged criminally in this state with having failed to provide for the support of an obligee, the governor of this state may require a prosecutor of this state to demonstrate that at least sixty days previously the obligee had initiated proceedings for support pursuant to this article or that the proceeding would be of no avail.

(b) If, under this article or a law substantially similar to this article, the governor of another state makes a demand that the governor of this state surrender an individual charged criminally in that state with having failed to provide for the support of a child or other individual to whom a duty of support is owed, the governor may require a prosecutor to investigate the demand and report whether a proceeding for support has been initiated or would be effective. If it appears that a proceeding would be effective but has not been initiated, the governor may delay honoring the demand for a reasonable time to permit the initiation of a proceeding.

(c) If a proceeding for support has been initiated and the individual whose rendition is demanded prevails, the governor may decline to honor the demand. If the petitioner prevails and the individual whose rendition is demanded is subject to a support order, the governor may decline to honor the demand if the individual is complying with the support order.

Annotator's note. Cases relevant to § 14-6-101 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 11, p. 527, § 1, have been included in the annotations to this section.

This article was held not to violate § 1 of art. V, Colo. Const. Pearman v. People, 64 Colo. 26, 170 P. 192 (1917); Wamsley v. People, 64 Colo. 521, 173 P. 425 (1918).

This section does not violate § 12 of art. II, Colo. Const., prohibiting imprisonment for debt. Martin v. People, 69 Colo. 60, 168 P. 1171 (1917); People v. Elliott, 186 Colo. 65, 525 P.2d 457 (1974).

Purpose. The felony nonsupport statute is designed to promote and protect the health and welfare of minor children and to prevent such children from becoming wards of the state. People v. Elliott, 186 Colo. 65, 525 P.2d 457 (1974).

This article does not change the law as to the civil liability of the husband to furnish his wife reasonable support; it just provides a penalty in case he fails to do so, unless excused by physical incapacity or other good cause Poole v. People, 24 Colo. 510, 52 P. 1025 (1898).

Duty to support spouse ceases when marriage is dissolved unless an order of maintenance is entered in connection with the dissolution decree. Com. of Pennsylvania v. Barta, 790 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1990).

The nonsupport statutes such as this have been regarded only as enforcing, and not as creating, a duty on the part of husbands and fathers with reference to the support of wives and children. Kilpatrick v. People, 64 Colo. 209, 170 P. 956 (1918).

It simply makes the willful neglect of a duty theretofore existing a felony. People v. Driscoll, 72 Colo. 115, 209 P. 869 (1922).

The supreme court was fortified in limiting the court's authority to require security for the payment of alimony by reason of the fact that with respect to orders for the payment of sums required for the support and maintenance and education of the minor children of the parties, the general assembly had enacted this section which made it a felony for a husband to neglect, fail or refuse to provide reasonable support and maintenance for his minor children under the age of 16 years. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

Therefore a father who neglects to discharge his natural, as well as his statutory, duty to his children "shall be deemed guilty of a felony", and may be imprisoned for so doing unless he provides a bond conditioned upon the support of such children. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

Formerly, the primary obligation for the support of a minor child rested upon its father, and the fact that the mother was self-supporting did not serve to relieve the father of his obligation. McQuade v. McQuade, 145 Colo. 218, 358 P.2d 470 (1960).

Obligation of mother now equal to that of father. The general assembly in 1973 reassessed the relative responsibilities of the parents with regard to support of their children and imposed an obligation on the mother equal to that of the father. People v. Elliott, 186 Colo. 65, 525 P.2d 457 (1974).

Changing legislative view of role and capabilities of mother. This enlargement of the scope of protection for minor children suggests a legislative view that the role of the mother has expanded beyond the domestic sphere to which it had been relegated and that the economic abilities and opportunities of the parents are more nearly on a parity concerning their capability of providing support for their children. People v. Elliott, 186 Colo. 65, 525 P.2d 457 (1974).

Since the father is under a legal duty or obligation to support his child in an adequate manner, resort to the courts may be had to enforce compliance, and such action is not made nonmaintainable because of statutory proceedings relating to the support of children in divorce, separate maintenance and annulment actions nor because of the statute relating to dependent and neglected children. McQuade v. McQuade, 145 Colo. 218, 358 P.2d 470 (1960).

The inherent right to support belongs to the child, and there exists no reason to hinge the enforcement of such right upon the existence or nonexistence of statutory right in the mother to obtain a divorce or separate maintenance, or upon a statute designed for children neglected by both parents. McQuade v. McQuade, 145 Colo. 218, 358 P.2d 470 (1960).

The rights of the child exist independent of the rights of the mother, and are enforceable in equity in the absence of a statute providing for relief in the express circumstances. McQuade v. McQuade, 145 Colo. 218, 358 P.2d 470 (1960).

A dismissal of complaints seeking divorce and separate maintenance is not res judicata concerning the right of a minor child to compel adequate support by his father. McQuade v. McQuade, 145 Colo. 218, 358 P.2d 470 (1960).

An alleged father of an illegitimate child, in any case where such child is under 16 years of age, may be prosecuted for failure to support it, without having been adjudged, in some prior proceeding, to be such father. Ortega v. Portales, 134 Colo. 537, 307 P.2d 193 (1957).

This section contains the provision that any man who shall willfully refuse to support his legitimate or illegitimate child under 16 years of age shall be deemed guilty of a felony. Ortega v. Portales, 134 Colo. 537, 307 P.2d 193 (1957).

No provision of the bastardy act has any bearing upon a prosecution under this section. Wamsley v. People, 64 Colo. 521, 173 P. 425 (1918).

The gravamen of the offense is not the fathering of the illegitimate child, but the failure to make provision for his support if and when it becomes a dependent child under the statute. Ortega v. Portales, 134 Colo. 537, 307 P.2d 193 (1957).

This section does not attempt to punish the father for begetting or neglecting to support the child before the section took effect, but requires a defendant, as the father of a child, to contribute to his support and maintenance, thus relieving the mother or others upon whom the burden may chance to fall. Ortega v. Portales, 134 Colo. 537, 307 P.2d 193 (1957).

The parent cannot be released of his duty to support the child by contract with anyone, but the fact that he entered into a contract and thereby made provisions for such support may have an important bearing upon the issue as to whether his neglect was willful or not. Laws v. People, 59 Colo. 562, 151 P. 433 (1915).

Although a bastardy prosecution under one statute is barred because not brought in time, an action may still be maintained under another statute for failure to support an illegitimate child. Ortega v. Portales, 134 Colo. 537, 307 P.2d 193 (1957).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE AND EXCUSES FOR FAILURE TO SUPPORT.

"Support and maintenance" are of much broader import than "food, clothing, and shelter", and may include many things besides food and clothing, and shelter. Campbell v. People, 42 Colo. 228, 94 P. 256 (1908).

Construed as applying to the duty of the husband when the wife is sick, the "food, clothing, and shelter" are properly connected, and it seems to have been the intention of the general assembly to require the husband, whatever provision he may have made for his wife and minor children while they were well, that he furnish, not money, with which they may provide for their own comfort, but in the case of their sickness that he must, at his peril, provide them with proper food, clothing, shelter, and care. Campbell v. People, 42 Colo. 228, 94 P. 256 (1908).

An information alleging that defendant "did willfully fail, refuse, and neglect to provide proper food, clothing, and shelter, and care in case of sickness for his wife", was fatally defective, in that it failed to allege that defendant's wife was sick at the time it was charged he failed to provide for her. Campbell v. People, 42 Colo. 228, 94 P. 256 (1908).

The term "willfully" is defined as intentionally done without just cause, excuse or justification after notice and request for support. People v. Green, 178 Colo. 77, 495 P.2d 549 (1972).

To be willful the neglect must have occurred while defendant knew, or ought to have known, that the need existed. Laws v. People, 59 Colo. 562, 151 P. 433 (1915).

Where willful neglect to support minor children is an element of an offense under this section, it is proper for a court to instruct the jury on intent. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

Because this section provides that the willful neglect, failure or refusal to provide reasonable support for a minor child or children is an element of the offense, therefore intent is material in a case, and it is proper for a court to so instruct the jury. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

Every person mentally capable of knowing right from wrong in relation to his acts is presumed to intend to do that which he does do, and to intend the natural and probable consequences of his act, and it is for a jury to determine the fact as to a defendant's intent, which may be shown by direct or by circumstantial evidence. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

Intent is an act or a purpose of the mind rarely discoverable except by the acts of a person, and is manifested by the circumstances connected with the perpetration of an offense, and the sound mind and discretion of the accused. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

The people sustained their burden of establishing that defendant willfully failed to provide the required child support when they showed that for a period of time he earned more than $400 per month and yet made no support payments. Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

A willful failure where the defendant is earning a salary has been defined, as intentionally done "without just cause, excuse or justification" after notice and request for support. Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

That part of this section which states that a defendant is guilty of nonsupport when he willfully fails to provide that required support "unless it shall appear that owing to physical incapacity or other good cause he is unable to furnish the support, care, and maintenance herein required", is not a true exception. Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

This is so because of the use of the term "willfully" in the first part of the section, and the supreme court holds that the word "willfully" is synonymous with the statutory expression which begins "unless it shall appear" Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

This renders the later clause surplusage since "willfully" necessarily implies lack of just cause, excuse or justification; thus, allegation of the willful (or felonious) nature of the act is all that is required. Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

Good cause is defined as a substantial or legal cause as distinguished from an assumed or imaginary pretense. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

The question of good cause is properly for the jury. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957); Silcott v. People, 177 Colo. 451, 492 P.2d 70 (1971).

Evidence that a father is capable of earning, and did earn good wages during a period of four months, is sufficient to show that his neglect to support minor children is not due to good cause. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

The fact that a defendant has other demands upon his income, including support of a new family, does not constitute good cause for failure to support minor children. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

A father's testimony that he has been in financial straits since the separation from his wife is not an excuse or good cause. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

In a prosecution of a husband for failure to support his wife, he was not relieved from such support on account of the financial means of the wife. Poole v. People, 24 Colo. 510, 52 P. 1025 (1898).

It was immaterial that the wife had means of her own, such means not having been obtained from the husband. Poole v. People, 24 Colo. 510, 52 P. 1025 (1898).

If it had been established that the wife left the defendant without an adequate excuse, refused without reasonable grounds to return to him, and he offered and was willing to support her if she returned, he could not be convicted of willful nonsupport of his wife. Kilpatrick v. People, 64 Colo. 209, 170 P. 956 (1918).

The act of 1893, providing that any person living in this state who shall willfully neglect to provide support for his wife may be adjudged guilty of misdemeanor, did not affect the general powers of a court of equity to entertain suits to compel a husband to pay alimony consistent with his condition in life, and reasonable for the maintenance of his wife or his family or both. Dye v. Dye, 9 Colo. App. 320, 48 P. 313 (1897).

An allowance of temporary alimony to the wife in an action brought by her for divorce is not admissible evidence against the husband in a prosecution for nonsupport. Kilpatrick v. People, 64 Colo. 209, 170 P. 956 (1918).

One acquitted of sexual intercourse with an unmarried female under 18 years of age is not liable to prosecution under this section for failure to support the illegitimate child alleged to be the fruit of the same illicit intercourse averred in the first information. Reil v. People, 62 Colo. 567, 164 P. 315 (1917).

Under this section the father of an illegitimate child under 16 years of age may be prosecuted for his failure to support it, without any prior adjudication of the paternity and this whether the child were begotten before or after the enactment of the statute. Pearman v. People, 64 Colo. 26, 170 P. 192 (1917); Wamsley v. People, 64 Colo. 521, 173 P. 425 (1918).

Where, in a prosecution under this section, the child in question was not born in wedlock, the prosecution has the burden of showing parentage. Martin v. People, 60 Colo. 575, 155 P. 318 (1916).

The accused is entitled to deny that the child is his, and though a marriage with the mother is shown, he must be permitted to put in evidence that at the time of such marriage the woman was the wife of another, and to exclude the evidence is error. Martin v. People, 60 Colo. 575, 155 P. 318 (1916).

A decree of divorce which commits the child to the custody of the mother, and is silent as to the child's support, does not relieve the father of his duty. Desch v. Desch, 55 Colo. 79, 132 P. 60 (1913).

A divorced wife may, in an original action, recover of the father a reasonable sum for necessities furnished by her for a child's support, after such decree, the recovery being commensurate with his means and station in life. Desch v. Desch, 55 Colo. 79, 132 P. 60 (1913).

III. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

The word "feloniously" when used in an indictment or information has been held by the supreme court to be equivalent to the word "willfully", and its use satisfies the requirements of pleading the essential elements of the crime, though it is much better form to follow the precise statutory wording. Gallegos v. People, 161 Colo. 158, 420 P.2d 409 (1966).

Where an information filed with a justice of the peace on January 18, 1897, charging a party with failure to support his wife alleged the time of the offense as "on or about the 19th day of September, and continuously since, A. D. 1897", it was held, that from the language employed charging the time when the offense was committed, it is fairly inferable that it was at a date prior to the filing of the information, and although it might have been successfully attacked at the proper time, by a motion on account of form, or ambiguity, it is too late to raise that question after trial. Poole v. People, 24 Colo. 510, 52 P. 1025 (1898).

In a prosecution under this section for failure to support an illegitimate child, it is not necessary to prove that the child is in need of support. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo. 436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

It was permissible to introduce into evidence the register of a hotel where the complainant testified she and defendant had stayed overnight, where the defendant acknowledged signatures in the register as his own. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo. 436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

The trial court's action in excluding a letter written by the complainant to defendant's witness was not prejudicial to the defendant where the effect of the whole letter was to entreat the witness to tell the truth, if he did testify. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo. 436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

Where the complainant denied having had sex relations with anyone other than the defendant, and the defense put on four witnesses to testify to her alleged promiscuity, it was not error for the complainant to testify in rebuttal of the testimony of the four witnesses. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo. 436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

In such a prosecution, the state must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt, and it was not error for the trial court to refuse defendant's instruction which stated that the state had to prove its case simply by a preponderance of the evidence. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo. 436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

It was permissible to allow the doctor who attended complainant during her confinement to refresh his memory from a birth certificate which he made at the time even though the certificate was obtained from the local registrar of vital statistics. Trujillo v. People, 122 Colo.

436, 222 P.2d 775 (1950).

Where there was judgment that defendant pay a certain sum monthly, etc., until the further order of the court, "and execute a bond in the sum, etc., for the faithful performance, etc., and upon failure, to be transported to the penitentiary to be there kept in close confinement at hard labor for three months", it was held a sufficient compliance with the statute. Poor v. People, 67 Colo. 60, 185 P. 467 (1919).

In a prosecution for willful failure to support minor children, evidence of a pending criminal case against a defendant, elicited on cross examination of defendant and within the scope of his direct examination, is not prejudicial. Tucker v. People, 136 Colo. 581, 319 P.2d 983 (1957).

Failure of the father to inquire as to the needs of the child was held, in view of the circumstances, insufficient to convict him of willful neglect. Laws v. People, 59 Colo. 562, 151 P. 433 (1915).

For article, "The Big, Bad D's: Debts and Death in Divorce - Part I", see 25 Colo. Law. 57, (July 1996).

This section has not the effect to relieve the father of the duty to support his minor child, so far as the child is incapable of self-support, even though, upon divorce, the child is committed to the mother, and the decree makes no provision for its support. Desch v. Desch, 55 Colo. 79, 132 P. 60 (1913).

This section was not given a retroactive effect so as to cover contracts made before its passage. Kelly v. Canon, 6 Colo. App. 465, 41 P. 833 (1895).

Where the wife lives apart from the husband, with the children, the liability of the husband for clothing furnished to the children without his authority, depends upon common-law principles, and this section regarding family expenses has no application. O'Brien v. Galley-Stockton Shoe Co., 65 Colo. 70, 173 P. 544 (1918).

The duties of the wife, as wife, form the consideration for the husband's liability for her maintenance, and if she is guilty of offenses against the marital relation that entitles her husband to a divorce, and by reason thereof they do not live together, her contracts for necessities will not bind the unoffending husband. Denver Dry Goods Co. v. Jester, 60 Colo. 290, 152 P. 903 (1915).

Where the parties were not living together as a family in fact, at the time the goods were sold, it is conceded that this section, relative to family expenses has no application. Denver Dry Goods Co. v. Jester, 60 Colo. 290, 152 P. 903 (1915).

Before this section can be invoked, a primary obligation upon either the husband or the wife, for the debt sought to be charged against them, must be established. Parker v. Joslin Dry Goods Co., 52 Colo. 238, 120 P. 1042 (1911).

In the absence of fraud between the husband and a family creditor, debts for family expenses, though contracted by the husband, bind the property of both husband and wife; agreements of the husband concerning such expenses are binding upon both; the cause of action accrues against both at the maturity of a note given for such expenses, not at the time the debt was contracted; renewal of the note by the husband alone does not discharge the lien; and the statute of limitations does not run in favor of either from the maturity of the first note, but of the new one. Wall v. Crawford, 103 Colo. 66, 82 P.2d 749 (1938).

A wife can be compelled to pay an indebtedness for something of which the family, or some one or more of its members, has had the actual benefit since it was incurred for family expenses. Straight v. McKay, 15 Colo. App. 60, 60 P. 1106 (1900).

Either husband or wife may incur indebtedness for the family expenses, and for such indebtedness either or both will be liable. Straight v. McKay, 15 Colo. App. 60, 60 P. 1106 (1900).

Outside of the expenses of the family and the education of the children, neither can impose an obligation upon the other. Straight v. McKay, 15 Colo. App. 60, 60 P. 1106 (1900).

What should be included in the term, "family expenses", must be determined by the facts and circumstances of each case, subject to the limitation, that an article or articles must have been purchased for, and used in or by, the family, or some member thereof. Houck v. La Junta Hdwe. Co., 50 Colo. 228, 114 P. 645 (1911).

A buggy purchased by the husband, while living with the wife, and which is used not only by the husband, but by the members of the family, while they are so living together, is a family expense for which the wife is liable. Houck v. La Junta Hdwe. Co., 50 Colo. 228, 114 P. 645 (1911).

Food and clothing are family expenses, and so are luxuries purchased for the use of the family, because such expenses are not confined to necessities, but to be family expenses they must be for things received by the family, or some member of the family. Straight v. McKay, 15 Colo. App. 60, 60 P. 1106 (1900).

The expenses of procuring a team of horses used on the family farm is a family expense. Wall v. Crawford, 103 Colo. 66, 82 P.2d 749 (1938).

The rent of a house which the family does not occupy is not a family expense. Straight v. McKay, 15 Colo. App. 60, 60 P. 1106 (1900).

Applicability of family expense doctrine. Under the family expense doctrine, furniture, which is used by and purchased for the family would be an obligation of the husband of the debtor even though he was not the contracting party, while personal property to be used by the debtor alone does not seem to be a family expense. In re Stanton-Rieger, 25 Bankr. 650 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982).

Goods sold to the husband on the sole credit of a third person are not a charge upon the family, though consumed in the family. Parker v. Joslin Dry Goods Co., 52 Colo. 238, 120 P. 1042 (1911).

Under this section the goods of the wife are chargeable with the lien equally with those of the husband. McDonnell v. Solomon, 64 Colo. 226, 170 P. 951 (1918).

Funeral expenses come within the purview of this section. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

Where plaintiffs become obligated for funeral expenses of their deceased son under this section, such obligation being imposed upon them by the wrongful act of defendant, they are entitled to recover such expenses in an action at law. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

The fact that petitioner may not be legally liable for his wife's necessities under this section has no application to the homestead provisions, their purpose, and effect. Haas v. De Laney, 165 F. Supp. 488 (D. Colo. 1958).

Where at the time of filing the homestead entry and at the time of bankruptcy, a bankrupt was the head of a family, he was therefore entitled to claim a homestead exemption even though his wife had been absent at the time of filing for more than four years, and no family existed so as to make the bankrupt liable for the wife's expenses under the provisions of this section. Haas v. De Laney, 165 F. Supp. 488 (D. Colo. 1958).

Where a counterclaim on the note as a holder in due course was limited by the provisions thereof, it could not be asserted as a claim against the husband as a family expense as there was no evidence in the record showing that the husband legally assumed or agreed to pay the indebtedness, and he could not be held liable. Nitzel v. Colo. Indus. Bank, 145 Colo. 215, 358 P.2d 31 (1960).

14-6-111. Legislative declaration. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the state of Colorado that, in order to promote the life, health, property, and public welfare of this state, it is necessary to establish procedures to assist in the collection of child support, maintenance where combined with child support, and maintenance.

14-7-101. Commitment of child - parent liable for support. The commitment of any child, under any law of this state, to any state institution shall not relieve the parents or legal guardian of such child from responsibility for the support of the child. It is the duty of any court committing any child to any state institution or any private institution where such child is kept at the expense of the county or state, at the time of the commitment, to forthwith notify the district attorney, if a state expense, and the county attorney, if a county expense, of the name and address of such parents and such other information as may be adduced at any hearing of such case concerning the financial responsibility of the parents to care for such child. In order to obtain such information, any court committing any child, at the time of commitment or at any convenient time to be designated by the court, is authorized to require the attendance of the parents or legal guardian upon such court to be examined under oath concerning the property, possessions, and financial responsibility of such parents or legal guardian.

ANNOTATION

The fathering of an illegitimate child in and of itself is not a “tortious act” in regard to the long arm statute. In re People, 30 Colo. App. 603, 498 P.2d 1166 (1972).

14-7-102. Action by state or county for support of child. The state of Colorado or the county, as the case may be, at whose expense such child is kept shall be entitled to recover from the parent, legal guardian, or other person responsible for the support of such child such sum for the care, support, and maintenance of the child as may be reasonable therefor, and in no case shall such sum be less than the per capita monthly or yearly amount of expense in the institution in which the child is confined or the actual expense incurred by the state or county for the care and maintenance of such child. Any action or proceeding by the state or county against any parent shall be conducted in accordance with the procedure in civil cases. In case any action is maintained by the state, it shall be brought in the name of the people of the state of Colorado, and any moneys recovered in any action shall be paid to the state treasurer and credited to the particular fund for the benefit of the institution having the custody and care of such child. If an action is maintained by the county in cases where the county pays the expense of the care and maintenance of such child, such action shall be in the name of the board of county commissioners of such county or other body performing the functions of a board of county commissioners, and any amount collected in any such action shall be paid to the county treasurer of such county. When such action is prosecuted to a final judgment and judgment is rendered in favor of the people of the state of Colorado or the board of county commissioners of the county prosecuting such action, as the case may be, an execution may issue against the property of the defendant as in other civil cases.

ANNOTATION

This section expressly commands complete parental reimbursement of the actual expense incurred by the county for the care and maintenance of the child, does not condition the parents' obligation on their financial ability to pay, and embodies a legislative policy that the parents shoulder the entire financial burden of the child's placement. M.S. v. People, 812 P.2d 632 (Colo. 1991).

The language of §§ 19-1-115 (4)(d) and 26-5-102 conflicts with this section since those sections speak in terms of the parents' ability to pay and this section imposes absolute liability without regard for the parents financial condition. M.S. v. People, 812 P.2d 632 (Colo. 1991).

Sections 19-1-115 (4)(d) and 26-5-102 are specific provisions concerning dependency and neglect adjudications and, with regard to the parental support obligation, control over this section. M.S. v. People, 812 P.2d 632 (Colo. 1991).

Once child has been adjudicated dependent or neglected and placed pursuant to § 19-1-115, the responsibility to reimburse state for costs for residential care is governed by § 19-1-115 (4)(d), not this section. People ex rel. B.S.M., 251 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2010).

14-7-103. District and county attorneys to report actions. On or before December 1 of each year, it shall be the duty of the district attorney and the county attorney to make a written report to the governor of the state, stating the number of reports, provided for in section 14-7-101, received from the courts of the county or state and the nature and result of any action directed in this article by such officers respectively to recover from such parents the expenses of the care and maintenance of such children. If no action has been taken, such report shall detail the reason for the failure of the officer to take action. It is the duty of the county commissioners to pay any court costs or other expenses necessary for the prosecution of any suit provided for in this article. Nothing in this article shall be construed to repeal any law of this state concerning the responsibility of parents to support their children, or providing for the punishment of parents or other persons responsible for the delinquency or dependency of children, or providing for the punishment of any parents for the nonsupport of their children; and nothing in such law shall prevent proceedings under this article in any proper case.

Act applicable regardless of date marriage began. Regardless of the date the marriage began, if the dissolution of marriage occurs after the effective date of this article, the parties are subject to all provisions of the uniform act. In re Lester, 647 P.2d 688 (Colo. App. 1982).

14-10-102. Purposes - rules of construction. (1) This article shall be liberally construed and applied to promote its underlying purposes.

(2) Its underlying purposes are:

(a) To promote the amicable settlement of disputes that have arisen between parties to a marriage;

(b) To mitigate the potential harm to the spouses and their children caused by the process of legal dissolution of marriage; and

(c) To make the law of legal dissolution of marriage more effective for dealing with the realities of matrimonial experience by making an irretrievable breakdown of the marriage relationship the sole basis for its dissolution.

ANNOTATION

Every state as a sovereign has rightful and legitimate concern in marital status of those persons who are domiciled within the state. Viernes v. District Court, 181 Colo. 284, 509 P.2d 306 (1973).

Marriage is favored over less formalized relationships. The state of Colorado has an interest in marriage, and marriage is favored over less formalized relationships which exist without the benefit of marriage. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Temporary support orders further purpose of article to mitigate potential harm to spouses and their children caused by the process of legal dissolution of marriage by maintaining status quo pending final disposition of dissolution proceeding. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Joinder of interspousal tort claims with marriage dissolution proceedings precluded. Marriage dissolution action cannot be joined with an interspousal claim sounding in tort since this section encourages the amicable settlement of disputes between parties to a marriage. Simmons v. Simmons, 773 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1988); In re Lewis, 66 P.3d 204 (Colo. App. 2003).

Dissolution court lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a parent should be removed as custodian of a Uniform Gift to Minors Act account. This issue may be considered instead by a district court that obtains jurisdiction over the account in a separate civil proceeding. In re Ludwig, 122 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2005).

This act provides separate sections that govern the different elements of a dissolution order, specifically property disposition, maintenance, child support, and attorney fees. The court is required to make separate orders regarding these elements based on separate considerations, and may not commingle one element with another. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

The public policies to be furthered under this act include dividing of assets equitably and mitigating the harm to spouses and children. These policies take precedence over any contract arguments that may be raised by either spouse. Thus, the trial court was correct in refusing husband's indemnification argument and in interpreting the divorce decree as requiring the husband to compensate the wife for the fair market value of business property apportioned to her in the equitable distribution. In re Plesich, 881 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1994).

14-10-103. Definitions and interpretation of terms. (1) As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires, the term “decree” includes the term “judgment”; and, for the purposes of the tax laws of the state of Colorado or of any other jurisdiction, the term “maintenance” includes the term “alimony”.

(2) Whenever any law of this state refers to or mentions divorce, annulment, or separate maintenance, said law shall be interpreted as if the words dissolution of marriage, declaration of invalidity of marriage, and legal separation, respectively, were substituted therefor.

(3) On and after July 1, 1993, the term “visitation” has been changed to “parenting time”. It is not the intent of the general assembly to modify or change the meaning of the term “visitation” nor to alter the legal rights of a parent with respect to the child as a result of changing the term “visitation” to “parenting time”.

(4) On and after February 1, 1999, the term “custody” and related terms such as “custodial” and “custodian” have been changed to “parental responsibilities”. It is not the intent of the general assembly to modify or change the meaning of the term “custody” nor to alter the legal rights of any custodial parent with respect to the child as a result of changing the term “custody” to “parental responsibilities”.

14-10-104. Uniformity of application and construction. (1) This article shall be so applied and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this article among those states which enact it.

(2) The term “irretrievable breakdown” shall be construed as being similar to other terms having a like import in the law of other jurisdictions adopting this or a similar law.

ANNOTATION

Applied in In re Parsons, 30 P.3d 868 (Colo. App. 2001).

14-10-104.5. Legislative declaration. The general assembly recognizes that it is in the best interests of the parties to a marriage in which a dissolution has been granted and in which there are children of the marriage for the parties to be able to resolve disputes that arise subsequent to the dissolution in an amicable and fair manner. The general assembly further recognizes that, in most cases, it is in the best interests of the children of the marriage to have a relationship with both parents and that, in most cases, it is the parents’ right to have a relationship with their children. The general assembly emphasizes that one of the underlying purposes of this article is to mitigate the potential harm to the spouses and their children and the relationships between the parents and their children caused by the process of legal dissolution of marriage. The general assembly recognizes that when a marriage in which children are involved is dissolved both parties either agree to or are subject to orders which contain certain obligations and commitments. The general assembly declares that the honoring and enforcing of those obligations and commitments made by both parties is necessary to maintaining a relationship that is in the best interest of the children of the marriage. In recognition thereof the general assembly hereby declares that both parties should honor and fulfill all of the obligations and commitments made between the parties and ordered by the court.

ANNOTATION

The state has a public interest in mitigating the potential harm to children caused by the dissolution of marriage. Thus, a parent has no privacy interest in the process by which child support obligations are determined because support levels are not purely private determinations but serve a public function and are subject to court approval. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

Furthermore, the child support guidelines do not infringe upon a fundamental right. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

Nor do the child support guidelines discriminate against a suspect class or significantly interfere with a fundamental right. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

The state has a legitimate interest in requiring divorced or separated parents to provide child support based on the parties' combined gross incomes. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

Intent of act requires enforcement of child support agreement even though it does not specify a dollar amount. To allow otherwise would be to allow father to unilaterally terminate child support obligation without first obtaining an order of modification. In re Meisner, 807 P.2d 1205 (Colo. App. 1990).

14-10-105. Application of Colorado rules of civil procedure. (1) The Colorado rules of civil procedure apply to all proceedings under this article, except as otherwise specifically provided in this article.

(2) A proceeding for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity of marriage shall be entitled "In re the Marriage of ..... and .....". A proceeding for the allocation of parental responsibilities or a support proceeding shall be entitled "In re the (Parental responsibilities concerning) (Support of) .....".

(3) The initial pleading in all proceedings under this article shall be denominated a petition. A responsive pleading shall be denominated a response. Other pleadings and all pleadings in other matters under this article shall be denominated as provided in the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-105 is similar to repealed § 46-1-2, C.R.S. 1963, and CSA, C. 56, § 3, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The rules of civil procedure, where the divorce statutes are silent as to any method of procedure, govern. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943); Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

The rules of civil procedure apply to a divorce action, unless a contrary rule appears in the divorce statutes. Bacher v. District Court, 186 Colo. 314, 527 P.2d 56 (1974).

Service of notice in proceedings under this article is governed by the rules of civil procedure. In re Henne, 620 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1980).

On the question of venue in divorce actions, C.R.C.P. 98(c) is controlling, notwithstanding this article concerning divorce actions and kindred matters. People ex rel. Stanko v. Routt County Court, 110 Colo. 428, 135 P.2d 232 (1943); Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

For the purpose of the venue requirements in C.R.C.P. 98, the petitioner and respondent in a dissolution of marriage proceeding are the equivalent of a plaintiff and defendant, respectively. Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

There is no specific venue statute which would override the rules of civil procedure. Bacher v. District Court, 186 Colo. 314, 527 P.2d 56 (1974).

The rules of procedure do not govern procedure and practice in actions in divorce where they may conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statutes. Moats v. Moats, 168 Colo. 120, 450 P.2d 64 (1969).

There is no exception in this section which dispenses with the necessity of filing a motion for a new trial, or which permits the court in the exercise of its discretion to dispense with such a motion. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Order under C.R.C.P. 54(b) authorized.

This section, providing that the Colorado rules of civil procedure apply to dissolution proceedings except as “otherwise specifically provided in the act”, and § 14-10-120, providing that a decree of dissolution of marriage is “final” when entered, subject to the right of appeal, authorize the trial court to enter an order pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54(b) making the decree final for purposes of appeal. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Appealability of decree on entry of such order. Upon the entry of an order under

C.R.C.P. 54(b) a decree of dissolution of marriage may be appealed prior to entry of permanent orders on the issues of child custody, support, and division of property. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Applied in Hubbard v. District Court, 192 Colo. 98, 556 P.2d 478 (1976); Menne v. Menne, 194 Colo. 304, 572 P.2d 472 (1977); In re Femmer, 39 Colo. 14-10-106. Dissolution of marriage - legal separation. (1) (a) The district court shall enter a decree of dissolution of marriage or a decree of legal separation when:

(I) The court finds that one of the parties has been domiciled in this state for ninety-one days next preceding the commencement of the proceeding;

(II) The court finds that the marriage is irretrievably broken; and

(III) The court finds that ninety-one days or more have elapsed since it acquired jurisdiction over the respondent either as the result of process pursuant to rule 4 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure or as the result of the act of the respondent in joining as copetitioner in the petition or in entering an appearance in any other manner.

(b) In connection with every decree of dissolution of marriage or decree of legal separation and to the extent of its jurisdiction to do so, the court shall consider, approve, or allocate parental responsibilities with respect to any child of the marriage, the support of any child of the marriage who is entitled to support, the maintenance of either spouse, and the disposition of property; but the entry of a decree with respect to parental responsibilities, support, maintenance, or disposition of property may be deferred by the court until after the entry of the decree of dissolution of marriage or the decree of legal separation upon a finding that a deferral is in the best interests of the parties.

(c) In a proceeding to dissolve a marriage or in a proceeding for legal separation or in a proceeding for declaration of invalidity, the court is deemed to have made an adjudication of the parentage of a child of the marriage if the court acts under circumstances that satisfy the jurisdictional requirements of section 14-5-201 and the final order:

(I) Expressly identifies a child as a “child of the marriage”, “issue of the marriage”, or similar words indicating that the husband is the father of the child; or

(II) Provides for support of the child by the husband unless paternity is specifically disclaimed in the order.

(d) Paternity is not adjudicated for a child not mentioned in the final order.

(2) If a party requests a decree of legal separation rather than a decree of dissolution of marriage, the court shall grant the decree in that form unless the other party objects.

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-106 is similar to repealed §§ 46-1-2 and 46-1-3, C.R.S. 1963, §§ 46-1-2 and 46-1-3, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, §§ 6 and 8, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

An action for divorce is of a purely personal nature. Morris v. Propst, 98 Colo. 213, 55 P.2d 944 (1936); Wood v. Parkerson, 163 Colo. 271, 430 P.2d 467 (1967).

The power of the court in such an action to issue decrees relative to alimony, to exonerate the wife's estate from the husband's claims, and to make orders relative to the care and custody of the children is merely incidental to the primary object of changing the status or relation of the parties to each other. Wood v. Parkerson, 163 Colo. 271, 430 P.2d 467 (1967).

Such actions, in the absence of a statute providing to the contrary, abate absolutely upon the death of either party before judgment, and cannot be revived in the name of or against the representatives of the deceased party. Wood v. Parkerson, 163 Colo. 271, 430 P.2d 467 (1967).

Masters should not be appointed as a routine matter in divorce cases where the issues are not complex and the facts are not complicated. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

The trial court may, for good cause shown, allow an extension of time within which to file an answer in a divorce action, even though the original time within which to file has expired. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

Not abuse to refuse continuance when party could not appear. It is not an abuse of discretion for the court to refuse to grant a continuance at a hearing as to the question of dissolution of the marriage, where the wife could not appear at the hearing. In re Lester, 647 P.2d 688 (Colo. App. 1982).

Deferring property division. A specific finding that it is in the best interest of the parties to defer the property division is required to prevent unwarranted delays in dividing property in dissolution of marriage cases. That purpose is complied with when the parties are given time limits within which to submit their proposals for the property division. In re Rose, 40 Colo. App. 176, 574 P.2d 112 (1977).

II. DOMICILE OR RESIDENCY REQUIRED.

Domicile is keystone for jurisdiction to determine the marital status, and domicile of one of the parties to the divorce action is required. Viernes v. District Court, 181 Colo. 284, 509 P.2d 306 (1973).

Jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent; lack of residence cannot be waived. Watson v. Watson, 135 Colo. 296, 310 P.2d 554 (1957); McMillion v. McMillion, 31 Colo. 33, 497 P.2d 331 (1972).

Actual bona fide residence is essential and must be established with some degree of certainty. Watson v. Watson, 135 Colo. 296, 310 P.2d 554 (1957).

Unless the residence required by this section is in some manner shown, the court is without jurisdiction. People ex rel. Plunkett v. District Court, 127 Colo. 483, 258 P.2d 483 (1953).

When bona fide residence in a county is not established, the court is under a mandatory duty to refuse to hear or grant any motions whatever in an action, and its dismissal must follow. People ex rel. Plunkett v. District Court, 127 Colo. 483, 258 P.2d 483 (1953).

Under statutes pertaining to jurisdiction in divorce proceedings, the word "residence" is synonymous with the legal meaning of the word "domicile," and a person's domicile, once established, continues until he acquires legal residence or domicile elsewhere. McMillion v. McMillion, 31 Colo. App. 33, 497 P.2d 331 (1972).

Residence requires domicile. Residence for the purposes of divorce jurisdiction has always required and continues to require domicile. Viernes v. District Court, 181 Colo. 284, 509 P.2d 306 (1973).

Where husband's residency was established by an earlier proceeding as being in Colorado, that determination is res judicata and creates a presumption that he is still a resident, absent a showing that a new residency has been established. McMillion v. McMillion, 31 Colo. App. 33, 497 P.2d 331 (1972).

Where jurisdictional facts are admitted in pleadings, decree is not void for failing to recite them. Jones v. Jones, 71 Colo. 420, 207 P. 596 (1922).

Failure to allege 90-day residence immediately prior to proceeding is not fatal. Section 14-10-107 does not require that a petition for dissolution of marriage contain an allegation that the residency period includes the 90 days immediately prior to the commencement of the proceeding, and petitioner's failure to make her allegation in the words of this section was not a fatal defect. In re Alper, 33 Colo. App. 225, 517 P.2d 404 (1973).

Purpose of residency requirements was to prevent nonresidents from establishing temporary residence to obtain divorce. Cairnes v. Cairnes, 29 Colo. 260, 68 P. 233 (1902); Sedgwick v. Sedgwick, 50 Colo. 164, 114 P. 488 (1911).

An alien who made this state his home, in good faith, and had no residence elsewhere, was a citizen within the meaning of the former statute. Sedgwick v. Sedgwick, 50 Colo. 164, 114 P. 488 (1911).

Where no witness testified to plaintiff's residence, in answer to any direct question, but in effect it appeared that he had resided here for many years prior to the institution of his action, it was held a compliance with the statute. Sedgwick v. Sedgwick, 50 Colo. 164, 114 P. 488 (1911).

Where plaintiff alleged and proved more than a year's residence in Colorado before the commencement of the action, but defendant at the time of filing his cross complaint had resided in Colorado less than one year, the allegations of plaintiff's complaint vested the court with jurisdiction of plaintiff and the subject matter. Harms v. Harms, 120 Colo. 212, 209 P.2d 552 (1949).

Where prior to the trial plaintiff had registered to vote in Colorado, his automobile was registered in Colorado, he had a Colorado driver's license, and for several months prior to trial he has been engaged in part-time civilian employment in Colorado Springs in a field in which he intended to continue on his retirement, and plaintiff had for four years been present in Colorado in military service, the foregoing facts, formed a sound basis for the finding of the trial judge that the court had jurisdiction based on residence. Mulhollen v. Mulhollen, 145 Colo. 479, 358 P.2d 887 (1961).

Merely presence in state as member of armed forces insufficient to confer jurisdiction but after 90 days domicile may be established. A serviceman may establish a Colorado domicile to support jurisdiction for a Colorado court to grant a decree of dissolution of marriage after he has been stationed in Colorado for 90 days. Viernes v. District Court, 181 Colo. 284, 509 P.2d 306 (1973).

III. DISTRICT COURT'S JURISDICTION.

The district courts are invested by the statute with jurisdiction in this class of actions. Pleyte v. Pleyte, 1 Colo. App. 70, 28 P. 23 (1891).

Only a final decree of divorce in a foreign state constitutes a bar to a divorce action in Colorado. In re Quay, 647 P.2d 693 (Colo. App. 1982).

Formerly, where a complaint alleged that the parties were residents of the state of Colorado, and that defendant had been guilty of acts of mental cruelty committed within the state of Colorado, and prayed for divorce alleging sufficient facts to give the court jurisdiction. Raygor v. Raygor, 29 Colo. App. 453, 485 P.2d 930 (1971).

Service by publication insufficient for jurisdiction in custody issue. Service by publication pursuant to the uniform act is not sufficient to vest a trial court with jurisdiction to resolve a custody issue. In re Blair, 42 Colo. App. 270, 592 P.2d 1354 (1979).

A trial court which in fact lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter cannot acquire jurisdiction even though the parties expressly or impliedly consent thereto. Triebelhorn v. Turzanski, 149 Colo. 558, 370 P.2d 757 (1962).

The jurisdiction of the district court of Adams county, arising from the filing and disposition of the divorce action would not preclude the district court of the city and county of Denver from proceeding pursuant to the reciprocal support act when the mother and children had moved to Nevada. Scheer v. District Court, 147 Colo. 265, 363 P.2d 1059 (1961).

A district court is without jurisdiction to hear a divorce action involving two members of a reservation Indian tribe. Whyte v. District Court, 140 Colo. 334, 346 P.2d 1012 (1959), cert. denied, 363 U.S. 829, 80 S. Ct. 1600, 4 L. Ed.2d 1524 (1960).

Where the trial court had jurisdiction to divide property at the time of entry of a final decree of divorce, but did not do so, nor then reserve the matter for further consideration, it lost jurisdiction to thereafter make a valid division of such property. Triebelhorn v. Turzanski, 149 Colo. 558, 370 P.2d 757 (1962); Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Colo. 486, 423 P.2d 315 (1967).

Trial court, which had personal jurisdiction over husband but lacked the authority to divide the husband's military pension as marital property, did not retain jurisdiction to divide the pension at a later date. Even though final decree provided that trial court had continuing jurisdiction over the action and that the wife would remain entitled to any and all military benefits, the court did not have the authority to divide military pension as a result of subsequent case law declaring such pensions to be marital property. Language in final decree refers only to the court's continuing authority to divide property as such court had on the date of the final decree. In Re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

Federal act specifying whether the court has jurisdiction over a military member's pension preempts state rules of procedure governing jurisdiction. In Re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

Jurisdiction retained until all matters resolved. A district court which properly acquires jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter in a dissolution action retains that jurisdiction until all matters arising out of the litigation are resolved. Gonzales v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1981).

Jurisdiction does not extend to resolution of all financial issues. Jurisdiction to grant a divorce does not automatically include the right to resolve all financial issues between the parties to the marriage. Viernes v. District Court, 181 Colo. 284, 509 P.2d 306 (1973).

The dissolution court has jurisdiction to grant relief but only in equity and not at law. Tort claims concerning property that was the subject of the dissolution court may not be joined into an otherwise equitable dissolution proceeding. In re Mockelmann, 121 P.3d 335 (Colo. App. 2005).

Where it appears from a record and from the conduct of counsel that the parties agreed that a court would defer determination of permanent alimony, property settlement, and related matters until after the entry of a final decree. Rodgers v. Rodgers, 137 Colo. 74, 323 P.2d 892 (1958).

Although, resumption of marital relations by the parties to a divorce action affords good grounds for a dismissal thereof, it does not serve to divest the court of jurisdiction. Stockham v. Stockham, 145 Colo. 376, 358 P.2d 1026 (1961).

Husband's motion to abate and reduce child support amounted to consent to the court's personal jurisdiction. In Re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

Purported father found to have transacted business in state. Purported father's sending of letter agreeing to pay support that father knew would be relied upon by Colorado authorities for purpose of determining eligibility for public assistance constituted transacting business in this state conferring personal jurisdiction over him pursuant to § 13-1-124. In re Parental Responsibilities of H.Z.G., 77 P.3d 848 (Colo. App. 2003).

Decree of dissolution entered after a spouse's death is void for lack of jurisdiction, and the dissolution action is abated. In Re Connell, 870 P.2d 632 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section mandates that bifurcation of dissolution proceedings may occur only if the district court finds that "such a deferral is necessary in the best interest of the parties" and should only be considered in exceptional cases. Estate of Burford v. Burford, 935 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1997).

A decree of dissolution when entered by the district court is final to dissolve the marriage even when the district court refuses to certify the decree as a final judgment appealable under C.R.C.P. 54 (b). Estate of Burford v. Burford, 935 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1997).

14-10-107. Commencement - pleadings - abolition of existing defenses - automatic, temporary injunction - enforcement. (1) All proceedings under this article shall be commenced in the manner provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(2) The petition in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation shall allege that the marriage is irretrievably broken and shall set forth:

- (a) The residence of each party and the length of residence in this state;
- (b) The date and place of the marriage;
- (c) The date on which the parties separated;
- (d) The names, ages, and addresses of any living children of the marriage and whether the wife is pregnant;
- (e) Any arrangements as to the allocation of parental responsibilities with respect to the children of the marriage and support of the children and the maintenance of a spouse;
- (f) The relief sought; and
- (g) A written acknowledgment by the petitioner and the co-petitioner, if any, that he or she has received a copy of, has read, and understands the terms of the automatic temporary injunction required by paragraph (b) of subsection (4) of this section.

(2.5) Upon the filing of a petition for dissolution of marriage or legal separation pursuant to this article, each party shall provide to the court, in the manner prescribed by the court, his or her social security number and the social security number of each child named in the petition pursuant to paragraph (d) of subsection (2) of this section.

(3) Either or both parties to the marriage may initiate the proceeding. In addition, a legal guardian, with court approval pursuant to section 15-14-315.5, C.R.S., or a conservator, with court approval pursuant to section 15-14-425.5, C.R.S., may initiate the proceeding. If a legal guardian or conservator initiates the proceeding, the legal guardian or conservator shall receive notice in the same manner as the parties to the proceeding.

(4) (a) Upon the commencement of a proceeding by one of the parties, or by a legal guardian or conservator of one of the parties, the other party shall be personally served in the manner provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure, and he or she may file a response in accordance with such rules; except that, upon motion verified by the oath of the party commencing the proceeding or of someone in his or her behalf for an order of publication stating the facts authorizing such service, and showing the efforts, if any, that have been made to obtain personal service within this state, and giving the address or last-known address of each person to be served or stating that his or her address and last-known address are unknown, the court shall hear the motion ex parte and, if satisfied that due diligence has been used to obtain personal service within this state or that efforts to obtain the same would have been to no avail, shall order one publication of a consolidated notice in a newspaper published or having general circulation in the county in which the proceeding is filed, notwithstanding the provisions of article 70 of title 24, C.R.S. A consolidated notice shall be published at least once during a calendar month and shall list the proceedings filed subsequent to those named in the previously published consolidated notice, stating as to each proceeding the names of the parties, the action number, the nature of the action, that a copy of the petition and summons may be obtained from the clerk of the court during regular business hours, and that default judgment may be entered against that party upon whom service is made by such notice if he or she fails to appear or file a response within thirty-five days after the date of publication. Costs of publication of a consolidated notice may be assessed pro rata to each of the proceedings named in the notice; except that, if a party is indigent or otherwise unable to pay such publication costs, the costs shall be paid by the court from funds appropriated for the purpose. Service shall be complete upon such publication, and a response or appearance by the party served by publication under this subsection (4) shall be made within thirty-five days thereafter, or default judgment may be entered. No later than the day of publication, the clerk of the court shall also post for thirty-five consecutive days a copy of the process on a bulletin board in his or her office, and shall mail a copy of the process to the other party at his or her last-known address, and shall place in the file of the proceeding his or her certificate of posting and mailing. Proof of publication of the consolidated notice shall be by placing in the file a copy of the affidavit of publication, certified by the clerk of the court to be a true and correct copy of the original affidavit on file in the clerk's office.

(b) (I) Upon the filing of a petition for dissolution of marriage or legal separation by the petitioner or copetitioner or by a legal guardian or conservator on behalf of one of the parties and upon personal service of the petition and summons on the respondent or upon waiver and acceptance of service by the respondent, a temporary injunction shall be in effect against both parties until the final decree is entered or the petition is dismissed or until further order of the court:

(A) Restraining both parties from transferring, encumbering, concealing, or in any way disposing of, without the consent of the other party or an order of the court, any marital property, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life and requiring each party to notify the other party of any proposed extraordinary expenditures and to account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after the injunction is in effect;

(B) Enjoining both parties from molesting or disturbing the peace of the other party;

(C) Restraining both parties from removing the minor child or children of the parties, if any, from the state without the consent of the other party or an order of the court; and

(D) Restraining both parties, without at least fourteen days' advance notification and the written consent of the other party or an order of the court, from canceling, modifying, terminating, or allowing to lapse for nonpayment of premiums, any policy of health insurance, homeowner's or renter's insurance, or automobile insurance that provides coverage to either of the parties or the minor children or any policy of life insurance that names either of the parties or the minor children as a beneficiary.

(II) The provisions of the injunction shall be printed upon the summons and the petition and the injunction shall become an order of the court upon fulfillment of the requirements of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b). However, nothing in this paragraph (b) shall preclude either party from applying to the court for further temporary orders, an expanded temporary injunction, or modification or revocation under section 14-10-108.

(III) The summons shall contain the following advisements:

(A) That a request for genetic tests shall not prejudice the requesting party in matters concerning allocation of parental responsibilities pursuant to section 14-10-124 (1.5); and

(B) That, if genetic tests are not obtained prior to a legal establishment of paternity and submitted into evidence prior to the entry of the legal final decree of dissolution, the genetic tests may not be allowed into evidence at a later date.

(4.1) With regard to the automatic, temporary injunction that becomes effective in accordance with paragraph (b) of subsection (4) of this section when a petition for dissolution of marriage or legal separation is filed and served, whenever there is exhibited by the respondent to any duly authorized peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., a copy of the petition and summons duly filed and issued pursuant to this section, or, in the case of the petitioner, a copy of the petition and summons duly filed and issued pursuant to this section, together with a certified copy of the affidavit of service of process or a certified copy of the waiver and acceptance of service, and the peace officer has cause to believe that a violation of that part of the automatic, temporary injunction which enjoins both parties from molesting the other party has occurred, such peace officer shall use every reasonable means to enforce that part of the injunction against the petitioner or respondent. A peace officer shall not be held civilly or criminally liable for his or her action pursuant to this subsection (4.1) if the action is in good faith and without malice.

(5) Defenses to divorce and legal separation existing prior to January 1, 1972, including but not limited to condonation, connivance, collusion, recrimination, insanity, and lapse of time, are hereby abolished.

(6) All issues raised by these proceedings shall be resolved by the court sitting without a jury.

Annotator's note. Cases relevant to § 14-10-107 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 71, p. 521, § 1, have been included in the annotations to this section.

A court having properly acquired jurisdiction over the subject matter and parties to a divorce action, including minor children, is not at liberty to thereafter divest itself of such jurisdiction to the prejudice of interested parties. Cartier v. Cartier, 94 Colo. 157, 28 P.2d 1010 (1934).

In divorce proceedings, the parties are the husband and wife, and the jurisdiction of the divorce court is exercised as between husband and wife. Ross v. Ross, 89 Colo. 536, 5 P.2d 246 (1931).

There are, in reality, three parties to every divorce action: The plaintiff, the defendant, and the state. Reed v. Reed, 138 Colo. 74, 329 P.2d 633 (1958).

A wife or husband may well be entitled to a divorce, but whether or not she or he will exercise that right is optional with her or him. Faith v. Faith, 128 Colo. 483, 261 P.2d 225 (1953).

The policy of the court should be to discourage, rather than encourage, divorces. Faith v. Faith, 128 Colo. 483, 261 P.2d 225 (1953).

When a plaintiff moves to dismiss a divorce action, it is the duty of a trial court to dismiss the case. McClanahan v. County Court, 136 Colo. 426, 318 P.2d 599 (1957).

The court cannot compel one to take a divorce when he does not desire to have one. Faith v. Faith, 128 Colo. 483, 261 P.2d 225 (1953).

Due process notice and hearing requirements met. The basic requirements of the due process clause of our constitution are that no person be deprived of valuable rights without adequate notice and opportunity for hearing, and the divorce statute does make provision for such notice and hearing before the termination of the marriage. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Action for dissolution of marriage is proceeding in rem. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Scope of court's jurisdiction over nonresident respondent is established by this section. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Service by publication insufficient for jurisdiction in custody issue. Service by publication pursuant to the uniform act is not sufficient to vest a trial court with jurisdiction to resolve a custody issue. In re Blair, 42 Colo. App. 270, 592 P.2d 1354 (1979).

Default judgment would be proper after a member of the armed services entered an appearance and asserted cross claims. Federal Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act is to protect members of the military from having default judgments entered against them without their notice of the pendency of the action. It does not prevent entry of such a judgment when there has been notice of the pendency of the action and the member has had adequate time to defend the action. In re Custody of Nugent, 955 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1997).

In an action for divorce it is sufficient compliance with the rules of civil procedure if a court makes findings on the material and ultimate facts. Lininger v. Lininger, 138 Colo. 338, 333 P.2d 625 (1958).

Maintenance must be requested in petition. Under the uniform act, maintenance must be requested in the petition for dissolution. In re Boyd, 643 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1982).

All the provisions of the code which are applicable shall control in the trial and disposition of divorce cases, except as otherwise provided in the divorce act itself, either expressly or by necessary implication. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 27 Colo. 380, 61 P. 225 (1900); People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

The former defense of condonation was in the nature of confession and avoidance. Cochran v. Cochran, 164 Colo. 99, 432 P.2d 752 (1967).

Condoned adultery was not a bar to a divorce, because it was not a ground for divorce. Jones v. Jones, 71 Colo. 420, 207 P. 596 (1922).

If there was any collusion or fraud between the parties, the court would see to it that a decree for divorce is not entered. Reed v. Reed, 138 Colo. 74, 329 P.2d 633 (1958).

Where each party was at fault, a court could not grant relief to either party. Morgan v. Morgan, 139 Colo. 545, 340 P.2d 1060 (1959).

Formerly, the defendant in an action for divorce could set up any matter by way of cross-complaint that would defeat the plaintiff's action. Cupples v. Cupples, 33 Colo. 449, 80 P. 1039 (1905).

It was not necessary, in order to entitle the defendant to set up matters by way of cross-complaint, in bar of the plaintiff's action, that the defendant was seeking a divorce. Cupples v. Cupples, 33 Colo. 449, 80 P. 1039 (1905).

Where a cross-complaint, defective because it omitted a jurisdictional averment so that no divorce could be awarded thereon to the defendant, must have been investigated, and could serve to defeat the action. Cupples v. Cupples, 33 Colo. 449, 80 P. 1039 (1905); Garver v. Garver, 52 Colo. 227, 121 P. 165 (1911).

Decedent's naming of her brother as the payable-on-death beneficiary of her accounts and joint accounts of her and her husband did not amount to an encumbrance of marital property. Estate of Westfall v. Westfall, 942 P.2d 1227 (Colo. App. 1996).

Changing accounts from multi-party to sole accounts before divorce did not affect the other spouse's rights since the accounts remained part of the marital estate and either party had a legal right to deplete the joint accounts. Estate of Westfall v. Westfall, 942 P.2d 1227 (Colo. App. 1996).

It was error to receive a verdict which failed to respond to counter charge of violation of marital duties pleaded in answer. Garver v. Garver, 52 Colo. 227, 121 P. 165 (1911).

II. COMMENCEMENT OF THE PROCEEDING.

Domicile in the state is alone sufficient to bring an absent defendant in a divorce action within the reach of the state's jurisdiction for purposes of a personal judgment by means of appropriate substituted service. In re Petition of Kraudel v. Benner, 148 Colo. 525, 366 P.2d 667 (1961).

Its adequacy so far as due process is concerned is dependent on whether or not the form of substituted service provided for such cases and employed is reasonably calculated to give him actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard, if it is, the traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice implicit in due process are satisfied. In re Petition of Kraudel v. Benner, 148 Colo. 525, 366 P.2d 667 (1961).

Fraud relative to service by publication operates to void a divorce decree. In re Wilson, 653 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982).

A decree of divorce based upon constructive service is void unless the record shows a strict compliance with all the statutory requirements. Roberts v. Roberts, 3 Colo. App. 6, 31 P. 941 (1892).

The record must show a compliance with the statute respecting the mailing of a copy of the summons to the defendant to justify the entry of a judgment. Roberts v. Roberts, 3 Colo. App. 6, 31 P. 941 (1892).

Parole proof that the defendant had actual knowledge of the pendency of the action was not considered on the hearing of his motion to set aside the judgment, because of the failure to mail him a copy of the summons, as required by law. Roberts v. Roberts, 3 Colo. App. 6, 31 P. 941 (1892).

Where upon a service of a summons in a divorce suit in which the defendant, if served within the county in which the action was pending, was required to appear and answer the complaint within 20 days thereafter, the court was not authorized to proceed to a judgment if defendant failed to comply with such command, for it was in direct conflict with the mandatory provision which gives a defendant 30 days to appear and answer in such circumstances. Mottschall v. Mottschall, 31 Colo. 260, 72 P. 1053 (1903).

Where plaintiff had removed her child to a foreign country, a motion by her attorney for leave to withdraw as her counsel was properly denied, since such withdrawal would make service of process impossible and deprive the trial court of authority to make proper orders. Holland v. Holland, 150 Colo. 442, 373 P.2d 523 (1962).

Failure to allege 90-day residency immediately prior to proceeding not fatal. This section does not require that a petition for dissolution of marriage contain an allegation that the residency period includes the 90 days immediately prior to the commencement of the proceeding, and petitioner's failure to make her allegation in the words of § 14-10-106 was not a fatal defect. In re Alper, 33 Colo. App. 225, 517 P.2d 404 (1973).

Theory of mutual mistake not waived by failure to raise issue in reply to petition. In a dispute over a separation agreement, a theory of mutual mistake is not waived by failure to raise the issue in the reply to the petition for dissolution of marriage, since no reply is required and averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required shall be taken as denied or avoided. In re Deines, 44 Colo. App. 98, 608 P.2d 375 (1980).

Withdrawal of marital property after dissolution proceeding commenced. In determining the total value of the marital property, trial court did not err in including the $45,000 husband, had withdrawn from the fund after the dissolution proceeding had commenced since husband, who had not obtained an order of the court or consent of his wife before using the money, failed to show that the withdrawal was done either in the usual course of business or was for the necessities of life. In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court properly credited husband with the amount of funds existing prior to wife's sale of stock shares when wife cashed out shares after entry of the automatic temporary injunction. Wife's argument that the parties routinely cashed out shares to meet living expenses was rejected by the court as a rationale for not including the amount she cashed out in the division of marital shares, since the prior sales of stock took place inconsistently and was not used as income on a monthly basis. In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

14-10-107.5. Entry of appearance to establish support. (1) The attorney for the county department of social services may file an entry of appearance on behalf of the department in any proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation under this article for purposes of establishing, modifying, and enforcing child support and medical support if any party is receiving support enforcement services pursuant to section 26-13-106, C.R.S., and for purposes of establishing and enforcing reimbursement of payments for temporary assistance to needy families.

(2) The county department of social services, upon the filing of the entry of appearance described in subsection (1) of this section or upon the filing of a legal pleading to establish, modify, or enforce the support obligation, shall be from that date forward, without leave or order of court, a third-party intervenor in the action for the purposes outlined in subsection (1) of this section without the necessity of filing a motion to intervene.

14-10-107.7. Required notice of involvement with department of human services. When filing a petition for dissolution of marriage or legal separation, a petition in support or proceedings for the allocation of parental responsibilities with respect to the children of the marriage, or any other matter pursuant to this article with the court, if the parties have joint legal responsibility for a child for whom the petition seeks an order of child support, the parties shall be required to indicate on a form prepared by the court whether or not the parties or the dependent children of the parties have received within the last five years or are currently receiving benefits or public assistance from either the state department of human services or county department of social services. If the parties indicate that they have received such benefits or assistance, the court shall inform the appropriate delegate child support enforcement unit so that the unit can determine whether any support enforcement services are required. There shall be no penalty for failure to report as specified in this section.

14-10-107.8. Required notice of prior restraining, civil protection, or emergency protection orders to prevent domestic abuse - petitions for dissolution of marriage or legal separation. (1) When filing a petition for dissolution of marriage or legal separation pursuant to this article, the filing party shall have a duty to disclose to the court the existence of any prior temporary or permanent restraining orders and civil protection orders to prevent domestic abuse issued pursuant to article 14 of title 13, C.R.S., any mandatory restraining order and protection orders issued pursuant to section 18-1-1001, C.R.S., and any emergency protection orders issued pursuant to section 13-14-103, C.R.S., entered against either party by any court within two years prior to the filing of the petition of dissolution of marriage or legal separation. The disclosure required pursuant to this section shall address the subject matter of the previous restraining, civil protection, or emergency protection orders, including the case number and jurisdiction issuing such orders.

(2) After the filing of the petition, the court shall advise the parties concerning domestic violence services and potential financial resources that may be available and shall strongly encourage the parties to obtain such services for their children, in appropriate cases. If the parties' children participate in such services, the court shall apportion the costs of such services between the parties as it deems appropriate.

(3) The parties to a domestic relations petition filed pursuant to this article shall receive information concerning domestic violence services and potential financial resources that may be available.

14-10-108. Temporary orders in a dissolution case. (1) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, the allocation of parental responsibilities, or declaration of invalidity of marriage or a proceeding for disposition of property, maintenance, or support following dissolution of the marriage, either party may move for temporary payment of debts, use of property, maintenance, parental responsibilities, support of a child of the marriage entitled to support, or payment of attorney fees. The motion may be supported by an affidavit setting forth the factual basis for the motion and the amounts requested.

(1.5) The court may consider the allocation of parental responsibilities in accordance with the best interests of the child, with particular reference to the factors specified in section 14-10-124 (1.5).

(2) As a part of a motion of such temporary orders or by an independent motion accompanied by an affidavit, either party may request the court to issue a temporary order:

(a) Restraining any party from transferring, encumbering, concealing, or in any way disposing of any property, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life, and, if so restrained, requiring him to notify the moving party of any proposed extraordinary expenditures and to account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after the order is issued;

(b) Enjoining a party from molesting or disturbing the peace of the other party or of any child;

(c) Excluding a party from the family home or from the home of the other party upon a showing that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result.

(2.3) and (2.5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2004, p. 553, § 4, effective July 1, 2004.)

(3) A party to an action filed pursuant to this article may seek, and the court may issue, a temporary or permanent protection order pursuant to the provisions of section 13-14-102, C.R.S.

(4) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2004, p. 553, § 4, effective July 1, 2004.)

(5) A temporary order or temporary injunction:

(a) Does not prejudice the rights of the parties or the child which are to be adjudicated at subsequent hearings in the proceeding;

(b) May be revoked or modified prior to final decree on a showing by affidavit of the facts necessary to revocation or modification of a final decree under section 14-10-122; and

(c) Terminates when the final decree is entered, unless continued by the court for good cause to a date certain, or when the petition for dissolution or legal separation is voluntarily dismissed.

(6) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2004, p. 553, § 4, effective July 1, 2004.)

(7) At the time a protection order is requested pursuant to section 13-14-102, C.R.S., the court shall inquire about, and the requesting party and such party's attorney shall have an independent duty to disclose, knowledge such party and such party's attorney may have concerning the existence of any prior protection orders or restraining orders of any court addressing in whole or in part the subject matter of the requested protection order.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Temporary Orders.
- III. Temporary Injunctions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Legislative Update", see 12 Colo. Law. 1257 (1983).

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-108 is similar to repealed § 46-1-5, C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-5, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, § 8, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The general rule is that courts of equity should and will in a proper case enjoin a party to a divorce or separate maintenance action from proceeding in an annulment suit in a foreign jurisdiction. Hayutin v. Hayutin, 152 Colo. 261, 381 P.2d 272 (1963).

Evidence of extreme circumstances necessitating sale of co-owned property. If there is evidence of extreme circumstances that co-owned property needs to be sold to preserve equities therein, a court may decree a sale of the property prior to a final determination of the merits of the dissolution action. In re Gavend, 781 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1989).

Permanent orders that substantially reduce the amount of parenting time originally specified in the temporary orders are not subject to the endangerment standard but rather the best interests of the child standard. In re Fickling, 100 P.3d 571 (Colo. App. 2004).

Best interest standard, and not the endangerment standard, was properly applied to award father residential care despite mother's award of temporary custody, where awarding father residential custody of the children was not abuse of discretion and record supported findings. In re Monteil, 960 P.2d 717 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in In re Westlake, 674 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. TEMPORARY ORDERS.

Law reviews. For article, "Attorney Fees at Temporary Orders: Reality or Illusion?", see 24 Colo. Law. 2185 (1995).

An order granting a temporary change of custody following an ex parte hearing with no notice to the mother denied her due process where no evidence was presented and no finding was made that irreparable injury would result if no order were issued until the time for responding had elapsed. Olson v. Priest, 193 Colo. 222, 564 P.2d 122 (1977).

Court lost jurisdiction to enforce order. When an order dismissing a marriage dissolution action was signed, the court was divested of any further jurisdiction in that action and had no jurisdiction to hold husband in contempt for failing to pay support required by temporary order which was entered in that action. Hill v. District Court, 189 Colo. 356, 540 P.2d 1079 (1975).

The purpose of temporary alimony is to allow a wife to live in her accustomed manner during pendency of the action and to provide her with means to properly litigate the controversy, and is not definitive of her entitlement to support under permanent orders. Bieler v. Bieler, 130 Colo. 17, 272 P.2d 636 (1954); MacReynolds v. MacReynolds, 29 Colo. App. 267, 482 P.2d 407 (1971).

If she possesses independent means sufficient for these purposes the allowances should not be granted; however, she is not required first to impair the capital of her separate estate. Bieler v. Bieler, 130 Colo. 17, 272 P.2d 636 (1954).

The allowance of temporary alimony is dependent upon the existence of the marriage relation, and all necessary facts to establish such relation must be made to appear at least prima facie before such allowance is made by the court, but where a prima facie case is established alimony should be awarded. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 29 Colo. 295, 68 P. 237 (1902).

In an action for divorce where it is clear upon the admitted facts that the marriage alleged in the complaint is void in law, or where the preponderance of the evidence tends to show that there was never a marriage in fact, temporary alimony should not be awarded, and if awarded will be set aside on review. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 29 Colo. 295, 68 P. 237 (1902).

It appears that in a divorce proceeding, the right to apply for alimony pendente lite is dependent upon the previous filing of a complaint for a divorce, and then the application may be made to, and acted upon, by the court in term time, or by the judge in vacation. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 14 Colo. App. 127, 59 P. 411 (1899).

The allowance to be made for temporary alimony, attorney fees, and suit money is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and unless that discretion has been abused the order of allowance will not be disturbed on review. Cairnes v. Cairnes, 29 Colo. 260, 68 P. 233 (1902); Miller v. Miller, 79 Colo. 609, 247 P. 567 (1926).

In a divorce suit where the wife was in indigent circumstances and the husband was a man of large means, an allowance of $50 per month as temporary alimony, $250 attorney fees, and $25 suit money was not excessive, and was not an abuse of discretion by the trial court. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 29 Colo. 295, 68 P. 237 (1902).

In determining the amount of temporary alimony to be allowed, the ability of the husband is an element to be considered, and the same element must necessarily be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of permanent alimony. Fahey v. Fahey, 43 Colo. 354, 96 P. 251 (1908).

If the evidence as to the ability of the husband to pay temporary alimony in a divorce action is conflicting, the order of the trial court based thereon is not reviewable. Miller v. Miller, 79 Colo. 609, 247 P. 567 (1926).

An award of temporary alimony may be modified by the supreme court. Miller v. Miller, 79 Colo. 609, 247 P. 567 (1926).

No appeal from temporary orders that have terminated due to entry of permanent orders. In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

Temporary alimony awarded a wife cannot be modified except upon motion and sufficient showing in support thereof; thus, where no motion was made respecting the alimony, it was an abuse of discretion for the court to suspend the order for temporary alimony at a hearing on a citation for the husband to show cause why he was not in contempt of court for failure to pay alimony Wright v. Wright, 122 Colo. 179, 220 P.2d 881 (1950).

The question whether an order for temporary alimony should be modified is also within the discretion of the court. Miller v. Miller, 79 Colo. 609, 247 P. 567 (1926).

Orders resolving child support issue are final. In dissolution proceedings, orders which resolve the issue of child support, even on a temporary basis, are final for purposes of review. In re Henne, 620 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1980).

"Final decree", as used in subsection (5)(c), is not limited to a final decree of dissolution, but may also include a final order concerning child support. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986); In re Nussbeck, 899 P.2d 347 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 974 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1999).

Where court continued determination of permanent child support to time subsequent to entry of decree of dissolution, temporary child support order was not terminated on date of dissolution by virtue of statute terminating temporary order or temporary injunction when final decree is entered. In re Price, 727 P.2d. 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Temporary orders as to maintenance are reviewable as a final judgment even if there has not been a final judgment in the form of a decree of dissolution. In re Nussbeck, 899 P.2d 347 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 974 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1999).

If the decree of dissolution leaves the issue of maintenance to be resolved later, an order of temporary maintenance is not terminated on the date of dissolution by virtue of subsection (5)(c). When possible, however, at the time the decree is entered, the court should set a definite date for consideration of permanent orders concerning maintenance. In re Nussbeck, 899 P.2d 347 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 974 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1999).

A request for a temporary award includes attorney fees and related litigation expenses. In re Mockelmann, 944 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1997).

An award of attorney fees is a final judgment subject to appellate review as it establishes a financial right and obligation of the parties until the entry of permanent orders. A temporary award of attorney fees is based upon the same underlying premise as a temporary award of maintenance or child support in that it concerns the immediate financial need of the party to whom the attorney fees are awarded. In re Mockelmann, 944 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1997).

The duty to pay maintenance is independent and is not limited or specifically tied to the entry of a decree of dissolution. To allow a party to terminate his or her maintenance payments when a decree of dissolution is entered that is mute on the issue of maintenance would disturb the status quo, frustrate a central purpose of the statute, and allow evasion of an important stabilizing aspect of the dissolution process. In re Nussbeck, 899 P.2d 347 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 974 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1999).

Where a husband, plaintiff in a divorce suit, is unable to make reasonable provision for his wife during the pendency of the suit, the suit should be abated until he is able to do so. Cairnes v. Cairnes, 29 Colo. 260, 68 P. 233 (1902).

Where a wife, defendant in a divorce suit, is a nonresident of the state and desires to come to Colorado to defend the suit, she should be given an opportunity to do so and the plaintiff should be required to deposit in court a sufficient sum to pay to the state the expenses of the wife which shall be paid to her upon her arrival, within a reasonable time, with such additional sum as may be necessary to properly defend the suit. Cairnes v. Cairnes, 29 Colo. 260, 68 P. 233 (1902).

Where a trial court denies motions of both parties with respect to temporary alimony pending trial on the merits, a writ of error to review such action is premature. Hizel v. Hizel, 132 Colo. 379, 288 P.2d 354 (1955).

Since temporary orders are not in any way res judicata as to matters properly the subject of permanent order, a showing of change of circumstances is not an essential element for the trial court's consideration in its establishment of permanent alimony. MacReynolds v. MacReynolds, 29 Colo. App. 267, 482 P.2d 407 (1971).

Temporary orders do not grant "parenting time rights", as that term is specified in § 14-10-129 (1)(b)(I), but simply provide for parenting time pending a final determination of permanent orders. In re Fickling, 100 P.3d 571 (Colo. App. 2004).

Temporary orders are not determinative of the permanent orders regarding allocation of parental responsibility or other matters. In re Lawson, 608 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1980); In re Fickling, 100 P.3d 571 (Colo. App. 2004).

There is no enforceable temporary order where the claim for spousal maintenance is based on a referee's recommendation and where the transcript is not signed and no separate order of the court is entered. In re Burke, 680 P.2d 1338 (Colo. App. 1984).

Formerly, an execution was authorized on an order for temporary alimony. Daniels v. Daniels, 9 Colo. 133, 10 P. 657 (1886); Paul v. Marty, 72 Colo. 399, 211 P. 667 (1922).

The temporary order of the "Beth Din", or its adoption in a prior proceeding for legal separation that was later dismissed, has no legal effect in a subsequent proceeding for dissolution of marriage between the same parties. In re Popack, 998 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 2000).

Applying the intent of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978, court determined that trial court improperly found that mother had abandoned child for the purpose of granting a temporary allocation of parental responsibilities to caregiver. Although mother had signed document granting caregiver guardianship, the document did not suggest the placement was to be permanent, and the mother remained in continued contact with child. A parent's placement of a child in the care of another, even if prolonged, does not constitute abandonment if the parent remains in contact and demonstrates an intent to maintain the relationship. In re S.M.J.C., 262 P.3d 955 (Colo. App. 2011).

III. TEMPORARY INJUNCTIONS.

Restraining orders should not be issued in divorce actions except in circumstances of actual emergency, and where it is clearly established that grounds exist for granting such extraordinary remedy. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

It is an unusual situation in which an order on one spouse to refrain from transferring property is inadequate to afford needed protection to the other who seeks to maintain the status quo pending a hearing on notice. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

The right of the husband in a divorce action to manage his property and carry on his business in due course is fundamental and should not be interfered with or suspended by the issuance of ex parte restraining orders without notice upon persons with whom he transacts business, except upon a clear showing of emergency and a need therefor. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

The practice of bringing in third parties as defendants in a divorce action and issuing restraining orders against them without notice is not to be encouraged, it being only under extraordinary circumstances that such persons engaged in legitimate business transactions with one of the parties to the divorce action and not involved in their marital difficulties may be restrained or enjoined from continuing business activities with one of the spouses involved. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

Any reasons justifying permanent injunctive relief in dissolution of marriage proceeding must arise from factors independent of those with which the trial court is empowered to deal in a dissolution proceeding. In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980).

14-10-109. Enforcement of protection orders. The duties of peace officers enforcing orders issued pursuant to section 14-10-107 or 14-10-108 shall be in accordance with section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S., and any rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court pursuant to said section.

14-10-110. Irretrievable breakdown. (1) If both of the parties by petition or otherwise have stated under oath or affirmation that the marriage is irretrievably broken or one of the parties has so stated and the other has not denied it, there is a presumption of such fact, and, unless controverted by evidence, the court shall, after hearing, make a finding that the marriage is irretrievably broken.

(2) If one of the parties has denied under oath or affirmation that the marriage is irretrievably broken, the court shall consider all relevant factors, including the circumstances that gave rise to the filing of the petition and the prospect of reconciliation, and shall:

(a) Make a finding whether the marriage is irretrievably broken; or

(b) Continue the matter for further hearing not less than thirty-five days nor more than sixty-three days later, or as soon thereafter as the matter may be reached on the court's calendar, and may suggest to the parties that they seek counseling. At the adjourned hearing, the court shall make a finding whether the marriage is irretrievably broken.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Is Residence of the Plaintiff, in Colorado, Necessary to Support a Divorce Action Based on Cruelty Within the State, If Defendant Is a Resident of Colorado?", see 24 Dicta 110 (1947). For article, "When the State Had an Interest in Marriage: Colorado's Divorce Acts, 1861-1917", see 16 Colo. Law. 1627 (1987).

Annotator's note. Some of the cases appearing under § 14-10-110 were decided under repealed § 46-1-1, C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-1, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, § 1, and laws antecedent thereto, which specifically enumerated the grounds for divorce.

Marriage is a contract between the parties, but it is distinguishable from the ordinary civil contract. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Marriage is the subject of a more immediate interest to the state than is the ordinary contract. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Marriage is not a "contract" within the meaning of the contract clause of the constitution. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

General assembly control of marriage is constitutional. Since marriage is not a contract within the meaning of the constitutional contract clause, the general assembly has broad control over it, the reasonable exercise of which will not run afoul of the constitutional protection of contracts. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

In attempting to increase availability of divorces to estranged spouses, the general assembly recognized that public policy does not encourage keeping two people together once the legitimate objects of matrimony have ceased to exist. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Decree not automatic. Although the dissolution of marriage statute was intended as a "no-fault" divorce act, the actual granting of the decree is not automatic or perfunctory under all circumstances. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Court's discretion to continue case sufficient safeguard against hastiness. The general assembly declined to include in the Colorado act, which is modeled on the uniform dissolution of marriage act, the language of the uniform act allowing the court to order a conciliation conference, and thus, in effect, determined that vesting discretion in the court to continue the case from 30 to 60 days was sufficient safeguard against hasty and insensate decisions. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

"Irretrievable" breakdown is no more vague or incapable of definition than "became impotent through immoral conduct", has been "extremely and repeatedly cruel", or being an "habitual drunkard", all of which constituted, under the prior Colorado statute, grounds for divorce. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

A finding of irretrievable breakdown is one of fact and, where the allegation of the petition is denied, it must be proven as any other essential element of the cause of action. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

Where the parties do not agree as to the breakdown of the marriage, it is imperative for the court to weigh all the evidence and make its own independent determination of that fact. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

The issue of whether a marriage has been irretrievably broken is a question of fact to be resolved upon consideration of the facts and circumstances of each case, and the factors underlying that determination will necessarily vary from case to case. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Finding of irretrievable breakdown must be proved when denied. While the dissolution of marriage act did eliminate all the former defenses to divorce in this state, it did not eliminate the necessity of proving an irretrievable breakdown where that basic allegation is denied in the pleadings. In re Franks, 189 Colo. 499, 542 P.2d 845 (1975).

No requirement that valid goals of marriage must be unattainable. There is no requirement that for the marriage to be beyond redemption, substantial proportion of legitimate objectives of a marriage must be no longer attainable by the parties. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

Elucidating valid goals of marriage which must be either lost or beyond accomplishment before the marriage can be classified as irretrievably broken would constitute an amendment to the act, and that power is reserved exclusively for the general assembly. In re Baier, 39 Colo. App. 34, 561 P.2d 20 (1977).

The parentage of a child is not an issue in a divorce or annulment action between the parents. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 144 Colo. 31, 354 P.2d 1015 (1960).

Formerly, before a court could enter its findings in favor of a defendant, it must have necessarily found that the defendant had not been guilty of a violation of the marriage contract. Schleiger v. Schleiger, 137 Colo. 279, 324 P.2d 370 (1958).

In a divorce action where a defendant pleaded grounds for divorce by way of counterclaim, the issue was the guilt or innocence of the parties on the grounds alleged against each other, and findings by a trial court that plaintiff was entitled to a divorce was necessarily a finding against the defendant on the issues. Schleiger v. Schleiger, 137 Colo. 279 324 P.2d 370 (1958).

Formerly, the grounds for divorce in this state were purely statutory. Pleyte v. Pleyte, 1 Colo. App. 70, 28 P. 23 (1891); Redington v. Redington, 2 Colo. App. 8, 29 P. 811 (1892); Githens v. Githens, 78 Colo. 102, 239 P. 1023 (1925).

For the former ground for divorce, adultery, see Redington v. Redington, 2 Colo. App. 8, 29 P. 811 (1892); Harding v. Harding, 36 Colo. 106, 85 P. 423 (1906); Jones v. Jones, 71 Colo. 420, 207 P. 596 (1922).

14-10-111. Declaration of invalidity. (1) The district court shall enter its decree declaring the invalidity of a marriage entered into under the following circumstances:

(a) A party lacked capacity to consent to the marriage at the time the marriage was solemnized, either because of mental incapacity or infirmity or because of the influence of alcohol, drugs, or other incapacitating substances.

(b) A party lacked the physical capacity to consummate the marriage by sexual intercourse, and the other party did not at the time the marriage was solemnized know of the incapacity.

(c) A party was under the age as provided by law and did not have the consent of his parents or guardian or judicial approval as provided by law.

(d) One party entered into the marriage in reliance upon a fraudulent act or representation of the other party, which fraudulent act or representation goes to the essence of the marriage.

(e) One or both parties entered into the marriage under duress exercised by the other party or a third party, whether or not such other party knew of such exercise of duress.

(f) One or both parties entered into the marriage as a jest or dare.

(g) The marriage is prohibited by law, including the following:

(I) A marriage entered into prior to the dissolution of an earlier marriage of one of the parties;

(II) A marriage between an ancestor and a descendant or between a brother and a sister, whether the relationship is by the half or the whole blood;

(III) A marriage between an uncle and a niece or between an aunt and a nephew, whether the relationship is by the half or the whole blood, except as to marriages permitted by the established customs of aboriginal cultures;

(IV) A marriage which was void by the law of the place where such marriage was contracted.

(2) A declaration of invalidity under subsection (1) of this section may be sought by any of the following persons and shall be commenced within the times specified, but in no event may a declaration of invalidity be sought after the death of either party to the marriage, except as provided in subsection (3) of this section:

(a) For the reasons set forth in either subsection (1) (a), (1) (d), (1) (e), or (1) (f) of this section, by either party to the marriage who was aggrieved by the conditions or by the legal representative of the party who lacked capacity to consent no later than six months after the petitioner obtained knowledge of the described condition;

(b) For the reason set forth in subsection (1) (b) of this section, by either party no later than one year after the petitioner obtained knowledge of the described condition;

(c) For the reason set forth in subsection (1) (c) of this section, by the underage party, his parent, or his guardian, if such action for declaration of invalidity of marriage is commenced within twenty-four months of the date the marriage was entered into.

(3) A declaration of invalidity, for the reason set forth in subsection (1) (g) of this section, may be sought by either party; by the legal spouse in case of bigamous, polygamous, or incestuous marriages; by the appropriate state official; or by a child of either party at any time prior to the death of either party or prior to the final settlement of the estate of either party and the discharge of the personal representative, executor, or administrator of the estate or prior to six months after an estate is closed under section 15-12-1204, C.R.S.

(4) Children born of a marriage declared invalid are legitimate.

(5) Marriages declared invalid under this section shall be so declared as of the date of the marriage.

(6) The provisions of this article relating to the property rights of spouses, maintenance, and support of and the allocation of parental responsibilities with respect to the children on dissolution of marriage are applicable to decrees of invalidity of marriage.

(7) No decree shall be entered unless one of the parties has been domiciled in this state for thirty days next preceding the commencement of the proceeding or unless the marriage has been contracted in this state.

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-111 is similar to repealed § 46-3-1 et seq., CRS 53, and CSA, C. 56, §§ 33 through 38, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

There is a wide distinction between a conventional annulment proceeding and a conventional action for divorce. An annulment proceeding is one in which the validity of a marriage is challenged from its inception on the ground that one or both of the parties was underage, on the ground that one or both of the parties was married to another person, on the ground that the proceeding was attended by fraud, or on some other fairly comparable ground. An action for divorce is one in which termination is sought of a valid marriage. Gainey v. Fleming, 279 F.2d 56 (10th Cir. 1960).

For the effect of an invalidity of marriage determination on maintenance payments which were terminated upon remarriage, see Torgan v. Torgan, 159 Colo. 93, 410 P.2d 167 (1966).

Reestablishment of a support obligation following annulment of a subsequent marriage must be decided on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the facts and equities of the particular case. In re Cargill and Rollins, 843 P.2d 1335 (Colo. 1993).

The children of the deceased had no standing to challenge the validity of his marriage when it was not prohibited. Matter of Estate of Fuller, 862 P.2d 1037 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in *In re Heinzman, 198 Colo. 36, 596 P.2d 61 (1979).

II. THE INVALIDITY OF MARRIAGE PROCEEDING.

Originally, authority to grant divorces and annul marriages in England was vested solely in the ecclesiastical courts. This authority terminated around 1870, during the reign of Victoria, at which time a special court was created to hear and decide all divorces and annulments of marriage, but ecclesiastical courts and their authority never became a part of American common law. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

An annulment action is a statutory proceeding in which the court exercises equity powers. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

The severance of marital ties, the entry of custodial orders regarding children, the application of equitable principles in divorce and annulment actions, and so forth, are or have aspects of the conventional activities of a court of equity. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

This article provides that in suits for annulment the practice and proceedings shall be in accordance with the rules of civil procedure. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

In the interplay of this section and the rules of civil procedure, there is no trial by jury of an annulment suit as a matter of right. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

A cursory reading of C.R.C.P. 38(a) makes obvious the conclusion that an annulment suit does not come within the meaning of any of the enumerated actions requiring trial by jury unless waived. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

But C.R.C.P. 39(c) provides that in actions not triable by a jury, the court may upon motion or of its own initiative try any issue with an advisory jury, or when statute provides for trial without a jury, the court with the consent of both parties may order a jury trial. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

Proof in an annulment case must be clear and convincing, and the court should so instruct the jury, and the preponderance rule is inapplicable. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

The giving of confusing and incompatible instructions in an annulment action is fatal error. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

III. MENTAL INCAPACITY TO CONSENT TO MARRIAGE.

Marriages are not easily annulled, and consequently, there must be clear and convincing proof that such party was mentally incompetent at the time the marriage was entered into. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

An instruction "that the husband would be incapable of giving voluntary consent if you find that at the time of the marriage ceremony he did not have sufficient mental capacity to understand the nature, obligations, and responsibilities of a marriage contract, and to appreciate the solemnity of the marriage vows" goes beyond the statutory ground for annulment which provides that if "one or both parties were mentally incapable of giving voluntary consent to the marriage", the marriage may be set aside. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

In an action for annulment of a marriage on the ground of mental incapacity, testimony of a witness to marriage ceremony that she observed plaintiff before, during, and after ceremony, conversed with him, and that in her opinion he was mentally competent, was erroneously rejected, the credibility of such witness being for the jury. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

Testimony of a psychiatrist who based his opinion on the incompetency of plaintiff, and in part upon the testimony of another witness, was erroneously admitted. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

An order of adjudication of mental incompetency was properly admitted. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

Evidence of forgery of a blood test certificate was immaterial and inadmissible, as not tending to prove any of the alleged grounds of annulment. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

Evidence that wife had applied for driver's license and signed a delinquency tax statement in former name, subsequent to the alleged marriage, were remote circumstances having no legitimate bearing on the issues and should have been rejected. Young v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 148 Colo. 104, 365 P.2d 701 (1961).

IV. LEGITIMACY OF CHILDREN.

A judgment and decree annulling the marriage of the parents does not determine the parentage of a child conceived prior to the marriage, and is not res judicata in a dependency proceeding to determine the paternity of the child. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 144 Colo. 31, 354 P.2d 1015 (1960).

The parentage of a child is not an issue in an annulment action between the parents. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 144 Colo. 31, 354 P.2d 1015 (1960).

Subsection (4) refers only to cases where an annulment proceeding is brought. Valdez v. Shaw, 100 Colo. 101, 66 P.2d 325 (1937); Gainey v. Fleming, 279 F.2d 56 (10th Cir. 1960).

V. CONFLICT OF LAWS.

Marriages being lawful in other states are recognized as lawful and valid in the state of Colorado. Spencer v. People in Interest of Spencer, 133 Colo. 196, 292 P.2d 971 (1956).

It is the public policy of this state concerning foreign marriages that such marriages are valid if valid where performed. Spencer v. People in Interest of Spencer, 133 Colo. 196, 292 P.2d 971 (1956).

In an action for annulment, the marriage is held to be valid or void, according to the statutes in force and effect in the jurisdiction where the same was entered into, and if, according to these statutes, it is found to be valid, it must be so considered in this jurisdiction. Payne v. Payne, 121 Colo. 212, 214 P.2d 495 (1950).

Annulment issued in a foreign jurisdiction does not prevent Colorado courts from entering orders as to property and maintenance. In re Dickson, 983 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1998).

14-10-112. Separation agreement. (1) To promote the amicable settlement of disputes between the parties to a marriage attendant upon their separation or the dissolution of their marriage, the parties may enter into a written separation agreement containing provisions for the maintenance of either of them, the disposition of any property owned by either of them, and the allocation of parental responsibilities, support, and parenting time of their children.

(2) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or for legal separation, the terms of the separation agreement, except terms providing for the allocation of parental responsibilities, support, and parenting time of children, are binding upon the court unless it finds, after considering the economic circumstances of the parties and any other relevant evidence produced by the parties, on their own motion or on request of the court, that the separation agreement is unconscionable.

(3) If the court finds the separation agreement unconscionable, the court may request the parties to submit a revised separation agreement, or the court may make orders for the disposition of property, support, and maintenance.

(4) If the court finds that the separation agreement is not unconscionable as to support, maintenance, and property:

(a) Unless the separation agreement provides to the contrary, its terms shall be set forth in the decree of dissolution or legal separation, and the parties shall be ordered to perform them; or

(b) If the separation agreement provides that its terms shall not be set forth in the decree, the decree shall identify the separation agreement and shall state that the court has found the terms not unconscionable.

(5) Terms of the agreement set forth in the decree may be enforced by all remedies available for the enforcement of a judgment, including contempt, but are no longer enforceable as contract terms.

(6) Except for terms concerning the support, the allocation of decision-making responsibility, or parenting time of children, the decree may expressly preclude or limit modification of terms set forth in the decree if the separation agreement so provides.

Annotator's note. Although § 14-10-112 enacted in 1971 has no similar provision in previous codes and laws of Colorado, relevant cases decided under repealed §§ 46-1-1 through 46-1-11, C.R.S. 1963, §§ 46-1-1 through 46-1-15, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, §§ 1 through 32, and laws antecedent thereto have been included in the annotations to this section. (But see In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975), concerning the precedential value of such cases.)

Purpose of the separation agreement is to enable divorcing parties to reach an amicable out-of-court settlement of their claims to the property of the other. In re Manzo, 659 P.2d 669 (Colo. 1983).

This section does not preclude a stipulated oral separation agreement; the issue is whether the parties intend to be bound by the terms of an agreement, whether oral or written. In re Chambers, 657 P.2d 458 (Colo. App. 1982).

It has been established that a husband and wife may enter into contracts which settle their differences, and the trial court, while determining division of property accumulated during the marriage, cannot disregard such a contract where it is free from fraud, collusion, compulsion, or unconscionability. Magarrell v. Magarrell, 144 Colo. 228, 355 P.2d 946 (1960); Irwin v. Irwin, 150 Colo. 261, 372 P.2d 440 (1962); Jekot v. Jekot, 32 Colo. App. 118, 507 P.2d 473 (1973).

While courts generally adopt stipulations between the parties, relating to alimony, they are not bound to do so. Hobbs v. Hobbs, 72 Colo. 190, 210 P. 398 (1922).

The agreement must be in all respects fair, reasonable, and just, and it must make sufficient provision for the maintenance of the wife according to the status of the parties. Daniels v. Daniels, 9 Colo. 133, 10 P. 657 (1886); Hobbs v. Hobbs, 72 Colo. 190, 210 P. 398 (1922).

In agreements of this nature it must be made to appear that the husband has dealt fairly and equitably with his wife in the transaction. Hill v. Hill, 70 Colo. 47, 197 P. 236 (1921); Hobbs v. Hobbs, 72 Colo. 190, 210 P. 398 (1922).

Parents may not by agreement divest the court of continuing jurisdiction over the custodial rights and duties of maintenance of children during their minority. Irwin v. Irwin, 150 Colo. 261, 372 P.2d 440 (1962).

Legal or equitable lien not created by decree. Language of dissolution decree which awarded the house to husband and his mother and ordered husband to execute a promissory note in favor of wife to become due upon the occurrence of one of several possible events did not create a legal or equitable lien on the property in favor of wife where the court did not impose any duty on the husband to pay the note from the proceeds resulting from the sale of the property and did not order the husband to execute a deed of trust or other security instrument to secure payment of the note. Leyden v. Citicorp Indus. Bank, 762 P.2d 689 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in Lowery v. Lowery, 195 Colo. 86, 575 P.2d 430 (1978); In re Stedman, 632 P.2d 1048 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENTS.

Precedential value of prior decisions. In interpreting the current statute, the courts do not consider that the decisions on separation agreements incorporated in decrees in actions arising under the 1917 act (CRS 53, § 46-1-5) have any precedential value. In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975).

This section is explicitly limited to separation agreements; antenuptial agreements cannot be challenged as unconscionable under this section. In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979); In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Separation agreements and antenuptial agreements are separate and distinct legal documents. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

While separation agreements contemplate disposition of property interests which mature because of the marriage status, prenuptial agreements fix the property rights of the parties, regardless of the duration of the marriage. In re

Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979); In re Lemoine-Hofmann, 827 P.2d 587 (Colo. App. 1992).

Spouses-to-be have right to enter into antenuptial agreements which contemplate the possibility of dissolution. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Where husband conceded that wife put him through college pursuant to their oral prenuptial agreement, such agreement is not void pursuant to statute of frauds since oral contracts otherwise unenforceable under § 38-10-101, et seq., may substitute for a writing if there is part performance of the oral contract. In re Lemoine-Hofmann, 827 P.2d 587 (Colo. App. 1992).

Standard for review compared with review of antenuptial agreement. The standard applied for court review of the division of property in a separation agreement allows the court more discretion than the standard for court review of the division of property in an antenuptial agreement. In re Manzo, 659 P.2d 669 (Colo. 1983).

Courts reviewing separation agreements prior to entry of a decree of dissolution need more latitude than is allowed for review of antenuptial agreements because of the public policy concern for safeguarding the interests of a spouse whose consent to the agreement may have been obtained under more emotionally stressful circumstances, especially if that spouse is unrepresented by counsel. In re Manzo, 659 P.2d 669 (Colo. 1983).

Where parties to a divorce action had settled all their differences by agreement, and the only duties of husband are those set forth therein, there being no authority for the allowance of attorney fees to the wife, the court was without authority to award such fees. Irwin v. Irwin, 150 Colo. 261, 372 P.2d 440 (1962); Newey v. Newey, 161 Colo. 395, 421 P.2d 464, 422 P.2d 641 (1967).

The trial court, in determining the pecuniary provision for the wife upon granting a decree of divorce to her, has no right to disregard a previous agreement free from fraud, collusion, or compulsion, and fair to her, entered into between her and her husband in contemplation of a divorce, settling and adjusting all their property rights, including dower, alimony, and support. Newey v. Newey, 161 Colo. 395, 421 P.2d 464, 422 P.2d 641 (1967).

Where there was a self-operative trust agreement between the parties to a divorce action in settlement of their property rights, such agreement was binding upon the parties, and the court was without jurisdiction to set it aside, no showing of fraud, duress, or mistake appearing. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

Formerly, an agreement between husband and wife which provided for alimony or property settlement in contemplation of divorce was presumptively fair, and the burden was on the wife to establish the contrary. Newey v. Newey, 161 Colo. 395, 421 P.2d 464, 422 P.2d 641 (1967).

An agreement between present spouses entered into "attendant upon" separation or dissolution must be considered a separation agreement, rather than a marital agreement, even if it was signed prior to filing for dissolution of marriage or legal separation. If an agreement is executed under circumstances accompanying, connected with, or surrounding a contemplated divorce or separation, it is considered a separation agreement. In re Bisque, 31 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2001); In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

Whether an agreement is executed "attendant upon" a contemplated dissolution is a question of fact for the trial court, and the court's findings will not be set aside unless clearly erroneous. In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

Termination of a dissolution proceeding as a result of the death of one of the parties did not render the controversy over the antenuptial agreement moot. Even though the death of one spouse mooted the dissolution proceeding, because the antenuptial agreement had a practical legal effect on an ongoing probate proceeding, the trial court was in error when it ruled the agreement invalid. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 183 P.3d 552 (Colo. 2008).

III. UNCONSCIONABLE AGREEMENTS.

The court is not required to approve blindly an agreement it finds unconscionable. In re Eller, 38 Colo. App. 74, 552 P.2d 30 (1976).

Provisions of a proposed separation settlement agreement proffered for incorporation into a dissolution decree may be refused as "unconscionable" if the trial court concludes that the agreement is not fair, reasonable, and just. In re Carney, 631 P.2d 1173 (Colo. App. 1981).

Court may determine whether written separation agreement accurately expresses intent and agreement of parties and may exercise its equitable powers where necessary before this section becomes applicable. In re Deines, 44 Colo. App. 98, 608 P.2d 375 (1980).

Unconscionability has no relevance to testing of custody agreement. In re Lawson, 44 Colo. App. 105, 608 P.2d 378 (1980).

In determining whether an agreement is, or has become, unconscionable, the trial court should consider and apply the pertinent criteria set forth in the following sections: This section as to the economic circumstances of the parties;

§ 14-10-113 (1) as to the division of property; § 14-10-114 (1) as to maintenance; and § 14-10-115 (1) as to child support. In re Lowery, 39 Colo. App. 413, 568 P.2d 103 (1977), aff'd, 195 Colo. 86, 575 P.2d 430 (1978).

Review of provisions before incorporation into dissolution decree. Before a court incorporates property division provisions of a separation agreement into a dissolution decree, it should first review the provisions for fraud, overreaching, concealment of assets, or sharp dealing not consistent with the obligations of marital partners to deal fairly with each other, and then look at the economic circumstances of the parties which result from the agreement, including a determination whether under the totality of the circumstances the property disposition is fair, just and reasonable. In re Manzo, 659 P.2d 669 (Colo. 1983); In re Seely, 689 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1984).

To set aside a property settlement agreement prior to its being incorporated in a dissolution decree, the court need not find that overreaching, inequality of bargaining power, or other elements of fraud are present. Rather, before the agreement is set forth in the decree, a court may set aside as unconscionable any agreement that is not "fair, reasonable and just". In re Wigner, 40 Colo. App. 253, 572 P.2d 495 (1977); In re Thornhill, 200 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 232 P.3d 782 (Colo. 2010).

Appellate court was not bound by the determination of the trial court applying the unconscionability standard set forth in this section to an agreement, inasmuch as the resolution of that issue would be based upon the interpretation of the document and on uncontroverted facts. In re Lemoine-Hofmann, 827 P.2d 587 (Colo. App. 1992); In re Thornhill, 200 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 232 P.3d 782 (Colo. 2010).

Provision for support payment increases based on salary increases allowable. A provision in a separation agreement that the amount of child support payments to be made by husband would increase in proportion to actual increases in husband's salary is allowable and creates no presumption of unconscionability which would violate this section. In re Pratt, 651 P.2d 456 (Colo. App. 1982).

In order for agreement for binding Rabbinical arbitration to be enforceable, it must be conscionable and must be entered into by the parties voluntarily after full disclosure. In re Popack, 998 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 2000).

Separation agreement giving wife approximately 91 percent of the marital property and entered into when husband's emotional state was adversely affected by the circumstances surrounding the execution of the agreement was unfair. In re Bisque, 31 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2001).

Separation agreement that did not provide wife with interest on her share of husband's business paid out over time was unconscionable. In the parties' separation agreement, husband agreed to make monthly payments to wife over a 10-year period for payment of her share of the value of the marital business. The agreement did not require the husband to pay interest on the total sum owed to wife or to secure the obligation. The lack of an interest provision in the agreement rendered the entire agreement unconscionable. In re Thornhill, 200 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 232 P.3d 782 (Colo. 2010).

IV. INCORPORATION OF AGREEMENT INTO DECREE.

Formerly, where the stipulation and property settlement was approved by the courts, but the terms thereof were not set forth in a decree of divorce, the rights of the parties rested upon a contract, and not upon the decree, and were contractual and not decreed rights and obligations. Murphy v. Murphy, 138 Colo. 516, 335 P.2d 280 (1959); Cawley v. Cawley, 139 Colo. 439, 340 P.2d 122 (1959).

Formerly, where parties to a divorce action entered into a binding contract settling all their differences, the obligation of each to the other stemmed from the contract, and relief, if any, must have been based upon the rights of the parties under the contract. Irwin v. Irwin, 150 Colo. 261, 372 P.2d 440 (1962).

Formerly, where a trial court in a divorce action had no part in determining the property and financial rights of the parties, other than to approve and confirm an agreement purporting to settle all such financial and property rights, the incorporation of such agreement by references in the interlocutory or final decree in the action did not make the terms of such agreement an order or decree of the court, and was not a determination by the court of the respective rights of the parties, but was their voluntary adjustment of their differences, and unless the terms thereof are adopted by the court and fully and specifically set forth in the order or decree, the rights of the parties rest wholly upon the contract and not upon the decree of the court. Murphy v. Murphy, 138 Colo. 516, 335 P.2d 280 (1959).

Prior to incorporation in decree, separation agreement is contract. Prior to its incorporation in a dissolution decree, a separation agreement is a contract between the parties to a marriage. In re Manzo, 659 P.2d 669 (Colo. 1983).

Subsection (5) is inapplicable where child support provisions of an agreement have not been incorporated into the dissolution decree. The provisions remain enforceable as contract terms. Williamson v. Williamson, 39 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2001).

A reference to a separation agreement and an approval thereof by the court is sufficient to make it a part of the decree. Berglund v. Berglund, 28 Colo. App. 382, 474 P.2d 800 (1970).

The terms of any agreement must have been fully and specifically set forth in a decree. Murphy v. Murphy, 138 Colo. 516, 335 P.2d 280 (1959).

Incorporation by reference allowed. The wording in subsection (4)(a) that "its terms shall be set forth in the decree" does not prohibit incorporation by reference. In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975).

When an agreement has been incorporated by reference into the decree, it is as effectively a part thereof as if recited therein in haec verba. In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975).

So long as it is clear what document is being referred to and that the parties intended for it to be a part of the decree, such incorporation is within the underlying purposes of this section and there is no apparent reason for requiring the recopying of the words into the court order. In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975).

If an executed agreement for a division of property was not incorporated in or made a part of an interlocutory and final decree of divorce, and was not reserved for future action, it was not merged in the divorce proceedings. Cawley v. Cawley, 139 Colo. 439 340 P.2d 122 (1959).

If the property rights and obligations of the parties to a divorce action who had entered into a settlement agreement were to rest upon the court decree, then any such agreement as to those rights should have been fully and specifically set forth in the decree in order that the duties and rights could be definitely ascertained from the decree itself. Taylor v. Taylor, 147 Colo. 140, 362 P.2d 1027 (1961).

Failure to attach prior stipulation as to maintenance of no consequence. Where both parties clearly intended to have a copy of the stipulation regarding maintenance, child support, and division of property, "a part and portion of the decree of dissolution", the absence of any question as to what document is being alluded to, and the agreement by the husband's lawyer, at the hearing for the decree, to the adoption by reference of the stipulation in the earlier separate maintenance case, make the failure to have a copy identified as an exhibit and attached to the decree of no consequence. In re Seymour, 36 Colo. App. 104, 536 P.2d 1172 (1975).

Incorporation of parties' agreement regarding medical insurance and expenses into permanent orders was not beyond the trial court's jurisdiction, and father's failure to pay such expenses could constitute contempt. In re Alverson, 981 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1999).

V. MODIFICATION.

Formerly, where parties to a divorce action entered into an agreement settling their property rights, which agreement it incorporated in the final decree, the court was thereafter without jurisdiction — no fraud in procuring the settlement appearing — to modify the terms of the decree concerning such property rights in the absence of consent of the parties. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955); Magarrell v. Magarrell, 144 Colo. 228, 355 P.2d 946 (1960); Lay v. Lay, 162 Colo. 43, 425 P.2d 704 (1967); Berglund v. Berglund, 28 Colo. App. 382, 474 P.2d 800 (1970); Watson v. Watson, 29 Colo. App. 449, 485 P.2d 919 (1971); Ingels v. Ingels, 29 Colo. App. 585 487 P.2d 812 (1971).

Modification or revocation of agreement incorporated into decree. Where the parties' property settlement agreement has been incorporated into the decree of dissolution, it is subject to revocation or modification to the same extent as a property division rendered solely by the court. In re Stroud, 631 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1981).

Modification of property division provisions. Once property division provisions of a separation agreement have been incorporated into a dissolution of marriage decree, they may not be set aside or modified unless the conditions of C.R.C.P. 60 are met. In re Seely, 689 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1984); Camack v. Camack, 62 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2002).

When court has power to modify maintenance. A trial court has authority to test a settlement agreement on the standard of present unconscionability and for possible modification of maintenance under two circumstances: If the agreement or the decree reserves that power to the trial court, or, if the agreement and the decree are silent on the power to modify. In re Thompson, 640 P.2d 279 (Colo. App. 1982).

The court retained jurisdiction to modify the separation agreement where the agreement specifically provided that the issue of retirement benefits obtained as a result of the husband's military service shall remain open and modifiable. In re Sinkovich, 830 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1992).

Restriction of court's jurisdiction to modify must be unequivocal. While subsection (6) permits the parties to restrict the jurisdiction of the court to modify the maintenance terms of a settlement agreement, such a restriction must specifically and unequivocally preclude modification. In re Rother, 651 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1982).

Where maintenance provision not modifiable. Where there was no reservation in the trial court of the power to modify a maintenance provision, the court cannot do so later. In re Thompson, 640 P.2d 279 (Colo. App. 1982).

The waiver of the right to seek modification in and of itself could well be the consideration for a concession in the amount or duration of maintenance, or in the property received by a party. Thus, to permit reconsideration of the amount of maintenance contracted for, without also reopening the property division, would be inequitable. In re Thompson, 640 P.2d 279 (Colo. App. 1982).

Modification by parties' agreement not reservation to court of power. The fact that an agreement allows modification by agreement of the parties is not a reservation to the court of the power to modify; rather, it is a limitation on the court's power. In re Thompson, 640 P.2d 279 (Colo. App. 1982).

Only unequivocal language in the terms of the settlement precludes the court from modifying the support provisions. No such language existed where the settlement provided that the period for payment of maintenance could be extended by further order of the court. Aldinger v. Aldinger, 813 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where the parties' dissolution decree incorporated a separation agreement that stated that the husband's retirement benefits remained open and modifiable, the trial court had the authority to divide the husband's military retirement pension. In re Sinkovich, 830 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1992).

Modification of agreement permitted upon showing of fraud or overreaching. Where the terms of a divorce decree specifically preclude modification, without the written consent of the parties, a court can modify the agreement only upon a showing of fraud or overreaching. In re Cohen, 44 Colo. App. 200, 610 P.2d 1092 (1980).

Where separation agreement and alimony not modifiable. Where a separation agreement was adopted and incorporated into the decree of divorce, and the agreement did not reserve to the court jurisdiction to modify the terms of the alimony provision, nor did the court in its order adopting and incorporating the agreement into the divorce decree specifically reserve the right to modify the terms thereof, the court cannot later modify the agreement or the alimony provisions. Burleson v. District Court, 196 Colo. 455, 586 P.2d 665 (1978).

Waiver clause in separation agreement is binding to bar pursuit of further spousal maintenance since promised maintenance payments were actually made despite technical default regarding the method of payment where wife acquiesced to such manner and there was no showing of fraud, collusion, or compulsion. In re Vincent, 709 P.2d 959 (Colo. App. 1985).

Modification of parenting time and the related nonmodification of child support agreement was made an order of court and so constituted an amendment to the original order and therefore are no longer enforceable as contract terms because they were made an order of court. In re Rosenthal, 903 P.2d 1174 (Colo. App. 1995).

The promise in a separation agreement to pay postsecondary education expenses, once adopted by the court and incorporated in a decree of dissolution, is no longer enforceable as a contract term. In re Ludwig, 122 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2005).

VI. ENFORCEMENT.

Property lien to enforce agreement. A court may impose a lien on a party's property in order to enforce an agreement where the party has threatened to dispose of the property and put himself beyond the court's jurisdiction. In re Valley, 633 P.2d 1104 (Colo. App. 1981).

Separation agreement is incorporated into and superceded by decree and, therefore, governed by remedies available for the enforcement of a judgment. In re Meisner, 807 P.2d 1205 (Colo. App. 1990).

Although attorney fees cannot be awarded as a punitive sanction in a contempt proceeding, attorney fees can be awarded if the case involves an agreement or contract for an award of such fees to the prevailing party. Marital agreements governing the manner in which each party's attorney fees will be paid should be enforced by the trial court, and the determination of which party succeeded or prevailed under a contractual fee-shifting provision is committed to the discretion of the trial court subject to an abuse of discretion standard of review on appeal. In re Sanchez-Vigil, 151 P.3d 621 (Colo. App. 2006).

To be a prevailing party for the purpose of an award of attorney fees pursuant to a contract, the applicant must have succeeded upon a significant issue presented by the litigation and must have achieved some of the benefits sought in the lawsuit. A party need not prevail upon the "central" issue, only upon a significant one. In re Watters, 782 P.2d 1220 (Colo. App. 1989); In re Sanchez-Vigil, 151 P.3d 621 (Colo. App. 2006).

14-10-113. Disposition of property. (1) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or in a proceeding for legal separation or in a proceeding for disposition of property following the previous dissolution of marriage by a court which at the time of the prior dissolution of the marriage lacked personal jurisdiction over the absent spouse or lacked jurisdiction to dispose of the property, the court, subject to the provisions of subsection (7) of this section, shall set apart to each spouse his or her property and shall divide the marital property, without regard to marital misconduct, in such proportions as the court deems just after considering all relevant factors including:

(a) The contribution of each spouse to the acquisition of the marital property, including the contribution of a spouse as homemaker;

(b) The value of the property set apart to each spouse;

(c) The economic circumstances of each spouse at the time the division of property is to become effective, including the desirability of awarding the family home or the right to live therein for reasonable periods to the spouse with whom any children reside the majority of the time; and

(d) Any increases or decreases in the value of the separate property of the spouse during the marriage or the depletion of the separate property for marital purposes.

(2) For purposes of this article only, and subject to the provisions of subsection (7) of this section, "marital property" means all property acquired by either spouse subsequent to the marriage except:

(a) Property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or descent;

(b) Property acquired in exchange for property acquired prior to the marriage or in exchange for property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or descent;

(c) Property acquired by a spouse after a decree of legal separation; and

(d) Property excluded by valid agreement of the parties.

(3) Subject to the provisions of subsection (7) of this section, all property acquired by either spouse subsequent to the marriage and prior to a decree of legal separation is presumed to be marital property, regardless of whether title is held individually or by the spouses in some form of coownership such as joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entirety, and community property. The presumption of marital property described in this subsection (3) is overcome by a showing that the property was acquired by a method listed in subsection (2) of this section.

(4) Subject to the provisions of subsection (7) of this section, an asset of a spouse acquired prior to the marriage or in accordance with subsection (2) (a) or (2) (b) of this section shall be considered as marital property, for purposes of this article only, to the extent that its present value exceeds its value at the time of the marriage or at the time of acquisition if acquired after the marriage.

(5) For purposes of this section only, property shall be valued as of the date of the decree or as of the date of the hearing on disposition of property if such hearing precedes the date of the decree.

(6) (a) (I) Notwithstanding any anti-assignment, anti-alienation, or other provision of law to the contrary, all retirement benefits of any nature for public employees from a plan described in section 401 (a), 403 (b), 414 (d), or 457 of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, that is established pursuant to Colorado law shall be, in all actions for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, and declaration of invalidity of marriage, divisible directly by the plan upon written agreement of the parties to such an action pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (6).

(II) The provisions of this subsection (6) shall apply to all dissolution of marriage, legal separation, and declaration of invalidity of marriage actions filed on or after January 1, 1997, and all dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity of marriage actions filed prior to January 1, 1997, in which the court did not enter a final property division order concerning the parties' public employee retirement benefits prior to January 1, 1997.

(b) As used in this subsection (6), unless the context otherwise requires:

(I) "Alternate payee" means a party to a dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity action who is not the participant of the public employee retirement plan divided or to be divided but who is married to or was married to the participant and who is to receive, is receiving, or has received all or a portion of the participant's retirement benefit by means of a written agreement as described in paragraph (c) of this subsection (6).

(II) "Defined benefit plan" means a retirement plan that is not a defined contribution plan and that usually provides benefits as a percentage of the participant's highest average salary, based on the plan's benefit formula and the participant's age and service credit at the time of retirement.

(III) "Defined contribution plan" means a retirement plan that provides for an individual retirement account for each participant and the benefits of which are based solely on the amount contributed to the participant's account and that includes any income, expenses, gains, losses, or forfeitures of accounts of other participants that may be allocated to the participant's account.

(IV) "Participant" means the person who is an active, inactive, or retired member of the public employee retirement plan.

(c) (I) The parties may enter into a marital agreement pursuant to part 3 of article 2 of this title or a separation agreement pursuant to section 14-10-112 concerning the division of a public employee retirement benefit between the parties pursuant to a written agreement. The parties shall submit such written agreement to the plan administrator within ninety days after entry of the decree and the permanent orders regarding property distribution in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity of marriage.

(II) A written agreement dividing a public employee retirement benefit shall:

(A) Specify the full legal name of the retirement plan or plans to which it applies;

(B) Specify the name, social security number, and last-known mailing address of the participant and the alternate payee as well as the alternate payee's relationship to the participant;

(C) For an agreement concerning a defined benefit plan, specify the distribution method, as described in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (c), subject, if the plan permits, to benefit adjustments payable at the same time and in the same manner as any benefit adjustments applied to the participant's distribution;

(D) For an agreement concerning a defined contribution plan, specify the alternate payee's portion of the participant's account as a fixed lump-sum amount, or as a percentage, in either case, as of a specified date, from specific accounts of the participant and, unless the plan adopts rules and regulations pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (6) permitting the plan to retain the alternate payee's portion of the participant's account, require that distribution to the alternate payee be made within one hundred twenty days after a certified court order approving the agreement has been submitted to and received by the plan;

(E) Not provide for payments to the alternate payee or to the participant for which he or she would not otherwise be eligible if there were no dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or declaration of invalidity action pending;

(F) For an agreement concerning a defined benefit plan, not require the plan to pay the alternate payee prior to the date payments commence to the participant or prior to the participant attaining age sixty-five or actual retirement date, whichever date is earlier, or at such later date as the parties may otherwise agree in writing;

(G) For an agreement concerning a defined benefit plan, provide that the alternate payee's rights to payments terminate upon the involuntary termination of benefits payable to the participant or upon the death of the alternate payee, whichever occurs first, unless the parties agree to elect, or have already elected, a benefit option under the plan that provides for a cobeneficiary benefit to the alternate payee;

(H) Provide that the manner of payment shall be in a form or type permissible under the plan. The agreement shall not require through this subsection (6) the payment of a benefit, benefit amount, or distribution option not otherwise set out in the plan document or statute.

(I) Not require the plan to pay benefits that are already required to be paid to another alternate payee or are already subject to an assignment or lien;

(J) Specify that it shall apply to successor plans;

(K) Comply with any rules or procedures promulgated pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (6); and

(L) Specify that, once approved by the court, the order approving the agreement shall be certified by the clerk of the court and submitted to and received by the retirement plan at least thirty days before the plan may make its first payment.

(III) The written agreement between the parties described in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c) shall contain only one method or formula to be applied to divide the defined benefit plan. For purposes of sub-subparagraph (C) of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), the parties may select any one of the following methods by which to divide the defined benefit plan:

(A) A fixed monetary amount;

(B) A fixed percentage of the payment to the participant;

(C) The time-rule formula determined by dividing the number of months of service credit acquired under the plan during the marriage as set forth in the court's order by the number of months of service credit in such plan at the time of the participant's retirement as determined by the plan, which quotient shall be multiplied by a percentage specified in the court's order, and the product thereof shall be further multiplied by the amount of the payment to the participant at the date of retirement;

(D) A formula determined by dividing the number of months of service credit acquired under the plan during the marriage as set forth in the court's order by the number of months of service credit in such plan as of the date of the decree as determined by the plan, regardless of when the participant is expected to retire, which quotient shall be multiplied by a percentage specified in the court's order, and the product thereof shall be further multiplied by the amount of the payment the participant would be entitled to receive as if the participant were to retire and receive an unreduced benefit on the date of the decree; or

(E) Any other method or formula mutually agreed upon by the parties that specifies a dollar amount or percentage payable to the alternate payee.

(d) The trustees or the administrator of each retirement plan may promulgate rules or procedures governing the implementation of this subsection (6) with respect to public employee retirement plans that they administer. Such rules or procedures may include the requirement that a standardized form be used by the parties and the court for an order approving the parties' agreement to be effective as well as other provisions consistent with the purpose of this subsection (6).

(e) Compliance with the provisions of this subsection (6) by a public employee retirement plan shall not subject the plan to any portions of the federal "Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974", as amended, that do not otherwise affect governmental plans generally. Any plan that reasonably complies with an order approving an agreement entered into pursuant to this subsection (6) shall be relieved of liability for payments made to the parties subject to such order.

(f) A court shall have no jurisdiction to enter an order dividing a public employee retirement benefit except upon written agreement of the parties pursuant to this subsection (6). A court shall have no jurisdiction to modify an order approving a written agreement of the parties dividing a public employee retirement benefit unless the parties have agreed in writing to the modification. A court may retain jurisdiction to supervise the implementation of the order dividing the retirement benefits.

(7) (a) For purposes of subsections (1) to (4) of this section only, except with respect to gifts of nonbusiness tangible personal property, gifts from one spouse to another, whether in trust or not, shall be presumed to be marital property and not separate property. This presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence.

(b) For purposes of subsections (1) to (4) of this section only, "property" and "an asset of a spouse" shall not include any interest a party may have as an heir at law of a living person or any interest under any donative third party instrument which is amendable or revocable, including but not limited to third-party wills, revocable trusts, life insurance, and retirement benefit instruments, nor shall any such interests be considered as an economic circumstance or other factor.

(c) (I) The provisions of this subsection (7) shall apply to all causes of action filed on or after July 1, 2002. The provisions of this subsection (7) shall also apply to all causes of action filed before said date in which a final property disposition order concerning matters affected by this subsection (7) was not entered prior to July 1, 2002.

(II) For purposes of this paragraph (c), "final property disposition order" means a property disposition order for which the time to appeal has expired or for which all pending appeals have been finally concluded.

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-113 is similar to repealed § 46-1-5(2), C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-5, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, § 8, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Subsection (7)(b) is not unconstitutionally retrospective. In re Balanson, 107 P.3d 1037 (Colo. App. 2004).

Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act provides separate sections that govern the different elements of a dissolution order, specifically property disposition, maintenance, child support, and attorney fees. The court is required to make separate orders regarding these elements based on separate considerations, and may not commingle one element with another. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

There is a distinction between maintenance awards and property settlements. Property divisions are intended to accomplish a just apportionment of marital property over time, whereas maintenance is intended to be a substitute for marital support that can be used, for example, to ease a spouse's transition into the work force and prevent the spouse from becoming dependent on public assistance. In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Division of property is mandatory under this section, whereas an award of maintenance is discretionary under § 14-10-114. In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

This statute is a legislative recognition of preexisting Colorado law. Imel v. United States, 375 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1973), aff'd, 523 F.2d 853 (10th Cir. 1975).

Awarding of attorney fees is discretionary with trial court and will not be disturbed on review if supported by the evidence. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982); In re Kiefer, 738 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1987).

Equitable lien created by decree of dissolution. Where wife was ordered to quitclaim her undivided one-third interest in the family home to husband and his mother in exchange for a promissory note representing the value of such interest, an equitable lien to prevent unjust enrichment was imposed on the property because repayment of the note was conditioned in part on events involving disposition of the property. Leyden v. Citicorp Indus. Bank, 782 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1989).

The needs of the children are of paramount importance; therefore, statutory provisions may not be modified by agreement if to do so would affect the rights of the child whom the statute is designed to protect. In re Miller, 790 P.2d 890 (Colo. App. 1990).

Attorney fees are not a non-challengeable marital debt under this section. In re Rieger, 827 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1992).

Partition of marital property pursuant to § 38-28-101 after the entry of the final dissolution decree is permissible, but the partition order must not conflict with explicit provisions of the decree. Wilson v. Prentiss, 140 P.3d 288 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in In re Mitchell, 195 Colo. 399, 579 P.2d 613 (1978); Mayer v. District Court, 198 Colo. 199, 597 P.2d 577 (1979); In re Engelman, 43 Colo. App. 531, 605 P.2d 490 (1979); In re Hartford, 44 Colo. App. 303, 612 P.2d 1163 (1980); In re Carney, 631 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1981); In re Stewart, 632 P.2d 287 (Colo. ## II. DIVISION OF PROPERTY.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, "Property or Ex-pectancy: The Division of Trust Assets at Dissolution of Marriage", see 30 Colo. Law. 63 (February 2001). For article, "The Continuing Evolution of Balanson: Trusts as Property in Divorce", see 34 Colo. Law. 79 (June 2005).

This statute makes property division mandatory. Imel v. United States, 375 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1973), aff'd, 523 F.2d 853 (10th Cir. 1975); In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Where the trial court has the necessary jurisdiction, over not only the subject matter but the persons as well, it is required to divide the marital property in accordance with this section. In re Quay, 647 P.2d 693 (Colo. App. 1982).

Language of subsection (1)(c) is not mandatory. In re Warrington, 44 Colo. App. 294, 616 P.2d 177 (1980).

Colorado is not a community property state. In re Ellis, 36 Colo. App. 234, 538 P.2d 1347 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 317, 552 P.2d 506 (1976).

The statutory mandate to distribute property equitably does not require equality. In re Warrington, 44 Colo. App. 294, 616 P.2d 177 (1980); In re Weiss, 695 P.2d 778 (Colo. App. 1984); In re Fenimore, 782 P.2d 872 (Colo. App. 1989); In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993); In re Morehouse, 121 P.3d 264 (Colo. App. 2005).

The parties need not be accorded equal shares in the marital estate. In re Boyd, 643 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1982).

It has been held repeatedly that in matters of division of property the trial court is imbued with broad discretion, and that the mandate to distribute property equitably does not require equality. In re Lodholm, 35 Colo. App. 411, 536 P.2d 842 (1975).

Facially disproportionate division of property not inequitable where economic circumstances of each spouse were properly considered. In re Sorensen, 679 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1984).

There is no requirement that the court divide property with precise equality in order to achieve an equitable division. In re Howard, 42 Colo. App. 457, 600 P.2d 93 (1979).

Increases in separate property or marital property do not mandate that such property be divided equally, nor does it necessarily preclude the award of substantially all of such property to only one spouse. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

A trial judge cannot in all circumstances evaluate marital property with razor-sharp exactness so that each party's share has a precise monetary value. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

The distribution of marital property must be just and equitable, but need not be necessarily equal. In re McGinnis, 778 P.2d 281 (Colo. App. 1989); In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994); In re Goldin, 923 P.2d 376 (Colo. App.

1996); In re Stumpf, 932 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1996); In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section authorizes the trial court to make an equitable and just division of the property of persons involved in divorce proceedings as that property is shown to exist at the time of the order entered with regard thereto. Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964).

The dissolution court has jurisdiction to grant relief but only in equity and not at law. Tort claims concerning property that was the subject of the dissolution court may not be joined into an otherwise equitable dissolution proceeding. In re Mockelmann, 121 P.3d 335 (Colo. App. 2005).

Court may not become a surrogate attorney for party who has chosen not to appear before the court in order to reach an equitable division of marital property. Therefore, trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to elicit evidence concerning husband's current earnings, the use husband made of funds he withdrew from the joint bank account, or the classification of certain property as separate or marital. In re Eisenhuth, 976 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1999).

The public policies to be furthered under this act include dividing of assets equitably and mitigating the harm to spouses and children. These policies take precedence over any contract arguments that may be raised by either spouse. Thus, the trial court was correct in refusing husband's indemnification argument and in interpreting the divorce decree as requiring the husband to compensate the wife for the fair market value of business property apportioned to her in the equitable distribution. In re Plesich, 881 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1994).

It is not objectionable that an exact dollar amount of the husband's contribution to assets cannot be determined from the testimony, as it is not a prerequisite to a fair and equitable division of property that such distribution be made in exact proportion to contribution of funds. Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971).

There is no mathematical formula for establishing a just and equitable property settlement, or alimony, or support. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

It is improper for the court to continue a joint or common tenancy between divorced spouses in marital property. Rather, in dividing the marital property, the court should leave to each party a definable portion of ownership. In re Paul, 821 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1991).

In dividing marital property, specific findings regarding value of assets are not required as long as basis for decision of trial court is apparent from its findings. In re Sharp, 823 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1991).

This issue of property division in a divorce action is not one of marital fault, but whether the wife is entitled thereto by reason of having contributed to the accumulation or preservation of the assets sought to be divided, and whether her conduct was such as to justify her sharing in a division of such property. Liggett v. Liggett, 152 Colo. 110, 380 P.2d 673 (1963); Kraus v. Kraus, 159 Colo. 331, 411 P.2d 240 (1966); Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Although marital fault or misconduct may not be considered by the trial court when it is dividing marital assets, economic fault may be considered. Economic fault comes into play in extreme cases, such as a spouse's dissipation of marital assets in the contemplation of divorce, and it must be strictly confined so as not to circumvent the prohibition against consideration of marital fault. In re Jorgenson, 143 P.3d 1169 (Colo. App. 2006).

Formerly, it was only one of the elements to be taken into consideration, and in the absence of moral delinquency or a complete disregard of the marriage vows, individual fault should not have acted as an obstacle to an equitable division of property. Bell v. Bell, 156 Colo. 513, 400 P.2d 440 (1965); Schrader v. Schrader, 156 Colo. 521, 400 P.2d 675 (1965).

Maintenance and property settlement must be considered together to achieve just result in dissolution proceedings. If an order dividing property cannot stand, the provision for maintenance must also be set aside to permit the trial court to consider both matters in relation to each other upon remand. In re Lord, 626 P.2d 698 (Colo. App. 1980), appeal dismissed, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982).

Property division must precede consideration of maintenance. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981); In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Fact that the parties waived maintenance has no bearing on the classification of stock shares as marital property; thus, wife's argument that because the stock purchase was made through a payroll deduction it constituted her compensation and could not be divided as property or considered maintenance, since both parties waived maintenance, was misplaced. In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

There is a qualitative difference between a maintenance award and a division of property. A property division is final and non-modifiable absent conditions justifying relief from judgment. In re Wells, 833 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1991).

Statutory criteria for dividing property is general in nature, and the trial court has wide discretion in dividing marital property to accomplish a just result. In re Jackson, 698 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985).

Division of property must be based on the situation of the parties at the time of the decree rather than that at the time of their marriage. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 505, 176 P.2d 363 (1946); Stephenson v. Stephenson, 134 Colo. 96, 299 P.2d 1095 (1956); Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964).

Subsection (1)(c) requires the trial court to consider the economic circumstances of the respective spouses at the time of the hearing relating to the division of marital property. Therefore, the trial court erred as a matter of law in considering the economic circumstances of the parties at the time of the dissolution, rather than at the time of the permanent orders, which occurred in the year following the entry of the dissolution. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

Every property division action depends on the particular facts of each case. Granato v. Granato, 130 Colo. 439, 277 P.2d 236 (1954).

Many factors enter into the determination of what division of property shall be made in the event of a divorce, among these are the value of the estate to be divided; the financial condition of the parties; the ability of each spouse to earn money; how the property was acquired; the age and status of the parties, and all pertinent facts and circumstances bearing on the question. Nunemacher v. Nunemacher, 132 Colo. 300, 287 P.2d 662 (1955); Brigham v. Brigham, 141 Colo. 41, 346 P.2d 302 (1959); Kraus v. Kraus, 159 Colo. 331, 411 P.2d 240 (1966); Larrabee v. Larrabee, 31 Colo. App. 493 504 P.2d 358 (1972).

Spouse's earning capabilities are properly part of the "economic circumstances" the court must consider in compliance with subsection (1). In re Faulkner, 652 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1982).

Future social security benefits may be properly considered as part of the "economic circumstances" the court must consider in compliance with subsection (1). The trial court may not, however, directly distribute marital property to offset the computed value of social security benefits. In re Morehouse, 121 P.3d 264 (Colo. App. 2005).

Contribution to an increase in separate property is an important factor, but not the sole factor to consider in dividing such property. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

Value of husband's interest in corporation considered in determining division of property. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

Factors such as occupational experience, coupled with education, training, and business background should also be considered in determining what division should be made of property. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

The award of rights in property to the wife was only another factor in the determination of the interests of the parties in the realty which they owned. McDonald v. McDonald, 150 Colo. 492, 374 P.2d 690 (1962).

That the husband had transferred his property to his brother with fraudulent intent, and that it was reasonable to presume that he would not deal fairly, frankly, and openly with his wife and child, were facts properly to be considered by the court in making division of property. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 505, 176 P.2d 363 (1946).

Where the division of property was not in the nature of alimony or support money for the minor children, but was an equitable division based upon the fact that the wife, during marriage, in addition to the usual household duties, performed services that contributed to the husband's business advantage, a division of property could be ordered in addition to alimony. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 505, 176 P.2d 363 (1946).

The fact that much of the husband's property came by inheritance did not preclude the court from making an equitable division of property between a husband and a wife who had performed services contributing to her husband's business advantage, but was only one of many facts to be considered by the court. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 505, 176 P.2d 363 (1946).

Inherited property was formerly not per se excluded from consideration by the court in making a determination of the property rights of the parties. Santilli v. Santilli, 169 Colo. 49, 453 P.2d 606 (1969).

Property division could be made even where a wife is not entitled to alimony. Britt v. Britt, 137 Colo. 524, 328 P.2d 947 (1958).

It is not a necessary prerequisite that a wife show that she has contributed by funds or efforts to the acquiring of any specific property awarded her. Britt v. Britt, 137 Colo. 524, 328 P.2d 947 (1958); Bell v. Bell, 156 Colo. 513, 400 P.2d 440 (1965); Santilli v. Santilli, 169 Colo. 49, 453 P.2d 606 (1969).

But whether the wife has contributed to or in some manner aided in the accumulation or preservation of the assets sought to be divided must be ascertained. Kraus v. Kraus, 159 Colo. 331, 411 P.2d 240 (1966).

Where by her services beyond the usual duties of a homemaker, a wife contributes either funds or services which enable the husband to increase his property holdings, or to preserve those already held, the wife is entitled upon divorce to an equitable award of money or property as may be justified by the circumstances of the parties. Britt v. Britt, 137 Colo. 524, 328 P.2d 947 (1958).

The pecuniary resources of the husband were not to be regarded as a basis for a division of property, which was not the purpose of an allowance for the support of the wife, but they had a bearing upon the condition in life of the parties and thus upon the necessities of the wife, for as had been recognized in considering the liability of a husband for necessities supplied to his wife, the term "necessaries" in this connection was not confined to articles of food or clothing required to sustain life, but had a much broader meaning and included such articles for use by a wife as were suitable to maintain her and the family according to the property and condition in life of her husband. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

Where a wife advanced $8,000 from her own funds to her husband to purchase property, a finding that the husband was indebted to the wife in such amount and that she should have had a lien on property to secure repayment thereof, being amply supported by the evidence, was not erroneous. Flor v. Flor, 148 Colo. 514, 366 P.2d 664 (1961).

Where a wife in outburst of emotion, damaged or destroyed husband's personal effects, it was not error to award husband value thereof against the wife. Cohan v. Cohan, 150 Colo. 249, 372 P.2d 149 (1962).

It was not a prerequisite to a fair and equitable division of property that the wife must show that she had contributed by funds or effort to the acquisition of the specific property awarded to her. Schrader v. Schrader, 156 Colo. 521, 400 P.2d 675 (1965).

Where the husband was the owner of a minority stock interest and was not the owner of the home, piercing the corporate veil to determine the true value of an interest in a closely held corporation did not allow for an order that part of the corporation's property should be distributed to or used by a legal stranger, and the wife was not entitled to corporate assets, but to a sum of money, or possibly even shares of stock, based upon the fair value of her husband's interest. Kalcevic v. Kalcevic, 156 Colo. 151, 397 P.2d 483 (1964).

A dissolution of a marriage must be effective before any court had power to decree a division of property between a husband and wife. Ikeler v. Ikeler, 84 Colo. 429, 271 P. 193 (1928); McCoy v. McCoy, 139 Colo. 105, 336 P.2d 302 (1959).

Otherwise, the parties would still be married, and while that status continues there is always the possibility of a termination of the separation, and a court is therefore without power to finally determine the property rights of the parties. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

This section does not prohibit a hearing on the parties' property settlement before the entry of the divorce decree, but merely provides that at the time of the issuance of the divorce decree, or thereafter, on application the court may make orders relating to property divisions. Kalcevic v. Kalcevic, 156 Colo. 151, 397 P.2d 483 (1964).

Personal service upon nonresident is not prerequisite to division of property. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Jurisdiction over petitioner extends to property in state. Where petitioner has possession of property located in Colorado, the property being specifically described in the petition as an asset subject to disposition, the court acquires control of the property by virtue of its jurisdiction over petitioner, and the court thereby obtains jurisdiction to determine the appropriate disposition of that property. In re Ramsey, 34 Colo. App. 338, 526 P.2d 319 (1974).

Where the trial court has jurisdiction to divide property of the parties by virtue of the fact that the property was located in Colorado, it can properly adjudicate the rights of the parties with respect to property owned by them in Colorado. In re Wilson, 653 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982).

Where trial court had jurisdiction to divide a partnership interest equitably, wife had standing to challenge partnership's valuation of husband's partnership interest and a legally cognizable interest in its value. In re Nevarez, 170 P.3d 808 (Colo. App. 2007).

The trial court did not exceed its jurisdiction in requiring the husband to execute and deliver deeds conveying his interest in the property to the wife, because although it has generally been held that a divorce court in one state does not have the power directly to affect, by means of its decree, the title to real property situated in another state, where the decree itself does not operate as a conveyance, but was wholly an in personam decree requiring that a party under the court's jurisdiction execute the conveyance, the court did not exceed its jurisdiction. Larrabee v. Larrabee, 31 Colo. App. 493, 504 P.2d 358 (1972).

"Date of the hearing". Where the hearing on disposition of property takes more than one day and there is a substantial interval between hearing days, the "date of the hearing" referred to in subsection (5) is the day when the last evidence was presented on this matter. In re Femmer, 39 Colo. App. 277, 568 P.2d 81 (1977).

Where the trial court had jurisdiction to divide property at the time of entry of a final decree of divorce, but did not do so, nor then reserve the matter for further consideration, it lost jurisdiction to thereafter make a valid division of such property. Triebelhorn v. Turzanski, 149 Colo. 558, 370 P.2d 757 (1962).

Because former § 46-1-5(2), C.R.S. 1963, did not contemplate or authorize the court to exercise continuing supervisory powers over the management of the property subject to division.

Larrick v. Larrick, 30 Colo. App. 327, 491 P.2d 1401 (1971).

Former § 46-1-5(2), C.R.S. 1963, required that an order dividing the property of the parties to a divorce proceeding be made either at the time the divorce decree was issued, or within such "reasonable time thereafter as may be set by the court at the time of the issuance of said divorce decree". Larrick v. Larrick, 30 Colo. App. 327, 491 P.2d 1401 (1971).

Where the trial court retained the jurisdiction to award such alimony as may be just upon a proper showing, in no way altered the finality of a portion of the decree which determined the rights and interests of the parties in the real estate. McDonald v. McDonald, 150 Colo. 492, 374 P.2d 690 (1962).

The trial court retained jurisdiction of the controversy concerning the property settlement between these divorced parties as to matters affecting their property rights following the death of the husband. Sarno v. Sarno, 28 Colo. App. 598, 478 P.2d 711 (1970).

Trust where wife settlor and sole income beneficiary. Where wife had established a trust with herself as sole income beneficiary, the court had jurisdiction, in a subsequent divorce action, to order the trustee to make payments from the trust to the husband. In re Kaladic v. Kaladic, 41 Colo. App. 419, 589 P.2d 502 (1978).

The trial court in the absence of agreement between the parties to the divorce action could not, over the objection of the wife, order that her share in the property division be impressed with a trust. Ferguson v. Olmsted, 168 Colo. 374, 451 P.2d 746 (1969).

Reconsideration of property division to correct error unnecessary absent contest. When neither party contests a trial court's division of property it is not necessary that the court be able to reconsider the property division in order to correct error in the provisions for maintenance and attorney fees. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Payment of interest on spouse's equity in house. The wife may be required to pay interest on the husband's share of the equity in the house which was awarded to the wife, for the period between the dissolution of marriage and payment of the equity. In re Garcia, 638 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1981).

Interest on portion of sale price of marital residence representing husband's share is to be calculated from date specified in decree that payment of such amount become due, not date of sale. In re Schutte, 721 P.2d 160 (Colo. App. 1986).

Transfer is not taxable event. When, under this section, a property settlement agreement is entered into providing for a transfer of property from husband to wife in acknowledgment of the wife's contribution to the accumulation of the marital estate, or a decree of the divorce court requires such transfer because of wife's contributions to the accumulation of the family estate, and the transfer is not made in satisfaction of the husband's obligation for support, the transfer is not a taxable event giving rise to capital gains tax liability for purposes of federal income taxation. Imel v. United States, 375 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1973), aff'd, 523 F.2d 853 (10th Cir. 1975).

Acts of depletion of marital estate are relevant considerations in making a division of property and not an imputation of marital misconduct on the part of a spouse. In re Paulsen, 677 P.2d 1389 (Colo. App. 1984).

Spouse may be required to apply future earnings against present marital debts. Subsection (2)(c) is not violated solely because the award forces the husband to apply future earnings to retire present debts of the marital estate. In re Faulkner, 652 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1982).

A spouse's contribution to the professional education and career of the other spouse must be considered in the distribution of property pursuant to this section. In re Speirs, 956 P.2d 622 (Colo. App. 1997).

B. Definition of Property.

This section does not define "property" but merely specifies that the "marital property" is to be divided "in such proportions as the court deems just". In re Ellis, 36 Colo. App. 234, 538 P.2d 1347 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 317, 552 P.2d 506 (1976).

The legislature intended the term "property" to be broadly inclusive, as indicated by its use of the qualifying adjective "all" in subsection (2) of this section. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977).

There are necessary limits upon what may be considered "property", and the concept as used by the general assembly is other than that usually understood to be embodied within the term. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977).

An insurance policy with no cash surrender value does not represent any asset proper for consideration on the theory that it is "property" which is subject to equitable division between the parties. Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964).

Degree is not property. Where a spouse provides financial support while the other spouse acquires a degree, the degree is not considered property. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977); In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987).

At best, education is an intangible property right, the value of which, because of its character, cannot have a monetary value placed upon it for division between spouses. In re Graham, 38 Colo. App. 130, 555 P.2d 527 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1978); In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987).

And is not subject to division under this section. Although a litigant's education is a factor to be considered, among many others, in arriving at an equitable property division and in determining matters of maintenance and child support, it is not property subject to division under this section. In re Graham, 38 Colo. App. 130, 555 P.2d 527 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1978); In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987); In re Speirs, 956 P.2d 622 (Colo. App. 1997).

Husband's beneficial interest in discretionary trust is not "property" subject to division as such under this section. In re Rosenblum, 43 Colo. App. 144, 602 P.2d 892 (1979).

Husband's rights in a discretionary trust are to be considered by the court as any other "economic circumstance" of the husband in determining a just division of the marital property pursuant to subsection (1)(c) and as a "relevant factor" in making an award of maintenance under § 14-10-114 (2). In re Rosenblum, 43 Colo. App. 144, 602 P.2d 892 (1979).

Wife's remainder interest in her grandfather's irrevocable trust was a gift, vested long before her marriage to husband, and was therefore separate property. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Remainder interests in irrevocable trusts are property for purposes of the disposition of property in dissolution actions. Such interests may present only a right to future enjoyment and are subject to complete divestment or defeasance, but they are certain, fixed interests subject only to the condition of survivorship and may not be withheld by the trustee in his or her discretion. Thus, they are distinct from interests in a discretionary or revocable trust, which are viewed as mere expectancies. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Wife's interest in family trust constitutes "property" and is not a "mere expectancy", despite the fact that wife's father must pay the entire net income from the trust to himself during his lifetime and has the discretion to invade the corpus for his own support, care, and maintenance. Because the trust was created during the marriage, wife's interest constitutes a gift that is excepted from the definition of marital property, but appreciation on wife's interest in the trust during the course of the marriage does constitute marital property. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Trial court properly determined that any increase in the value of wife's vested remainder interest in an irrevocable trust during the marriage was marital property subject to division under subsection (4). In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court found husband's vested remainder interest in his father's trust to be a property interest, where father possessed the power to revoke the trust during his lifetime but died without exercising that power. Husband's remainder interest in his father's trust was, therefore, subject to depletion only by exercise of the trustee's right to invade the corpus of the trust for the benefit of husband's mother, which right did not convert husband's vested remainder property interest into a mere expectancy. In re Gorman, 36 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2001).

Court found husband's vested remainder interest in his mother's trust to be a property interest, even though the mother, still living at the time of the permanent orders, had the power to revoke the trust during her lifetime. The mother's exercise of her right to revoke is a condition subsequent, and unless the event occurs, husband's interest remains vested. In re Gorman, 36 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2001).

The legislative history shows that subsection (7)(b) was adopted to overturn the holding in Gorman that a vested remainder interest in a revocable or modifiable trust is a property interest subject to division. The legislative history reveals that the general assembly relied upon the plain meaning of "heir at law" and that the statute applies only to remainder interests in trusts that are revocable or amendable and not to remainder interests in irrevocable trusts. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

The term "heir at law" in subsection (7)(b) pertains to any interest or resource a spouse may expect to inherit from his or her parent were the parent to die intestate. As a practical consequence of that language, the trial court may not consider any such prospective inheritance as either a property interest or as an economic circumstance. By including the phrase "heir at law," the statute thus treats intestate expectancies consistently with interests under a donative third-party instrument that can be revoked or changed. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Interest in a trust cannot be classified as property until that trust becomes irrevocable under subsection (7)(b). In re Balanson, 107 P.3d 1037 (Colo. App. 2004).

A life insurance policy lacking cash surrender value is not "property" since it has not objective, tangible, or vested value that can be divided. McGovern v. Broadstreet, 720 P.2d 589 (Colo. App. 1985).

Discretionary trust corpus cannot be considered the separate property of a beneficiary for purposes of division of property. This is because the beneficiary of such trust has no contractual or enforceable right to income or principal from the trust, cannot force any action by the trustee, cannot assign an interest in the trust, and because such interest cannot be reached by either party's creditors. In re Jones, 812 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 1991).

When beneficiary has no interest in the corpus, and right to control how the corpus is invested, the income is a mere gratuity deriving from the beneficence of the settlors. In re Guinn, 93 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2004).

In the absence of some ownership interest in the corpus itself, even a mandatory right to unrealized future discretionary allocations of income is an expectancy arising from the largess of the settlors and does not constitute property. In re Guinn, 93 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2004).

Income received by the wife from the discretionary trust during the marriage is properly considered a gift and thus not divisible pursuant to subsection (2)(a). In re Jones, 812 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 1991).

Wife's expectancy interest in a discretionary trust should be considered an economic circumstance pursuant to subsection (1)(c). In re Jones, 812 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 1991).

Wife's future anticipated interest in German "social security" benefits is an economic circumstance that can be considered pursuant to subsection (1)(c) in the equitable division of the marital estate. In re Lockwood, 971 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not err in concluding that an irrevocable trust of which wife was beneficiary but over which wife had no control over the principal or the income and from which wife had no right to demand or request distributions was not marital property but an "economic circumstance" to be considered in arriving at an equitable property division. In re Pooley, 996 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1998).

Vested and matured military retirement pay accrued during all or part of a marriage constitutes marital property subject to equitable distribution in a marriage proceeding. In re Gallo, 752 P.2d 47 (Colo. 1988).

The key to an equitable distribution is fairness, not mathematical precision. Two possible methods of valuation are the present cash value method and the reserve jurisdiction method. In re Gallo, 752 P.2d 47 (Colo. 1988).

The rule that military retirement pay is marital property subject to equitable distribution in a marriage proceeding should be applied prospectively only. In re Wolford, 789 P.2d 459 (Colo. App. 1989).

Trial court, which had personal jurisdiction over husband but lacked the authority to divide the husband's military pension as marital property, did not retain jurisdiction to divide the pension at a later date. Even though final decree provided that trial court had continuing jurisdiction over the action and that the wife would remain entitled to any and all military benefits, the court did not have the authority to divide military pension as a result of subsequent case law declaring such pensions to be marital property. Language in final decree refers only to the court's continuing authority to divide property as such court had on the date of the final decree. In re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

Federal act specifying whether the court has jurisdiction over a military member's pension preempts state rules of procedure governing jurisdiction. In re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

Military retirement benefits subject to distribution as marital property in dissolution of marriage cases are limited to disposable retired pay which, under federal law, excludes disability pay. The exclusion also applies to that portion of a veteran's retirement pay that is computed using the percentage of disability on the date the veteran is placed on the temporary disability retirement list (TDRL). In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because husband was not entitled to a longevity retirement at the time he was placed on the TDRL, no portion of his retirement benefit that is based upon his disability status is distributable to wife pursuant to the parties' separation agreement that required the parties to divide the husband's pension equally according to the time rule formula. In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

In case where service member had attained twenty or more years of service and was eligible for a longevity retirement when placed on the TDRL, an amount equal to the amount of TDRL pay, as calculated based on husband's percentage of disability when he was placed on the TDRL, must be excluded from the marital property. Any amounts in excess of that amount may be divided as marital property. In re Poland, 264 P.3d 647 (Colo. App. 2011).

Trial court did not err in its conclusion that military voluntary separation incentive payments constitute marital property subject to distribution. Compensation that is deferred until after the dissolution of marriage, but fully earned during the marriage, is marital property. In re Shevlin, 903 P.2d 1227 (Colo. App. 1995).

Cash received during the marriage pursuant to an employment contract which provides for payments in installments in advance of work is cash on hand and therefore marital property subject to division and not future income. In re Anderson, 811 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990).

Compensation deferred until after the dissolution, but earned fully during the marriage, is marital property. Wife's performance award for her performance as an employee during the marriage was marital property, subject to equitable division. In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

Although the interest of the policy owner of a life insurance policy constitutes marital property, the interest of the named beneficiary is only an expectancy and vests no present property interest in the beneficiary. Gorman-English v. Estate of English, 849 P.2d 840 (Colo. App. 1992).

A life insurance policy lacking cash surrender value is not "property" since it has no objective, tangible, or vested value that can be divided in a dissolution action. In re Footitt, 903 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1995).

Spouse's disability pension payments do not constitute marital property and are not subject to distribution in a dissolution of marriage action. Such a distribution would contravene the legislative intent that only the beneficiary receive the disability benefits. In re Peterson, 870 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1994).

However, income received during the marriage from disability benefits becomes a marital asset when it is commingled with marital funds. Disability payments themselves are not marital property, but they lose their exempt character when commingled with marital assets. In re Green, 169 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2007).

Public employees' retirement association (PERA) disability benefit prior to age 65 replaces future earnings and does not constitute marital property. In re Hansen, 62 P.3d 1066 (Colo. App. 2002).

When disabled employee reaches the age of 65, the portion of PERA benefits attributable to years of service before disability constitutes marital property, and the balance remains separate property. Regardless of employee's recovery or work status, the benefits, excluding the unearned service credit projected until age 65, are more akin to retirement benefits. In re Hansen, 62 P.3d 1066 (Colo. App. 2002).

A stock option that is not vested does not constitute property. Only a vested stock option is "property" subjection to a determination of whether it was granted in consideration of past or future services for purpose of ascertaining its marital or separate nature. In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

Employee stock option constitutes property for purposes of dissolution only when employee has enforceable right to options. Whether the stock option is "vested" is not determinative. When an employee has a presently enforceable right under the contract, the stock option is property and not a mere expectancy, regardless of whether the options are presently exercisable. In re Powell, 220 P.3d 952 (Colo. App. 2009).

Parents' promise to give property to husband in their will does not make the property marital property. Any interest in a donative third-party instrument that is amendable or revocable, is not marital property subject to division. In re Schmedeman, 190 P.3d 788 (Colo. App. 2008).

Wife's objection to husband's valid gift of property during the marriage, absent evidence that gift was made in contemplation of divorce, did not preserve wife's right to have property classified as marital property upon dissolution. Classification and valuation of marital property takes place upon dissolution. Absent dissipation, “marital” property that no longer exists cannot be valued. In re Schmedeman, 190 P.3d 788 (Colo. App. 2008).

Gifts made from one spouse to the other during the course of the marriage cannot be presumed to be gifts, nor do they necessarily constitute marital property. To qualify as a “gift”, a transfer of property must involve a simultaneous intention to make a gift, delivery of the gift, and acceptance of the gift. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001); In re Amich, 192 P.3d 422 (Colo. App. 2007).

Accrued vacation and sick leave time is not marital property subject to division by the court. Both the value of the unused leave time and the existence of the unused leave time are uncertain and are more analogous to an employee’s unvested stock options or an interest in a discretionary trust. Trial court erred in valuing husband’s accrued vacation and sick time as part of the marital estate. In re Cardona, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2010).

C. Discretion of Court.

The division of property in a divorce action is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court, and its judgment will not be disturbed on review unless it is shown that the division made was an abuse of discretion. Granato v. Granato, 130 Colo. 439, 277 P.2d 236 (1954); Todd v. Todd, 133 Colo. 1, 291 P.2d 386 (1955); Britt v. Britt, 137 Colo. 524, 328 P.2d 947 (1958); *Drake v. The division of marital property is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court and there is no rigid mathematical formula that the court must adhere to. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977).

Judiciary not to interfere with “division” of property. Whatever the role of judicial solicitude in the division of property, it will not be permitted to interfere with the statutory command that the property be literally and effectively “divided”. In re Gehret, 41 Colo. App. 162, 580 P.2d 1275 (1978).

Property division hearings are equitable in nature and trial courts have broad discretion to fashion an equitable division of the parties’ property in a dissolution proceeding. In re Wells, 850 P.2d 694 (Colo. 1993).

Under the authority of this section, the trial court is clearly limited in adjusting and dividing the assets of the husband and wife as between them alone. Giambrocco v. Giambrocco, 161 Colo. 510, 423 P.2d 328 (1967).

Trial court lacks authority to award marital property to the children of the marriage or to compel a parent to make such a conveyance. In re Mohrlang, 85 P.3d 561 (Colo. App. 2003).

Under this section authorizing a “division of property” in a divorce action, the court may decree a transfer from the wife to the husband, in a proper case, even of property which he has conveyed to her. Ikeler v. Ikeler, 84 Colo. 429, 271 P. 193 (1928).

It was proper for the trial court to consider contributions of parties to the increase in or accumulation of assets by means other than direct contribution of capital. Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971).

Where the parties to a divorce action agreed to submit the partition of real property issue to the court, rather than incur the expense of a formal statutory partition proceeding, the court, under its broad powers, could have declined to partition at that point, and, in the absence of a final agreement concerning the property, it could either have sold the property and divided the proceeds, or it could have declared that each party would henceforth be a tenant in common. Either course would have been a fair and equitable division of the property. Jekot v. Jekot, 32 Colo. App. 118, 507 P.2d 473 (1973).

Judicial notice of general economic trends, such as the inflationary trend since the time of the marriage, was proper in considering the disposition of property. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

A decree of a trial court permitting a wife to keep her separate inherited property and awarding her a division of property acquired through the joint efforts of the parties, where no alimony is requested or awarded, does not constitute an abuse of discretion. Green v. Green, 139 Colo. 551, 342 P.2d 659 (1959).

Where stocks and securities acquired solely by a defendant's mother out of her inheritance, and earnings were held in joint tenancy with defendant, it was error for the trial court to allot one half of the value thereof to defendant in making a division of property as between husband and wife. Stephenson v. Stephenson, 134 Colo. 96, 299 P.2d 1095 (1956).

Non-marital disability pension payments may be considered as an economic circumstance in determining maintenance. In re Peterson, 870 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1994).

In a property settlement proceedings in a divorce action, where the evidence disclosed that the wife had contributed substantially to the family income over a period of years, which enabled the husband to devote virtually all of his earnings to assisting his mother in preserving a valuable piece of business property, through whom he received a substantial inheritance, which he would not have received but for the wife's efforts and contributions during the period, it was error for the court to fail to take such inheritance into consideration in determining the property settlement between the parties. Lee v. Lee, 133 Colo. 128, 293 P.2d 293 (1956).

A court order empowering the wife to make the selection of the husband's stocks was erroneous because the division is a function requiring the exercise of judicial discretion, and the danger in delegating full discretion to the wife was that her selection could work to an unfair advantage for her and a decided detriment to the husband's holdings. Santilli v. Santilli, 169 Colo. 49, 453 P.2d 606 (1969).

Where properties awarded to the husband were heavily encumbered, and the businesses awarded financially involved, and in addition he was required to pay off a large indebtedness on property awarded to wife plus substantial support for children, evidence offered was insufficient to support such burdensome order. Bell v. Bell, 150 Colo. 174, 371 P.2d 773 (1962).

Where under facts disclosed, order of division of property in divorce action was so manifestly unfair, inequitable, and unconscionable as to amount to an abuse of discretion, it will be ordered vacated and set aside. Bell v. Bell, 150 Colo. 174, 371 P.2d 773 (1962).

No abuse of discretion. In and of itself, the award of 35 percent of the marital assets is not an abuse of discretion. In re Lodholm, 35 Colo. App. 411, 536 P.2d 842 (1975).

And although distribution was not equal, it certainly was equitable, and thus well within the court's discretion. In re Gercken, 706 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1985).

Award of interest within trial court's discretion. Whether interest should be allowed on a promissory note which represents a property division award upon dissolution of marriage is a matter which lies within the discretion of the trial court based on all of attendant circumstances. In re Lucas, 631 P.2d 1175 (Colo. App. 1981).

Trial court is required to consider the economic circumstances of the spouses at the time of any hearing relating to the division of marital property. In re Wells, 850 P.2d 694 (Colo. 1993).

Marital partnership interest made subject to "charging order" pursuant to § 7-60-128 as part of property division is not an abuse of discretion, nor was it error to leave the actual amount recoverable to determination in a separate action, although property division had to be set aside because it could be unconscionable. In re Weiss, 695 P.2d 778 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where a wife was awarded a final divorce decree without alimony and given control of a jointly owned taxicab business, it was held that there was ample evidence in the record to support the finding of fact by the trial court that wife did contribute to and was entitled to a one-half interest in the business since it appeared that the operations, continued under her guidance and later under a receiver with her assistance, owed their successful outcome to these efforts. Shreyer v. Shreyer, 112 Colo. 281, 148 P.2d 1003 (1944).

Award of a share of benefits of husband's vested pension plan through the use of installment payments when lump-sum distribution at the time of decree was impractical is within the discretion of court. In re Blake, 807 P.2d 1211 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court's use of two different methods to distribute the parties' two pensions, was within the sound discretion of the trial court. In re Kelm, 912 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the property and the proceeds therefrom to plaintiff where evidence showed that he furnished substantially all the purchase money, but allowed title to be taken in his wife's name. Bieber v. Bieber, 112 Colo. 229, 148 P.2d 369 (1944).

Where the husband asserted the court abused its discretion in awarding the real property to the wife without having first determined its value, there was no abuse of discretion, because before value becomes important the court must first determine whether the property is subject to division. Larrabee v. Larrabee, 31 Colo. App. 493, 504 P.2d 358 (1972).

Where the husband was on active duty as a petty officer in the Navy during the five year duration of the marriage, and the court found that his participation, if any, in the management of the land given to the wife prior to the marriage was adequately compensated by the income received therefrom, and the court further found that the gift from the wife's mother was intended primarily as a gift to her own children and that the husband was not entitled to retain any interest in the land under the circumstances of this case, the award of the property to the wife, based on these findings was not an abuse of discretion. Larrabee v. Larrabee, 31 Colo. App. 493, 504 P.2d 358 (1972).

Court abused its discretion when it acknowledged the parties' relatively equal contributions to the marriage and marital property, yet awarded the wife only the benefits of the increased value of the property without any responsibilities for its burdens. Under these circumstances, equity requires that the wife share a part of the debt incurred on the home during the marriage as well as a part of the increase in the home's value. In re Kiefer, 738 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1987).

It was an abuse of discretion to give the wife ownership of the couple's percentage of a partnership, granting one-third to the husband only upon full or partial distribution and holding the husband responsible for payment of his share of capital calls and any debt related to the partnership interest. In re Paul, 821 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1991).

Once initial order is entered, subsequent hearings are not merely corrections of errors committed by the trial court in the first proceeding. In re Wells, 850 P.2d 694 (Colo. 1993).

D. Antenuptial Agreements.

Separation agreements and antenuptial agreements are separate and distinct legal documents. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Antenuptial contracts may be rescinded or modified by the mutual consent of the parties and whether such a contract has been rescinded by mutual consent is a question of fact. In re Young, 682 P.2d 1233 (Colo. App. 1984).

Spouses-to-be have right to enter into antenuptial agreements which contemplate the possibility of dissolution. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Agreement not bar to claim for maintenance unless expressly relinquished. In the absence of any reference in an antenuptial agreement to a relinquishment of the right to maintenance, the agreement does not bar the wife's claim for maintenance. In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979).

As a general principle, antenuptial agreements will be given effect in this state. In re Thompson, 39 Colo. App. 400, 568 P.2d 98 (1977).

Antenuptial agreements, as a matter of law, do not violate public policy and are not void ab initio in Colorado. In re Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Antenuptial agreements, absent fraud, are binding on the parties according to their terms, and the judiciary cannot relieve the parties from the obligations thereof. In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979).

Otherwise legislative provisions control. When an antenuptial agreement does not provide for the distribution of marital property upon the dissolution of the marriage, then the applicable legislative provisions are controlling. In re Thompson, 39 Colo. App. 400, 568 P.2d 98 (1977).

Section 14-10-112 conscionability review not extended to antenuptial agreements. The conscionability review of separation agreements, pursuant to § 14-10-112, does not extend to antenuptial agreements. In re Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Burden of proof is on party seeking to avoid antenuptial contract. In re Ingels, 42 Colo. App. 245, 596 P.2d 1211 (1979); In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979).

The burden of proving failure to disclose is upon the party contesting the validity of the antenuptial agreement. In re Ross, 670 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1983).

Failure to provide wife with independent counsel does not render antenuptial agreement void per se. In re Ingels, 42 Colo. App. 245, 596 P.2d 1211 (1979).

Agreement not set aside solely because bulk of marital assets go to husband. In re Ingels, 42 Colo. App. 245, 596 P.2d 1211 (1979).

Itemized property list not necessary for agreement. Where the amount of the husband's assets was not materially misstated, his failure to supply an itemized list was not fatal to the validity of an antenuptial agreement. In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979).

While it would have been preferable for the trial court to have entered specific values for each item in a property division, reversal was not required where it could determine that the property division made was not an abuse of discretion. In re Warrington, 44 Colo. App. 294, 616 P.2d 177 (1980).

Where antenuptial agreement is unambiguous as to treatment of increases in value of separate property, the court is required to enforce the agreement according to its terms. In re Vickers, 686 P.2d 1370 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where antenuptial agreement was silent on matter of attorney fees, the awarding of such fees was controlled by § 14-10-119. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

For holding as to enforceability of prenuptial agreement which conceived disposition of property, see Franks v. Wilson, 369 F. Supp. 304 (D. Colo. 1973), appeal dismissed, 415 U.S. 986, 94 S. Ct. 1583, 39 L. Ed.2d 884, reh'g denied, 416 U.S. 975, 94 S. Ct. 2004, 40 L. Ed.2d 565 (1974).

E. Separate Property.

Property must be classified as separate or marital. Under the requirements of this section, it is essential for the court to classify the property of the parties as either separate or marital. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

This section mandates that separate property remain separate, subject to the narrow exception that any increase in value during marriage is marital property. In re Campbell, 43 Colo. App. 72, 599 P.2d 275 (1979).

Property acquired by either spouse during the marriage is presumed marital as is the appreciation in the value of separate property and any income produced by separate assets during the marriage. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

However, the marital property presumption can be overcome by evidence establishing that the property in question was acquired by a method listed in subsection (2), which excludes, among other things, property from the marital estate that was acquired in exchange for premarital property. To claim separate ownership successfully under the exchange provision, a spouse must trace the property by proving a series of exchanges back to an original asset. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court must determine the separate properties' appreciation in value and the part of the increase that is marital property and take those values into consideration when determining the property division. In re Martinez, 77 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2003).

In order to obtain status of separate property under this section, it must appear that the property was acquired prior to marriage with the intent that it become the separate property of husband. In re Altman, 35 Colo. App. 183, 530 P.2d 1012 (1974).

Property not "separate" because of spouse's lack of interest or concern. Property titled in the name of one spouse that was acquired during the parties' marriage cannot be considered nonmarital property merely because of a course of conduct by the other spouse showing a lack of interest or concern for property. In re Heim, 43 Colo. App. 511, 605 P.2d 485 (1979).

The classification of increases in separate property as marital property is a substantial departure from prior law wherein such increases were generally classed as separate property. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

When award of increases in separate property to be made. The award of increases in separate property is to be made after considering all of the factors stated in subsection (1)(a) through (1)(d), and not just contribution. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977); In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

It is proper for a court to consider the depletion of separate property for marital purposes pursuant to subsection (1)(d); however, the statute does not require that the depletion of separate property for nonmarital purposes be considered and the trial court's failure to make findings as to this factor was harmless error. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where court without authority to order sale of home. Where home was separate property of husband before marriage and after dissolution of marriage, the court was without authority to order sale of home despite fact that increase in the value of home during marriage was marital property. In re Campbell, 43 Colo. App. 72, 599 P.2d 275 (1979).

Income received by a spouse that is generated from the property of a third party is not marital property. In re Guinn, 93 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2004).

Money accumulated in pension fund prior to marriage should be considered "separate property". In re Rogers, 709 P.2d 1383 (Colo. App. 1985).

Husband's worker's compensation settlement is separate property to the extent it compensates for post-dissolution loss of income or earning capacity. In re Breckenridge, 973 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1999).

Insurance proceeds acquired by husband during marriage constituted a gift and was properly classified as separate property. In re Sharp, 823 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1991).

Shares of stock owned by husband at the time of the marriage that were later involved in a stock split during the marriage were properly considered husband's separate property except to the extent the shares appreciated during the marriage. In re Renier, 854 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1993).

In order for premarital property to retain its separate character, the property must be traceable to specific assets. In the absence of evidence tracing shares of stock obtained in a stock split during the marriage to the shares husband owned at the time of the marriage, the additional shares should not have been set apart as husband's separate property where husband combined the additional shares with other shares acquired during the marriage and many of the combined shares were sold. In re Renier, 854 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it awarded the wife 50 percent of the husband's disposable retirement pay where the ruling was rationally based on considerations of the wife's marital contributions during the husband's military career and the fact that the wife had no survivor benefits in the event of the husband's death. In re Sinkovich, 830 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court erred in setting apart to wife as her separate property the portions of investment traceable to income generated from trust. In re Footitt, 903 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1995).

Requiring a party to execute a noncompetitiveness agreement is within court's authority where agreement is necessary to protect goodwill of business awarded to other party and agreement is otherwise valid under § 8-2-113. In re Fischer, 834 P.2d 270 (Colo. App. 1992).

Gifts made from one spouse to the other during the course of the marriage cannot be presumed to be gifts, nor do they necessarily constitute marital property. To qualify as a "gift", a transfer of property must involve a simultaneous intention to make a gift, delivery of the gift, and acceptance of the gift. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001); In re Amich, 192 P.3d 422 (Colo. App. 2007).

To qualify as a gift, a transfer of property must involve a simultaneous intention to make a gift, delivery of the gift, and acceptance of the gift. That determination hinges fundamentally on the intent and acts of the donor and recipient, which, in turn, are questions of fact for the trial court to resolve. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Finding that home and car were wife's separate property upheld. In re Bartolo, 971 P.2d 699 (Colo. App. 1998).

The portion of husband's railroad retirement benefits that are equivalent to those an employee would have received if covered by the Social Security Act was husband's separate property, not subject to division, and court erred in treating it as marital property along with the portion of the railroad retirement benefits that are supplemental annuities. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

Bailment allowed between spouses. Subsection (1) does not prohibit a court from assigning liability to one spouse for the loss of separate property belonging to the other spouse upon a finding of negligence on the part of the spouse in possession of the property. In re Amich, 192 P.3d 422 (Colo. App. 2007).

F. Marital Property.

The purpose of the division of marital property is to allocate to each spouse what equitably belongs to him or her. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977).

Weighing of factors set forth in this section is within the sound discretion of the trial court. In re Casias, 962 P.2d 999 (Colo. App. 1998).

The court had the discretion to enter an equitable division of property where the court had retained jurisdiction and a period had expired for meeting certain conditions set forth in an agreement between the parties and such conditions had not been met. In re Ebel, 874 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1993).

Division gives each party some attributes of ownership. The efficacy of a division of property in a dissolution of marriage action results from placing in the hands of each party a definable or ascertainable portion of at least some of the attributes of ownership. In re Cehret, 41 Colo. App. 162, 580 P.2d 1275 (1978).

Right to property division inchoate. In dissolution of marriage proceedings, a wife may be entitled to a division of the husband's property, and that right, prior to the dissolution action and possibly subject to an exception or two, is completely inchoate. In re Questions Submitted by United States Dist. Court, 184 Colo. 1, 517 P.2d 1331 (1974).

Property to be transferred is not determined at time of filing. At the time of the filing of the dissolution of marriage action in which the division of property will be later determined, a vesting takes place, and this interest which has vested is inchoate only in the sense that, prior to the division, the property to be transferred to the wife has not yet been determined. In re Questions Submitted by United States Dist. Court, 184 Colo. 1, 517 P.2d 1331 (1974).

At time divorce action is filed there vests in wife her interest in property in name of husband. In re Questions Submitted by United States Dist. Court, 184 Colo. 1, 517 P.2d 1331 (1974).

Justice requires that the joint accumulations of a husband and wife, or property which was acquired during marriage or added to through the joint efforts of both spouses, should be considered for equitable division on termination of the marriage. Kalcevic v. Kalcevic, 156 Colo. 151, 397 P.2d 483 (1964).

Specific circumstances and feelings of each party are appropriate considerations in determining which specific items of property should be sold, or alternatively, distributed to a particular party. In re Woodrum, 618 P.2d 732 (Colo. App. 1980).

Highly relevant factor to be considered by court in effecting just division of marital property is the extent to which the division will promote the objective of providing for each party's financial needs without maintenance. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Value of separate property considered. The court must consider all of the many relevant facets of the situation of the parties, including the value of property set apart to each spouse. In re Lodholm, 35 Colo. App. 411, 536 P.2d 842 (1975).

Upon remand to redistribute marital property, trial court may consider the economic circumstances of each spouse. In re Wells, 850 P.2d 694 (Colo. 1993).

Award of additional $6,000 for "recreational opportunities" for children was fairly embraced within the factors to be considered by court in dividing the marital property and did not create a separate "recreational fund" for the needs of the children. In re Jackson, 698 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985).

Contribution of spouse to acquisition of specific property is not a factor to be considered in determining whether that property is part of the marital estate, but this may be considered in determining the shares allocated to each spouse. In re Carruthers, 40 Colo. App. 278, 577 P.2d 773 (1977).

Decrease in value of separate property. Under subsection (1)(d), the court may consider as a relevant factor in dividing marital property the decrease in the value of separate property. In re Talarico, 36 Colo. App. 389, 540 P.2d 1147 (1975).

When applying subsection (1)(d), the court must consider an increase in the value of separate property without reference to the fact that the increase has just previously been classified as marital property under subsection (4). The trial court did not err in finding that there was an increase in the value of the husband's separate property during the marriage despite the fact that there was an aggregate decrease in the value of such property. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

Value of retirement account considered.

The public employees' retirement association's interest of the husband or his estate is not subject to divestment by death or discharge. At some time, he or his estate must receive, at the very minimum, the amount of accumulated deductions in his individual account. His rights have a presently determinable cash surrender value equal to his salary deductions which otherwise would have been available for the use of the parties during the marriage. Even though the husband's interest in the fund is, by its very nature, incapable of division in kind, the value of that interest was properly taken into account in a marital property division. In re Pope, 37 Colo. App. 237, 544 P.2d 639 (1975).

Because a 401(k) account is a defined contribution plan, the court must determine the marital interest; but unlike a defined benefit plan, it need not consider future appreciation. In re Casias, 962 P.2d 999 (Colo. App. 1998).

When one spouse causes title to be placed jointly with the other spouse, a gift is presumed, and the burden to show otherwise is upon the donor. In re Moncrief v. Moncrief, 36 Colo. App. 140, 535 P.2d 1137 (1975).

Transfer during the marriage by one spouse to both spouses is understood to evidence a transfer to the marital estate in the absence of appropriate evidence that the property was excluded from being marital property by a valid agreement of the parties. The exception from the definition of marital property for any property acquired by gift does not apply to such transfer. In re Stumpf, 932 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where separation agreement has been set aside, property transferred in accordance with the agreement was not excluded from the division of the marital property. In re Bisque, 31 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2001).

Presumption of gift not overcome. Parties' explanation that title to their home was placed in joint tenancy so as to avoid inheritance taxes does not overcome the presumption that a gift occurred; it merely expresses a reason why the gift was made. In re Moncrief v. Moncrief, 36 Colo. App. 140, 535 P.2d 1137 (1975).

Resembles division of property by co-owners rather than conveyance. Transfer of property by husband to his former wife in fulfillment of a property settlement agreement entered into by the parties and approved by the court granting the divorce is a recognition of a "species of common ownership" of the marital estate by the wife resembling a division of property between co-owners and is not a transfer which resembles a conveyance by the husband for the release of an independent obligation owed by him to the wife. Imel v. United States, 375 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1973), aff'd, 523 F.2d 853 (10th Cir. 1975); In re Questions Submitted by United States Dist. Court, 184 Colo. 1, 517 P.2d 1331 (1974).

Property acquired before legal separation deemed marital. Property acquired subsequent to a marriage but after the parties have separated without a decree of legal separation is not excepted from "marital property" by subsection (2). In re Carruthers, 40 Colo. App. 278, 577 P.2d 773 (1977); In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Where parties lived apart for over eleven years without a decree of legal separation or a valid agreement for exclusion of property, property acquired during that period was marital property. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

The presumption that property acquired by either spouse after marriage is marital property may be overcome by establishing that the property in question was acquired by a method listed in subsection (2). Assets not falling with the specific definition of separate property are deemed to be marital in nature subject to equitable division by the court. In re McCadam, 910 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1995); In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where a spouse takes title to property under circumstances that give rise to a resulting trust, that property has not been "acquired" for purposes of subsection (3), and, therefore, the trust property is not part of the marital estate. In re Martinez, 77 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2003).

Appreciation of separate property during the course of the marriage is considered marital property and such increase is subject to division under conditions set forth in this section. In re Fleet, 701 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1985).

Appreciation accrued during period of reconciliation to be shared. The husband is entitled to an equitable share in the total amount of appreciation that accrued during a period of reconciliation after the wife became sole owner of the family home. In re Reeser, 635 P.2d 930 (Colo. App. 1981).

Where trial court failed to determine if there had been commingling of husband's pre-marital assets or if any marital appreciation in any of the trust assets had occurred and should have been included in the estate, property division could not be evaluated to determine whether it was inequitable. In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

Value of marital property sold by a spouse prior to filing of divorce action where spouse kept proceeds for himself is properly considered in dividing marital estate. In re Paulsen, 677 P.2d 1389 (Colo. App. 1984).

Partnership property divided according to spouse's contribution. A trial court's division of partnership property can be based upon the contribution made by each party to the purchase of the property. In re Howard, 42 Colo. App. 457, 600 P.2d 93 (1979).

In order for partnership property to be considered as other than marital property under subsection (2)(d), the parties must have expressly agreed that the partnership assets would not become marital property. Otherwise, the question is one of intent of the parties, to be found as a fact by the trial court. In re Howard, 42 Colo. App. 457, 600 P.2d 93 (1979).

Because husband's partnership interest was vested and mature and not subject to future contingencies, trial court erred when it valued that interest by projecting the value of the partnership to the date of husband's expected retirement rather than the date of the parties' legal separation. In re Nevarez, 170 P.3d 808 (Colo. App. 2007).

Court can award any rights party may have resulting from existence of corporate assets. Although the court cannot award corporate assets to individual parties in a dissolution proceeding, the court can award to a party any rights he may have because of the existence of corporate assets. In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980).

Where husband's rights to commissions arose prior to the date of hearing, they constituted "marital property" and were subject to division. In re Johnson, 40 Colo. App. 250, 576 P.2d 188 (1977).

Money husband received in lieu of retirement benefits upon mandatory separation from Army constituted marital property subject to distribution under the terms of this section. In re Moore, 35 Colo. App. 280, 531 P.2d 995 (1975).

Residence acquired in anticipation of marriage is marital property. Where a family residence is selected and acquired within a few days of the parties' marriage in contemplation of that marriage, and the equity accumulated therein results from contributions by both parties, the court does not err in treating the residence and all equity obtained therein as marital property. In re Altman, 35 Colo. App. 183, 530 P.2d 1012 (1974).

Home purchased with wife's proceeds from sale of home owned prior to marriage is not. In view of evidence that the family home was purchased by the wife with the proceeds of the sale of a home which she owned prior to the marriage, the home was not "marital property" within the meaning of this statute. In re Armbeck, 33 Colo. App. 260, 518 P.2d 300 (1974).

Value of good will of spouse's business deemed marital property. In a division of marital property, the value of good will incident to husband's dental practice, which is an asset acquired during his marriage, must be considered as marital property. In re Nichols, 43 Colo. App. 383, 606 P.2d 1314 (1979).

Funds withdrawn by husband from joint bank account prior to wife's filing of petition for dissolution are "marital property" and should have been taken into account by trial court in making its property distribution, notwithstanding that the wife could not trace the funds after the withdrawal. In re Posinoff, 683 P.2d 377 (Colo. App. 1984).

Personal injury settlement offer, even if just for pain and suffering, is marital property if it arises from an accident which occurred during marriage. In re Fjeldheim, 676 P.2d 1234 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court erred in classifying a claim for personal injury protection (PIP) benefits as a marital asset where a claim had not been submitted to the insurance company as of the date of the hearing. In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Accounts receivable constituted marital property. In re Bayer, 687 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1984).

Appreciation of premarital property which is realized during marriage is subject to division upon dissolution of marriage. In re Van Genderen, 720 P.2d 593 (Colo. App. 1985).

Reorganization under chapter 11 of bankruptcy code does not necessarily establish a business held premaritally by husband as worthless, so that entire sum received from sale of business's subsidiary stock and liquidation of business constituted marital property for purposes of division of property pursuant to dissolution. In re Van Genderen, 720 P.2d 593 (Colo. App. 1985).

Shares in mutual fund were "marital property" subject to equitable division, notwithstanding that funds used to purchase shares may have originally been husband's separate property, where evidence established that husband's intent in purchasing shares was to make a joint investment with wife and that he intended that shares should pass to wife upon his death. In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

Full increase in value of parties' separate property was properly treated as marital property. In re Young, 682 P.2d 1233 (Colo. App. 1984).

Property acquired during first marriage not marital property. Absent evidence of a contrary intent, property acquired during a first marriage between the parties and before their remarriage may not be declared marital property. In re Stedman, 632 P.2d 1048 (Colo. App. 1981).

Spouse's interest in a vested but unmatrued employer-supported pension plan is marital property to the extent such plan has been funded by either employee or employer contributions during the marriage and is, therefore, subject to equitable distribution in dissolution proceeding. In re Grubb, 745 P.2d 661 (Colo. 1987); In re Blake, 807 P.2d 1211 (Colo. App. 1990).

Marital property subject to division does not include property acquired after the dissolution; however, compensation that is deferred until after the dissolution, but fully earned during the marriage, is marital property. In re Vogt, 773 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1989); In re Anderson, 811 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Miller, 888 P.2d 317 (Colo. App. 1994).

Before a trial court can make an equitable distribution of pension rights, it must first determine the present value of such rights. In re Gavito, 794 P.2d 1377 (Colo. App. 1990).

Husband's vested, employer-supported pension plan held to be "marital property". In re Nelson, 746 P.2d 1346 (Colo. 1987); In re Blake, 807 P.2d 1211 (Colo. App. 1990).

Husband's nonvested military pension held to be marital property. In re Beckman, 800 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court did not err in ruling that it had no authority to distribute the military retirement pay that husband received during the year that the parties were separated where there was no evidence presented concerning the amount received during that period nor any evidence that either party had dissipated any funds that had been received. In re Riley-Cunningham, 7 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 1998).

Under the federal Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act, the portion of a military retirement pension that constitutes veterans' disability retirement benefits may not be divided as marital property. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004); In re Warkocz, 141 P.3d 926 (Colo. App. 2006).

In case where service member had attained twenty or more years of service and was eligible for a longevity retirement when placed on the TDRL, an amount equal to the amount of TDRL pay, as calculated based on husband's percentage of disability when he was placed on the TDRL, must be excluded from the marital property. Any amounts in excess of that amount may be divided as marital property. In re Poland, 264 P.3d 647 (Colo. App. 2011).

Colorado state courts are not prohibited from dividing a military pension consisting of nondisability and disability retirement benefits as long as the portion of nondisability benefits is large enough to satisfy the other party's fractional share of the division. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004).

Military retirement benefits subject to distribution as marital property in dissolution of marriage cases are limited to disposable retired pay which, under federal law, excludes disability pay. The exclusion also applies to that portion of a veteran's retirement pay that is computed using the percentage of disability on the date the veteran is placed on the temporary disability retirement list (TDRL). In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because husband was not entitled to a longevity retirement at the time he was placed on the TDRL, no portion of his retirement benefits that is based upon his disability status is distributable to wife pursuant to the parties' separation agreement that required the parties to divide the husband's pension equally according to the time rule formula. In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

Husband's total pay based and computed on his disability is excluded from distribution to wife as marital property, not solely the husband's specific VA benefits. Further, because the husband was not entitled to any retirement benefits but for his disability benefits, it is immaterial that he waived a portion of his disability benefits to receive VA benefits. In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

The nature of husband's disability retirement benefits as marital or nonmarital does not depend on whether the benefits are subject to taxation. Benefits based and computed on husband's disability are nonmarital, even if taxable. In re Williamson, 205 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court was not preempted by federal law from characterizing special separation benefits (SSB) received by former husband upon his voluntary discharge from the Air Force as marital property and from awarding a portion of them to wife. The SSB had more of the characteristics of a deferred compensation plan than a severance payment, and, therefore, constituted marital property subject to distribution. In re McElroy, 905 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1995); In re Heupel, 936 P.2d 561 (Colo. 1997).

SSB benefit paid out after entry of the decree held not to be a "post-decree benefit". Hence, trial court's action in awarding a portion of the benefit to wife as marital property did not constitute a reopening of the decree, but rather an appropriate action to enforce the decree which incorporated the parties' separation agreement. In re Heupel, 936 P.2d 561 (Colo. 1997).

Spouse's election under federal law to receive indivisible veterans' disability benefits and waive divisible military retirement after entry of permanent orders does not divest trial court of jurisdiction in subsequent contempt action to enforce permanent orders. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004); In re Warkocz, 141 P.3d 926 (Colo. App. 2006).

For public policy reasons, military spouse should not be allowed to unilaterally defeat the other spouse's interest in military retirement pay by voluntarily waiving retirement pay in order to receive disability pay. In re Warkocz, 141 P.3d 926 (Colo. App. 2006).

A specific dollar amount need not be set forth in the dissolution decree in order to give the nonmilitary spouse a vested interest in military spouse's retirement benefit. In re Warkocz, 141 P.3d 926 (Colo. App. 2006).

Husband's interest in contingency attorney fees which were earned during the marriage constitutes marital property subject to division. However, any portion of the fees earned after dissolution should be subject to the "reserve jurisdiction method" whereby the trial court retains jurisdiction to distribute payments when the contingent funds are received. In re Vogt, 773 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1989).

An unliquidated personal injury claim is marital property within the meaning of this section. The trial court should consider the actual effect that personal injury had on the marital estate in determining what the equitable share of the claim should be, and the court is required to make specific findings supporting the division of such claim. In re Fields, 779 P.2d 1371 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 781 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1989).

Assets which consist of amounts received in settlement of husband's personal injury claim and wife's loss of consortium claim are marital property and should be distributed by the court after consideration of the needs and circumstances of the parties. In re Simon, 856 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1993).

Stock options owned by husband at the time of marriage but exercised during the marriage using marital funds are presumed to be marital property in the absence of a showing that husband used separate property, such as money he received from an inheritance, to exercise the options. In re Renier, 854 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1993).

Husband's right to severance pay as a substitute for a loss of future wages does not constitute marital property. In re Holmes, 841 P.2d 388 (Colo. App. 1992).

To the extent an employee stock option is granted in consideration of past services, the option may constitute marital property when granted. On the other hand, an employee stock option granted in consideration of future services does not constitute marital property until the employee has performed those future services. In re Miller, 915 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1996).

Restricted stock options constitute marital property in their entirety where they represent a form of deferred compensation because husband had already earned the right to receive those shares. That husband's full enjoyment of the benefit is conditioned on his remaining an employee affects the present value of the restricted stock shares, not their marital nature. In re Miller, 915 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1996).

A trial court has discretion to apply the "time rule" formula to the division of stock options acquired during the marriage or to reserve jurisdiction to distribute the stock options if and when they are exercised. In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Employee stock options constitute property only when the employee has a presently enforceable right to the options, regardless of whether the options are presently exercisable. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001); In re Powell, 220 P.3d 952 (Colo. App. 2009).

Issue of "vesting" of employee stock options not determinative in ascertaining whether interest in employee stock options constitutes marital property. Rather, an employee stock option constitutes marital property for purposes of dissolution proceedings when an employee has an enforceable right to the options, regardless of whether the options are presently exercisable. In re Powell, 220 P.3d 952 (Colo. App. 2009).

Although wife's employment the year prior to issuance of the stock options may have been an eligibility requirement for the stock options, such employment did not, without more, confer any enforceable property right under the stock option plan. Wife had a mere expectancy and no property right in the stock options prior to the actual grant of the stock options after the date of the marriage. Therefore, no portion of the employee stock options were the wife's separate property, and wife did not "earn" any portion of the stock options prior to marriage. In re Powell, 220 P.3d 952 (Colo. App. 2009).

Public employees' retirement association (PERA) disability benefit prior to age 65 replaces future earnings and does not constitute marital property. In re Hansen, 62 P.3d 1066 (Colo. App. 2002).

When disabled employee reaches the age of 65, the portion of PERA benefits attributable to years of service before disability constitutes marital property, and the balance remains separate property. Regardless of employee's recovery or work status, the benefits, excluding the unearned service credit projected until age 65, are more akin to retirement benefits. In re Hansen, 62 P.3d 1066 (Colo. App. 2002).

Future disability income of husband based upon disability insurance purchased during marriage with marital funds is marital property. In re Simon, 856 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court erred in setting apart to wife as her separate property the portions of investment traceable to income generated from trust. In re Footitt, 903 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1995).

Mechanism employed by the court for dividing the marital estate is a matter within the trial court's discretion. In re Dickey, 658 P.2d 276 (Colo. App. 1982).

Property order not terminable upon remarriage. Court order constituting an adjustment of property rights between a former husband and wife did not terminate upon remarriage of wife. Greer v. Greer, 32 Colo. App. 196, 510 P.2d 905 (1973).

Share of marital estate contingent on remaining alive. Court cannot make a portion of husband's share of the marital estate contingent on his remaining alive. In re Paulsen, 677 P.2d 1389 (Colo. App. 1984).

Home to spouse with child custody. Subsection (1)(c) makes it clear that it is desirable to award the family home to the spouse having custody of the children. In re Anderson, 37 Colo. App. 55, 541 P.2d 1274 (1975).

Subsection (3) provides that possession of title is not dispositive of the method of distribution of marital property. In re Thompson, 39 Colo. App. 400, 568 P.2d 98 (1977).

Intent evidenced that property no longer in joint tenancy. An order for the sale of marital property and distribution of the proceeds evidences an intent that the property is no longer to be held in joint tenancy. Gaskie v. Hugins, 640 P.2d 248 (Colo. App. 1981).

Order charging husband with selling property within one year effectively divided the marital property as of the date of the decree. In re Weaver, 39 Colo. App. 523, 571 P.2d 307 (1977).

Court ordered conveyance of separate property to wife or sale of both non-marital and marital property is violative of statute unless there is no other way to value and divide the property equitably. In re Sarvis, 695 P.2d 772 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where the husband's expenditures and labor enabled the wife to invest a considerable percentage of her income, they should be considered as contributions to the increase in their joint, and her several, property. Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971).

Promissory note between the husband and wife and the principal due thereunder, being property acquired in exchange for property acquired prior to the marriage, were correctly treated as wife's separate property. Accrued interest should be treated as marital property and the interest payable as a marital debt, while interest accruing after the date of the decree is the wife's separate property. In re McCadam, 910 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1995).

Unless promissory notes demonstrate an intent that interest be treated as separate property, the interest accruing during the marriage is a marital asset, and any interest due at the time of the dissolution of the marriage is a marital debt. In re Lewis, 66 P.3d 204 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court lacked jurisdiction over the securities owned by the parties' children. However, trial court may consider the securities as a factor in determining how to allocate between the parties any marital debt related to the children's education. In re Gorman, 36 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2001).

G. After-acquired Property.

A trial court, in ordering a division of property, cannot award to the divorced wife a share in property which might be acquired by the ex-husband after the order for a division of property has been made. Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964).

Courts cannot divide property acquired after hearing or decree. Although courts must divide property on the basis of conditions existing at the date of the hearing or decree, they cannot consider the division of property which the parties may acquire afterwards. In re Johnson, 40 Colo. App. 250, 576 P.2d 188 (1977).

A trial court cannot award to one spouse in a dissolution a share in property which might be acquired by the other spouse after the order for division of property has been made. In re Ward, 657 P.2d 979 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court can allow wife to use husband's separate property if husband waived or intentionally relinquished the right to sole ownership of that separate property. Court, however, could not convey any ownership attributes of that property to wife. In re Ikeler, 148 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 161 P.3d 663 (Colo. 2007).

III. VALUATION OF PROPERTY.

Law reviews. For article, "Valuation of Businesses in Colorado Divorces", see 32 Colo. Law. 73 (June 2003). For article, "Business Valuations in Light of Thornhill", see 38 Colo. Law. 77 (August 2009).

Market value of real property in dispute is standard adopted by the general assembly. In re Lord, 626 P.2d 698 (Colo. App. 1980), appeal dismissed, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982).

Necessity of finding current value of all property. Generally, in making a division of property, the court must find the approximate current value of all property owned by the parties, as well as the value of separate property at the time of the marriage or at the time of acquisition, if after marriage. However, where the court determines the percentage ownership each party has in the marital property, and that percentage is not an issue on appeal, the failure to make such findings of current value is not necessarily erroneous. In re Weaver, 39 Colo. App. 523, 571 P.2d 307 (1977).

This section expressly requires that property be valued as of the date of the dissolution of the marriage or as of the date of the hearing on disposition of the property if such hearing precedes the date of dissolution. This provision is mandatory, and the only exception is that the marital property dissipated before dissolution of the marriage can be valued as of the date the property last existed. In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995); In re Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996); In re Lockwood, 971 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1998).

The trial court did not have discretion to create, for equitable purposes, a fictitious date of dissolution for purposes of calculating the wife's share of the husband's military pension. In re Lockwood, 971 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1998).

Court's discretion in determining property valuation date. This section gives the trial court broad discretion in matters of property division, including determination of the property valuation date for division of marital property. Gaskie v. Hugins, 640 P.2d 248 (Colo. App. 1981).

Court's valuation was sufficiently supported by evidence of parties' agreement as to value of lot, wife's response to husband's request for admission of current market value of property, and verified financial statements and proposed final orders submitted by both parties. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Valuation on the date of dissolution based on an earlier agreement does not abuse court's discretion, where trial court was fully appraised of its duty to value the disputed lot as of the date of dissolution. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Subsequent testimony to the valuation as of the date of dissolution which concerned the value of the disputed lot was not sufficient as a matter of law to overcome documentary evidence to the contrary. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Stipulated values not binding. Where the trial court has determined that fairness and equity require that the division be an equal one, the stipulated values set 10 years before are neither binding nor relevant. Gaskie v. Hugins, 640 P.2d 248 (Colo. App. 1981).

However, parties' agreement as to the value nine months before the date of dissolution was not outdated and irrelevant to court's determination of real estate's value. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court is not bound by partnership agreement in determining value of law practice. Where partnership agreement was designed to discourage partners from leaving firm and it appeared husband intended to stay with firm, court was free to use an alternate valuation method such as the excess earnings method. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Because husband's partnership interest was vested and mature and not subject to future contingencies, trial court erred when it valued that interest by projecting the value of the partnership to the date of husband's expected retirement rather than the date of the parties' legal separation. In re Nevarez, 170 P.3d 308 (Colo. App. 2007).

Excess earnings method is a generally accepted method for determining the present value of a person's interest in a business, representing both tangible assets and goodwill. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Excess earnings method did not result in "double dipping" by wife awarded maintenance as well as a portion of present value of husband's interest in law practice. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Weight to be accorded to the valuation techniques of an expert is for the trial court's determination, depending upon the court's assessment of the reliability of the data in a particular case. In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993); In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

Decision as to which valuation method to rely on is a factual determination to be made by the trial court. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992); In re Page, 70 P.3d 579 (Colo. App. 2003).

Marketability discount may be applied in determining value of husband's business where court determines that failure to do so would unfairly penalize husband for ownership of shares that cannot be readily sold or liquidated. The court must make a clear record of the reasons for applying a given discount rate. In re Thornhill, 200 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 232 P.3d 782 (Colo. 2010).

It was within the trial court's discretion to accept wife's opinion of value as an owner of the marital residence, which opinion was partially based upon her extensive knowledge of the property, a heightened awareness of its value, and the valuations provided to her. In re Lewis, 66 P.3d 204 (Colo. App. 2003).

Goodwill is a property or asset which supplements the earning capacity of another asset, business, or a profession, and, therefore, is not the earning capacity itself. In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

The value of goodwill in an ongoing physical therapy practice is properly measured by arriving at a present value based upon past results and not by accounting for the postmarital efforts of the professional spouse. In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Identification, valuation, and division of husband's "good will" as a portion of his physical therapy practice did not divide husband's future income. In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Trial court erred in failing to credit wife with the value of her interest in a medical practice as a marital asset. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

The conservation of the principal of an estate is, in itself, a valuable contribution which should be considered. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

When determining the present value of a vested interest in a trust that is subject to divestment based on a condition subsequent, a variety of circumstances should be considered, including actuarial information concerning the life expectancy of the life estate beneficiary and information concerning the future distributions to that beneficiary. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

In disposing of a vested but unmaturred pension plan, the principles of fairness and equity must attend the valuation process, and the contingencies underlying the particular pension plan must be taken into account. In re McGinnis, 778 P.2d 282 (Colo. App. 1989).

Valuation of undisclosed assets. Once property has been divided pursuant to this section, such property becomes akin to separate property, and any increase in the value of ownership interest therein should be considered when determining valuation. The failure to do so constitutes a confiscatory taking. In re Hiner, 710 P.2d 488 (Colo. 1985).

Increase in value of separate property after dissolution of marriage is necessarily separate. In re Campbell, 43 Colo. App. 72, 599 P.2d 275 (1979).

The amount by which the present value of an asset of a spouse acquired before the marriage exceeds its value at the time of the marriage constitutes a marital asset. In re Burford, 950 P.2d 682 (Colo. App. 1997).

In carrying out the division of the marital estate, the dissolution court should first add to the marital estate the amount of increase during the course of the marriage, if any, in each asset that was owned by each party before marriage. If an asset suffered a decrease in value, it should be disregarded in calculating the overall value of a spouse's separate property. Then the court should consider whether the overall value of the spouse's entire separate property has increased or decreased for the purpose of dividing the marital estate. In re Burford, 950 P.2d 682 (Colo. App. 1997).

Although the assets paid off by husband may not have increased in fair market value, husband's use of marital funds to pay off his separate debts substantially increased his equity in his separate property and must be considered in the property division. It is not necessary that the spouse produce a marital "asset" capable of being divided when marital funds are used to pay off one spouse's premarital debts. It is sufficient that the spouse paying off or paying down the separate property received a benefit from the marital income such as increased equity in its own property. The court should consider the benefit as an economic circumstance. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

When debts have already been paid, they may be allocated in the property division through reimbursement. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

Debts incurred during the marriage but which are dissolution litigation costs should be allocated pursuant to § 14-10-119. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

In the case of a pension plan inaccessible prior to the employee's distant retirement and terminable upon the employee's death, the risk of forfeiture is an important factor for the trial court to consider. In such a case it would be inequitable to require an immediate, lump-sum payment unless the present value included the risk of forfeiture as a factor. In re McGinnis, 778 P.2d 281 (Colo. App. 1989).

Vested but unmaturred pension benefits are marital property not subject to inflexible rules of property valuation. Combination of deferred distribution and reserve jurisdiction valuation based on earliest possible retirement date for husband with full benefits proper where husband was not currently entitled to retirement benefits. In re Kelm, 878 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 912 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

No basis for reversal despite court error in valuing wife's vested but unmatured PERA retirement fund. Because PERA combines elements of defined benefit and defined contribution plans, it was error for the court to base the present value of the wife's PERA account purely upon her contributions as of the date of dissolution. A proper determination of present value required the application of a series of actuarial and investment assumptions relating to the wife's life expectancy and probable retirement age to the contractual or statutorily awarded benefit. However, because husband acquiesced in this error and failed to present any evidence at trial as to the value of wife's PERA pension and because he made no objection or argument challenging wife's valuation during the permanent orders hearing, there is no basis for reversal. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

Unvested, unmatured, noncontributory defined benefit pension plans are affected by different contingencies from those where plans are vested. In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995).

Three methods of distribution are at court's disposal in order to divide a pension plan upon dissolution: (1) Net present value; (2) deferred distribution; and (3) reserve jurisdiction. In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995).

"Time rule" formula, used to apportion pension benefits under the net present value and deferred distribution methods, described in In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995).

"Subtraction method" disapproved. Under the net present value method of distributing a pension plan, trial court's procedure of subtracting the present value of the husband's pension at the time of the marriage from the present value of the husband's pension at the time of the dissolution represented an abuse of discretion because, under the circumstances, this procedure grossly overstated the wife's share. In re James, 950 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court had discretion to use subtraction method instead of the time-rule formula where the value of the trust was unrelated to any efforts taken by wife or husband, post-dissolution enhancements were irrelevant, and the wife failed to explain why the time-rule formula would produce a more accurate and fair apportionment of the trust interest. In re Dale, 87 P.3d 219 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court is not preempted from using the net present value method to distribute an unmatured military pension. In re Riley-Cunningham, 7 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in offsetting the net present values of the parties' military pensions and making a present distribution of the respective pensions, even though husband was retired from active duty while wife was not entitled to retire immediately and was still on active reserve. In re Riley-Cunningham, 7 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 1998).

Court did not err by distributing husband's railroad retirement benefits using the net present value method. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

However, trial court is required to apply the coverture fraction, the accepted means of calculating the marital share of a pension, by multiplying the present value of the pension by the number of years or months that benefits accumulated during the marriage and dividing by the total number of years or months that benefits accumulated. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court should have considered actuarial information concerning the life expectancy of husband's parents and relevant information concerning the likelihood that trustee would invade the trust corpus in the future in determining the net present value of a vested interest in a trust that is subject to divestment on a condition subsequent. In re Mohrlang, 85 P.3d 561 (Colo. App. 2003).

Post-divorce pension enhancements are not necessarily separate property. Although post-divorce earnings are undisputably separate property, pension enhancements are subject to application of the "time rule" formula and may be apportioned. In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995).

Economic fault may be considered by the trial court when it is dividing marital assets. In re Jorgenson, 143 P.3d 1169 (Colo. App. 2006).

"Economic fault" concept rejected as a factor in distribution of post-divorce pension enhancements. In re Hunt, 909 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1995).

Court is not required to value or divide the parties' respective retirement plans by any set method so long as the division is equitable. No error in awarding wife the entire contribution she had made to a Public Employee Retirement Account where the benefits from such contribution were significantly less than husband's retirement benefits. In re Kelm, 878 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 912 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

Court may retain jurisdiction over the distribution and valuation of stock options so that each party will "share in the risk of the fate of each of the options." In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

Wife entitled to amount of husband's retirement funds, in the event of his death, only to extent of contributions made as of the date of dissolution. In re Kelm, 878 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 912 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

An obligation to guarantee the debt of another should not be considered in a property valuation when the chance of liability is so small as to be speculative. If there is a quantifiable likelihood of liability, the obligation should be valued at its face amount times the percentage chance of liability. In re Jorgenson, 143 P.3d 1169 (Colo. App. 2006).

Just as a court is required to allocate the contingent value of assets in pensions and trusts, it must similarly determine the value of a contingent marital debt. It may do so in one of two ways: (1) Determine, on the basis of testimony, the potential obligation, discounted to reflect the percentage of liability; or (2) otherwise divide the marital assets and debts, reserving jurisdiction to allocate the contingent marital debt until such time as the amount of such contingent debt has been determined. In re Jorgenson, 143 P.3d 1169 (Colo. App. 2006).

"Seller's costs". The trial court did not err in not deducting normal seller's costs from the value of the home when it purported to split between the parties the remaining equity in the home because "seller's costs" were speculative at best. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 188 Colo. 423, 535 P.2d 1122 (1975).

Husband not entitled to share in the future appreciation of the home because property is valued at the dissolution hearing or property division hearing. In re Wornell, 697 P.2d 812 (Colo. App. 1985).

Loss apportioned. The trial court may apportion a loss in value of separate property between the parties. In re Talarico, 36 Colo. App. 389, 540 P.2d 1147 (1975).

Conclusion that parties did not contribute to enhancement of stock proper. Since investment patterns of persons in a situation similar to a particular married couple is not a matter of common knowledge, and therefore, comparisons of the investments in the wife's portfolio to those of some hypothetical average investor or a skilled investment counselor were merely speculation, it was proper for the trial court to conclude on the basis of such observations that neither party contributed to enhancement of the value of the stocks. In re Wildin, 39 Colo. App. 189, 563 P.2d 384 (1977).

Valuation of intangible assets of husband's business. In determining the intangible value of husband's business, the important consideration is whether husband's business has a value to him above and beyond the tangible assets. In re Martin, 707 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1985); In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Spouse was not entitled to any increase in value of assets awarded to her from the date of the decree to the date the permanent orders were entered where the decree was entered prior to the date of the hearing on disposition of property. In re Graff, 902 P.2d 402 (Colo. App. 1994).

Specific determination of the nature and elements of goodwill may be required when court orders one party to execute a covenant not to compete for protection of the goodwill of a business awarded to the other party. In re Fischer, 834 P.2d 270 (Colo. App. 1992).

Central to the valuation of property is the determination whether the property will actually be sold, thereby resulting in a net equity. The court should consider husband's intentions as to whether he will sell the property at issue, and if the property is to be sold, the finding of net equity must comport with the evidence. In re Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996).

In case of dissipation of property, trial court's alternative ruling that stock shares could be valued at the time when they were sold, if that value was higher than the value on the date of the decree, was proper. In re Huston, 967 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not err in valuing a leased automobile at $13,500, where husband had recently prepaid $13,500 on the lease of the leased vehicle. In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Subsection (5) makes no provision regarding the date on which interest should begin to accrue on any sum ordered to be paid as part of the division of marital property. In re Rodrick, 176 P.3d 806 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applied in In re Thompson, 706 P.2d 428 (Colo. App. 1985).

IV. SCOPE OF REVIEW.

Scope of review. Division of property in dissolution of marriage proceedings may only be overturned upon a finding that the trial court abused its discretion. In re Talarico, 36 Colo. App. 389, 540 P.2d 1147 (1975); In re Sharp, 823 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1991).

An appellate court will alter a division of property only if the trial court abuses its discretion. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977).

One who has accepted benefits of judgment may not seek reversal of that judgment on appeal. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Acceptance of the benefits of a judgment constitutes a waiver of appeal rights only if such action is inconsistent with the basis for the appeal. It is when the appeal, if successful, will again put into issue the right of the party to receive the benefits already accepted that a waiver of the right to appeal has been found. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

Husband is not barred from appealing portion of the property division where he had previously received his share of the retirement funds pursuant to the parties' agreement before the hearing on permanent orders. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

A trial court having reached its conclusions and entered its order and judgment on documentary evidence alone, the supreme court was as well qualified to determine the equities involved in a divorce action concerning a division of the property of the parties as was the trial court, and under such circumstances, presumptions in favor of the correctness of the order and judgment were not conclusive. Stephenson v. Stephenson, 134 Colo. 96, 299 P.2d 1095 (1956).

In an action for divorce, where the questions presented to the appellate court for review concern only the property rights of the parties, matters relating to the divorce were not considered. Wigton v. Wigton, 73 Colo. 337, 216 P. 1055 (1923).

Where the reporter's transcript of the testimony taken at a hearing on division of property in a divorce action was not included in the record on error, the supreme court assumed that the trial court had before it the entire situation of the parties, that the evidence before the court fully supported the determination made, and that all conflicting claims of the parties were properly resolved. Gier v. Gier, 139 Colo. 289, 339 P.2d 677 (1959).

Where a decree ordering the title to property to remain in joint tenancy and granting the rights of possession and income in the property to the wife was not challenged, and had long since become final, the supreme court could not review it. McDonald v. McDonald, 150 Colo. 492, 374 P.2d 690 (1962).

Under the law of the case doctrine, conclusions of an appellate court on issues presented to it, as well as rulings logically necessary to sustain such conclusions, become the law of the case and generally must be followed in subsequent proceedings in that case. However, application of the law of the case by a trial court to its property division rulings entered prior to an appeal is a discretionary rule of practice. The trial court's original permanent orders lose any binding effect or precedential value when they are reversed on appeal. In re Burford, 26 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2001).

V. ENFORCEMENT.

Enforcement of property settlement. Ordering the payment of an amount due pursuant to the terms of the property settlement, together with interest, is an enforcement of the original decree and not a modification of the property settlement. In re Schutte, 721 P.2d 160 (Colo. App. 1986).

14-10-114. Maintenance. (1) Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds that the economic lives of spouses are frequently closely intertwined in marriage and that it is often impossible to later segregate the respective decisions and contributions of the spouses. The general assembly further finds that when a dissolution of marriage or legal separation action has been filed and temporary orders are to be determined pursuant to section 14-10-108, it is generally appropriate to utilize the period of temporary orders as a period of adjustment during which the marital arrangements of the parties may be recognized through a temporary blending of the parties' incomes. Accordingly, the general assembly declares that for purposes of temporary orders, it is appropriate in most cases to apply a presumptive formula to the determination of temporary maintenance.

(2) (a) In every proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation when temporary maintenance is requested by a party and when the combined annual gross income of the two parties is seventy-five thousand dollars or less, there shall be a rebuttable presumption in favor of a specific award of temporary maintenance from the higher income party to the lower income party based upon the formula set forth in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2). In those cases in which the combined annual gross income of the parties exceeds seventy-five thousand dollars, the court may award a monthly amount of temporary maintenance pursuant to the provisions of subsections (3) and (4) of this section.

(b) (I) (A) The monthly amount of temporary maintenance in cases in which the parties' combined annual gross income is seventy-five thousand dollars or less shall be equal to forty percent of the higher income party's monthly adjusted gross income less fifty percent of the lower income party's monthly adjusted gross income. If the remainder of such calculation is the number zero or a negative number, the presumption shall be that temporary maintenance shall not be awarded. If the remainder of such calculation is more than zero, that amount shall be the amount of the monthly temporary maintenance.

(B) In any action to establish or modify temporary maintenance pursuant to this subsection (2), the formula set forth in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I) shall be used as a rebuttable presumption for the establishment or modification of the amount of temporary maintenance. Courts shall deviate from the formula where its application would be inequitable or unjust. Any such deviation shall be accompanied by written or oral findings by the court specifying the reasons for the deviation and the presumed amount under the formula without deviation.

(C) The parties may agree in writing to waive temporary maintenance under this subsection (2) where one party is otherwise entitled to temporary maintenance under the formula or the parties may agree in writing to deviate from the presumptive amount of temporary maintenance. Any such agreement to waive temporary maintenance or to deviate from the presumptive amount shall include the reason or consideration for the waiver or deviation. The court shall have jurisdiction to review such agreement and to decline to approve such agreement if the court determines that the agreement is unconscionable.

(II) At the time of the initial establishment of temporary maintenance pursuant to this subsection (2), or in any proceeding to modify a temporary maintenance order pursuant to this subsection (2), if a party is under an obligation to pay maintenance or alimony pursuant to a prior valid court order, an adjustment shall be made revising such party's income by the amount of such maintenance or alimony actually paid prior to calculating the amount of temporary maintenance.

(III) At the time of the initial establishment of temporary maintenance pursuant to this subsection (2), or in any proceeding to modify a temporary maintenance order pursuant to this subsection (2), if a party is legally responsible for the support of other children who are not the children of the parties and for whom the parties do not share joint legal responsibility, an adjustment shall be made revising such party's income by the amount of such child support paid prior to calculating the amount of temporary maintenance.

(IV) (A) For purposes of this section, "income" shall have the same meaning as that term is described in section 14-10-115 (3).

(B) For purposes of calculating the formula set forth in this paragraph (b), "monthly adjusted gross income" means gross income less preexisting maintenance or alimony obligations actually paid by a party as described in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) and less the amount of child support paid by a party, as described in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (b).

(c) The period of time covered by any temporary maintenance ordered pursuant to this subsection (2), upon the request of a party, shall begin at the time of the parties' physical separation or filing of the petition or service upon the respondent, whichever occurs last, taking into consideration payments made by either party during such period.

(d) Because spousal maintenance awards entered at temporary orders pursuant to this subsection (2) are made under different standards and for different reasons than spousal maintenance awards entered at permanent orders, the temporary maintenance formula set forth in this subsection (2) shall not be used for the determination of spousal maintenance orders to be entered at permanent orders and any temporary maintenance order entered pursuant to this subsection (2) shall not prejudice the rights of either party at permanent orders.

(e) After determining the presumptive amount of temporary maintenance pursuant to this subsection (2) and the amount of temporary child support pursuant to section 14-10-115, the court shall consider the respective financial resources of each party and determine the temporary payment of marital debt and the temporary allocation of marital property.

(3) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation or a proceeding for maintenance following dissolution of marriage by a court, the court may grant a temporary maintenance order when the parties' combined annual gross income is more than seventy-five thousand dollars or a maintenance order at the time of permanent orders for either spouse only if it finds that the spouse seeking maintenance:

(a) Lacks sufficient property, including marital property apportioned to him or her, to provide for his or her reasonable needs; and

(b) Is unable to support himself or herself through appropriate employment or is the custodian of a child whose condition or circumstances make it appropriate that the custodian not be required to seek employment outside the home.

(4) A temporary maintenance order in those circumstances in which the parties' combined annual gross income is more than seventy-five thousand dollars or a maintenance order entered at the time of permanent orders shall be in such amounts and for such periods of time as the court deems just, without regard to marital misconduct, and after considering all relevant factors including:

(a) The financial resources of the party seeking maintenance, including marital property apportioned to such party, and the party's ability to meet his or her needs independently, including the extent to which a provision for support of a child living with the party includes a sum for that party;

(b) The time necessary to acquire sufficient education or training to enable the party seeking maintenance to find appropriate employment and that party's future earning capacity;

(c) The standard of living established during the marriage;

(d) The duration of the marriage;

(e) The age and the physical and emotional condition of the spouse seeking maintenance; and

(f) The ability of the spouse from whom maintenance is sought to meet his or her needs while meeting those of the spouse seeking maintenance.

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-114 is similar to repealed § 46-1-5 (1)(d), C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-5, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, § 8, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Any award of maintenance to a spouse in Colorado is a personal statutory right and not a property right. In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001), aff'd, 285 B.R. 8 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2002), aff'd, 346 F.3d 1239 (10th Cir. 2003).

The spirit of this section was comprehensive enough to cover a case where there might be some question as to whether a marriage was one de jure, provided there was a marriage de facto. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 29 Colo. 295, 68 P. 237 (1902).

Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act provides separate sections that govern the different elements of a dissolution order, specifically property disposition, maintenance, child support, and attorney fees. The court is required to make separate orders regarding these elements based on separate considerations and may not commingle one element with another. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

There is a distinction between maintenance awards and property settlements. Property divisions are intended to accomplish a just apportionment of marital property over time, whereas maintenance is intended to be a substitute for marital support that can be used, for example, to ease a spouse's transition into the work force and prevent the spouse from becoming dependent on public assistance. In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Division of property is mandatory under § 14-10-113, whereas an award of maintenance is discretionary under this section. In re Wise, 264 B.R. 701 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001).

Maintenance used to balance equities. A trial court may use an award of maintenance as a tool to balance equities and compensate a spouse whose work has enabled the other spouse to obtain an education; however, this tool is available for use only where the spouse seeking maintenance meets the statutory threshold requirements of need. In re McVey, 641 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1981).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that it would be equitable in view of the division of property for the income of husband and wife to be relatively equal. In re Martin, 707 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1985).

The divorce decree was the principal thing and the judgment for alimony was incidental, and whether they were entered separately or together, they were treated as part of the same decree. Miller v. Miller, 129 Colo. 462, 271 P.2d 411 (1954).

Matters of maintenance and property division are inextricably interwoven. In re McVey, 641 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1981).

It was well-established in Colorado that the courts viewed the testimony in alimony and property settlement matters in the light most favorable to the prevailing party. Gleason v. Gleason, 162 Colo. 212, 425 P.2d 688 (1967).

Alimony was defined generally as payments necessary for food, clothing, habitation, and other necessities for the support of the wife. Magarrell v. Magarrell, 144 Colo. 228, 355 P.2d 946 (1960).

Insurance policies and the premiums necessary to maintain them in full force were not in any sense to provide for food, clothing, habitation, or other necessities for the support of the wife. Magarrell v. Magarrell, 144 Colo. 228, 355 P.2d 946 (1960).

An award to the wife of the use, possession, and income of the real estate did not constitute an award of alimony, because the right to use and possession and the income of real property were but incidents of the ownership of that property. McDonald v. McDonald, 150 Colo. 492, 374 P.2d 690 (1962).

When parties availed themselves of the good offices of the court to fix the amounts of alimony to be paid from time to time and themselves changed the action from one for separate maintenance to one for divorce, it was assumed that they submitted themselves to the jurisdiction of the court for the entry of such orders as it deemed just and fair in accordance. Gavette v. Gavette, 104 Colo. 71, 88 P.2d 964 (1939).

Where the parties made a good faith although unsuccessful attempt at reconciliation and where the husband supported the family during this time, the support paid and contributed by the husband constituted payment of the maintenance installments accruing during the period they were living together. In re Peterson, 40 Colo. App. 115, 572 P.2d 849 (1977).

II. AWARD OF MAINTENANCE.

A. Prerequisites.

Maintenance must be requested in petition. Under the uniform act, maintenance must be requested in the petition for dissolution. In re Boyd, 643 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1982).

Property division must precede consideration of maintenance. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981). In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Application of subsection (1)(a) presupposes dividing marital property after setting apart separate property. The application of subsection (1)(a) presupposes that the court has first set apart to each spouse his or her respective separate property and has divided the marital property. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Alimony being consequent upon obtaining a divorce, there could be no judgment for alimony without a divorce decree, though they may have been and generally were entered together, the incident could not exist without the principal. Miller v. Miller, 129 Colo. 462, 271 P.2d 411 (1954).

Where no cause of action was stated in a complaint for divorce, no allowance of alimony or attorney fees could have been made. Oates v. Oates, 72 Colo. 195, 210 P. 325 (1922).

No personal judgment for alimony could be entered against the husband where service was by publication, but such alimony could be made a charge on land over which the court acquired jurisdiction by such service. Fowler v. Fowler, 74 Colo. 231, 220 P. 988 (1923).

Awards of maintenance are non-dischargeable in bankruptcy and the question of whether a domestic obligation is in the nature of maintenance must be determined based on federal bankruptcy standards, taking into account the substance of the obligation and the intent of the parties at the time of dissolution. In re Wilson, 888 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1994).

The parties' designation of a debt in the decree of dissolution as either a maintenance award that is non-dischargeable in bankruptcy or a property settlement that is dischargeable is not dispositive and in determining the intent of the parties and the substance of the obligation, the trial court must look beyond the language of the decree and may consider extrinsic evidence. In re Wilson, 888 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court improperly found that husband's obligation to pay a street improvement debt was a nondischargeable lump sum maintenance obligation since, although an obligation to pay such a debt can be in the nature of maintenance, there was no evidence in the record that the parties intended that the obligation be in the nature of maintenance. In re Wilson, 888 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1994).

B. Determination of Right or Need for Maintenance.

This section leaves to the trial court the determination under the particular facts of each case whether to award alimony. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

This section does not compel a court to grant alimony in a divorce case; it is merely permissive. Schleiger v. Schleiger, 137 Colo. 279, 324 P.2d 370 (1958); Int'l. Trust Co. v. Liebhardt, 111 Colo. 208, 139 P.2d 264 (1943).

Alimony could be waived, and the right to seek alimony could be surrendered for a valuable consideration. Newey v. Newey, 161 Colo. 395, 421 P.2d 464, 422 P.2d 641 (1966).

Court must make findings of fact which demonstrate the basis of its award of maintenance. In re Laychak, 704 P.2d 874 (Colo. App. 1985).

Evidence relevant to issue of "need". While evidence that husband allegedly inflicted the injuries which resulted in wife's medical expenses and decreased her earning capacity is irrelevant, evidence of wife's medical expenses and earning capacity are relevant to establishing statutory requirements of need and trial court's exclusion of such evidence adversely affected wife's rights regarding maintenance. In re Hulse, 727 P.2d 876 (Colo. App. 1986).

Determination of spouse's reasonable needs depends on the particular facts and circumstances of the parties' marriage, and court should consider the reasonable expectations of the parties in determining whether the a party should be granted maintenance. In re Marshall, 781 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 794 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1990).

The wife is not required to consume her portion of the marital property before being entitled to maintenance. In re Eller, 38 Colo. App. 74, 552 P.2d 30 (1976); In re Sewell, 817 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1991); In re Nordahl, 834 P.2d 838 (Colo. App. 1992); In re Bartolo, 971 P.2d 699 (Colo. App. 1998).

A court awarding maintenance need not make explicit findings that the wife has insufficient property to meet reasonable needs or is unable to support herself through appropriate employment. In re Lee, 781 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1989).

All that is required is that the court consider the wife's share of the marital property in arriving at its maintenance award. In re Eller, 38 Colo. App. 74, 552 P.2d 30 (1976).

In determining whether to award maintenance, the court must make a threshold determination that the spouse requesting it lacks sufficient property, including marital property, to provide for her reasonable needs and is unable to support herself through appropriate employment. In re Renier, 854 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1993); In re Fisher, 931 P.2d 558 (Colo. App. 1996); In re Bartolo, 971 P.2d 699 (Colo. App. 1998); In re Rose, 134 P.3d 559 (Colo. App. 2006).

In making threshold inquiry into a party's entitlement to temporary maintenance, trial court may consider the parties' standard of living during the marriage. The ability of a party to meet his or her reasonable needs through appropriate employment is dependent upon the particular facts and circumstances of the marriage and the expectations established during the marriage. In re Thornhill, 232 P.3d 782 (Colo. 2010).

The trial court properly determined questions of alimony and support basing its findings on the financial conditions, abilities, and needs of the parties as they appeared at the time of the hearing rather than on what those conditions might have been in the past or may be in the future. Watson v. Watson, 135 Colo. 296, 310 P.2d 554 (1957).

Because an award of permanent alimony must be based upon the circumstances existing at the time of the hearing thereon, including, but not limited to, the duration of the marriage, the financial condition of the parties, their needs and their abilities. Boyer v. Boyer, 148 Colo. 535, 366 P.2d 661 (1961).

Highly relevant factor to be considered by court in effecting just division of marital property is the extent to which the division will promote the objective of providing for each party's financial needs without maintenance. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Fact that parties are in debt and having serious financial problems at time of dissolution does not preclude a nominal award of maintenance, if there is reason to believe that one party may rebound financially and may again be in the position to assist the other spouse in obtaining a standard of living nearer to that enjoyed during their marriage. In re Fernstrum, 820 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1991).

Under subsection (1)(a) propriety of award of maintenance depends upon the inadequacy of the property and earning capacity possessed by the party seeking the award. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981); In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987).

Husband's rights in discretionary trust are to be considered as "economic circumstance" of the husband in determining a just division of the marital property pursuant to § 14-10-113 (1)(c) and as a "relevant factor" in making an award of maintenance under subsection (2). In re Rosenblum, 43 Colo. App. 144, 602 P.2d 892 (1979).

Contribution to education of spouse. Among the relevant factors to be considered in a division of marital property is the contribution of the spouse seeking maintenance to the education of the other spouse from whom the maintenance is sought. In re Graham, 194 Colo. 429, 574 P.2d 75 (1977); In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987).

Voluntary financial contributions to wife by adult children, which are not based upon any legal obligation, are not appropriate factors for the trial court to consider in determining the amount of a maintenance award. In re Serdinsky, 740 P.2d 521 (Colo. 1987).

Limited consideration of a third party's resources, such as a current spouse's income, is not absolutely prohibited if the existence or use of such assets is directly relevant to an allegation by the payor spouse of a substantial and continuing change of circumstances. In re Bowles, 916 P.2d 615 (Colo. App. 1995).

The conduct of the party seeking alimony was formerly to be examined closely by the trial court, and evidence of moral delinquency or complete disregard of the marital vows and duties would be viewed as a bar to alimony. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

In Colorado, fault was not the sole standard in determining whether alimony would be awarded. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

Permanent alimony could be awarded the divorced wife although the decree may have been granted the husband for her fault. Neander v. Neander, 35 Colo. 495, 84 P. 69 (1906); Vigil v. Vigil, 49 Colo. 156, 111 P. 833 (1910); Bock v. Bock, 154 Colo. 408, 390 P.2d 956 (1964).

The fact that a person is without funds and without profitable employment has been held not to preclude the allowance of reasonable alimony and support where nothing but a disinclination to work, regardless of the motive therefor, interferes with his ability to earn a reasonable living. Rapson v. Rapson, 165 Colo. 188, 437 P.2d 780 (1968); Berge v. Berge, 33 Colo. App. 376, 522 P.2d 752 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 103, 536 P.2d 1135 (1975).

The fact that defendant decided to quit his employment and return to college did not preclude the allowance of a reasonable support order based on his demonstrated earning capacity. Rapson v. Rapson, 165 Colo. 188, 437 P.2d 780 (1968).

Even though husband was out of work through no fault of his own and despite his good faith efforts to obtain work, award of monthly maintenance to wife was not an abuse of discretion because the husband retained a significant earning capacity. In re Gray, 813 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Appropriate employment" means the employment is suited to the individual, including the individual's expectations and intentions as expressed during marriage. In re Olar, 747 P.2d 676 (Colo. 1987).

What constitutes "appropriate employment" requires consideration of the party's economic circumstances and reasonable expectations established during the marriage. The terms "reasonable needs" and "appropriate employment" should not be interpreted narrowly. Aldinger v. Aldinger, 813 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1991).

The determination of what constitutes "appropriate employment" and "reasonable needs" under subsection (1) is dependent upon the particular facts and circumstances of each case. In re Sewell, 817 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1991).

It is a defense to an action by a wife for alimony, support, maintenance, or separate maintenance that the husband already is making her a suitable and regular allowance, provided that allowance is a sufficient one. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

A claim that a trial court failed to rule on the issue of granting or denying alimony in a divorce action was not supported by a record which showed an interlocutory decree providing for monthly support payments for a minor child until further order of the court, together with fees for defendant's counsel. Schleiger v. Schleiger, 137 Colo. 279, 324 P.2d 370 (1958).

A spouse who accepts maintenance payments or an attorney fee award is not precluded from appealing such order. In re Lee, 781 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court must reconsider the amount and duration of maintenance awarded upon correcting the property division. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

C. Amount and Form of Maintenance.

There is no mathematical formula for establishing a just and equitable property settlement or alimony or support. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

In the absence of special circumstances, an order for the support of a wife in a divorce case should be a reasonable sum, based on the necessities of the wife and the husband's ability to pay. Elmer v. Elmer, 132 Colo. 57, 285 P.2d 601 (1955); Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

Alimony in gross will not normally be awarded unless special circumstances are present which support such award. Rayer v. Rayer, 32 Colo. App. 400, 512 P.2d 637 (1973).

While the needs of a divorced wife remaining unmarried are not controlling on the amount of alimony to be awarded, they are deserving of careful consideration. Rodgers v. Rodgers, 102 Colo. 94, 76 P.2d 1104 (1938).

A personal judgment against a husband in a divorce action for alimony in a sum not justified by the record should not be entered simply on the ground of possible indefinite future increase in income, because if his financial situation improves so as to justify an increase in alimony, the power of the court to make additional appropriate orders may be invoked at the wife's pleasure. Gourley v. Gourley, 101 Colo. 430, 73 P.2d 1375 (1937).

In the absence of special circumstances which require or make a lump-sum award of alimony proper, or a compelling reason that necessitates the desirability for such an award, a lump-sum or gross award of alimony should not be made. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Absent extraordinary circumstances, court may not order one party to use property awarded in a dissolution proceeding to pay maintenance to the other party. In re Gray, 813 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1991).

Each case depends on own facts. As to the determination as to whether to make a lump-sum award of alimony, each case depends upon its own peculiar facts and circumstances. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

Alimony in gross is not unacceptable per se. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

While maintenance in gross is not favored, nevertheless, in a proper case it may be awarded. In re McVey, 641 P.2d 300 (Colo. App. 1981).

Since the granting of alimony in gross, or lump-sum alimony, as it is sometimes called, provides a definite and final judgment which the court cannot later modify, periodic payments are preferred, because such payments can be modified if a change in circumstances occurs. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Whether the court should award periodic alimony or alimony in gross is generally held to be a matter within the sound discretion of the court. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972); Rayer v. Rayer, 32 Colo. App. 400, 512 P.2d 637 (1973); Moss v. Moss, 35 Colo. App. 53, 531 P.2d 635 (1974), aff'd, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976); In re Icke, 35 Colo. App. 60, 530 P.2d 1001 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 319, 540 P.2d 1076 (1975).

The trial court has broad discretion in determining the amount of alimony and the form of the award, i.e., periodic payments or alimony in gross. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

Although alimony could consist of periodic payments, indefinite in time and certain in amount, it was not necessarily true that all such payments in fixed amounts constituted alimony. Magarrell v. Magarrell, 144 Colo. 228, 355 P.2d 946 (1960).

Periodic alimony is generally favored because the court retains jurisdiction of the matter and may later modify the award. Rayer v. Rayer, 32 Colo. App. 400, 512 P.2d 637 (1973).

Awards of periodic payments of alimony are preferred over awards of alimony in gross because an award of alimony in gross is a final judgment which is not modifiable at a later time while an award of periodic payments may be modified to adjust for changes in the circumstances of the parties. Moss v. Moss, 190 Colo. 491, 549 P.2d 404 (1976).

A decree giving land as alimony was not ipso facto erroneous, because entered after the interlocutory and before the final decree of divorce, there being a prayer for alimony. Wigton v. Wigton, 73 Colo. 337, 216 P. 1055 (1923); Fowler v. Fowler, 74 Colo. 231, 220 P. 988 (1923).

In awarding permanent alimony, care should be taken that it does not amount to an appropriation of the entire estate of the husband. Elmer v. Elmer, 132 Colo. 57, 285 P.2d 601 (1955).

An order for "permanent alimony" cannot amount to confiscation of the assets of the husband. Elmer v. Elmer, 132 Colo. 57, 285 P.2d 601 (1955).

Moreover, a court cannot make an award which will impoverish the husband. Santilli v. Santilli, 169 Colo. 49, 453 P.2d 606 (1969).

In setting the amount of maintenance to be awarded, the court must consider all relevant factors including the ability of the spouse paying maintenance to meet his own needs and the needs of the spouse receiving maintenance. The court may also consider the future earning potential of the spouse. In re Gray, 813 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court was required to balance all of the factors of subsection (4), including the mother's needs and abilities, her future earning capacity, the duration of the marriage and standard of living established throughout, and the parties' financial restrictions, and absent an abuse of discretion, court's award will not be reversed and, when the order is supported by competent evidence, it should not be disturbed on review. In re Atencio, 47 P.3d 718 (Colo. App. 2002).

No income is imputed to the wife for choice of a retirement option that resulted in a smaller payment, for delaying payment in another plan, or for requesting that the court ignore the equity in her home. A decision that income should be imputed to the wife for not choosing differing retirement options or for not using equity in the house for living expenses would be tantamount to requiring her to exhaust her portion of the marital property before she is entitled to maintenance. In re Folwell, 910 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court may not incorporate attorney fees into maintenance award. While award of attorney fees must be reviewed in light of parties' resources following property division and award of maintenance, standards for the different elements of the order are separate and distinct; tax consequences also may differ. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Unliquidated workers' compensation award held to be different from pension. Whether award is marital property depends on extent to which award compensates for loss of earning capacity and medical expenses incurred during the marriage. If award compensates the spouse for post-dissolution loss of earning capacity, it is not marital property even if the compensable injury occurred during the marriage. If workers' compensation claim is pending on date of dissolution and will likely include indemnification for loss of marital earnings or medical expenses, trial court may reserve jurisdiction to apportion marital interest upon receipt of award. In re Smith, 817 P.2d 641 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where trial court's errors in making its property division with respect to stock options, interspousal gifts to wife, and wife's interest in the family trust impacted a substantial portion of the total marital assets, on remand the trial court should reconsider its maintenance award in light of its new property division and in light of the significant decrease in the value of one of the parties' investment accounts. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Court may rely on a previous allowance paid and other expenses paid by one party as evidence of the other party's reasonable needs for purposes of calculating the amount of temporary orders. In re Rose, 134 P.3d 559 (Colo. App. 2006).

D. Discretion of Court.

The awarding of alimony and fixing the amount thereof rested in the sound discretion of the trial court and unless an abuse of discretion was shown its judgment in such cases was not disturbed. Rodgers v. Rodgers, 102 Colo. 94, 76 P.2d 1104 (1938); Kleiger v. Kleiger, 127 Colo. 86, 254 P.2d 426 (1953); Bieler v. Bieler, 130 Colo. 17, 272 P.2d 636 (1954); Nunemacher v. Nunemacher, 132 Colo. 300, 287 P.2d 662 (1955); Schleiger v. Schleiger, 137 Colo. 279, 324 P.2d 370 (1958); Green v. Green, 139 Colo. 551, 342 P.2d 659 (1959); Brigham v. Brigham, 141 Colo. 41, 346 P.2d 302 (1959); Lanz v. Lanz, 143 Colo. 73, 351 P.2d 845 (1960); Brownfield v. Brownfield, 143 Colo. 262, 352 P.2d 674 (1960); Walden v. Walden, 147 Colo. 221, 363 P.2d 168 (1961); Flor v. Flor, 148 Colo. 514, 366 P.2d 664 (1961); McMichael v. McMichael, 152 Colo. 65, 380 P.2d 233 (1963); Hayutin v. Hayutin, 152 Colo. 261, 381 P.2d 272 (1963); Alden v. Alden, 155 Colo. 51, 393 P.2d 5 (1964); Kraus v. Kraus, 159 Colo. 331, 411 P.2d 240 (1966); MacReynolds v. MacReynolds, 29 Colo. App. 267, 482 P.2d 407 (1971); Thompson v. Thompson, 30 Colo. App. 57, 489 P.2d 1062 (1971); Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972); Jekot v. Jekot, 32 Colo. App. 118, 507 P.2d 473 (1973); In re Icke, 35 Colo. App. 60, 530 P.2d 1001 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 319, 540 P.2d 1076 (1975); In re Martin, 707 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1985); In re Gray, 813 P.2d 819 (Colo. App.

1991); In re Bartolo, 971 P.2d 699 (Colo. App. 1998); In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001); In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

Awards of child support and maintenance are matters generally within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be set aside on appellate review in the absence of an abuse of discretion. In re Krise, 660 P.2d 920 (Colo. App. 1983).

Although a wife did not request alimony in her answer, once the trial court decided the issue of divorce, it was within its power under this section to determine whether the circumstances required additional orders for alimony and support. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

A trial court certainly could, if so inclined, consider the effect of state and federal income taxes on its contemplated award. Cohan v. Cohan, 150 Colo. 249, 372 P.2d 149 (1962).

The task of a trial court in a divorce action was to make a fair and equitable award of alimony and support, letting the taxes, and tax deductions, fall where they may. Cohan v. Cohan, 150 Colo. 249, 372 P.2d 149 (1962).

The supreme court cannot say as matter of law that a trial court abuses its discretion in limiting the period of time during which alimony should be paid by the husband where the trial court awards alimony in a definite sum payable in monthly installments based on the finding that the award meets the reasonable needs of the wife in light of her present condition. Liggett v. Liggett, 152 Colo. 110, 380 P.2d 673 (1963).

Trial court erred in determining that it did not have discretion to determine the duration of maintenance and that it was therefore required to provide for maintenance for an unspecified period of time. In re Fisher, 931 P.2d 558 (Colo. App. 1996).

Alimony, support, and property settlement issues were formally considered together to determine whether the court had abused its discretion, and in making the determination, the court would consider a variety of factors, including whether the property was acquired before or after marriage, the efforts and attitudes of the parties toward its accumulation, the respective ages and earning abilities of the parties, the conduct of the parties during the marriage, the duration of the marriage, their stations in life, their health and physical condition, the necessities of the parties, their financial condition, and all other relevant circumstances. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

In determining whether the trial court abused its discretion in awarding maintenance, the property and maintenance awards must be considered together. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Where the maintenance award reflected a thorough consideration of the family's standard of living, the length of the marriage, the husband's ability to pay, the wife's age and earning capacity, and the wife's responsibilities as residential custodian of five children, the award was amply supported by the evidence and would not be overturned. In re Hunt, 868 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1993).

The age of the parties, in conjunction with the relative earning potential each of the parties can reasonably anticipate, and also their relative wealth will be considered in determining whether the trial judge abused his discretion in the alimony award. Smith v. Smith, 172 Colo. 516, 474 P.2d 619 (1970).

Consideration of maintenance and attorney fees to determine whether court abused its discretion. In cases where an appeal has been taken from the property division, maintenance, and attorney fee provisions of a dissolution of marriage decree as a whole, they must be considered together to determine whether the trial court abused its discretion. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981); In re Seewald, 22 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2001).

Finding as to earning capacity not confiscatory. Where the evidence supported the court's finding that the husband was capable of earning sums greatly in excess of his present net salary, although it appeared that the court based its order on the present net income of the husband, the orders were not confiscatory. In re Anderson, 37 Colo. App. 55, 541 P.2d 1274 (1975).

Where the amount of property the trial court ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff restored the plaintiff substantially to the same asset position she had occupied prior to the marriage, since the plaintiff's ability to support herself was substantially the same as it had been prior to the marriage, the trial court did not abuse its discretion. Cohan v. Cohan, 172 Colo. 563, 474 P.2d 792 (1970).

Where the husband's income was not stable but fluctuated from month to month, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in directing payments of support and alimony on a percentage of the husbands' income. Reap v. Reap, 142 Colo. 354, 350 P.2d 1063 (1960).

Where the wife had contributed her own funds to the purchase of the family home, and there was a comparatively small amount of property owned by the parties, and the wife was left without any right to receive alimony payments, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the jointly owned home to the wife in its order amended after the husband's death. Sarno v. Sarno, 28 Colo. App. 598, 478 P.2d 711 (1970).

Awarding maintenance to wife on decreasing schedule held abuse of discretion. In re Lodholm, 35 Colo. App. 411, 536 P.2d 842 (1975).

Trial court has discretion to award maintenance that decreases incrementally on a future date when wife's earning potential is expected to increase and again on a future date when wife is expected to begin receiving pension benefits. In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

E. Modification and Scope of Review.

That the court has continuing jurisdiction over the payment of alimony may be assumed as the settled law of this state. Zlaten v. Zlaten, 117 Colo. 296, 186 P.2d 583 (1947).

A trial court may expressly reserve jurisdiction to review, adjust, or extend a maintenance award if: (1) An important contingency exists, the outcome of which may significantly affect the amount or duration of the maintenance award; (2) the contingency is based upon an ascertainable, future event or events; (3) the contingency can be resolved within a reasonable and specific period of time. In re Cauffman, 829 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1992).

If a trial court intends to reserve jurisdiction over maintenance pursuant to this section it should: (1) State its intent to do so on the record; (2) briefly outline its reasons for doing so, stating what the ascertainable future event upon which the reservation of maintenance jurisdiction is based; and (3) set forth a reasonably specific future time within which maintenance may be reconsidered under this section. In re Cauffman, 829 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1992).

A trial court may retain jurisdiction over maintenance if, at the time of permanent orders, an important future contingency exists that can be resolved in a reasonable and specific period of time, and if the court explicitly states its intent to reserve jurisdiction, describes the future event, and sets forth a reasonably specific future time within which maintenance may be considered. In re Folwell, 910 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1995); In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

The phrase "a proceeding for maintenance following dissolution of marriage by a court", in subsection (3) applies only to those circumstances where the court issuing the decree of dissolution initially lacked personal jurisdiction over the absent spouse and, therefore, could not have ordered one spouse to pay maintenance. It does not provide an alternative for a party to request maintenance at a subsequent date even though he or she waived maintenance at permanent orders. In re Ebel, 116 P.3d 1254 (Colo. App. 2005).

The trial court erred in providing for future adjustments to maintenance. The assumptions made constitute improper speculation upon which to base future changes in maintenance. In re Folwell, 910 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court not required to reserve jurisdiction over the issue of maintenance when, after sale of residence and an additional period in which to reacclimate to working, wife would have sufficient means to satisfy her own needs. In re Lafaye, 89 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2003).

In modifying provision for maintenance, burden is on party seeking modification to prove a substantial and continuing change of circumstances. Malmgren v. Malmgren, 628 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1981); In re DaFoe, 677 P.2d 426 (Colo. App. 1983).

Reconsideration of maintenance and attorney fees unnecessary absent contest. When neither party contests a trial court's division of property it is not necessary that the court be able to reconsider the property division in order to correct error in the provisions for maintenance and attorney fees. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Award of further maintenance upheld. The trial court neither abused its discretion nor exceeded its jurisdiction in awarding further maintenance to the wife where a separation agreement, having been incorporated into the divorce decree, became part of the final order when the decree was entered, and allowed a court to "review the issue" of spousal maintenance at end of six months. In re Sinn, 674 P.2d 988 (Colo. App. 1983); In re Woodman, 676 P.2d 1232 (Colo. App. 1983).

A provision of divorce decree retaining jurisdiction to award such alimony as may be just, did not alter the finality of that portion of the decree determining the rights and interests of the parties in real estate involved. McDonald v. McDonald, 150 Colo. 492, 374 P.2d 690 (1962).

Where it appeared from the record in a divorce case that both parties intended that a court retain jurisdiction of a question of permanent alimony and related matters after the entry of a final decree of divorce, orders entered determining such matters after entry of the decree were not void for want of jurisdiction. Rodgers v. Rodgers, 137 Colo. 74, 323 P.2d 892 (1958).

To correct an order for support directing payments in excess of defendant's ability to pay, required formal action by the one thus burdened, since to reduce support payments required by an order of the trial court necessitated a motion by him who sought relief. Lopez v. Lopez, 148 Colo. 404, 366 P.2d 373 (1961).

One who has accepted benefits of judgment may not seek reversal of that judgment on appeal. In re Jones, 627 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1981).

Awarding of attorney fees is discretionary with trial court and will not be disturbed on review if supported by the evidence. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982); In re DaFoe, 677 P.2d 426 (Colo. App. 1983).

Fixing permanent alimony, and readjusting a property settlement was a function of the trial court and could not be assumed by the supreme court. Nunemacher v. Nunemacher, 132 Colo. 300, 287 P.2d 662 (1955); Brigham v. Brigham, 141 Colo. 41, 346 P.2d 302 (1959).

A trial court award to a plaintiff of permanent alimony was subject to review by a trial court in the event a changed condition arises. Nunemacher v. Nunemacher, 132 Colo. 300, 287 P.2d 662 (1955).

Limited consideration of a third party's resources, such as a current spouse's income, is not absolutely prohibited if the existence or use of such assets is directly relevant to an allegation by the payor spouse of a substantial and continuing change of circumstances. In re Bowles, 916 P.2d 615 (Colo. App. 1995).

III. SEPARATE MAINTENANCE.

An allowance for separate maintenance was not alimony within the strict definition of that term. Weston v. Weston, 79 Colo. 478, 246 P. 790 (1926).

When an original divorce action was dismissed, the parties were still husband and wife, and the wife was at liberty to institute a separate maintenance action against the husband, just as though there had been no former litigation between the parties. Morgan v. Morgan, 139 Colo. 545, 340 P.2d 1060 (1959).

In determining the amount of support to be awarded in a separate maintenance action, the trial court could have considered the ability of the husband, the value of his estate; and his earning capacity, and adjudication could not result in appropriation of his entire estate or impoverishment to the extent of rendering him unable to maintain himself. Lopez v. Lopez, 148 Colo. 404, 366 P.2d 373 (1961); Fahey v. Fahey, 43 Colo. 354, 96 P. 251 (1908).

In a separate maintenance action only such alimony and support could be awarded as was necessary to adequately maintain a family in the manner to which it was accustomed and suitable to their station, and a husband could be divested of a reasonable proportion of his earnings and, if need be, of his property, that his wife and children could have reasonable support. Morgan v. Morgan, 139 Colo. 545, 340 P.2d 1060 (1959).

In all cases there was a factor to consider, and that was the ability of a husband and father to meet the reasonable needs of his wife and children. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

The purpose was not to enrich the wife, but to provide suitable support and maintenance for her, taking into consideration the manner in which she is accustomed to living with him, and his ability to provide support. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

A reasonable amount for her maintenance during coverture, or until reconciliation, estimated with reference to the means of her husband, and payable out of his estate, was the relief to which a wife was entitled, if the case made by her complaint should be established. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

In the absence of very special circumstances a lump-sum award could not be made in a separate maintenance suit, and the considerations which supported a lump-sum award or division of property in a divorce action that terminate property rights, were not present in separate maintenance suits where property rights were retained. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

It was an abuse of discretion, to award a wife the equivalent of one-third of the husband's estate, instead of a periodical payment for her support. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

Where trial court's errors in making its property division with respect to stock options, interspousal gifts to wife, and wife's interest in the family trust impacted a substantial portion of the total marital assets, on remand the trial court should reconsider its maintenance award in light of its new property division and in light of the significant decrease in the value of one of the parties' investment accounts. In re Balanson, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

IV. ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENTS.

There is no statutory proscription against contracting for maintenance in an antenuptial agreement. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Separation agreements and antenuptial agreements are separate and distinct legal documents. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Spouses-to-be have right to enter into antenuptial agreements which contemplate the possibility of dissolution. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Antenuptial agreement no bar to maintenance unless specifically stated. In the absence of any reference in an antenuptial agreement to a relinquishment of the right to maintenance, the agreement does not bar the wife's claim for maintenance. In re Stokes, 43 Colo. App. 461, 608 P.2d 824 (1979).

Antenuptial agreement did not preclude an award of maintenance or reflect any waiver of maintenance by wife. In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

Antenuptial maintenance agreement is subject to judicial scrutiny for conscionability. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982); In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

"Unconscionability", as applied to a maintenance agreement, exists when enforcement of the terms of the agreement results in a spouse having insufficient property to provide for his reasonable needs and who is otherwise unable to support himself through appropriate employment. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982); In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

Maintenance agreement may become unconscionable because of circumstances at time of dissolution. Even though an antenuptial agreement is entered into in good faith, with full disclosure and without any element of fraud or overreaching, the maintenance provisions thereof may become voidable for unconscionability occasioned by circumstances existing at the time of the marriage dissolution. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982); In re Meisner, 715 P.2d 1273 (Colo. App. 1985).

Burden of proof of unconscionability. One who claims that an antenuptial maintenance agreement is unconscionable must prove that at the time of the marriage dissolution the maintenance agreement rendered the spouse without a means of reasonable support, either because of a lack of property resources or a condition of unemployability. In re Newman v. Newman, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

Where antenuptial agreement was silent on matter of attorney fees, the awarding of such fees was controlled by § 14-10-119. In re Newman, 44 Colo. App. 307, 616 P.2d 982 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd on other grounds, 653 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1982).

14-10-115. Child support guidelines - purpose - definitions - determination of income - schedule of basic child support obligations - adjustments to basic child support - additional guidelines - child support commission. (1) Purpose and applicability. (a) The child support guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations have the following purposes:

(I) To establish as state policy an adequate standard of support for children, subject to the ability of parents to pay;

(II) To make awards more equitable by ensuring more consistent treatment of persons in similar circumstances; and

(III) To improve the efficiency of the court process by promoting settlements and giving courts and the parties guidance in establishing levels of awards.

(b) The child support guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations do the following:

(I) Calculate child support based upon the parents' combined adjusted gross income estimated to have been allocated to the child if the parents and children were living in an intact household;

(II) Adjust the child support based upon the needs of the children for extraordinary medical expenses and work-related child care costs; and

(III) Allocate the amount of child support to be paid by each parent based upon physical care arrangements.

(c) This section shall apply to all child support obligations, established or modified, as a part of any proceeding, including, but not limited to, articles 5, 6, and 10 of this title and articles 4 and 6 of title 19, C.R.S., regardless of when filed.

(2) Duty of support - factors to consider. (a) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, maintenance, or child support, the court may order either or both parents owing a duty of support to a child of the marriage to pay an amount reasonable or necessary for the child's support and may order an amount determined to be reasonable under the circumstances for a time period that occurred after the date of the parties' physical separation or the filing of the petition or service upon the respondent, whichever date is latest, and prior to the entry of the support order, without regard to marital misconduct.

(b) In determining the amount of support under this subsection (2), the court shall consider all relevant factors, including:

(I) The financial resources of the child;

(II) The financial resources of the custodial parent;

(III) The standard of living the child would have enjoyed had the marriage not been dissolved;

(IV) The physical and emotional condition of the child and his or her educational needs; and

(V) The financial resources and needs of the noncustodial parent.

(3) Definitions. As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(b) "Combined gross income" means the combined monthly adjusted gross incomes of both parents.

(c) "Income" means the actual gross income of a parent, if employed to full capacity, or potential income, if unemployed or underemployed. Gross income of each parent shall be determined according to subsection (5) of this section.

(i) "Split physical care", for the purposes of the child support guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations specified in this section, and as further specified in paragraph (c) of subsection (8) of this section, means that each parent has physical care of at least one of the children by means of that child or children residing with that parent the majority of the time.

(4) Forms - identifying information. (a) The child support guidelines shall be used with standardized child support guideline forms to be issued by the judicial department. The judicial department is responsible for promulgating and updating the Colorado child support guideline forms, schedules, worksheets, and instructions.

(b) All child support orders entered pursuant to this article shall provide the names and dates of birth of the parties and of the children who are the subject of the order and the parties' residential and mailing addresses. The social security numbers of the parties and children shall be collected pursuant to section 14-14-113 and section 26-13-127, C.R.S.

(5) Determination of income. (a) For the purposes of the child support guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations specified in this section, the gross income of each parent shall be determined according to the following guidelines:

  - (Q) Workers' compensation benefits;

  - (W) Taxable distributions from general partnerships, limited partnerships, closely held corporations, or limited liability companies;

- (II) "Gross income" does not include:

  - (C) Income from additional jobs that result in the employment of the obligor more than forty hours per week or more than what would otherwise be considered to be full-time employment; and
  - (D) Social security benefits received by the minor children, or on behalf of the minor children, as a result of the death or disability of a stepparent are not to be included as income for the minor children for the determination of child support.
- (III) (A) For income from self-employment, rent, royalties, proprietorship of a business, or joint ownership of a partnership or closely held corporation, "gross income" equals gross receipts minus ordinary and necessary expenses, as defined in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (III), required to produce such income.
- (B) "Ordinary and necessary expenses" does not include amounts allowable by the internal revenue service for the accelerated component of depreciation expenses or investment tax credits or any other business expenses determined by the court to be inappropriate for determining gross income for purposes of calculating child support.
- (b) (I) If a parent is voluntarily unemployed or underemployed, child support shall be calculated based on a determination of potential income; except that a determination of potential income shall not be made for a parent who is physically or mentally incapacitated or is caring for a child under the age of thirty months for whom the parents owe a joint legal responsibility or for an incarcerated parent sentenced to one year or more.
- (II) If a noncustodial parent who owes past-due child support is unemployed and not incapacitated and has an obligation of support to a child receiving assistance pursuant to part 7 of article 2 of title 26, C.R.S., the court or delegate child support enforcement unit may order the parent to pay such support in accordance with a plan approved by the court or to participate in work activities. Work activities may include one or more of the following:
- (A) Private or public sector employment;

- (B) Job search activities;
- (C) Community service;
- (D) Vocational training; or
- (E) Any other employment-related activities available to that particular individual.

(III) For the purposes of this section, a parent shall not be deemed “underemployed” if:

(A) The employment is temporary and is reasonably intended to result in higher income within the foreseeable future; or

(B) The employment is a good faith career choice that is not intended to deprive a child of support and does not unreasonably reduce the support available to a child; or

(C) The parent is enrolled in an educational program that is reasonably intended to result in a degree or certification within a reasonable period of time and that will result in a higher income, so long as the educational program is a good faith career choice that is not intended to deprive the child of support and that does not unreasonably reduce the support available to a child.

(c) Income statements of the parents shall be verified with documentation of both current and past earnings. Suitable documentation of current earnings includes pay stubs, employer statements, or receipts and expenses if self-employed. Documentation of current earnings shall be supplemented with copies of the most recent tax return to provide verification of earnings over a longer period. A copy of wage statements or other wage information obtained from the computer data base maintained by the department of labor and employment shall be admissible into evidence for purposes of determining income under this subsection (5).

(6) Adjustments to gross income. (a) The amount of child support actually paid by a parent with an order for support of other children shall be deducted from that parent’s gross income.

(b) (I) At the time of the initial establishment of a child support order, or in any proceeding to modify a support order, if a parent is also legally responsible for the support of other children for whom the parents do not share joint legal responsibility, an adjustment shall be made revising the parent’s income prior to calculating the basic child support obligation for the children who are the subject of the support order if the children are living in the home of the parent seeking the adjustment or if the children are living out of the home, and the parent seeking the adjustment provides documented proof of money payments of support of those children. The amount shall not exceed the schedule of basic support obligations listed in this section. For a parent with a gross income of one thousand eight hundred fifty dollars or less per month, the adjustment shall be seventy-five percent of the amount calculated using the low-income adjustment described in sub-subparagraphs (B) and (C) of subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of subsection (7) of this section based only upon the responsible parent’s income, without any other adjustments for the number of other children for whom the parent is responsible. For a parent with gross income of more than one thousand eight hundred fifty dollars per month, the adjustment shall be seventy-five percent of the amount listed under the schedule of basic support obligations in paragraph (b) of subsection (7) of this section that would represent a support obligation based only upon the responsible parent’s income, without any other adjustments for the number of other children for whom the parent is responsible. The amount calculated as set forth in this subparagraph (I) shall be subtracted from the amount of the parent’s gross income prior to calculating the basic support obligation based upon both parents’ gross income, as provided in subsection (7) of this section.

(II) The adjustment pursuant to this paragraph (b), based on the responsibility to support other children, shall not be made to the extent that the adjustment contributes to the calculation of a support order lower than a previously existing support order for the children who are the subject of the modification hearing at which an adjustment is sought.

(7) Schedule of basic child support obligations. (a) (I) The basic child support obligation shall be determined using the schedule of basic child support obligations contained in paragraph (b) of this subsection (7). The basic child support obligation shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes.

(II) (A) For combined gross income that falls between amounts shown in the schedule of basic child support obligations, basic child support amounts shall be interpolated. The category entitled "number of children due support" in the schedule of basic child support obligations shall have the meaning defined in subsection (3) of this section.

(B) Except as otherwise provided in sub-subparagraph (D) of this subparagraph (II), in circumstances in which the parents' combined monthly adjusted gross income is less than eight hundred fifty dollars, a child support payment of fifty dollars per month shall be required of the obligor. The minimum order of fifty dollars shall not apply when each parent keeps the children more than ninety-two overnights each year as defined in paragraph (h) of subsection (3) of this section. In no case, however, shall the amount of child support ordered to be paid exceed the amount of child support that would otherwise be ordered to be paid if the parents did not share physical custody.

(C) Except as otherwise provided in sub-subparagraph (D) of this subparagraph (II), in circumstances in which the parents' combined monthly adjusted gross income is eight hundred fifty dollars or more, but in which the parent with the least number of overnights per year with the child has a monthly adjusted gross income of less than one thousand eight hundred fifty dollars, the court or delegate child support enforcement unit, pursuant to section 26-13.5-105 (4), C.R.S., shall perform a low-income adjustment calculation of child support as follows: The court or delegate child support enforcement unit shall determine each parent's monthly adjusted gross income, as that term is defined in subsection (3) of this section. Based upon the parents' combined monthly adjusted gross incomes, the court or delegate child support enforcement unit shall determine the monthly basic child support obligation, using the schedule of basic child support obligations set forth in paragraph (b) of this subsection (7) and shall determine each parent's presumptive proportionate share of said obligation. The court or delegate child support enforcement unit shall then adjust the income of the parent with the fewest number of overnights per year with the child by subtracting nine hundred dollars from that parent's monthly adjusted gross income. The court shall multiply the resulting amount by a factor of forty percent. The product of the multiplication shall be added to the following basic minimum child support amount as additional minimum support, unless the product of the multiplication amount is zero or a negative figure, in which case the court shall add zero to the following basic minimum child support amount: Seventy-five dollars for one child; one hundred fifty dollars for two children; two hundred twenty-five dollars for three children; two hundred seventy-five dollars for four children; three hundred twenty-five dollars for five children; and three hundred fifty dollars for six or more children. The court or delegate child support enforcement unit shall compare the product of this addition to the parent's presumptive proportionate share of the monthly basic support obligation determined previously from the schedule of basic child support obligations. The lesser of the two amounts shall be the basic monthly support obligation to be paid by the low-income parent, as adjusted by the low-income parent's proportionate share of the work-related and education-related child care costs, health insurance, extraordinary medical expenses, and other extraordinary adjustments as described in subsections (9) to (11) of this section. The low-income adjustment shall not apply when each parent keeps the children more than ninety-two overnights each year as defined in subsection (8) of this section. In no case, however, shall the amount of child support ordered to be paid exceed the amount of child support that would otherwise be ordered to be paid if the parents did not share physical custody.

(D) In any circumstance in which the obligor's monthly adjusted gross income is less than eight hundred fifty dollars, regardless of the monthly adjusted gross income of the obligee, the obligor shall be ordered to pay fifty dollars per month in child support. The minimum order of fifty dollars shall not apply when each parent keeps the children more than ninety-two overnights each year as defined in subsection (8) of this section. In no case, however, shall the amount of child support ordered to be paid exceed the amount of child support that would otherwise be ordered to be paid if the parents did not share physical custody.

(E) The judge may use discretion to determine child support in circumstances where combined adjusted gross income exceeds the uppermost levels of the schedule of basic child support obligations; except that the presumptive basic child support obligation shall not be less than it would be based on the highest level of adjusted gross income set forth in the schedule of basic child support obligations.

(8) Computation of basic child support - shared physical care - split physical care - stipulations - deviations - basis for periodic updates. (a) Except in cases of shared physical care or split physical care as defined in paragraphs (h) and (i) of subsection (3) of this section, a total child support obligation is determined by adding each parent's respective basic child support obligation, as determined through the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations specified in subsection (7) of this section, work-related net child care costs, extraordinary medical expenses, and extraordinary adjustments to the schedule of basic child support obligations. The parent receiving a child support payment shall be presumed to spend his or her total child support obligation directly on the children. The parent paying child support to the other parent shall owe his or her total child support obligation as child support to the other parent minus any ordered payments included in the calculations made directly on behalf of the children for work-related net child care costs, extraordinary medical expenses, or extraordinary adjustments to the schedule of basic child support obligations.

(b) Because shared physical care presumes that certain basic expenses for the children will be duplicated, an adjustment for shared physical care is made by multiplying the basic child support obligation by one and fifty hundredths (1.50). In cases of shared physical care, each parent's adjusted basic child support obligation obtained by application of paragraph (b) of subsection (7) of this section shall first be divided between the parents in proportion to their respective adjusted gross incomes. Each parent's share of the adjusted basic child support obligation shall then be multiplied by the percentage of time the children spend with the other parent to determine the theoretical basic child support obligation owed to the other parent. To these amounts shall be added each parent's proportionate share of work-related net child care costs, extraordinary medical expenses, and extraordinary adjustments to the schedule of basic child support obligations. The parent owing the greater amount of child support shall owe the difference between the two amounts as a child support order minus any ordered direct payments made on behalf of the children for work-related net child care costs, extraordinary medical expenses, or extraordinary adjustments to the schedule of basic child support obligations. In no case, however, shall the amount of child support ordered to be paid exceed the amount of child support that would otherwise be ordered to be paid if the parents did not share physical custody.

(c) (I) In cases of split physical care, a child support obligation shall be computed separately for each parent based upon the number of children living with the other parent in accordance with subsections (7), (9), (10), and (11) of this section. The amount so determined shall be a theoretical support obligation due each parent for support of the child or children for whom he or she has primary physical custody. The obligations so determined shall then be offset, with the parent owing the larger amount owing the difference between the two amounts as a child support order.

(II) If the parents also share physical care as outlined in paragraph (b) of this subsection (8), an additional adjustment for shared physical care shall be made as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (8).

(d) Stipulations presented to the court shall be reviewed by the court for approval. No hearing shall be required; however, the court shall use the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations to review the adequacy of child support orders negotiated by the parties as well as the financial affidavit that fully discloses the financial status of the parties as required for use of the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations.

(e) In any action to establish or modify child support, whether temporary or permanent, the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations as set forth in subsection (7) of this section shall be used as a rebuttable presumption for the establishment or modification of the amount of child support. Courts may deviate from the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations where its application would be inequitable, unjust, or inappropriate. Any such deviation shall be accompanied by written or oral findings by the court specifying the reasons for the deviation and the presumed amount under the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations without a deviation. These reasons may include, but are not limited to, the extraordinary medical expenses incurred for treatment of either parent or a current spouse, extraordinary costs associated with parenting time, the gross disparity in income between the parents, the ownership by a parent of a substantial nonincome producing asset, consistent overtime not considered in gross income under sub-subparagraph (C) of subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of subsection (5) of this section, or income from employment that is in addition to a full-time job or that results in the employment of the obligor more than forty hours per week or more than what would otherwise be considered to be full-time employment. The existence of a factor enumerated in this section does not require the court to deviate from the guidelines and basic schedule of child support obligations but is a factor to be considered in the decision to deviate. The court may deviate from the guidelines and basic schedule of child support obligations even if no factor enumerated in this section exists.

(f) The guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations may be used by the parties as the basis for periodic updates of child support obligations.

(9) Adjustments for child care costs. (a) Net child care costs incurred on behalf of the children due to employment or job search or the education of either parent shall be added to the basic obligation and shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes.

(b) Child care costs shall not exceed the level required to provide quality care from a licensed source for the children. The value of the federal income tax credit for child care shall be subtracted from actual costs to arrive at a figure for net child care costs.

(10) Adjustments for health care expenditures for children. (a) In orders issued pursuant to this section, the court shall also provide for the child's or children's current and future medical needs by ordering either parent or both parents to initiate medical or medical and dental insurance coverage for the child or children through currently effective medical or medical and dental insurance policies held by the parent or parents, purchase medical or medical and dental insurance for the child or children, or provide the child or children with current and future medical needs through some other manner. If a parent has been directed to provide insurance pursuant to this section and that parent's spouse provides the insurance for the benefit of the child or children either directly or through employment, a credit on the child support worksheet shall be given to the parent in the same manner as if the premium were paid by the parent. At the same time, the court shall order payment of medical insurance or medical and dental insurance deductibles and copayments.

(b) The payment of a premium to provide health insurance coverage on behalf of the children subject to the order shall be added to the basic child support obligation and shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross income.

(c) The amount to be added to the basic child support obligation shall be the actual amount of the total insurance premium that is attributable to the child who is the subject of the order. If this amount is not available or cannot be verified, the total cost of the premium should be divided by the total number of persons covered by the policy. The cost per person derived from this calculation shall be multiplied by the number of children who are the subject of the order and who are covered under the policy. This amount shall be added to the basic child support obligation and shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes.

(d) After the total child support obligation is calculated and divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes, the amount calculated in paragraph (c) of this subsection (10) shall be deducted from the obligor's share of the total child support obligation if the obligor is actually paying the premium. If the obligee is actually paying the premium, no further adjustment is necessary.

(e) Prior to allowing the health insurance adjustment, the parent requesting the adjustment must submit proof that the child or children have been enrolled in a health insurance plan and must submit proof of the cost of the premium. The court shall require the parent receiving the adjustment to submit annually proof of continued coverage of the child or children to the delegate child support enforcement unit and to the other parent.

(f) If a parent who is ordered by the court to provide medical or medical and dental insurance for the child or children has insurance that excludes coverage of the child or children because the child or children reside outside the geographic area covered by the insurance policy, the court shall order separate coverage for the child or children if the court determines coverage is available at a reasonable cost.

(g) Where the application of the premium payment on the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations results in a child support order of fifty dollars or less or the premium payment is twenty percent or more of the parent's gross income, the court or delegate child support enforcement unit may elect not to require the parent to include the child or children on an existing policy or to purchase insurance. The parent shall, however, be required to provide insurance when it does become available at a reasonable cost.

(h) (I) Any extraordinary medical expenses incurred on behalf of the children shall be added to the basic child support obligation and shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes.

(II) Extraordinary medical expenses are uninsured expenses, including copayments and deductible amounts, in excess of two hundred fifty dollars per child per calendar year. Extraordinary medical expenses shall include, but need not be limited to, such reasonable costs as are reasonably necessary for orthodontia, dental treatment, asthma treatments, physical therapy, vision care, and any uninsured chronic health problem. At the discretion of the court, professional counseling or psychiatric therapy for diagnosed mental disorders may also be considered as an extraordinary medical expense.

(11) Extraordinary adjustments to the schedule of basic child support obligations - periodic disability benefits. (a) By agreement of the parties or by order of court, the following reasonable and necessary expenses incurred on behalf of the child shall be divided between the parents in proportion to their adjusted gross income:

(I) Any expenses for attending any special or private elementary or secondary schools to meet the particular educational needs of the child; and

(II) Any expenses for transportation of the child, or the child and an accompanying parent if the child is less than twelve years of age, between the homes of the parents.

(b) Any additional factors that actually diminish the basic needs of the child may be considered for deductions from the basic child support obligation.

(c) In cases where the custodial parent receives periodic disability benefits granted by the federal "Old-age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Act" on behalf of dependent children due to the disability of the noncustodial parent or receives employer-paid retirement benefits from the federal government on behalf of dependent children due to the retirement of the noncustodial parent, the noncustodial parent's share of the total child support obligation as determined pursuant to subsection (8) of this section shall be reduced in an amount equal to the amount of the benefits.

(12) Dependency exemptions. Unless otherwise agreed upon by the parties, the court shall allocate the right to claim dependent children for income tax purposes between the parties. These rights shall be allocated between the parties in proportion to their contributions to the costs of raising the children. A parent shall not be entitled to claim a child as a dependent if he or she has not paid all court-ordered child support for that tax year or if claiming the child as a dependent would not result in any tax benefit.

(13) Emancipation. (a) For child support orders entered on or after July 1, 1997, unless a court finds that a child is otherwise emancipated, emancipation occurs and child support terminates without either party filing a motion when the last or only child attains nineteen years of age unless one or more of the following conditions exist:

(I) The parties agree otherwise in a written stipulation after July 1, 1997;

(II) If the child is mentally or physically disabled, the court or the delegate child support enforcement unit may order child support, including payments for medical expenses or insurance or both, to continue beyond the age of nineteen;

(III) If the child is still in high school or an equivalent program, support continues until the end of the month following graduation. A child who ceases to attend high school prior to graduation and later reenrolls is entitled to support upon reenrollment and until the end of the month following graduation, but not beyond age twenty-one.

(IV) If the child marries, the child shall be considered emancipated as of the date of the marriage. If the marriage is annulled, dissolved, or declared invalid, child support may be reinstated.

(V) If the child enters into active military duty, the child shall be considered emancipated.

(b) Nothing in paragraph (a) of this subsection (13) or subsection (15) of this section shall preclude the parties from agreeing in a written stipulation or agreement on or after July 1, 1997, to continue child support beyond the age of nineteen or to provide for postsecondary education expenses for a child and to set forth the details of the payment of the expenses. If the stipulation or agreement is approved by the court and made part of a decree of dissolution of marriage or legal separation, the terms of the agreement shall be enforced as provided in section 14-10-112.

(14) Annual exchange of information. (a) When a child support order is entered or modified, the parties may agree or the court may require the parties to exchange financial information, including verification of insurance and its costs, pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (5) of this section and other appropriate information once a year or less often, by regular mail, for the purpose of updating and modifying the order without a court hearing. The parties shall use the approved standardized child support forms specified in subsection (4) of this section in exchanging financial information. The forms shall be included with any agreed modification or an agreement that a modification is not appropriate at the time. If the agreed amount departs from the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations, the parties shall furnish statements of explanation that shall be included with the forms and shall be filed with the court. The court shall review the agreement pursuant to this paragraph (a) and inform the parties by regular mail whether or not additional or corrected information is needed, or that the modification is granted, or that the modification is denied. If the parties cannot agree, no modification pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be entered; however, either party may move for or the court may schedule, upon its own motion, a modification hearing.

(b) Upon request of the noncustodial parent, the court may order the custodial parent to submit an annual update of financial information using the approved standardized child support forms, as specified in subsection (4) of this section, including information on the actual expenses relating to the children of the marriage for whom support has been ordered. The court shall not order the custodial parent to update the financial information pursuant to this paragraph (b) in circumstances where the noncustodial parent has failed to exercise parenting time rights or when child support payments are in arrears or where there is documented evidence of domestic violence, child abuse, or a violation of a protection order on the part of the noncustodial parent. The court may order the noncustodial parent to pay the costs involved in preparing an update to the financial information. If the noncustodial parent claims, based upon the information in the updated form, that the custodial parent is not spending the child support for the benefit of the children, the court may refer the parties to a mediator to resolve the differences. If there are costs for such mediation, the court shall order that the party requesting the mediation pay such costs.

(15) Post-secondary education. (a) This subsection (15) shall apply to all child support obligations established or modified as a part of any proceeding, including but not limited to articles 5, 6, and 10 of this title and articles 4 and 6 of title 19, C.R.S., prior to July 1, 1997. This subsection (15) shall not apply to child support orders established on or after July 1, 1997, which shall be governed by paragraph (a) of subsection (13) of this section.

(b) For child support orders entered prior to July 1, 1997, unless a court finds that a child is otherwise emancipated, emancipation occurs and child support terminates without either party filing a motion when the last or only child attains nineteen years of age unless one or more of the following conditions exist:

(I) The parties agree otherwise in a written stipulation after July 1, 1991;

(II) If the child is mentally or physically disabled, the court or the delegate child support enforcement unit may order child support, including payments for medical expenses or insurance or both, to continue beyond the age of nineteen; or

(III) If the child is still in high school or an equivalent program, support continues until the end of the month following graduation, unless there is an order for postsecondary education, in which case support continues through postsecondary education as provided in this subsection (15). A child who ceases to attend high school prior to graduation and later reenrolls is entitled to support upon reenrollment and until the end of the month following graduation, but not beyond age twenty-one.

(IV) If the child marries, the child shall be considered emancipated as of the date of the marriage. If the marriage is annulled, dissolved, or declared invalid, child support may be reinstated.

(V) If the child enters into active military duty, the child shall be considered emancipated.

(c) If the court finds that it is appropriate for the parents to contribute to the costs of a program of postsecondary education, then the court shall terminate child support and enter an order requiring both parents to contribute a sum determined to be reasonable for the education expenses of the child, taking into account the resources of each parent and the child. In determining the amount of each parent's contribution to the costs of a program of postsecondary education for a child, the court shall be limited to an amount not to exceed the amount listed under the schedule of basic child support obligations in paragraph (b) of subsection (7) of this section for the number of children receiving postsecondary education. If such an order is entered, the parents shall contribute to the total sum determined by the court in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes as defined in paragraph (a) of subsection (3) of this section. The amount of contribution that each parent is ordered to pay pursuant to this subsection (15) shall be subtracted from the amount of each parent's gross income, respectively, prior to calculating the basic child support obligation for any remaining children pursuant to subsection (7) of this section.

(d) In no case shall the court issue orders providing for both child support and postsecondary education to be paid for the same time period for the same child regardless of the age of the child.

(e) Either parent or the child may move for an order at any time before the child attains the age of twenty-one years. The order for postsecondary education support may not extend beyond the earlier of the child's twenty-first birthday or the completion of an undergraduate degree.

(f) Either a child seeking an order for postsecondary education expenses or on whose behalf postsecondary education expenses are sought, or the parent from whom the payment of postsecondary education expenses are sought, may request that the court order the child and the parent to seek mediation prior to a hearing on the issue of postsecondary education expenses. Mediation services shall be provided in accordance with section 13-22-305, C.R.S. The court may order the parties to seek mediation if the court finds that mediation is appropriate.

(g) The court may order the support paid directly to the educational institution, to the child, or in such other fashion as is appropriate to support the education of the child.

(h) A child shall not be considered emancipated solely by reason of living away from home while in postsecondary education. If the child resides in the home of one parent while attending school or during periods of time in excess of thirty days when school is not in session, the court may order payments from one parent to the other for room and board until the child attains the age of nineteen.

(i) If the court orders support pursuant to this subsection (15), the court or delegate child support enforcement unit may also order that the parents provide health insurance for the child or pay medical expenses of the child or both for the duration of the order. The order shall provide that these expenses be paid in proportion to their adjusted gross incomes as defined in subsection (3) of this section. The court or delegate child support enforcement unit shall order a parent to provide health insurance if the child is eligible for coverage as a dependent on that parent's insurance policy or if health insurance coverage for the child is available at reasonable cost.

(j) An order for postsecondary education expenses entered between July 1, 1991, and July 1, 1997, may be modified pursuant to this subsection (15) to provide for postsecondary education expenses subject to the statutory provisions for determining the amount of a parent's contribution to the costs of postsecondary education, the limitations on the amount of a parent's contribution, and the changes to the definition of postsecondary education consistent with this section as it existed on July 1, 1994. An order for child support entered prior to July 1, 1997, that does not provide for postsecondary education expenses shall not be modified pursuant to this subsection (15).

(k) Postsecondary education support may be established or modified in the same manner as child support under this article.

(16) Child support commission. (a) The child support guidelines, including the schedule of basic child support obligations, and general child support issues shall be reviewed and the results of such review and any recommended changes shall be reported to the governor and to the general assembly on or before December 1, 1991, and at least every four years thereafter by a child support commission, which commission is hereby created.

(b) As part of its review, the commission must consider economic data on the cost of raising children and analyze case data on the application of, and deviations from, the guidelines and the schedule of basic child support obligations to be used in the commission's review to ensure that deviations from the guidelines and schedule of basic child support obligations are limited. In addition, the commission shall review issues identified in the federal "Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996", Public Law 104-193, including out-of-wedlock births and the prevention of teen pregnancy.

(c) The child support commission shall consist of no more than twenty-one members. The governor shall appoint persons to the commission who are representatives of the judiciary and the Colorado bar association. Members of the commission appointed by the governor shall also include the director of the division in the state department of human services that is responsible for child support enforcement, or his or her designee, a director of a county department of social services, the child support liaison to the judicial department, interested parties, a certified public accountant, and parent representatives. In making his or her appointments to the commission, the governor shall attempt to appoint persons as parent representatives or as other representatives on the commission who include a male custodial parent, a female custodial parent, a male noncustodial parent, a female noncustodial parent, a joint custodial parent, and a parent in an intact family. In making his or her appointments to the commission, the governor shall attempt to assure geographical diversity by appointing at least one member from each of the congressional districts in the state. The remaining two members of the commission shall be a member of the house of representatives appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives and a member of the senate appointed by the president of the senate and shall not be members of the same political party.

(d) Members of the child support commission shall not be compensated for their services on the commission; except that members shall be reimbursed for actual and necessary expenses for travel and mileage incurred in connection with their duties. The child support commission is authorized, subject to appropriation, to incur expenses related to its work, including the costs associated with public hearings, printing, travel, and research.

(d.5) The terms of the members appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives and the president of the senate who are serving on March 22, 2007, shall be extended to and expire on or shall terminate on the convening date of the first regular session of the sixty-seventh general assembly. As soon as practicable after such convening date, the speaker and the president shall each appoint or reappoint one member in the same manner as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (16). Thereafter, the terms of members appointed or reappointed by the speaker and the president shall expire on the convening date of the first regular session of each general assembly, and all subsequent appointments and reappointments by the speaker and the president shall be made as soon as practicable after such convening date. The person making the original appointment or reappointment shall fill any vacancy by appointment for the remainder of an unexpired term. Members appointed or reappointed by the speaker and the president shall serve at the pleasure of the appointing authority and shall continue in office until the member's successor is appointed.

(e) In reviewing the child support guidelines and the schedule of basic child support obligations as required in paragraph (a) of this subsection (16), the child support commission shall study the following issues:

(I) The merits of a statutory time limitation or the application of the doctrine of laches or such other time-limiting provision on the enforcement of support judgments that arise pursuant to the provisions of section 14-10-122;

(II) Whether different time limitations on the enforcement of support judgments should apply depending on whether support payments are made directly to an obligee or whether such payments are made through the family support registry;

(III) The merits of support judgments arising automatically as provided in section 14-10-122 (1) (c); and

(IV) Whether support obligors should receive additional notice and an opportunity for hearing prior to execution on such judgments.

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-115 is similar to § 14-10-115 as it existed prior to the 2007 amendment relocating provisions, § 46-1-5 (1)(c), C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-5, CRS 53, and CSA, C. 56, § 8, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section does not violate equal protection, due process, and privacy rights, and enforcement of the section is not an unconstitutional taking of property or an ongoing threat of imprisonment for debt. A distinction between sets of parents based on marital status is rationally related to the legitimate state interest to insure that children of divorced or separated parents receive support despite the divorce or separation. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because it approximates the amount of parental income that the child would have received in an intact family, application of the child support guidelines is not arbitrary, capricious, fundamentally unfair, or coercive. Stillman v. State, 87 P.3d 200 (Colo. App. 2003).

There may be a remedy for child support apart from a divorce action. Scheer v. District Court, 147 Colo. 265, 363 P.2d 1059 (1961).

Duty of child support is independent, and is not limited to, entry of decree of dissolution. In re Price, 727 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986).

Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act provides separate sections that govern the different elements of a dissolution order, specifically property disposition, maintenance, child support, and attorney fees. The court is required to make separate orders regarding these elements based on separate considerations and may not commingle one element with another. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Child has standing to seek support for herself under this section. In re Conradson, 43 Colo. App. 432, 604 P.2d 701 (1979).

Reasonable and necessary business expenses may be satisfied before support payment. Obligations relating to reasonable and necessary expenses associated with maintaining the structure and solvency of a business or the production of income can be satisfied before payment of child support. In re Crowley, 663 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1983).

Interest accrues on arrearages from the date each installment becomes due. In re Pote, 847 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1993).

Award of past pregnancy expenses and support. There is no jurisdiction under this section to award expenses incurred prior to the date of the filing of a motion for child support. In re Garcia, 695 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1984).

Reasonable to charge support against Colorado property of out-of-country father. Where the trial court ordered the father, who resides in Norway, to pay child support in a lump sum amount, and the court further ordered that such sum should be a charge against certain Colorado property interests of the father, such order was reasonable and not confiscatory. Berge v. Berge, 189 Colo. 103, 536 P.2d 1135 (1975).

Subsection (1.5)(a)(II) provides that emancipation occurs and an order for child support terminates when a child attains 19 years of age, unless the child is then mentally or physically disabled and, if a child is physically or mentally incapable of self-support upon attaining majority at age 21, the duty of parental support continues for the duration of the disability. Koltay v. Koltay, 667 P.2d 1374 (Colo. 1983); In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

The plain language of subsection (1)(b)(I) creates no exemption for separation agreements entered into under and consistent with earlier legislation. Although the parties' specific intention in 1991 separation agreement to share four years of college costs prevailed over general intention that child would be emancipated at 21 years of age, subsection (1)(b)(I) nevertheless controls and requires that father's college cost obligation terminates upon the earlier of the child's 21st birthday or completion of a four-year college program. In re Crowder, 77 P.3d 858 (Colo. App. 2003).

Subsection (1.5)(c) was modified to distinguish between orders for postsecondary education costs entered prior to, and after, July 1, 1997, when in a distinct departure from prior law, the court could no longer enter orders for postsecondary education expenses absent written agreement of the parties. In re Chalat, 94 P.3d 1191 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 112 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2005).

Subsection (1.5)(c.5) was added in 1997 to clarify that the convoluted legislation that had been passed since 1991 was applicable to all orders that concerned postsecondary education expenses and that were established or modified prior to July 1, 1997. In re Chalat, 94 P.3d 1191 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 112 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2005).

Tax exemptions. Court has authority to divide tax exemptions between the parents. In re Berjer, 789 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1989); In re Nielson, 794 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Larsen, 805 P.2d 1195 (Colo. App. 1991).

Court must allocate dependency exemption between the parties based on their respective gross incomes. Federal tax law contemplates such an allocation, and does not preempt it. S.F.E. in Interest of T.I.E., 981 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1998).

When allocating tax exemptions between the parents, the phrase "contributions to the costs of raising the children" refers to the percentage of child support attributed to each parent in the course of making the child support computation. In re Staggs, 940 P.2d 1109 (Colo. App. 1997).

The trial court may consider the allocation of tax exemptions in a motion for modification. In re Oberg, 900 P.2d 1267 (Colo. App. 1994).

A parent may not be ordered to pay an ex-spouse child support amounts for a period prior to entry of a child support order. In re Pote, 847 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1993).

Husband's discovery request that wife list all gifts, including without limitation, jewelry, clothes, entertainment, travel, and restaurant meals provided to her or the children by her current husband; list all amounts paid by wife's current husband directly to wife or to other parties from which she received a benefit, including attorney fees, maid service, cable television, mortgage payments, car and home repairs, insurance, and utilities; and list all assets purchased for which her current husband contributed, and husband's definition of "income" to include "all funds available for your use, including gifts" was significantly broader than the statutory definition of gross income, and therefore, denial of husband's motion to compel was proper. In re Seanor, 876 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Smith v. Casey, 198 Colo. 433, 601 P.2d 632 (1979); In re Hartford, 44 Colo. App. 303, 612 P.2d 1163 (1980); In re Dickey, 658 P.2d 276 (Colo. App. 1982); In re Steele, 714 P.2d 497 (Colo. App. 1985); In re Stone, 749 P.2d 467 (Colo. App. 1987).

II. DUTY OF SUPPORT.

This section includes adopted children as well as natural children. In re Ashlock, 629 P.2d 1108 (Colo. App. 1981).

Absent a legal parent-child relationship, there is no duty to support a child under this section. In re Bonifas, 879 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1994).

Husband and wife who sought and were granted custody of a non-biological child under a parental responsibility order owed a duty of support to the child, and trial court had the authority in their dissolution of marriage proceeding to order husband to pay child support pursuant to subsections (1) and (17). In re Rodrick, 176 P.3d 806 (Colo. App. 2007).

Only the parents' incomes and not the guardians' are to be included in the determination of child support, as supported by § 15-14-209 (2), which states, "A guardian need not use the guardian's personal funds for the ward's expenses". Sidman v. Sidman, 240 P.3d 360 (Colo. App. 2009).

Section contemplates a parent being responsible for the support of his children, not his former spouse, however reprehensible his behavior. Therefore it was error to award the reimbursement of mother's transportation costs as child care. In re Kluver, 771 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1989).

Child must reside and be supported by spouse granted custody and support. Wife who has been granted child custody is only entitled to support payments when the children were actually with her and supported by her. Brown v. Brown, 183 Colo. 356, 516 P.2d 1129 (1973).

This section contemplates that, when in a divorce case, custody of a minor child is awarded to the wife, an order for its support may be made on the husband, and in proceeding to such order the court looks only to the future. Gourley v. Gourley, 101 Colo. 430, 73 P.2d 1375 (1937).

It was not an abuse of discretion for trial court to award child support during the pendency of the dissolution proceeding. In re Atencio, 47 P.3d 718 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where plaintiff alleged that defendant was the father of the minor children of the parties, but had failed and refused to support them, and that they were in need of support which he has the means and ability to provide, if established by evidence, plaintiff would be entitled to appropriate relief. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 149 Colo. 38, 367 P.2d 594 (1961).

Person without funds or profitable employment not relieved of support obligation. Merely because a spouse desires to work on a long-range investment does not relieve him of his obligation to support his children, and the fact that a person is without funds and without profitable employment has been held not to preclude the allowance of reasonable alimony and support where nothing but a disinclination to work, regardless of the motive therefor, interferes with his ability to earn a reasonable living. Berge v. Berge, 33 Colo. App. 376, 522 P.2d 752 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 103, 536 P.2d 1135 (1975).

Where the oldest of three children of the parties was living with father, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declining to award plaintiff support money for all of the children, since such award would require defendant to pay twice for support of child in his custody. Cohan v. Cohan, 150 Colo. 249, 372 P.2d 149 (1962).

Custodial parent can be ordered to pay support to noncustodial parent under Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act. In re Fest, 742 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1987).

In order for child support to be calculated according to shared physical custody, sufficient evidence must be submitted that each parent keeps the children overnight for more than 25% of the time and that both parents contribute to the expenses of the children in addition to the payment of child support. In re Redford, 776 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1989).

There is no statutory requirement that any particular amount of expense be proven by the parent seeking a support adjustment for shared physical custody. In re Redford, 776 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1989).

Application of shared custody formula that results in a support payment by the custodial parent to the noncustodial parent is not necessarily prohibited. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where there was an absence of evidence from husband establishing that he contributed to the child's financial needs, there was no basis for application of the shared custody formula under worksheet B. In re Antuna, 8 P.3d 589 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where a mother removed her child from the state and deliberately concealed her whereabouts from the father, and by her affirmative acts voluntarily assumed responsibility for the child's support for a period of several years, during which time it appears that the child wanted for nothing necessary to health, comfort, and welfare, the mother was not in a position to claim reimbursement for such support. Griffith v. Griffith, 152 Colo. 292, 381 P.2d 455 (1963).

Where a father asserted that his right to direct and select the nature of the education of his son coexisted with the obligation to contribute to the costs of the education, it was held that it was for the divorced wife as custodian to make the decisions concerning the place and nature of the son's college education, subject only to the approval of the divorce court acting with due regard for the financial capabilities of the father. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

A divorced father did not have an absolute duty to pay for the college expenses of his minor child. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

When it had been properly demonstrated at trial that the welfare of the child would be served by further education at the college level, the father could properly be compelled to contribute to the costs of such education on a basis commensurate with the father's ability to pay until such time as the child attained majority or was otherwise emancipated. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

Travel expenses for a child, including the travel expenses of the guardians accompanying the child, shall be divided between the parents. Court did not apply the correct legal standard when it ordered the guardians to travel with juvenile at their own expense. Sidman v. Sidman, 240 P.3d 360 (Colo. App. 2009).

Award of retroactive child support is error. Since the court lacked proper jurisdiction to enter support orders until husband was personally served, its attempt to order retroactive child support was void. In re McKendry, 735 P.2d 908 (Colo. App. 1986).

Termination of support pursuant to decree. Absent a provision in the decree or a court order to the contrary, a father's duty to support pursuant to a decree which was paid to his ex-wife terminated with her death, although his common law and statutory duty of support continued. Application of Connolly, 761 P.2d 224 (Colo. App. 1988).

Phrase "each will contribute whatever may be necessary for the support of their children" creates a binding promise on part of father to contribute to children's financial support. In re Meisner, 807 P.2d 1205 (Colo. App. 1990).

"Absolute requirement" or "necessary requirement" is not the appropriate standard to apply in determining whether private school was an appropriate placement for a child. The court should consider whether private schooling meets the child's particular educational needs. In re Eaton, 894 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1995).

A motion to quash subpoenas issued to third persons allegedly contributing to support of children was properly granted where the voluntary donations of such parties had nothing to do with a defendant's duty to support children. Garrow v. Garrow, 152 Colo. 480, 382 P.2d 809 (1963).

Support for adult child. A dissolution action is a proper proceeding to enforce continued support of an adult child. Koltay v. Koltay, 667 P.2d 1374 (Colo. 1983).

III. AWARD OF SUPPORT.

A. Amount.

Law reviews. For article, "Calculation of Potential Income in Child Support Matters", see 20 Colo. Law. 233 (1991). For article, "Postsecondary Education Costs: Forging Through a Legislative Labyrinth", see 24 Colo. Law. 43 (1995).

Needs of the children are of paramount importance in determining child support obligations. Wright v. Wright, 182 Colo. 425, 514 P.2d 73 (1973); In re Van Inwegen, 757 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1988).

There is no mathematical formula for establishing a just and equitable property settlement or alimony or support. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

The guidelines for calculating child support require a court to calculate a monthly amount of child support based on the parties' combined adjusted gross income, adjust the child support based upon the needs of the children for extraordinary medical expenses and work-related child care costs, and allocate each parent's share based on the physical custody arrangements. In re Aldrich, 945 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1997).

Adoption subsidy. An adoption subsidy should not be considered a credit against the noncustodial parent's child support obligation. The underlying intent of the child support statute is best served by declining to offset a non-custodial parent's support obligation by the amount of an adoption subsidy or to consider the subsidy as a factor that may diminish the child's basic needs within the meaning of subsection (13)(b). In re Bolding-Roberts, 113 P.3d 1265 (Colo. App. 2005).

An award of alimony and child support should bear a reasonable relationship to the needs of a wife and children. Vines v. Vines, 137 Colo. 449, 326 P.2d 662 (1958).

Subsection (1)(a) authorizes the court to consider social security disability payments received on behalf of the children in calculating child support. In re Quintana, 30 P.3d 870 (Colo. App. 2001).

Social security disability benefits received by custodial parent for benefit of child on account of custodial parent's disability are not included in the custodial parent's gross income but are instead considered a financial resource of the child pursuant to subsections (2)(b)(I) and (11)(b). In re Anthony-Guillar, 207 P.3d 934 (Colo. App. 2009).

The extent to which the child's social security disability payment represents a "reduction in need" of the child is a question to be determined by the trial court based upon the totality of the circumstances. The court is not bound to deduct the entire amount of the child's social security disability payment from the basic support obligation. In re Anthony-Guillar, 207 P.3d 934 (Colo. App. 2009).

Social security survivor benefits should not be treated any differently than disability benefits. Thus, survivor benefits received by the wife in a representative capacity for son from previous marriage should not be included in wife's gross income for purposes of calculating husband's support obligation for daughter. In re Ross-Ooley, 251 P.3d 1221 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court did not err in excluding adoption subsidies and foster care payments from mother's gross income in child support considerations. These payments are income of the children on whose behalf the mother receives them and are not part of mother's income. In re Dunkle, 194 P.3d 462 (Colo. App. 2007).

Father is not entitled to an offset of his support obligation against the benefit amount he receives through his railroad retirement on behalf of his child since he retains the payments and he is the noncustodial parent. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

Subsection (1.5)(b)(I) does not require that expenses be absolutely necessary but only that they be reasonable. In re Eaton, 894 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1995); In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997).

Determination of conscionability of support provisions. To determine whether the child support provisions of a separation agreement which has been incorporated into a prior dissolution decree are fair, reasonable, and just, a trial court should consider and apply all the criteria provided by the general assembly for judicial evaluation of the provisions of property settlement agreements: the economic circumstances of the parties, § 14-10-112; the division of property, § 14-10-113(1); and the provisions for maintenance, § 14-10-114(1). In re Carney, 631 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1981).

In determining whether the terms of the original child support decree have become unconscionable, the trial court should apply the criteria set forth in subsection (1). In re Hughes, 635 P.2d 933 (Colo. App. 1981); In re Gomez, 728 P.2d 747 (Colo. App. 1986).

In a divorce action, particularly with respect to the care, custody, and maintenance of minor children, the court, at the time of making an award for the minor children, was obligated to appraise conditions as they exist at the time of the presentation. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955); Watson v. Watson, 135 Colo. 296, 310 P.2d 554 (1957); Garrow v. Garrow, 152 Colo. 480, 382 P.2d 809 (1963); In re Serfoss, 642 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1981); In re McKendry, 735 P.2d 908 (Colo. App. 1986).

Parent's net income is primary consideration in determining support. With regard to a parent's ability to pay support for his child, net income after reasonable and justifiable business expenses should be the primary consideration. In re Crowley, 663 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1983).

The applicable rule of support ability is the father's ability to pay weighed against the reasonable needs of his children, because society does not require a father in poor or moderate circumstances to support children on a higher scale just because the family once so lived or because the mother may desire to so live after the divorce. Kane v. Kane, 154 Colo. 440, 391 P.2d 361 (1964).

In making its award of child support, a trial court must weigh the father's ability to pay against the reasonable needs of the children. Berge v. Berge, 33 Colo. App. 376, 522 P.2d 752 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 103, 536 P.2d 1135 (1975).

Where the father's income, while substantial, is limited and subject to numerous demands, an order contemplating only the needs of the child and not bearing any relationship to the ability of the father to pay, and that could possibly become confiscatory of all of the father's available resources, is not valid. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

Finding as to earning capacity not confiscatory. Where the evidence supports the court's finding that the husband is capable of earning sums greatly in excess of his present net salary, although it appears that the court based its order on the present net income of the husband, the orders are not confiscatory. In re Anderson, 37 Colo. App. 55, 541 P.2d 1274 (1975).

Order that husband pay one-half of extraordinary medical and dental bills of the children, while unlimited as to amount or duration, was not confiscatory considering that the expenses were to be borne equally by each parent. In re Anderson, 37 Colo. App. 55, 541 P.2d 1274 (1975).

Factors considered in assessing propriety of child support provisions in separation agreement. In assessing the propriety of child support provisions in a separation agreement, the court must consider, in addition to unconscionability, other factors, such as the living standards the child would have enjoyed had the parties not dissolved the marriage and the physical and emotional well-being of the child. In re Brown, 626 P.2d 755 (Colo. App. 1981).

Child support obligations cannot be altered by agreement of the parents. Wright v. Wright, 182 Colo. 425, 514 P.2d 73 (1973).

Child support cannot be based on financial resources of nonparent with whom child living. The factors to be considered in making a support award do not include the financial resources of a nonparent with whom the child is living. In re Conradson, 43 Colo. App. 432, 604 P.2d 701 (1979).

Estimates of children's expenses to be considered. A trial court should not determine the amount of child support to be paid by a husband based solely on some amount that it feels is commensurate with his income but should make the determination on evidence that includes estimates of the actual needs and expenses of the children involved. In re Berry, 660 P.2d 512 (Colo. App. 1983).

A court must consider and make findings concerning a reasonable pro rata portion of necessary general family expenses as "necessary for support of the child." In re Klein, 671 P.2d 1345 (Colo. App. 1983).

Standard of living employed in determination of child support. Where the evidence shows that the standard of living at the time of separation in all probability would have continued but for the dissolution, that is the standard of living the court must employ in its determination of child support. In re Klien, 671 P.2d 1345 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section does not require specific findings of fact concerning children's assets, but only that, before determining the amount of support to be paid by a parent, the court consider, among other things the financial resources of the child. In re Wolfert, 42 Colo. App. 433, 598 P.2d 524 (1979).

Obligation of support not affected by gifts or transfers. The intent of the uniform act, § 11-50-101 et seq., is to allow custodians to disburse funds whether or not the children are adequately supported. Gifts under that act do nothing to relieve a parent of the separate duty to support the children, nor does that act authorize the custodian to disburse the funds as a means of fulfilling the parent's obligation of support. In re Wolfert, 42 Colo. App. 433, 598 P.2d 524 (1979).

Where a parent or parents voluntarily make gifts to children during the parents' marriage and the gifts are not in fulfillment of a court order to pay support, and where the parents are, at the time of dissolution of the marriage, able to meet their support obligations, the court may order that such gifts not be used to reduce the legal obligation of support. This rule assumes that the court has properly considered the financial resources of the children as required by subsection (1), before ordering the amount of support to be paid by the parents. In re Wolfert, 42 Colo. App. 433, 598 P.2d 524 (1979).

Court may order life insurance naming children as beneficiaries be maintained by parent obligated to pay child support, just as its provisions for child support now extend beyond the death of the parent, unless otherwise provided. In re Icke, 35 Colo. App. 60, 530 P.2d 1001 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 319, 540 P.2d 1076 (1975).

Award of additional $6,000 for "recreational opportunities" for children was fairly embraced within the factors to be considered by court in dividing marital property and did not create a separate "recreational fund" for the needs of the children in the nature of child support. In re Jackson, 698 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985).

The judgment in the divorce action did not determine the limits of the husband's obligation to support the children, and the children were not parties to that action, and their rights were not concluded thereby. Scheer v. District Court, 147 Colo. 265, 363 P.2d 1059 (1961).

Where there was no verification of the father's income as required by this section, the trial court was directed to take additional evidence to determine the income and to modify the support order. In re Velasquez, 773 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1989).

Trial court may draw inference that parent was concealing income, where parent refused to make a willing disclosure of financial status. In re Sgarlatti, 801 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1990).

Although the general assembly specifically provided for the use of extrapolation for combined gross income amounts falling between amounts shown in the guideline schedule, it did not provide for the use of extrapolation when combined gross incomes fall above or below the guideline schedule. In re Van Inwegen, 757 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1988).

Section guidelines applicable in determination of amount of modified award despite fact that guidelines were enacted after the original support order. In re Anderson, 761 P.2d 293 (Colo. App. 1988).

Application of new child support guidelines resulting in more than a ten percent change in support due creates a rebuttable presumption that existing support award must be modified. In re Pugliese, 761 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1988).

The general assembly intended income imputation to be an important exception to the normal rule of computation based on actual gross income of the parent. This exception applies when the parent shirks his or her child support obligation by unreasonably foregoing higher paying employment that he or she could obtain. The legislature meant this exception to prevent detriment to children by deterring parents from making employment choices that do not account for their children's welfare. Nevertheless, the general assembly intended courts to approach income imputation with caution. People v. Martinez, 70 P.3d 474 (Colo. 2003).

Imputing to voluntarily unemployed wife an income equal to income that of a person employed at the minimum wage even though evidence indicated that wife had been offered a higher paying job was not abuse of court's discretion given evidence of wife's ill health and problems in obtaining day care. In re Beyer, 789 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1989).

Imputing of full-time income to mother working part-time was error where mother did not voluntarily choose part-time employment but was required to stay home during the day to care for one of her children who had Downs syndrome. In re Pote, 847 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court abused its discretion in finding that mother's underemployment was voluntary where mother worked only 32 hours per week so that she would have time to take the parties' child, who had cerebral palsy, to physical therapy. In re Foss, 30 P.3d 850 (Colo. App. 2000).

Interest was properly included in calculation of imputed income. In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

"Overtime", in determination of parent's gross income (prior to 1996 amendment), does not include income from "extra" jobs. In re Marson, 929 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1996).

It was proper for the trial court to find that the overtime worked by father was required and to include such income within the father's gross income for the following reasons: (1) In his position as equity owner, director, and officer of the family-owned corporation, he was his own supervisor; (2) the evidence established, and the court found, that his position as vice-president and job-site foreman required that he work more than other employees as evidenced by his own testimony that his job as foreman could not always be done in a 40-hour week; and (3) the evidence established that the reason the father was required to work twenty to 25 hours of overtime per week was to assure that the jobs for which he was responsible would be completed in a timely fashion in order to avoid penalties that would work a direct financial disadvantage to the father. In re Rice & Foutch, 987 P.2d 947 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding mother's overtime pay from the determination of her gross income. Mother chose to work extra hours voluntarily, and the overtime was not required as a condition of her employment. In re Dunkle, 194 P.3d 462 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section imposes no burden on one parent to prove that an available job exists for the other parent. Rather, the determination of income hinges on the ability of the parent to perform work. In re Mackey, 940 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1997).

Court is merely required by subsection (7)(b)(I) to determine potential income and statute imposes no burden on one parent to prove that an available job exists for the other parent or that a particular job is available. In re Bregar, 952 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1997).

In order to impute income based upon a parent's voluntary underemployment, the trial court must examine all relevant factors bearing on whether the parent is shirking his or her child support obligation by unreasonably foregoing higher paying employment that he or she could obtain, and, if the parent is, the trial court must determine what he or she can reasonably earn and contribute to the child's support. If the trial court does not find that the parent is shirking his or her child support obligation by unreasonably foregoing higher paying employment, the court should calculate the amount of child support from actual gross income only. People v. Martinez, 70 P.3d 474 (Colo. 2003).

In determining if a parent is voluntarily underemployed, the factors the court may consider may include: The firing and post-firing conduct of the parent; the amount of time the parent spent looking for a job of equal caliber before accepting a lower paying job; whether the parent refused an offer of employment at a higher salary; whether the parent sought a job in the field in which he or she has experience and training; the availability of jobs for a person with the parent's level of education, training, and skills; the prevailing wage rates in the region; the parent's prior employment experience and history; and the parent's history of child support payment. People v. Martinez, 70 P.3d 474 (Colo. 2003).

The court must make findings sufficient to support a determination of underemployment. Imputing support without factual findings supporting a determination of underemployment is in error. In re Martin, 42 P.3d 75 (Colo. App. 2002).

Father not underemployed where mother presented no evidence that employment at income previously earned by father was available to him, no evidence of alternative employment at a higher level of remuneration than he presently earned, and no evidence that support to the children had been unreasonably reduced. In re Campbell, 905 P.2d 19 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court properly found father was voluntarily underemployed where father, a licensed attorney, had opted for inactive status and worked seasonally for an apple orchard at $10 per hour. In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court properly declined to find that father was voluntarily unemployed or underemployed where he voluntarily refused to file a claim for damages resulting from a work-related accident. In re England, 997 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1999).

Loss of employment due to addiction and re-employment at a lower wage does not constitute voluntary underemployment; however, a person who has been involuntarily terminated from a position for drug use may subsequently become voluntarily unemployed or underemployed based on actions taken after the termination. In re Atencio, 47 P.3d 718 (Colo. App. 2002).

The trial court erroneously computed child support by relying solely upon the husband's income and disregarding the wife's statutory obligation to contribute to the child's support. If both parents have actual income, or a reasonable ability to earn income, it is erroneous as a matter of law to allocate the support obligation to one parent. In re Sewell, 817 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1991).

In computing child support, the trial court erred in failing to consider either the wife's income as represented by the monthly maintenance award or her ability to earn income from the marital property distributed to her under the court's decree. In re Sewell, 817 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1991).

For purposes of child support, father's income, as derived from the exercise of stock options, is limited to the difference between his purchase price of the optioned stock and the price at which he then sold it. In re Campbell, 905 P.2d 19 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court should initially include the amount of a capital gain as a component of gross income for the year in which the gain was received. Thereafter, the court has authority to deviate from the child support guidelines if their application would be inequitable, unjust, or inappropriate. In re Zisch, 967 P.2d 199 (Colo. App. 1998).

When considering capital gains from the sale of property awarded in a property division, the court shall include in gross income only those capital gains realized from post-property division appreciation in the property. In re Upson, 991 P.2d 341 (Colo. App. 1999).

Court erred in not deducting ordinary and necessary expenses from capital gains when self-employed. For purposes of determining a person's gross income, when the person was self-employed as a builder of custom homes, ordinary and necessary expenses incurred to sell property should have been deducted from the person's gross income. In re Glenn, 60 P.3d 775 (Colo. App. 2002).

Husband's taxable distributions from a subchapter S corporation owned wholly by him and two partners, one of whom had left, while not properly considered as extra income, should have been included as gross income, less ordinary and necessary business expenses. In re Upson, 991 P.2d 341 (Colo. App. 1999).

In determining monthly child support obligation for the period following the year in which a capital gain is received, the court should impute as income to the party a rate of return that the net capital gain, after taxes, can reasonably be expected to generate. In re Zisch, 967 P.2d 199 (Colo. App. 1998).

Subsection (7)(a) does not provide for deduction of federal and state income taxes in computing gross income, including from lottery winnings, for purposes of calculating child support. In re Bohn, 8 P.3d 539 (Colo. App. 2000).

The amount received as gross income from lottery winnings is used to calculate child support for the year in which the income is received. Thereafter, if a parent invests a portion of the funds which were received as income in one year, any interest earned in the subsequent years is properly included as gross income for purposes of calculating child support in those years. In re Bohn, 8 P.3d 539 (Colo. App. 2000).

Income from an irrevocable trust of which wife was beneficiary should not be omitted from wife's gross income for purposes of calculating child support, even though the trial court correctly declined to treat the income as property subject to division. In re Pooley, 996 P.2d 230 (Colo. App. 1998).

If a parent is voluntarily unemployed or underemployed, child support must be based on the parent's potential income. While a parent is entitled to remain underemployed, the other parent's child support obligation may not be increased as a result. In re Mackey, 940 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1997).

The magistrate did not err in imputing to the father the annual income he had earned prior to his resignation. The evidence amply supports the magistrate's determination that the father quit his job because he won the lottery, that he was physically capable of working but was voluntarily unemployed, and that his decision to resign from his job was not a good faith career choice. In re McCord, 910 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court did not err in imputing income to husband absent findings regarding invol- untary job loss, ability to pay, and needs of the child. Although the child's needs may be considered in determining the amount of child support that must be paid at a given level of income, nothing in subsection (7) suggests that the child's needs are relevant to the determination of a parent's income. In re Yates, 148 P.3d 304 (Colo. App. 2006).

Mother's decision to accept travel agency job, rather than to collect unemployment benefits until she found a higher paying job, was a good faith career choice and she therefore was not voluntarily underemployed. In re McCord, 910 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court has the prerogative to determine that husband's decision to leave the practice of law and pursue cattle ranching does not fit the exceptions set forth in subsection (7)(b)(III)(B), where husband argued the change was a good faith career choice, was not intended to reduce the support available to his children, and did not unreasonably reduce support. In re Bregar, 952 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1997).

Person who is involuntarily terminated from his position due to his own misconduct is not voluntarily unemployed or underemployed. Whether a person lost a job because of willful or knowing misconduct is not determinative of whether the person is voluntarily unemployed or underemployed. What is determinative is the person's subsequent course of action and decision making. A person who has been involuntarily terminated from a position may thereafter become voluntarily unemployed or underemployed by not attempting in good faith to obtain new employment at a comparable salary or by refusing to accept suitable employment offers. People ex rel. J.R.T., 55 P.3d 217 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd sub nom. People v. Martinez, 70 P.3d 474 (Colo. 2003).

"Support available to a child" in subsection (7)(b)(III)(B) is not synonymous with "basic child support obligation" elsewhere in this section. "Basic child support obligation", as defined in subsection (10), typically involves consideration of both parties' respective incomes. "Support available to a child" in subsection (7)(b)(III)(B), however, focuses on the career decision and any associated income change of the putatively underemployed parent that affects his or her ability to provide child support. People ex rel. Cerda v. Walker, 32 P.3d 628 (Colo. App. 2001).

Thus, if the mother has improved her ability to provide child support, it does not necessarily mean that the father's voluntary underemployment did not unreasonably reduce his ability to provide child support. Because both parents have a duty to support a child to the best of their abilities, an increase in one parent's ability to provide child support cannot serve as justification for the other parent's unreasonable reduction in his or her ability to provide child support. People ex rel. Cerda v. Walker, 32 P.3d 628 (Colo. App. 2001).

In computing parental income for purposes of establishing child support payments, child support for other dependents which a parent is legally obligated to pay, shall be deducted, and such deduction is not limited to amounts actually paid pursuant to such obligation. In re Eze, 856 P.2d 75 (Colo. App. 1993).

The intent of this section is that a parent who is legally responsible for the support of other children be given a deduction, within statutory guidelines, for child support actually paid, regardless whether an order for that support had been entered. Thus, when a prior support order does not reflect the parent's full legal responsibility for support, the parent is entitled to a deduction under paragraph (d.5) of subsection (7), instead of under paragraph (d), in determining the parent's gross income. In re K.M.T., 33 P.3d 1276 (Colo. App. 2001).

Adequate proof of child support obligations actually paid for other dependents is required when computing parental income for the purpose of establishing child support for present dependents. In re Dickson, 983 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Maintenance actually paid by a parent", as used in subsection (10)(a)(II), includes payments made by a parent to a former spouse. It is not limited to payments made to the mother of the child in the paternity proceedings before the court; it includes all maintenance payments made by a parent. In Interest of A.R.W., 903 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1994).

The court must consider the father's and the child's financial resources in addition to considering the mother's resources in deciding the appropriate amount of the parents' contributions to the child's college expenses. In re Eaton, 894 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1995) (decided under law in effect prior to 1993 amendment).

Court did not err in including $350 rent in father's gross income without excluding allowable business deductions since record revealed nothing to warrant reversal of the trial court's implicit determination that any claimed expenses were not necessary or required to produce the rental income in question. In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court should have considered mother's detailed evidence of the children's living expenses and the fact that father provided and fully paid for a residence for the children in determining the child support obligation, given the difficulty in applying Colorado child support guidelines to the needs of children in Russia. People ex rel. A.K., 72 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2003).

Once the requisites for shared physical custody have been established, subsection (10)(c) requires that the child support obligation be adjusted by the mathematical formula contained in subsection (14)(b). In re Redford, 776 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1989).

If trial court deviates from the guidelines, it is required to make findings that application of the guidelines would be inequitable and specifying the reasons for the deviation. Thus, when court deviated from guidelines, it was required to find either that one of the relevant factors in subsection (1) applied or that the husband did not make contributions to the child's expenses beyond what he was obligated to pay in child support. In re Marshall, 781 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 794 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1990).

Modification of award required where trial court deviates from guidelines but fails to make findings required by subsection (3)(a). In re Sgarlatti, 801 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court must make provision for expense of transportation of child between homes of parents, which expense is to be divided between parents in proportion to their adjusted gross income. In re Marshall, 781 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 794 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1990); In re Sgarlatti, 801 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court did not err in including transportation expenses in the child support calculation before those expenses were actually known since there was no dispute as to the parents' income and the magistrate was free to adopt the percentage share of the father's income as shown in the father's computation. In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

Husband's personal injury settlement payments are a financial resource that constitutes "gross income" under the child support guidelines. In re Fain, 794 P.2d 1086 (Colo. App. 1990).

Proper for court to base child support calculation on father's monthly income from his railroad annuity despite that income deriving from a previously divided asset since the property division does not change the status of those monthly payments as an income source to be considered in determining the husband's child support obligation. In re Zappanti, 80 P.3d 889 (Colo. App. 2003).

For investments, income is limited to the gain on the original investment. However, a party's characterization of payments as a return on investment is not binding on the court. In re Laughlin, 932 P.2d 858 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court did not err in using a two-year average of father's investment income when calculating father's overall income for the purposes of calculating child support. In re Rice and Fouch, 987 P.2d 947 (Colo. App. 1999).

No error in the trial court's conclusion that father's "actual gross income" included interest or dividends which had accrued to his

IRA but which he had not withdrawn. The use of the word "actual" in subsection (7)(a) does not limit gross income to that "actually received". In re Tessmer, 903 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court correctly excluded father's voluntary enhanced retirement program (VERP) benefit from calculation of his gross income. In determining whether the VERP benefit constitutes income for child support purposes, the court must answer the following questions: (1) Is the VERP benefit severance pay? (2) Is the VERP benefit an employer contribution to pension and retirement benefits? (3) Should an undistributed employer contribution be treated as income? (4) Does father's option to elect a lump sum distribution or monthly annuity payments of his retirement account, including the VERP benefit, mean that the VERP benefit should be credited as income? In re Mugge, 66 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2003).

The requirements that father voluntarily retire rather than be terminated and that he provide a general release of the employer distinguish the VERP benefit from a typical severance pay program, and thus the VERP benefit was not severance pay includable within the statutory definition of gross income. In re Mugge, 66 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2003).

The employer denominated the VERP benefit as a retirement benefit, credited the benefit to the father's retirement account in its pension plan, and calculated the amount using age and years of service, therefore the VERP benefit was an employer-contributed pension or retirement benefit. In re Mugge, 66 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because the employer determined the amounts of pension plan contributions and the employees did not have the option of directly receiving the amounts as wages, prior to any distribution, the employer's VERP contribution to father's account in its pension plan did not constitute gross income for consideration under the child support guidelines. In re Mugge, 66 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2003).

VERP benefit should not be treated as gross income for child support purposes merely because father could have elected a lump sum distribution or monthly annuity payments instead of rolling the benefit over into another qualified pension plan. In re Mugge, 66 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2003).

Employer contributions to father's insurance plans not income for child support purposes. Similar to employer retirement plan contributions, father did not have the option to take the contributions as wages and use them for general living expenses, so such contributions are not properly considered income for purposes of the child support calculation. In re Davis, 252 P.3d 530 (Colo. App. 2011).

Extraordinary medical expenses were required to be divided between the parties in direct proportion to their adjusted gross income and added to the basic child support, even where the child's condition existed and was known at the time of the original agreement where the parties agreed to each pay one-half of these expenses. In re Nielsen, 794 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1990).

Meaning of "adjusted gross income". Definition of "adjusted gross income" in subsection (10)(a) does not provide for the deduction of federal and state income taxes or FICA taxes in computation for child support purposes. In re Baroni, 781 P.2d 191 (Colo. App. 1989).

The fact that certain items may be deductible on a party's federal income tax return does not require exclusion from gross income under the child support guideline. In re Eaton, 894 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court did not err in determining that "gross income" included the foreign service premium, the commodities and services allowance, and the expatriate tax equalization payment made to compensate person for the cost of living in a foreign locale. In re Stress, 939 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1997).

Meaning of "extraordinary medical expenses". Extraordinary medical expenses, as defined in subsection (12)(b), must be "uninsured". Where psychological counseling services were insured expenses under the father's medical insurance plan, trial court erred in requiring him to pay for child's counseling by a psychologist not participating in the plan absent a finding that such counseling was not adequately or reasonably covered by the plan. In re Ahrens, 847 P.2d 257 (Colo. App. 1993).

A parent's obligation for extraordinary medical expenses is an integral part of the child support obligation and, as such, is non-dischargeable in bankruptcy. Parent who provided letter to court asserting the obligation had been discharged was ordered to pay for his share of the extraordinary medical expenses on behalf of the children. In re Campbell, 140 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2006).

Basic allowance for quarters (BAQ) constitutes an in-kind payment that is income for child support purposes. In re Long, 921 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1996).

Increased cost for the addition of teenage son to automobile insurance is not an extraordinary expense under subsection (13). In re Long, 921 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court does not have authority to impute a gross income where actual income is tax exempt. Rather the amount received each month shall be deemed to be a gross income. In re Fain, 794 P.2d 1986 (Colo. App. 1990).

"Gross" income for purposes of calculating child support can include the amount of income an asset could reasonably be expected to generate even if that asset has been consumed prior to the support determination. In re Laughlin, 932 P.2d 858 (Colo. App. 1997).

The burden is upon the parent contesting the support order to prove that a deviation from the presumptive award is both reasonable and necessary. In re Baroni, 781 P.2d 191 (Colo. App. 1989).

No automatic adjustment of gross income for non-ordered support. Non-ordered child support payments to others are not to be determined by a mechanical application of the child support schedule. Rather the impact of payment of non-ordered obligations must be evaluated as provided in subsection (3)(a). People in Interest of C.D., 767 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1989).

Party alleging that payment of non-ordered support obligation requires deviation from presumptive award determined under statutory guidelines has burden to prove the claim. Deviation from guidelines must be shown reasonable and necessary considering certain enumerated factors. People in Interest of C.D., 767 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1989).

An agreement of the parties regarding child support, custody, and visitation does not bind the court, and the court must review child support guidelines to determine the adequacy of the child support agreement of the parties. In re Micaletti, 796 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court's apportionment of costs for child's guardian ad litem upheld where court apportioned costs between mother and father on the basis of the underemployed mother's potential income. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989).

Specific written or oral findings must be made by the court to support deviation from the child support amounts specified by the statutory schedule, and this applies to approving a stipulation of the parties. In re Miller, 790 P.2d 890 (Colo. App. 1990); In Interest of D.R.V., 885 P.2d 351 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where the parties' gross income exceeded the uppermost level of income scheduled in the guidelines and the minimum child support amount is presumed to be set forth in the highest level in the guidelines, this presumption may be rebutted, and the court must exercise discretion considering the financial resources of both parents and the children, the physical and emotional condition of the children and their educational needs, the needs of the noncustodial parent, and the standard of living that the children would have enjoyed had the parents' marriage not been dissolved. In re Schwaab and Rollins, 794 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

Where parties' gross income exceeded the uppermost level of income in the guidelines, trial court was required to calculate the minimum presumptive amount of support and, in addition, translate the children's higher standard of living into specific monetary requirements. In re Bookout, 833 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1990), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

There is a rebuttable presumption that the basic child support obligation at the upper level of the guidelines is the minimum presumptive amount of support. Where father won five million dollars in the Colorado state lottery and the parties' adjusted gross incomes thereafter exceeded the uppermost levels of the guidelines, the court remanded the case for a redetermination of child support. In re Foss, 30 P.3d 850 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where parties' income exceeded the highest combined gross income level set out in the guidelines, the gross disparity in their incomes may explain the initial basis for deviation by the court, but additional findings concerning the needs of the children must be entered to establish the amount of deviation ordered. In re Upson, 991 P.2d 341 (Colo. App. 1999).

Because the children's needs are of paramount importance in determining the child support obligation, in calculating the appropriate amount of child support, the court should look at, among other things, the costs of food, shelter, clothing, medical care, education, and recreational costs at the level enjoyed before the dissolution. In re Schwaab and Rollins, 794 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1990).

Viewing the statute as a whole, the means of meeting the "particular educational needs of a child" are not limited to providing private school only when a child has a learning disability or otherwise qualifies for a program of special education. In re Payan, 890 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1995).

Where the mother has sole custody of the three children, and there is a different visitation schedule for each child, in deciding whether the shared custody calculation for child support is applicable, the court must calculate the number of overnight stays for each child, divide each by three and total the results to determine the total amount of time the father spends with the children. If the cumulative number of overnights is less than 25% of the year, the shared custody calculation is inapplicable. In re Quam, 813 P.2d 833 (Colo. App. 1991).

Court erred in beginning the child support calculation for children with different parenting time schedules who are in the mother's primary care by using a separate worksheet for each child. This error effectively treated each child as an only child under the guidelines and resulted in an inflated child support amount. The court did not enter sufficient findings to support a deviation from the presumed amount under the guidelines. In re Wells, 252 P.3d 1212 (Colo. App. 2011).

Each parent in a dissolution proceeding has the obligation to support their children to the best of their abilities, and the court may determine that one parent's failure to find or keep a job is a voluntary refusal to carry out a support obligation. In re Nordahl, 834 P.2d 838 (Colo. App. 1992).

Costs of high school extracurricular activities such as cheerleading, driver's education, sports, and debate do not qualify as higher educational expenses under subsection (13). In re Ansay, 839 P.2d 527 (Colo. App. 1992).

Inclusion of ice skating fees in the support calculation as a reasonable and necessary expense was warranted. In re Laughlin, 932 P.2d 858 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court erred in ordering parent to pay percentage of children's estimated educational expenses without specifying sum to be paid. In re Pollock, 881 P.2d 470 (Colo. App. 1994).

Because of a lack of certainty of future bonuses, the court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to estimate the amount of any possible future bonuses for present support purposes. In re Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996).

The trial court did not err in not considering income from the parties' mentally retarded adult son in calculating child support obligation. The trial court is not bound to deduct automatically the amount of a child's income from the basic child support obligation when that income does not reduce the need for parental support. In re Folwell, 910 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion setting appropriate amount of child support when it included the child's pro rata share of the standard and ongoing living expenses in wife's monthly needs. In re Balanson, 996 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 25 P.3d 28 (Colo. 2001).

B. Discretion of Court.

Determination of child support is in the sound discretion of the trial court, and in the absence of an abuse of that discretion, not shown here, it will not be disturbed on review. Brigham v. Brigham, 141 Colo. 41, 346 P.2d 302 (1959); Lanz v. Lanz, 143 Colo. 73, 351 P.2d 845 (1960); Huber v. Huber, 143 Colo. 255, 353 P.2d 379 (1960); Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972); Ferguson v. Ferguson, Colo. App., 507 P.2d 1110 (1973); Berge v. Berge, 33 Colo. App. 376, 522 P.2d 752 (1974), aff'd, 189 Colo. 103, 536 P.2d 1135 (1975); In re Krise, 660 P.2d 920 (Colo. App. 1983); In re Garcia, 695 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1984); In re Pierce, 720 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1985).

Alimony, support, and property settlement issues were formerly considered together to determine whether the court had abused its discretion, and in making the determination, the court would consider a variety of factors, including whether the property was acquired before or after marriage, the efforts and attitudes of the parties towards its accumulation, the respective ages and earning abilities of the parties, the conduct of the parties during the marriage, the duration of the marriage, their stations in life, their health and physical condition, the necessities of the parties, their financial condition, and other relevant circumstances. Carlson v. Carlson, 178 Colo. 283, 497 P.2d 1006 (1972).

Court may consider only relevant provisions of section. In awarding child support, a trial court is obligated to consider only the relevant provisions of this section. It commits reversible error by considering matters related to adoption. In re Ashlock, 629 P.2d 1108 (Colo. App. 1981).

In granting a divorce a court has no authority under the statute to decree that a part of the property of the husband shall be the sole property of his children. Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964); Giambrocco v. Giambrocco, 161 Colo. 510, 423 P.2d 328 (1967).

The trial court was without authority to direct the husband to give to each of his children a share in a future estate which he may or may not acquire, because the obligation of the defendant is to provide reasonable support for his children according to their need, within the range of his ability, and a father of children is under no obligation to settle any property upon his children, or to deed them an interest in any asset; on the contrary he may by will or deed or other voluntary act disinherit a child if he sees fit to do so. Menor v. Menor, 154 Colo. 475, 391 P.2d 473 (1964); Giambrocco v. Giambrocco, 161 Colo. 510, 423 P.2d 328 (1967).

Former husband may not discover the amount of former wife's current husband's income but may discover the existence of former wife's income in the form of regular payments made to the former wife by her current husband. In re Nimmo, 891 P.2d 1002 (Colo. 1995).

Although trial court abused its discretion in modifying child support and cause was remanded upon appeal, the trial court order for child support remained in full force and effect pending entry of a new support order. In re Van Inwegen, 757 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1988).

Court improperly ordered noncustodial mother to make support payments when the court made a finding that the mother did not have the financial ability to pay child support. In re Jarman, 752 P.2d 1068 (Colo. App. 1988).

There is a rebuttable presumption in any action to establish or modify child support that $1,000 is the minimum presumptive amount of child support for one child when the parental combined income exceeds the uppermost levels of the guideline; however, the trial court may exercise its discretion and choose to set a different amount after consideration of all relevant factors. In re Van Inwegen, 757 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1988).

As a matter of law, the trial court may not initially refuse to apply child support guidelines. In re Thornton, 802 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1990).

Cost of a nanny may be included in the calculation of child support. S.F.E. in Interest of T.I.E., 981 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court erred in failing to divide uninsured medical expenses in proportion to parents' adjusted gross incomes without making necessary findings to support deviation from guidelines. In re Pollock, 881 P.2d 470 (Colo. App. 1994).

The trial court has discretion to order that the reasonable and necessary costs of a child's attendance at a private school be divided between the parents in proportion to their income. In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided prior to 1998 amendment to subsection (13)(a)(II)); In re West, 94 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2004).

Attendance at a private school may be approved where it is necessary to meet the particular educational needs of the child. In re West, 94 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2004).

In determining whether the children's parochial school tuition should be approved prospectively as a reasonable and necessary expense, the court should consider the parents' income, the standard of living that the children would have enjoyed if the parents' marriage had not been dissolved, and other factors as appropriate. In re West, 94 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2004).

The trial court exceeded its authority in ordering the husband to fund an educational trust for the benefit of the parties' son. The courts have been granted no authority to order the creation of a trust for the benefit of minor children. In re Sewell, 817 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering the husband to pay all college expenses of the parties' son. Use of word "divided" in subsection (13) does not imply that both parents must contribute to each item of support; court is given discretion in subsection (1) to order "either or both" parents to pay support. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to enactment of subsection (1.5), dealing specifically with postsecondary education support).

A parent may also be required to contribute to the costs associated with a child's athletic activities in some cases. The child's particular needs and predissolution standard of living are among the factors to be considered by the court. In re West, 94 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2004).

Psychiatric therapy for child was properly included as an extraordinary medical expense in an order under this section. In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court erred in allocating to father all of child's travel expenses for visitation, rather than proportionately allocating them between the parties, in absence of finding that such allocation was appropriate. In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided prior to 1998 amendment to subsection (13)(a)(II)).

Child support guideline does not provide for allocation between the parties of a parent's travel expenses. In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided prior to 1998 amendment to subsection (13)(a)(II)).

Adjustment of the child support amount to allow for transportation expenses is not limited to expenses incurred in long distance or interstate travel and does apply to automobile expenses incurred in transporting a child between the homes of the parents. In re L.F., 56 P.3d 1249 (Colo. App. 2002).

Award constituted an application of, and not a deviation from, the guidelines where the evidence and the findings were sufficient to support only a partial offset of the child's income for her pro rata share of reasonable and necessary monthly expenses as well as the maintenance of a fund for vacations, one-time purchases, and other occasional expenses. In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

The burden is upon the parent contesting the support order to prove that a deviation from the presumptive award is both reasonable and necessary. In re Stress, 939 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that parent did not meet this burden. In re Stress, 939 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1997).

Trial court may deviate from the child support guidelines set forth in this section if the application of such guidelines would be inequitable, but if it does deviate, the court must make specific factual findings to support any deviation and failure to make such specific findings requires reversal. In re English, 757 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1988); In re Hoffman, 878 P.2d 103 (Colo. App. 1994); In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

The trial court has discretion to deviate from the guidelines where justified, provided it makes appropriate findings. In re Thornton, 802 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Payan, 890 P.2d 264 (Colo. App. 1995).

Deviation from child support guidelines is not justified by hardship resulting solely from application of the guidelines, absent other unusual or unique financial circumstances. In re Thornton, 802 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1990).

Taking care of three-year-old triplets may be considered extraordinary circumstances justifying a deviation from the child support guidelines. In re Ikeler, 148 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 161 P.3d 663 (Colo. 2007).

The court must make specific factual findings, however, justifying such a deviation. In re Ikeler, 148 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 161 P.3d 663 (Colo. 2007).

The finding that it is important for the child to spend extended time with mother is, in itself, irrelevant to the issue of whether there should be a deviation in child support. In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

A finding that one parent has a higher cost of living will not, in and of itself, ordinarily justify deviating from the guidelines. In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

Case remanded for reconsideration of deviation from guidelines based on new spouse's income under the guidelines in In re Nimmo, 891 P.2d 1002 (Colo. 1995). In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (13) does not require an automatic adjustment to presumptive amount of child support but rather gives the trial court discretion to determine if an adjustment on account of a child's financial resources is appropriate. In re Thornton, 802 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1990).

Application of child support guidelines establishes an amount of support that is presumed to be necessary to meet a child's needs; however, the extent to which an unemancipated child's income should be used to defray basic support obligations is within the trial court's discretion and depends upon the totality of circumstances in a particular case. In re Pollock, 881 P.2d 470 (Colo. App. 1994); In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in declining to include child's receipt of public support payments as income available to the child under subsection (13)(b). Such payments represent gratuitous contributions from the government and do not reduce the parent's duty to provide support. They are intended to supplement other income, not to substitute for it. In re Thornton, 802 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1990).

But it is proper under subsection (13)(b) for the court to consider mother's receipt of social security disability payments on behalf of the children as an adjustment to child support because those payments actually diminished the children's basic needs. In re Quintana, 30 P.3d 870 (Colo. App. 2001).

Court is authorized under this section to calculate child support based on a determination of a parent's potential income if parent is voluntarily unemployed or underemployed. In re Marshall, 781 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 794 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in reducing the father's amount of child support, where it found that the father was not voluntarily underemployed but had terminated his full time employment to return to college to obtain an advanced degree. In re Ehlert, 868 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1994).

If a court determines that a parent engaged in a good faith effort to achieve higher income, financial independence, or a career in the foreseeable future, to impute income to that parent would unfairly penalize the parent's effort at self-sufficiency and would be contrary to the public policy of encouraging the financial independence of dependent spouses. In re Seanor, 876 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1993).

Wife was engaged in a good faith effort to achieve a college education in order to further her income position where the evidence showed she had not worked for approximately nine years and she had completed two years of study towards a bachelors degree in a three-year period, during which time she had achieved a 3.72 grade point average. She had not attended school the previous year because of the death of her current spouse's mother and the hospitalization and continued medical complications and concerns of one of the children. In re Seanor, 876 P.2d 44 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court properly determined that father, a convicted sex offender, was voluntarily underemployed. Although the conviction likely limited father's employment opportunities, father did not attempt to find gainful employment despite having an M.B.A. degree, a real estate broker's license, and many years of work experience. People ex rel. A.R.D., 43 P.3d 632 (Colo. App. 2001).

Extent to which a child's income and assets should be applied to the payment of educational expenses or basic support is a question of fact to be determined by the trial court under the totality of circumstances in each case. In re Barrett, 797 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Pollock, 881 P.2d 470 (Colo. App. 1994); In re Davis, 252 P.3d 530 (Colo. App. 2011).

The limit on postsecondary expenses is the amount calculated as if the child receiving such education had been the only child. Legislative history makes it clear that the 1994 amendment was intended to clarify rather than change the statute. In re Parker, 886 P.2d 312 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in not deviating from the child support guidelines in order to avoid calculating child support based on IRA interest and dividends. In re Tessmer, 903 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1995).

Absent a finding that a child has been diagnosed as having a mental disorder, a non-custodial parent cannot be required to share in the costs for therapy, whether such costs are included within the child support obligation or ordered to be paid separately. Absent the need for therapy because of a mental disorder, such cost must be borne by the party who makes the decision to provide the child with therapy. In re Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court may not deviate downward from the presumptive child support award to ensure continued eligibility for public assistance benefits. Court erred in ordering mother to pay $245 per month in child support instead of the statutory amount of $399 per month in order to preserve the paternal grandparents' public daycare benefits. In re Hein, 253 P.3d 636 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in In re Rosser, 767 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1988).

C. Modification.

The provisions of subsections (2) and (7)(e) indicate that the general assembly did not intend to include health insurance premiums in the ordinary and necessary expenses covered by the basic child support obligation set forth in the guidelines; therefore, health insurance premiums paid by the father cannot be deducted from the total amount of the father's support obligation under the child support guidelines. In re English, 757 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where there was no evidence presented to establish the asserted extra cost of purchasing health insurance through the employment of the father's present spouse, there was no basis for the trial court to apply this section. In re Ansay, 839 P.2d 527 (Colo. App. 1992).

Application of the provisions of this section by the court for the modification of a prior child support order entered under the Uniform Parentage Act was error as a matter of law. Ashcraft v. Allis, 747 P.2d 1274 (Colo. App. 1987).

Pre-1991 postsecondary education support orders. Subsection (1.5)(c.5) allows the modification of pre-1991 postsecondary education support orders. In re Chalat, 112 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2005).

Substantial and continuing changed circumstances requirement and postsecondary education support orders. Absent application of the age of emancipation (§ 14-10-122 (4)) or medical insurance (§ 14-10-122 (1)) exceptions, the court's continuing jurisdiction to modify postsecondary education support orders is invoked only upon a showing of substantial and continuing changed circumstances by the party seeking modification. Nothing in the plain language of subsection (1.5)(c.5) or § 14-10-122 alters this clear, unambiguous requirement. In re Chalat, 112 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2005).

Effect of amendments to postsecondary education support scheme on the substantial and continuing changed circumstances requirement. The general assembly did not express an intent that its enactments of amendments to the postsecondary education support scheme alone automatically triggers a court's continuing jurisdiction to modify child support. The requirement for substantial and continuing changed circumstances must still be shown. In re Chalot, 112 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2005).

Order specifying amount where original order merely imposed duty. Where an original court order imposes a duty of support without specifying an amount under the criteria of this section, a subsequent court order specifying the amount need only conform with this section, rather than the modification requirements of § 14-10-122. In re Saiz, 634 P.2d 1020 (Colo. App. 1981).

If the financial ability of the husband and father improves, and the needs of the minor children increase, the jurisdiction of the court to make additional orders for the care and maintenance of the minor children may be invoked at any time in a proper proceeding. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

Trial court properly denied father's motion for modification, which was based solely on the 1993 statutory amendment to subsection (1.5)(b)(I) and which did not allege any substantial or continuing change in the parents' or the child's circumstances. In re Eaton, 894 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1995).

The provisions of any decree respecting child support may be modified only as to installments accruing subsequent to the filing of the motion for modification. Thus, if child support is modified, the modification should be effective as of the date of filing of the request therefor. In re Mackey, 940 P.2d 1112 (Colo. App. 1997).

Any order reducing the amount of support money operated only in future. Engleman v. Engleman, 145 Colo. 299, 358 P.2d 864 (1961).

The proposition that future support payments could not be reduced as long as a husband was in default, even though a proper showing could be made of inability to pay, was not the law in Colorado. Kane v. Kane, 154 Colo. 440, 391 P.2d 361 (1964).

Parent's medical expenses relevant to modification as well as to initial determination of support. Where change in presumed support under guideline based on gross income is less than ten percent, the parent seeking modification may nonetheless establish a substantial and continuing change in circumstances, justifying a deviation from the guideline, due to an increase in the parent's personal medical expenses. In re Ford, 851 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1993).

Deviation from the guidelines in calculating the basic child support obligation was error where court reasoned that father would not be able to support himself if required to pay the amount specified in the guidelines in light of his required contribution to the extraordinary medical expenses required by the child. In re Nielsen, 794 P.2d 1097 (Colo. App. 1990).

In circumstances where father is providing health insurance coverage for new spouse and father's other children living with him, in addition to child who is subject to order, the amount of the premium attributable to such child was "not available or cannot be verified" and trial court erred by refusing to allow the addition to the support obligation for a portion of that premium. In re Andersen, 895 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1995).

Child's income may allow for a reduction of the support obligation if the court determines that it does "actually diminish basic needs" of child. In re Kluver, 771 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1989).

Mother's receipt of social security disability payments on behalf of the children actually diminished children's basic needs and court did not abuse its discretion by including the payments in the adjustment of the father's child support obligation. In re Quintana, 30 P.3d 870 (Colo. App. 2001).

Modification of award based on child's income for purposes of extraordinary educational expenditures or the satisfaction of basic needs is a question of fact to be determined under the totality of circumstances in each case. In re Barrett, 797 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1990).

A trial court is not bound to deduct automatically the entire amount of a child's income from his or her educational costs or basic support obligation but must look at the child's reduced need, if any, for parental support. In re Barrett, 797 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1990); In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court abused its discretion in refusing to deviate from a strict application of the guideline calculations for basic child support where certain expenses were shown to be duplicative. In re Barrett, 797 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1990).

The court did not err in denying a modification for contributions earned by the children where evidence showed that the older children did not receive any Pell grants toward their college expenses, and testimony regarding the additional expenses towards which the children put their earnings was sufficient for the court to determine that a reduction in the amount of support was not appropriate. In re Ansay, 839 P.2d 527 (Colo. App. 1992).

A trial court does not err if it requires parents who are legally responsible for support to contribute to a dependent child's needs in lieu of requiring the child to expend all of his or her own resources. In re Pring, 742 P.2d 343 (Colo. App. 1987); In re Cropper, 895 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1995).

Child support obligations to children of a second marriage may be deducted from a parent's income when the court is considering a modification of child support ordered for children of a first marriage. In re Hannum, 796 P.2d 57 (Colo. App. 1990).

The allocation of tax exemptions may be considered when the court is considering a modification of child support. In re Oberg, 900 P.2d 1267 (Colo. App. 1994).

In considering a modification of child support, the trial court is bound by the facts and circumstances of the parents and the children as they exist at the time of the hearing. If there is a pending foreclosure sale, the court should await the sale's completion and complete its record on the amount of debt incurred before it determines the modification question. In re Kimbrough, 784 P.2d 852 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court did not violate prohibition against adjustment that results in support payments lower than previously existing support order under subsection (7)(d.5)(II) when the decrease in the husband's child support obligation was due solely to the switch to a shared custody child support calculation and a decrease in the wife's work-related child care expenses. The decrease was entirely unrelated to the income adjustment given to the wife for her after-born child. In re Martin, 910 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court had authority to recalculate child support using a different worksheet than previously used. Once court gained jurisdiction to modify child support pursuant to the wife's motion, the court is not prohibited from utilizing the proper formula for such support, particularly when that formula was part of the same statute under which the wife filed her motion to modify. In re Martin, 910 P.2d 83 (Colo. App. 1995).

Rebuttable presumption of a change of circumstances existed under the child support guidelines where the parties changed custody of one of the minor children from the mother to the father. In re Miller, 790 P.2d 890 (Colo. App. 1990).

For purpose of calculating and modifying child support, trial court properly included in gross income of husband an amount which a one-time post-decree inheritance could be expected to yield, although calculation of such amount was incorrect. In re Armstrong, 831 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court did not impermissibly interfere with husband's constitutional property rights by including in gross income an amount which a one-time post-decree inheritance received by husband could be expected to yield. In re Armstrong, 831 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1992).

A monetary inheritance should be included in gross income for purposes of calculating child support in the year that the beneficiary withdraws from the inheritance and relies on it as a source of income. In re A.M.D., 78 P.3d 741 (Colo. 2003).

That remainder of a monetary inheritance that is not withdrawn and spent should be treated as an income-producing asset and the actual interest income it generates should be included in gross income. In re A.M.D., 78 P.3d 741 (Colo. 2003).

In determining how much of the principal of an inheritance to include in gross income, the trial court should apply a two-part test: (1) The court must decide whether an inheritance is monetary; and, if so, (2) whether the recipient used the principal as a source of income either to meet existing living expenses or to increase the recipient's standard of living. In re A.M.D., 78 P.3d 741 (Colo. 2003).

Court did not make findings required by subsection (14.5) to modify the allocation of federal income tax exemptions between the parties. Order allocating exemptions to the parties in alternating years, therefore, was reversed and the cause remanded to the trial court. In re Trout, 897 P.2d 838 (Colo. App. 1994).

Failure to submit financial information to the trial court and the failure of the trial court to review the modified agreement between the parties rendered the resulting trial court order subject to being set aside under C.R.C.P. 60 (b)(5). In re Smith, 928 P.2d 828 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court's award of income tax exemption to father in alternate years, as part of court's judgment on mother's motion to modify child support was supported by the record and complies with the requirements of this section. The court was not required to hold an additional hearing before amending the judgment when it had already heard testimony concerning the parties' incomes and had determined the percentage contribution of the parties to the costs of raising the child. The court could conclude on that record that father would receive a tax benefit from the exemption award. In Interest of A.R.W., 903 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1994).

Father's post-dissolution motion for reimbursement of previously paid child care expenses was properly denied. Reimbursement is not mandated under this section and the court has discretion whether to refer the parties to mediation. In re Lishnevsky, 981 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1999).

Court should compare child support order currently in effect with child support guidelines to determine whether a substantial and continuing change of circumstances exists. Although the parties' current child support order was the result of the parties' agreement to a reduced amount of child support, the court should have compared the current child support order with the presumed child support obligation under the guidelines at the time of mother's motion to determine if mother had shown a substantial and continuing change of circumstances sufficient to maintain her motion for modification. In re M.G.C.-G., 228 P.3d 271 (Colo. App. 2010).

D. Termination upon Emancipation.

The resolution of the question of emancipation was concerned more with the extinguishment of parental rights and duties than with the removal of the disabilities of infancy, and it occurred only when there was a complete severance of the filial tie, and the child's possession or lack of possession of the right to vote had little or no bearing on the determination as to whether such tie had or had not been severed. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

The enactment of the voting rights act of 1970, lowering the federal voting age to 18 years, did not emancipate a 20 year old son, as a matter of law. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

In Colorado, a person retains the status of minority until the age of 21 years, and that statutory definition is controlling as to the age at which emancipation occurs as a matter of law, except where otherwise provided by statute. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

In the absence of emancipation occurring upon attainment of majority, the question of whether a child was emancipated was essentially one of fact determinable by the trier of fact. Van Orman v. Van Orman, 30 Colo. App. 177, 492 P.2d 81 (1971).

Change in the age of emancipation and duty of support in this section did not automatically modify a parent's existing obligation of support which required obligor to pay support until child reached 21 years. In re Dion, 970 P.2d 968 (Colo. App. 1997).

The marriage of the minor daughter terminated the parental duty of support and no enforceable rights to support payments could thereafter accrue to the mother. Berglund v. Berglund, 28 Colo. App. 382, 474 P.2d 800 (1970).

Support for dependent child after attainment of majority. This article gives the court jurisdiction to enter a decree for support of a dependent child of the marriage after attainment of majority. In re Koltay, 646 P.2d 405 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 667 P.2d 1374 (Colo. 1983).

Once a child is over 21 and physically and mentally capable of self support, such child is not entitled to receive support payments from father, despite the fact that the child had an expectation of attending college had parents not divorced. Factors such as standard of living child would have enjoyed and educational needs can only be applied in determining child support if the child had not reached majority. In re Plummer, 735 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1987).

Express provision for post-emancipation support, where circumstances warrant, may be made in a decree entered before the child's twenty-first birthday. In such a case, factors such as standard of living and expectation of attending college may be considered. In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to enactment of subsection (1.5), dealing specifically with postsecondary education support).

Provision for post-emancipation support may also be made by written agreement of the parties, as is indicated by reading this section together with § 14-10-122 (3). In re Huff, 834 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1992).

Meaning of "previously existing support order". An order entered October 22, 1993, nunc pro tunc August 12, 1993, made retroactive to August 1, 1992, modifying a March 1992 support order, is not a "previously existing support order" with regard to a modification of support to take into account a child born to the father and his new wife in December 1992, because it was not "previously existing" until it was actually entered by the court. In re Oberg, 900 P.2d 1267 (Colo. App. 1994).

IV. PAST DUE SUPPORT.

Past due child support payments in themselves constitute debt. Colo. State Bank v. Utt, 622 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1980).

Amount owed may be garnished by bank which held judgment against former wife. Colo. State Bank v. Utt, 622 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1980).

It was not error to require a husband to pay arrears of support money for his minor children during the period of time the wife refuses him the right to visit the children, where no objection was made to the entry of such order. Hayes v. Hayes, 134 Colo. 315, 303 P.2d 238 (1956).

A trial court could not punish a father, delinquent in his child support payments through no fault of his own, by denying him visitation rights until he became current in his payments. Kane v. Kane, 154 Colo. 440, 391 P.2d 361 (1964).

A trial court was without authority to forgive delinquent payments of support money. Gier v. Gier, 139 Colo. 289, 339 P.2d 677 (1959); Engleman v. Engleman, 145 Colo. 299, 358 P.2d 864 (1961); Drazich v. Drazich, 153 Colo. 218, 385 P.2d 259 (1963).

Overpayments on child support made direct to one child could not be set off against accrued overdue installments which were owed to the mother on behalf of another child. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 28 Colo. App. 63, 470 P.2d 581 (1970).

The general rule was to the effect that when a father was required by a divorce decree to pay to the mother money for the support of their dependent children, and the unpaid and accrued installments became judgments in her favor, he could not, as a matter of law, claim credit on account of payments voluntarily made directly to the children, special considerations of an equitable nature could justify a court in crediting such payments on his indebtedness to the mother when that could be done without injustice to her. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 28 Colo. App. 63, 470 P.2d 581 (1970).

14-10-116. Appointment in domestic relations cases - representation of child's best interests - legal representative of the child - disclosure. (1) The court may, upon the motion of either party or upon its own motion, appoint an attorney, in good standing and licensed to practice law in the state of Colorado, to serve as the legal representative of the child, representing the best interests of the child in any domestic relations proceeding that involves allocation of parental responsibilities. In no instance may the same person serve as both the child's legal representative pursuant to this section and as the child and family investigator for the court pursuant to section 14-10-116.5. Within seven days after the appointment, the appointed person shall comply with the disclosure provisions of subsection (2.5) of this section.

(2) The legal representative of the child, appointed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, shall represent the best interests of the minor or dependent child, as described in section 14-10-124, with respect to the child's custody, the allocation of parental responsibilities, support for the child, the child's property, parenting time, or any other issue related to the child that is identified by the legal representative of the child or the appointing court. The legal representative of the child shall actively participate in all aspects of the case involving the child, within the bounds of the law. The legal representative of the child shall comply with the provisions set forth in the Colorado rules of professional conduct and any applicable provisions set forth in chief justice directives or other practice standards established by rule or directive of the chief justice pursuant to section 13-91-105 (1) (c), C.R.S., concerning the duties or responsibilities of best interest representation in legal matters affecting children. The legal representative of the child shall not be called as a witness in the case. While the legal representative of the child shall ascertain and consider the wishes of the child, the legal representative of the child is not required to adopt the child's wishes in his or her recommendation or advocacy for the child unless such wishes serve the child's best interest as described in section 14-10-124.

(2.5) (a) Within seven days after his or her appointment, the appointed person shall disclose to each party, attorneys of record, and the court any familial, financial, or social relationship that the appointed person has or has had with the child, either party, the attorneys of record, or the judicial officer and, if a relationship exists, the nature of the relationship.

(b) Based on the disclosure required pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5), the court may, in its discretion, terminate the appointment and appoint a different person in the proceedings. A party has seven days from the date of the disclosure to object to the appointment based upon information contained in the disclosure. If a party objects to the appointment, the court shall appoint a different person or confirm the appointment within seven days after the date of the party's objection. If no party timely objects to the appointment, then the appointment is deemed confirmed.

(3) (a) The court shall enter an order for costs, fees, and disbursements in favor of the child's legal representative appointed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section. The order shall be made against any or all of the parties; except that, if the responsible parties are determined to be indigent, the costs, fees, and disbursements shall be borne by the state.

(b) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation, prior to the entry of a decree of dissolution or legal separation, the court shall not enter an order requiring the state to bear the costs, fees, or disbursements related to the appointment of a child's legal representative unless both parties are determined to be indigent after considering the combined income and assets of the parties.

(c) If the appointment of a child's legal representative occurs in a case involving unmarried parties, including those proceedings that occur after the entry of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of legal separation, the court shall make every reasonable effort to apportion costs between the parties in a manner that will minimize the costs, fees, and disbursements that shall be borne by the state.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under this section as it existed prior to its 1997 repeal and reenactment.

No right to participate through chosen counsel. This section does not include a right for a child to participate in custody matters through counsel chosen by the child. In re Hartley, 886 P.2d 665 (Colo. 1994).

Relationship between an attorney and child client differs from relationship between attorney and adult client. In re Hartley, 886 P.2d 665 (Colo. 1994).

Child's attorney acts both as guardian and as advocate, since child is not competent to make legally binding decisions. In re Hartley, 886 P.2d 665 (Colo. 1994).

Imposition of higher degree of objectivity on a child's attorney. An attorney appointed to represent a child in a custody dispute must present all evidence available concerning the child's best interests. The attorney's role is not simply to parrot the child's expressed wishes. In re Barnhouse, 765 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1021, 109 S. Ct. 1747, 104 L. Ed.2d 184 (1989).

Trial court did abuse its discretion by denying a motion for appointment of a child representative to present the child's wishes regarding parenting time. A child representative cannot be called as a witness and cannot represent a child's views without question. The attorney is charged with a higher degree of objectivity than when representing an adult. In re Custody of C.J.S., 37 P.3d 479 (Colo. App. 2001).

Quasi-judicial immunity. A court appointed guardian ad litem in service of the public interest in the welfare of children is entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity. Short by Ossterhous v. Short, 730 F. Supp. 1307 (D. Colo. 1990).

Attorney should practice in county of child's residence. If the court, in exercise of its discretion, appointed an attorney to represent these minor children, it is obvious that in terms of client access and the mitigation of expenses, any attorney so appointed should be practicing in the county where the child is residing. Bacher v. District Court, 186 Colo. 314, 527 P.2d 56 (1974).

Trial court's apportionment of costs for child's guardian ad litem upheld where court apportioned costs between mother and father on the basis of the underemployed mother's potential income. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court's order specifying that the special advocate's cost may be later assessed between the parties sufficiently preserved the issue, despite the father's original indication in his motion for appointment of a special advocate that he would pay the special advocate's initial fee. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion requiring mother to later share in that fee. In re Emerson, 77 P.3d 923 (Colo. App. 2003).

In a custody action, the attorney-client relationship with the child's mother is insufficient as a matter of law to impose a duty from the mother's attorneys to the child as if the child were a client. McGee v. Hyatt Legal Serv., Inc., 813 P.2d 754 (Colo. 1991).

Mere inability of parents to communicate is not a sufficient ground to continue the appointment of the GAL so that he may act as a mediator or facilitator for them beyond the entry of a final decree. In re Finer, 920 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1996).

Claim for fees by a child and family investigator (CFI) appointed by a court, which claim the parties agree was in the nature of a "domestic support obligation", is discharged under 11 U.S.C. §§ 101(14A) and 523(a)(5) because the claim was assigned to a nongovernmental third party. The CFI is not one of the enumerated parties under 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A) that can assign its claim to a nongovernmental entity. In re Cordova, 439 B.R. 756 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2010).

Applied in In re Parker, 41 Colo. App. 287, 584 P.2d 103 (1978); In re Conradson, 43 Colo. App. 432, 604 P.2d 701 (1979); Deeb v. Morris, 14 B.R. 217 (D. Colo. 1981); In re Koltay, 646 P.2d 405 (Colo. App. 1982).

14-10-116.5. Appointment in domestic relations cases - child and family investigator - disclosure. (1) The court may, upon the motion of either party or upon its own motion, appoint a neutral third person to serve the court as a child and family investigator pursuant to subsection (2) of this section in a domestic relations proceeding that involves allocation of parental responsibilities. The court shall set forth the specific duties of the child and family investigator in a written order of appointment. The same person may not serve as both the legal representative of the child pursuant to section 14-10-116 and as the child and family investigator for the court pursuant to this section. Within seven days after the appointment, the appointed person shall comply with the disclosure provisions of subsection (2.5) of this section.

(2) A child and family investigator appointed by the court may be an attorney, a mental health professional, or any other individual with appropriate training, qualifications, and an independent perspective acceptable to the court. The child and family investigator for the court shall investigate, report, and make recommendations as specifically directed by the court in the appointment order, taking into consideration the relevant factors for determining the best interests of the child as specified in section 14-10-124. The child and family investigator shall make independent and informed recommendations to the court, in the form of a written report filed with the court, unless otherwise ordered by the court. While the child and family investigator shall consider the wishes of the child, the child and family investigator need not adopt such wishes in making his or her recommendations to the court unless they serve the child's best interests as described in section 14-10-124. The child's wishes, if expressed, shall be disclosed in the child and family investigator's written report. The child and family investigator may be called to testify as a witness regarding his or her recommendations. The child and family investigator shall comply with applicable provisions set forth in chief justice directives, and any other practice or ethical standards established by rule, statute, or licensing board that regulates the child and family investigator.

(2.5) (a) Within seven days after his or her appointment, the appointed person shall disclose to each party, attorneys of record, and the court any familial, financial, or social relationship that the appointed person has or has had with the child, either party, the attorneys of record, or the judicial officer and, if a relationship exists, the nature of the relationship.

(b) Based on the disclosure required pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5), the court may, in its discretion, terminate the appointment and appoint a different person in the proceedings. A party has seven days from the date of the disclosure to object to the appointment based upon information contained in the disclosure. If a party objects to the appointment, the court shall appoint a different person or confirm the appointment within seven days after the date of the party's objection. If no party timely objects to the appointment, then the appointment is deemed confirmed.

(3) (a) The court shall enter an order for costs, fees, and disbursements in favor of the child and family investigator appointed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section. The order shall be made against any or all of the parties; except that, if the responsible parties are determined to be indigent, the costs, fees, and disbursements shall be borne by the state.

(b) In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation, prior to the entry of a decree of dissolution or legal separation, the court shall not enter an order requiring the state to bear the costs, fees, or disbursements related to the appointment of a child and family investigator unless both parties are determined to be indigent after considering the combined income and assets of the parties.

(c) If the appointment of a child and family investigator occurs in a case involving unmarried parties, including those proceedings that occur after the entry of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of legal separation, the court shall make every reasonable effort to apportion costs between the parties in a manner that will minimize the costs, fees, and disbursements that shall be borne by the state.

14-10-117. Payment of maintenance or child support. (1) Upon its own motion or upon motion of either party, the court may at any time order that maintenance or child support payments be made to the clerk of the court or, if the executive director of the department of human services has notified the state court administrator that the judicial district issuing the order is ready to participate in the family support registry pursuant to section 26-13-114 (5), C.R.S., and, for payments for maintenance obligations, the family support registry is ready to accept maintenance payments, through the family support registry, as trustee, for remittance to the person entitled to receive the payments. The court may not order payments to be made to the clerk of the court once payments may be made through the family support registry. The payments shall be due on a certain date or dates of each month. If the support payments are required under this section, title 19, C.R.S., or section 26-13-114 (1), C.R.S., to be made through the family support registry, the court shall order that payments be made through the registry in accordance with the procedures specified in section 26-13-114, C.R.S.

(2) The clerk of the court shall maintain records listing the amount of payments, the date when payments are required to be made, and the names and addresses of the parties affected by the order for those payments he or she receives through the court registry.

(3) If payments are to be made through the family support registry, the parties affected by the order shall inform the family support registry, and if payments are to be made through the court registry, the parties affected by the order shall inform the clerk of the court of any change of address or of other conditions that may affect the administration of the order.

(4) (Deleted by amendment, L. 98, p. 756, § 6, effective July 1, 1998.)

(5) and (6) Repealed.

(7) In cases in which a party is ordered to make payments through the court registry, upon receipt of a verified notice of a support obligation assigned to the state, the clerk of the court shall, without further action by the court, pay the support to the county child support enforcement unit rather than to the obligee. When the state no longer has authorization to receive any support payments, the county child support enforcement unit shall notify the clerk of the court to stop sending the support payments to the county and to send the support payments directly to the obligee.

- IV. Enforcement by Contempt.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Enforcement of Divorce Decrees in Colorado", see 21 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 364 (1949).

Annotator's note. Since § 14-10-118 is similar to repealed § 46-1-5 (3), C.R.S. 1963, § 46-1-5, CRS 53, CSA, C. 56, § 8, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The early law allowed the court to require husband to give security and permitted enforcement of decree in any manner consistent with rules and practice of court. Johnson v. Johnson, 22 Colo. 20, 43 P. 130 (1895).

Section provides only for issuance of temporary injunction. In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980).

C.R.C.P. 65 (h) grants authority to courts in dissolution proceedings to make prohibitive or mandatory orders as may be just. In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980).

Order to direct employer to withhold payments. This section does not preclude an order to the person obligated to pay support or maintenance to direct an employer to withhold child support or maintenance payments as they become due. In re McCue, 645 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1982).

Enforcement of agreement which did not specify dollar amount for child support is not modification of agreement. Agreement established duty on father to pay child support and it is within the discretion of the court to determine a reasonably necessary dollar amount. In re Meisner, 807 P.2d 1205 (Colo. App. 1990).

Attorney fees. An award of attorney fees may not be enforced by an assignment under this section. In re McCue, 645 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1982).

II. SECURITY FOR ENFORCEMENT OF ORDER.

The general assembly authorized a court to require security for the payment of alimony. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

Security required by court must be reasonable in both amount and duration. In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

If the amount ordered as security is greatly in excess of the amount actually owed, it is not security, but is confiscatory. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955); In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

It was held that the supreme court was fortified in limiting the court's authority to require security for the payment of alimony by reason of the fact that with respect to orders for the payment of sums required for the support and maintenance and education of the minor children of the parties, the general assembly had wisely enacted § 14-6-101 which made it a felony for a husband to neglect, fail or refuse to provide reasonable support and maintenance for his minor children under the age of 16 years, and a father who thus neglected to discharge his natural, as well as his statutory, duty to his children "shall be deemed guilty of a felony", and may be imprisoned for so doing unless he provided a bond conditioned upon the support of such children. Brown v. Brown, 131 Colo. 467, 283 P.2d 951 (1955).

The writ of ne exeat was not a form of security for the payment of alimony within the meaning of this section. Price v. Price, 80 Colo. 158, 249 P. 648 (1926).

Property lien authorized. A court may impose a lien on a party's property in order to enforce an agreement where the party has threatened to dispose of the property and put himself beyond the court's jurisdiction. In re Valley, 633 P.2d 1104 (Colo. App. 1981).

Amount and duration of security held unreasonable where court required replacement of any security used for payment of maintenance, and amount of security equaled the amount of maintenance awarded, and where there was no competent evidence supporting the amount required to be set aside as security for the payment of child support and health insurance. In re Jaeger, 883 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1994).

III. ENFORCEMENT BY EXECUTION.

Mature installments of alimony under a divorce decree were final judgments, the payment of which the court could enforce by execution or imprisonment. Daniels v. Daniels, 9 Colo. 133, 10 P. 657 (1886); Paul v. Marty, 72 Colo. 399, 211 P. 667 (1922); Miller v. Miller, 79 Colo. 609, 247 P. 567 (1926); Burke v. Burke, 127 Colo. 257, 255 P.2d 740 (1953); Beardshear v. Beardshear, 143 Colo. 293, 352 P.2d 969 (1960).

Child support payment becomes money judgment when it matures. A child support payment under a decree for dissolution of marriage becomes a money judgment when it matures and may be enforced as other judgments without further action by the court. In re McCue, 645 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1982).

The judgments were enforceable during the entire period of the statute of limitations. Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).

Action by a court, in the form of an order of entry of judgment, is a mandatory prerequisite to enforcement of child support obligations by means other than remedial contempt proceedings. People in Interest of G.S., 678 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1983).

A husband was not prejudiced by the entering of a judgment for the correct total amount due under a divorce decree, as each installment which matures under a decree which had not been modified became a judgment debt similar to any other judgment for money. Jenner v. Jenner, 138 Colo. 149, 330 P.2d 544 (1958).

A trial court had power, without previous notice to a husband, to enter judgment for any total arrears so that execution might issue thereon and the proceedings available to any judgment creditor could thereby be made available to the wife. Jenner v. Jenner, 138 Colo. 149, 330 P.2d 544 (1958).

The trial court exceeded its jurisdiction in an order limiting the wife's right to collect her judgment on an arrearage, because the judgment entered was no different than any other money judgment, and the wife was entitled to levy execution on her judgment in the same manner as any other judgment creditor was entitled to collect on a judgment, and no authority empowered the trial court to enter an order authorizing a judgment creditor to parcel out payments in liquidating a judgment. Green v. Green, 168 Colo. 303, 451 P.2d 282 (1969).

Each installment of child support maturing under a decree which had not been modified became a judgment debt similar to any other judgment for money and retroactive modifications thereof could not be effected. Jenner v. Jenner, 138 Colo. 149, 330 P.2d 544 (1958); Drazich v. Drazich, 153 Colo. 218, 385 P.2d 259 (1963); Talbot v. Talbot, 155 Colo. 350, 394 P.2d 607 (1964).

Since past due installments for support money under a valid order constituted a debt and were in and of themselves judgment, a trial court had no power or authority to cancel such payments. Carey v. Carey, 29 Colo. App. 328, 486 P.2d 38 (1971).

Since accrued installments of support or alimony were final judgments, the appropriate statute of limitations was that which pertained to judgments. Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).
